2. Magistrate conducting inquiry must not try the case himself.—When a Magistrate took an active part in the capture of parties charged with the commission of an offence and tried them himself on that charge it was held that he was bound to state to the accused so far as he could what were the facts he himself observed and to which he himself could bear testimony and the prisoner in such a situation had a right, if he thought it desirable, to cross-examine the Judge whose evidence should be recorded and form part of the record in the case. The proper course however, for the Magistrate to have taken in such a case would have been to decline to try the case, and to ask that it should be taken by some other Judge, 20 W. R. 76. See also 20 C. 857 and Notes under s. 556. It is one of the general principles which govern the conduct of an English Court of criminal justice that a person is not necessarily disqualified from presiding as a Judge or acting as a jurymen upon an inquiry into or investigation of facts because he may have been himself a witness of some of the facts which are the subject of inquiry or investigation, and it is quite erroneous to suppose that a Magistrate is bound to keep out of sight altogether the part which he has played in the matter and to pretend that he knows nothing about the facts excepting so much as the witnesses tell him in Court. It is always dangerous for any man in whose right conduct others are concerned to set up and endeavour to carry out a fiction such as this. It is most specially dangerous for a Judge who is under the grave responsibility which attaches to the office of a Criminal Judge, to attempt anything of the kind 20 W. R. 76.

3. Otherwise dispose of the case.—sc by dismissing the complaint. If the Police send a report that there is no sufficient ground for entering on an investigation the Magistrate may dismiss the complaint. He may take cognizance of the offence under s. 190, but he is not bound to take action, nor is he bound to examine the complainant first.—M H C Pro of 5th February 1878

4. After disposal of report, Magistrate is functus officio—The Police reported the cognizable offence to be false on information being given both of a cognizable and a non-cognizable offence and the Magistrate accepted the report and passed orders accordingly. The Magistrate cannot subsequently order the Police to send up a charge-sheet and if the charge-sheet is sent accordingly, and proceedings are taken against the accused the proceedings so commenced are bad and ought to be quashed 11 C. W. N. 532 = 6 Cr. L. J. 34.

5. Power of Magistrate to order prosecution of persons not arrested by the Police—A was sent up by the Police for an offence of criminal trespass before a Magistrate. A Magistrate acquitted A and directed the Police to take action against H, who in his opinion committed the trespass. H was thereupon sent up by the Police and convicted. held that though the Magistrate was not empowered under s. 190 (1) (c) of the Code to take cognizance of the offence of his own motion he had the power, on receipt of information from the Police to order the prosecution of any person, who in his opinion ought to be put upon his trial a fortiori he can after taking evidence know whom the Police ought to put up before him and order accordingly 4 L. R. R. 127 = 7 Cr. L. J. 414. See Notes under s. 190.

160. Any Police officer making an investigation under this Chapter may, by order in writing, require the attendance before himself of any person being within the limits of his own or any adjoining station who from the information given, or otherwise appears to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case at such person shall attend as so required.

Police-officer's power to require at tendance of witnesses

Notes.—1 Order to attend must be in writing—A constable was sent by a Police Inspector to fetch some persons from whom the latter wished to make inquiries regarding a theft. The order to attend was not in writing. While the constable was accordingly, taking two persons with him P came up and threatened both of them and the constable with the Chief Constables' vengeance and in consequence the two persons refused to accompany the constable who had to go without them. On these facts P was convicted under ss 186 and 189, I P. C., held that as an order under this section must be in writing and a person summoned under such order cannot be forcibly compelled by the person serving the order to attend, the presence of the constable with the two persons (who were not under duress) was an ordinary circumstance, and not a discharge of duty and that therefore P was not guilty of an offence under s 186 which does not apply to a rescue from illegal custody Ratanlal 850. Non-attendance is not punishable under s 174, I P. C., where the order is not in writing Weir I, 89; Weir II, 123. The order may be in a prescribed form and lithographed but it is not a summons.

WHO MAY BE REQUIRED TO ATTEND.

2 Only persons supposed to be acquainted with facts and circumstances.—It appears to have become the practice of Police-officers in the morass to hold a regular investigation of quasi-judicial character in the presence of the accused and their agents but this is not contemplated by the law which lays down that the Police-officer may examine orally any person supposed to be acquainted with the facts and circumstances of the case 33 C. 1073.

3. No power to compel a surety to attend.—A Police-officer cannot require a surety to attend the Police-station to be examined and to give information as to the person for whom he stands surety 1885 A. W. N. 40.

4. No power to compel the attendance of accused.—This section was intended to apply only to the summoning by Station House Officer of witnesses or possible witnesses and not to compel the attendance of accused persons. Where an accused person refused to obey an order in writing improperly issued by a Police-officer under this section and the Police thereupon took her into custody, because she refused to obey the written order, held, that the Police constables concerned were rightly convicted of wrongful confinement notwithstanding that the offence of which the person thus arrested was accused was a cognizable offence Weir II, 221. This section does not authorize a Police-officer to require the attendance of an accused person with a view to answer the complaint made against him. The intention of the Legislature seems to have been only to provide a facility for obtaining evidence and not for procuring the attendance of the accused, 7 M. 274 (F.B.)

FAILURE TO ATTEND.

5. Witness bound to attend.—Remedy against defaulting witness.—If a witness fails to attend before a Police-officer making an investigation under this Chapter the proper course is to prosecute him under s. 174, I P C., 24 G. 320.

DUTIES AND PRIVILEGES OF WITNESSES.

6. No power to call an accused to produce documents.—See 4 Bom. L. R. 444, where it was held that a Police-officer has no authority to call on the accused to produce any documents before him.

7. Witness not bound to answer questions.—A refusal to answer questions asked by a Police-officer under this section is not punishable under s. 176 or s. 179 or s. 187 I P C., as under the present Code there is no obligation to speak the truth as there was under the 1882 Code, 23 M. 544. See also 12 W. R. 23, Weir I, III and Weir II, 123; 23 M. 544 (foot note), 27 P. R. 1908 = 9 Cr. L. J. 105; 6 S. L. R. 277 = 14 Cr. L. J. 302.

8. Witness not bound to state truth.—Witness cannot be prosecuted for giving false evidence under s. 193, I P C.—Witnesses cannot be prosecuted for giving false evidence, 1908 A. W. N. 22, 23 M. 544. "We have amended this clause by reverting to the law as it stood under the Codes of 1861 and 1872. Under those Codes a person examined by a Police-officer was bound to answer all material questions, but was not liable to be prosecuted for giving false evidence in respect of his answers under s. 193 I P C. See 7 G. 121 and 10 G. 405. It officer. They bear no resemblance to a deposition and ought to have no weight as such attached to them. We are aware that there are inconveniences in abolishing the direct liability for giving false evidence to the Police, but the balance of expediency seems to us to be in favour of the old law. The provisions of ss. 202 and 203, I P C., appear to us to afford a sufficient safeguard against false information.—See Com. Rep. The omission of the word 'truly' in paragraph 2 supersedes the cases in 20 W. R. 41, 8 C. L. R. 238; 5 B. 218; 10 C. 405; 11 B. 659, and follows the ruling in 7 C. 121 (F.B.) = 8 C. L. R. 300; 7 P. R. 1896. In 11 B. 659, it was held that sanction was not necessary to prosecute a witness under s. 193 for giving false evidence before the Police. In 16 C. 349 and Ratanlal 455, the facts necessary to prove before a person could be prosecuted for giving false evidence before the Police were discussed. These cases are no longer of any importance.

9. Privileges of witnesses.—

A person examined under this section by the Police and convicted is not bound to speak the truth, and it would be illegal, Ratanlal 619. A witness is not bound under this section to answer those questions put to him by a Police-officer, the answer to which would have had a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge, Ratanlal 518 and 483. When there is no liability imposed on the accused to inform the Police proprio motu of any offence mentioned in s. 44 he is bound to answer all questions put to him by the Police during Police investigation. His admission of failure to give information would not expose him to criminal prosecution under s. 176, I P C., when Police have information already from other sources, Ratanlal 674. See also cases cited in 26 G. 852.

(ii) Not liable to a charge of defamation—A statement made in answer to a question put by a Police-officer under this section in the course of an investigation made by him is privileged and cannot be made the foundation of a charge of defamation 16 M 235

(iii) Not liable in damages—Nor will a suit lie for damages for words spoken in answer to question put by the investigating officer 28 G 794

(iv) Cannot be prosecuted under s 182 I P C—A statement made by a witness in answer to question put by the Police officer investigating the case cannot be made the basis of a charge under s 182 I P C To give information in s. 182 I P C means to volunteer information (1903) U B R I P C 13 = 2 Cr L J 474 referred to 35 P W R, 1914 = 227 P L R, 1914 = 45 Cr L J 650 See also Ratanlal 124

(v) Cannot be prosecuted under s 211 I P C—A witness answering questions put to him by the Police cannot be convicted of an offence under s 211 I P C Weir L, 193, 31 M 506, 6 M L T 133.

* 10 No power to take security bond to appear before the Police.—There is no provision in the Code authorizing a Police-officer to take security bond for the production of any person before the Police. Such a bond ad insto void and the Magistrate has no power to alter it and impose fresh conditions thereunder 11 C 77.

RECORDING OF STATEMENT

11 Not bound to reduce statement into writing—It is not obligatory on the Station House Officer to reduce to writing any statement made to him during an investigation. Neither s 162 nor s 91 of the Evidence Act renders oral evidence of such statements inadmissible though if the statements be actually reduced to writing the writing itself cannot be treated as part of the record or used as evidence except for the purpose of refreshing memory 11 Bom H C R 120, 36 C 281

12 When desirable that statements should be recorded—The provisions of this section should not be utilised in any but heinous cases. Heinous cases include cases exclusively triable by Court of Sessions and those cases in which special reports are submitted through the Magistrate either to the Commissioner only or both to the Commissioner and to the Deputy Inspector General or Inspector General of Police. See g Pol Code p 432.

13. Mode of recording answers.—It is not necessary that the statements of witnesses recorded under this section should be elicited and recorded in the form of question and answer 7 P R, 1896. It is sufficient if such a statement is substantially an answer to one or more questions addressed to the witness before the statement is made. Ss 164 and 364 do not apply to examination of witnesses. Nor can they be put on oath or affirmation 15 A 11

14 Statements of witnesses must not be recorded in the Special Diary merely to prevent the accused to have access to them.—In 33 C 1023 the practice of Police-officers to incorporate oral statements made to them by witnesses in the Special Diary under s 172 in the belief that by so doing those statements could be kept from the knowledge of the accused is strongly condemned. Such statements whether recorded in a diary under s 172 or not fall under the provisions of s. 162 and are liable to be produced under the conditions laid down therein. Ss 161 and 145 of the Indian Evidence Act do not apply to those statements of witnesses.

15 Attestation unnecessary.—It is not illegal though unnecessary for a Police-officer recording a statement to obtain the signatures or by standers to authenticate his record of such statement 15 A 11

16 Right of accused to inspect record and get copies of statement.—See s. 162 and Notes thereto.

17 Answers elicited not property of the Police.—There is no prohibition against any person present at the time when depositions are being taken or confessions made to take down in writing what either a witness or a witness says 10 C 256. See Note 8 to s. 153.

ADMISSIBILITY IN EVIDENCE OF STATEMENTS MADE TO POLICE

18 When not reduced to writing—The statement is always admissible subject to the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act and s 162 does not deal with such statements 11 Bom. H. C. R. 120; 36 C 281. It is not illegal to examine a Police-officer for the purpose of impeaching the credit of a witness who gives evidence in favour of the accused 27 A 469. See 19 G. W. N 217 = 16 Cr L J 313, as to the danger of relying on statements made to the Police which are not judicially recorded.

19 When reduced to writing—(a) Oral evidence of the statement may be given. S 162 does not overrule the general provision of the Indian Evidence Act 36 C 281; 33 M 267 and 1397, 39 B 58—(b) But the writing containing statement of witness is not to be used in evidence—except under s 162.

RIGHTS AND DUTIES OF POLICE

20 Interference by District Magistrate.—A District Magistrate cannot interfere (except in the way of suggestion and advice) with the exercise of discretion given to a Police-officer to summon witnesses Batalial 133.

21. Convenience of witnesses should be studied and inquiry conducted in a conciliating manner.—See Note 9 to s 157 In 2 C. W. N 199=2 Cr. L. J. 51, it was pointed out that it was improper that the Police should take a number of women away from their village to the Police-station on the pretext that they wished to examine the women and that the examination might have been as well conducted at the women's own houses as at the Police-station. But the Code makes no provision as to the course to be taken by a Police officer in regard to the attendance of Purd's ladies at the investigation

22 No power to arrest or detain witnesses.—The Police have no power to arrest or detain for a single moment persons whose evidence is required for the purpose of an investigation 7 W. R. 3. It is left to the person summoned to obey. But in no case should force be used to compel attendance of such a person any more than a person summoned to serve on a jury. Causing attendance under this section does not amount to an arrest and in no case can a Police-officer compel a witness by force to attend before him. A Police-officer may summon parties to a Police-station for the purpose of obtaining information from them but if the voluntary action of such parties is in any way interfered with such interference would constitute an arrest. Instances have occurred when suspected parties have been summoned to a Police-station for inquiry and have been detained all night. Unless they were detained voluntarily such detention constitutes an arrest. Under the orders of Government, No 6335 dated 13th November 1885 Police-officers when causing the attendance before them of Railway employees must send immediate information to the head of the department under which such employees are serving.—See Beng. Pol. Min. 2nd Ed. p 378

23. Binding over defence witnesses not desirable.—It is extremely undesirable that an investigating Police-officer should bind over witnesses for the defence of an accused person whom he is sending up for trial and should send them up with the accused and the witnesses for the prosecution. It is advisable that the Police should have nothing to do with the witnesses whom the accused may wish to call for his defence and that it should not be open to the accused to allege that his witnesses have been tampered with by the Police.—C. P. Cr. Cir. Part V, No 12.

24. Impropriety of taking down statements of persons immediately before their arrests.—Where there is evidence in the hands of a Police-officer upon which he is bound to arrest a person it is improper for him to obtain a statement from that person professedly under this section and reduce it to writing 27 C. 295, but such a statement is admissible in evidence 6 C. 530

25 Instructions regarding corroborative evidence.—The attention of all investigating officers is drawn to the great importance of testing the truth of statements made by witnesses from whom they get information. For instance A states that he was travelling back to his home in a distant village after an unsuccessful attempt to purchase bullocks at several places at a certain time and place he saw the accused running along with a blood-stained knife in his hand. The witness was alone at the time and there was no one to corroborate him. The Court may believe him unless there is any all the same be a perfectly honest man and by ascertaining from his co-villagers whether he did leave his village at the time and with the object declared and whether he did visit certain places and attempt to purchase bullocks. The witnesses would not necessarily be taken to Court but the prosecuting authority should be in a position to inform the Court that he can produce such evidence if it be desired.—Beng. Pol. Code p. 378.

161. (1) Any Police-officer making an investigation under this Chapter or any Police-officer not below such rank as the Local Government may by general or special order, prescribe in this behalf acting on the requisition of such officer may examine orally any person supposed to be acquainted with the facts and circumstances of the case

Examination of witnesses by Police.

(2) Such person shall be bound to answer all questions relating to such case put to him by such officer, other than questions the answers to which would have a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge or to a penalty or forfeiture

2. Section confined to investigation under this Chapter.—See 16 C. 349 This section is applicable to an investigation under s 156 (1) consequent on an arrest under s 55 (c) 1893 A. W. N. 124.

*162. (1) No statement made by any person to a Police-officer in the course of an investigation under this Chapter shall, if reduced into writing, be signed by the person making it, nor shall any such statement or any record thereof, whether in a Police diary or otherwise, or any part of such statement or record, be used for any purpose (save as hereinafter provided) at any inquiry or trial in respect of any offence under investigation at the time when such statement was made Statements to Police not to be signed, use of such statements in evidence.

Provided that, when any witness is called for the prosecution in such inquiry or trial whose statement has been reduced into writing as aforesaid, the Court shall on the request of the accused refer to such writing and direct that the accused be furnished with a copy thereof, in order that any part of such statement, if duly proved, may be used to contradict such witness in the manner provided by section 145 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 When any part of such statement is so used any part thereof may also be used in the re-examination of such witness, but for the purpose only of explaining any matter referred to in his cross-examination

Provided, further, that, if the Court is of opinion that any part of any such statement is not relevant to the subject matter of the inquiry or trial or that its disclosure to the accused is not essential in the interests of justice and is inexpedient in the public interests, it shall record such opinion (but not the reasons therefor) and shall exclude such part from the copy of the statement furnished to the accused "

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to apply to any statement falling within the provisions of section 32, clause (1) of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872

Note.—This section has been much amended.—The effect of the amendment appears to be clearly to control the general provisions as to evidence contained in s 157 of the Evidence Act It is submitted that the words 'nor shall any such statement or any record thereof be used for any purpose (save as hereinafter provided)' nor shall any statement or any record thereof be used for any purpose (save as hereinafter provided)' From this the intention of the Legislature is quite clear that the general provisions of s. 157, Evidence Act are controlled by the special provisions contained in this section. So the statements or the record thereof are limited in their use as evidence to the specific purpose mentioned in the a defence witness.' (See Sel Com Rep, clause 33) The whole scheme of the section seems to be that section 162 as amended is only to be used for the benefit of the accused. It is submitted that the Legislature has approved the reasoning in 7 A. L. J. 468 = 11 Cr. L. J. 235. See also 34 B. 599; 33 C. 1023.

In light of the above view it is submitted that 35 C. 231; 35 M. 247; 39 B. 58 are no longer good law

Notes.—1 Corresponding sections of the old Codes.—S 145 of Act XXV of 1861 read.—'Any statement so reduced into writing shall not be signed by the person making it nor shall it be treated as part of the record or used as evidence' S 119 of the Code of 1872 read "No statement so reduced to writing shall be signed by the person making it nor shall it be treated as part of the record or used as evidence."

* Sub-section (1) was substituted for the original sub-section (1) by Act XVIII of 1925.

The 1882 Code enacted "No statement other than a dying declaration made by any person to a Police officer in the course of an investigation under this Chapter shall, if reduced to writing be signed by the person making it or be used as evidence against the accused."

By Act V of 1886 the word "and Madras High Courts that the writing must have been deliberated Council to indicate why the change was introduced"

See s. 63 of the Bombay City Police Act which corresponds to this section 32 B. 111

2. Scope of the section.—This section does not override the provisions of s. 27 of Indian Evidence Act so that confessional statement or statements to the Police made by accused persons leading to the discovery of relevant facts must not be excluded if the statements are recorded by the Police 6 N L R. 180 = 12 Cr L J 60 The provisions of this section must be taken to modify the general provision of s. 157 of the Indian Evidence Act 13 O C. 7 = 11 Cr L J. 117 A Police-officer may examine any person acquainted with the facts of the case and he is not bound to reduce into writing any statement made by that person though if he wishes to do so he may reduce it into writing. If he does so the written statement though it may be used by the Police-officer to aid him in his investigation is not to be used as evidence in the trial of the accused (subject to the proviso). When the person makes a statement to a Police-officer which is not reduced to writing by him such statement is not inadmissible in evidence under this section since it does not profess to provide for such a case. The Police may therefore be questioned as to such statement by the Counsel for the defence as also any other person who may have heard it made. So also when it is reduced to writing the section does not say that the Police-officer or such other person shall not be liable to be questioned as to it or bound to state the truth when so questioned but that the writing shall not be used as evidence 11 Bom. H. C. R. 120; 36 C. 281

3. Want of power to investigate immaterial.—If it should happen that the Police-officer was not authorized to hold the investigation his want of authority is immaterial having regard to s. 156 (2) 2 C. W. N. 702 at p. 712

4. Evasion of this section by sending witnesses to a Magistrate having no jurisdiction.—A Police-officer has no authority to place witnesses before a Magistrate unless they appear voluntarily. It is highly irregular and the policy of the law as embodied in this section is defeated if a Police-officer with a view to fix the witnesses down to a particular statement should cause persons to appear before Magistrates not having jurisdiction to deal with the case and thus get their statements recorded because the Police-officer may be of opinion that the witnesses may be gained over 29 C. 433, see also 7 C. W. N. 220, 27 C. 295 and Notes 22 23 to s. 164

ADMISSIBILITY IN EVIDENCE OF STATEMENTS OF WITNESSES TO POLICE

5 Admissibility of written statement in trial.—(a) The record may be used only for the purpose mentioned in the section i.e. the accused may at the time the witness for the prosecution appears before the Court use the record for impeaching his credit 33 C. 1023, 32 B. 111 (F.B.) 34 B. 599, 13 O C. 7 = 11 Cr. L. J. 117 See also 26 M. 191, 8 C. W. N. 218, 15 P. W. R. 1913 = 171 P. L. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 190, 1 P. W. R. 1914. But in 36 C. 231, 35 M. 267 and 397 it was held that oral evidence of the statement may be given to corroborate a prosecution witness. Under the old Code of 1872 the record could be used in favour of the accused

(b) The person making the statement may be questioned about it and with a view to impeach his credit the Police-officer or any person in whose hearing the statement was made can be examined on the point under s. 155 of the Indian Evidence Act 11 B. 657 and 659, 9 C. 453 = 11 C. L. R. 659; 17 A. 57; 33 C. 1023.

(c) In 11 B. H. C. R. 120, it has been held that under the Code of 1872 the writing may be used for the purpose of refreshing memory. But in 33 C. 1023 it is laid down that it is very doubtful whether it will do so. It can refresh 11 is memory as to such statements unless the writing is already in and had been used to it to it

6. Inadmissibility of writing containing statement against the accused.—The person who takes down in writing of a witness for prosecution and recorded by a Police-officer cannot be questioned or in evidence against the accused, 32 B. 111 (F.B.) 17 P. R. 1888, 6 B. L. R. 36 = 12 Cr. L. J. 605 = 12 Cr. L. J.

It is illegal for a Magistrate trying an accused person to use as evidence against him, the statements made by the prosecution witnesses before the Police by comparing them with their depositions and as a result of the comparison to convict the accused, 9 Bom. L. R. 895 = 6 Cr. L. J. 224; 9 Bom. L. R. 366 = 5 Cr. L. J. 333. (b) The statement cannot be used to impeach the credit of a defence witness whose statement may have been recorded by the Police, 15 A. 25. Per BEAMAN, J., in 32 B. 111. (c) Not to make up for the deficiency in the evidence of the prosecution witnesses, Ratanlal 935; 28 C. 348. (d) It cannot be used as corroborative evidence of the prosecution witnesses against the accused, 22 B. 596; 13 O. G. 7 = 13 Cr. L. J. 117.

7. Inadmissibility of writing in favour of the accused—Statement to Police cannot be used in favour of the accused—From the mere saving clause in this section (1882 Code) on behalf of accused persons, the Police-officer under it may be used

A saving clause cannot properly be and different effect to the previous

Police-officer for the purpose of impeaching the credit of a witness who gives evidence in favour of an accused at his trial, having previously given a statement to the Police-officer different from, and inconsistent with, his subsequent statement at the trial, 1905 A. W. N. 64, which follows 11 B. 657; 15 A. 25. The law now adopts the Full Bench view in 19 A. 390. See also 17 A. 57.

8. Inadmissibility of statement reduced to writing by the Police for other purposes.—(a) In a subsequent case—There is nothing in this section which limits the prohibition of the use of such document, viz., the statement taken down in writing as evidence to a matter of the charge which is actually under investigation by the Police-officer when the statement is made. It extends also to the use of such a document against the person who is alleged to have made the statement, 28 C. 348 and see Notes 21 and 19 below. Such a statement is not admissible under s. 35 of the Evidence Act, because it is not a public official record within the meaning of the section, it being not necessarily part of the official duty of the Police-officer to prepare such a document at all, 28 C. 348. In 35 M. 397, SUNDARA IYER, J., dissents from 28 C. 348, and is of opinion that under s. 35 of the Evidence Act the prosecution may simply put in the record without calling the officers when it is desired to prove a statement made by a witness because it is quite sufficient under s. 33 that the entry is made in the discharge of official duty.

(b) For prosecution under s. 193, I P C.—The written statement cannot be made the basis of an order for the prosecution under s. 193, I P C., of the person making the statement, 1908 A. W. N. 22. See Note 8 under s. 160.

(c) For prosecution under s. 211, I P C.—A statement under s. 161 made in answer to questions by the investigating Police-officer cannot be made the basis of a prosecution under s. 182, I P C., 15 Cr. L. J. 690 = 23 In. Ca. 978; 2 Cr. L. J. 474 (Bar.). See also 20 M. L. J. 132 = 8 M. L. T. 87 = 11 Cr. L. J. 288; noted under s. 164 where it was held following 31 M. 506, that a statement under s. 162, is not a complaint or a charge and cannot be made the basis of a prosecution under s. 211, I P C. But see Note 21 below.

9. Is oral evidence of a statement to the Police reduced to writing admissible?—Under s. 167 of the Indian Evidence Act, an oral statement made to the Police during a Police investigation by a witness may refinement of the Madras High Court are unanimously of opinion that the law as interpreted by 36 C. 281 is correct, 35 M. 247 and 397. In 39 B. 58, the Bombay High Court too held that under s. 162 the writing only is excluded from evidence, but the right to prove any statement to the Police by oral evidence to corroborate the testimony of any witness is not taken away by the section. But in 34 B. 599 it was laid down that it is contrary to the plain intention of this section to allow an investigating Police-officer to be questioned in examination-in-chief about what the various witnesses said to him during the investigation. It opens an undesirably wide field for cross-examination and leads to the attention of the Court being directed and distracted from the true issues. In 33 C. 1023, it was held that it would be quite unfair to accept the Police-officer's perfunctory readings of his diary as proof of the statement when he could not remember what had been said. In 7 A. L. J. 468 = 11 Cr. L. J. 235, KNOX, J.

refused to follow. 36 C. 281 while KARAMAT HUSAIN, J., dissented from him and approved of the ruling. See also the judgment of SUNDAR LAL, J., in 13 O. C. 7 = 11 Cr. L. J. 117 who is of opinion that the reasons for excluding from evidence the written record of such statement, apply with equal force to a viva voce recital of such statement from memory by the Police-officer, 17 A. 57. But see 8 Pat. L. J. 241 approving 36 C. 281. See also 25 Bom. L. R. 965 overruling 35 Bom. 58 and 22 Bom. 896.

10. How far is the rule as to corroboration by former statements under s. 157 of the Evidence Act modified by this section?—The general provisions of s. 157 of the Indian Evidence Act must be taken to be controlled by the special provisions of s. 162, 7 A. L. J. 448 = 11 Cr. L. J. 235. The rule contained in s. 157 of the Indian Evidence Act is modified in the following respects, viz (1) as a general rule, the written records of statements previously made by witness to a Police-officer which is referred to in the section as 'such writings,' in the course of an investigation cannot be used as evidence, (2) such written record of the statement cannot be used (a) to corroborate the statement of a witness for the prosecution or (b) to corroborate a statement for the defence or (c) to impeach the credit of a witness for the defence, and (3) it may be used to impeach the credit of a witness for the prosecution if (a) the accused person requests the Court to inspect the written record of the deposition and (b) the Court thinks it expedient in the interests of justice to allow a copy of such statement being granted to him. Per SUNDAR LAL, J., in 13 O. C. 7 = 11 Cr. L. J. 117. Oral evidence of such statements may be given by the Police-officer, 36 C. 281; 25 M. 297; 39 B. 58. See Note above.

Bombay.—In a Bombay case it is now held as the result of the latest amendment of s. 162 of the Code, that a Police statement can only be used for one purpose, and that is for the accused to contradict a prosecution witness in the manner provided in s. 145 of the Indian Evidence Act, and it is quite clear also that it is not permissible for Police statements, whether oral or written, to be put in evidence in order to corroborate a prosecution witness or to contradict a defence witness. To this extent the rulings in 22 B. 598 and 39 B. 58 are superseded by the enactment of the Legislature. 26 Bom. L. R. 965.

Lahore.—The decisions in 5 L. 24 and 6 L. 171 support the Bombay view and disapprove of 5 L. 324, 7 L. 264 upholds the decisions in 5 L. 24 and 6 L. 171.

Calcutta.—The decision in 30 C. W. N. 142 agrees with the above Bombay case and holds that s. 162 of the Code is clear enough to exclude any statement made by any person and directs that such statement shall not be used for any purpose not provided for by the section itself. So a map prepared in a criminal case should not have thereon any statement made by a witness to the person preparing the map noted thereon. Such statements in a map prepared by a Police-officer are inadmissible under s. 162 and as hearsay evidence. 30 C. W. N. 503 agrees with 30 C. W. N. 142.

Lahore.—In 7 L. 84 it was further held that s. 162 of the Code applies to the statements of persons as witnesses examined by the Police in the course of an investigation and not to the statement of an accused person, and that it does not override or modify the provisions of s. 27 of the Indian Evidence Act.

Patna.—In 5 P. 63 it was also held that the main object of the amendment of the section is to prevent the use of the statement of prosecution witnesses as corroboration under s. 157 of the Evidence Act. Sections 161 and 162 of the Code do not override the general provisions of the law with regard to the admissibility of statements made by accused persons as laid down in ss. 27 and 28 of the Indian Evidence Act of 1872.

Contrary to the above Bombay decision it has been now held in 48 M. 640 = 48 M. L. J. 195 that the provisions of s. 162 of the Code either as amended or as it stood before the amendment, were not an absolute bar to the use of such oral statements at the trial for any purpose admissible under the Indian Evidence Act.

11. Effect of wrongly admitting statement in evidence.—Where a Judge admitted in evidence a document recorded under s. 162 and referred in his address to the jury, the High Court set aside the conviction as in the circumstances of the case it may have misled the jury, 13 Cr. L. J. 244 (M).

PRODUCTION, INSPECTION AND COPIES OF WRITTEN STATEMENTS.

12. Procedure for production and use of record of statements.—Records of statements are liable to be produced only under the conditions laid down under this section, i.e., the accused may, at the time the witness appears before the Court, ask the Court to refer to them, and the Court may, if it thinks expedient in the ends of justice, furnish him with copies of such statements for the purpose of impeaching the credit of the witness.

7. Inadmissibility of writing in favour of the accused—Statement to Police cannot be used in favour of the accused.—From the mere saving clause in this section (1882 Code) on behalf of accused persons, the general principle cannot be inferred that statement made by any person to a Police-officer under it may be used as evidence for an accused person, though it cannot be used against him. A saving clause cannot properly be looked at for the purpose of extending an enactment, nor can it give a new and different effect to the previous sections of the enactment, 11 B. 637. It is not illegal to examine a Police-officer for the purpose of impeaching the credit of a witness who gives evidence in favour of an accused at his trial, having previously given a statement to the Police-officer different from, and inconsistent with, his subsequent statement at the trial, 1905 A. W. N. 64, which follows 11 B. 637; 15 A. 25. The law now adopts the Full Bench view in 19 A. 390. See also 17 A. 57.

8. Inadmissibility of statement reduced to writing by the Police for other purposes.—(a) In a subsequent case—There is nothing in this section which limits the prohibition of the use of such document, viz., the statement taken down in writing as evidence to a matter of the charge which is actually under investigation by the Police-officer when the statement is made. It extends also to the use of such a document against the person who is alleged to have made the statement, 28 C. 348 and see Notes 21 and 19 below. Such a statement is not admissible under s. 35 of the Evidence Act, because it is not a public official record within the meaning of the section, it being not necessarily part of the official duty of the Police-officer to prepare such a document at all, 28 C. 348. In 35 M. 397, SUNDARA IYER, J., dissents from 28 C. 348, and is of opinion that under s. 35 of the Evidence Act the prosecution may simply put in the record without calling the officers when it is desired to prove a statement made by a witness because it is quite sufficient under s. 35 that the entry is made in the discharge of official duty.

(b) For prosecution under s. 193, I P C.—The written statement cannot be made the basis of an order for the prosecution under s. 193, I P C., of the person making the statement, 1908 A. W. N. 22. See Note 8 under s. 160.

(c) For prosecution under s. 211, I P C.—A statement under s. 161 made in answer to questions by the investigating Police-officer cannot be made the basis of a prosecution under s. 182, I P C., 15 Cr. L. J. 680 = 23 In C. 978 = 2 Cr. L. J. 474 (Bav.). See also 20 M. L. J. 132 = 8 M. L. T. 67 = 11 Cr. L. J. 288; noted under s. 154 where it was held following 31 M. 506, that a statement under s. 162, is not a complaint or a charge and cannot be made the basis of a prosecution under s. 211, I P C. But see Note 21 below.

9. Is oral evidence of a statement to the Police reduced to writing admissible?—Under s. 157 of the Indian Evidence Act, an oral statement made to the Police during a Police investigation by a witness may be admitted at the trial by way of corroborating that witness's deposition. But this section enacts that if any such statement is taken down in writing, the writing cannot be used as evidence. If it be said that it is a refinement to hold that the writing cannot be admitted, but that the statement if not reduced to writing can, the answer is that the Legislature has chosen to alter its language in this section of this Code drawing a distinction between the statement and the writing. There is nothing therefore, in the special provision of the existing Code to override the general provisions of Evidence Act as to the proof by oral evidence of former statements 2 C. W. N. 702 was decided under the old Code (1882), and this point was not decided in 32 B. 111 (F.B.); 38 C. 291. All the Judges of the Madras High Court are unanimously of opinion that the law as interpreted by 36 C. 281 is correct, 35 M. 347 and 397. In 39 B. 58, the Bombay High Court too held that under s. 162 the writing only is excluded from evidence, but the right to prove any statement to the Police by oral evidence to corroborate the testimony of any witness is not taken away by the section. But in 36 B. 599 it was laid down that it is contrary to the plain intention of this section to allow an investigating Police-officer to be questioned in examination-in-chief about what the various witnesses said to him during the investigation. It opens an undesirably wide field for cross-examination and leads to the attention of the Court being directed and distracted from the true issues. In 33 C. 1023, it was held that it would be quite unfair to accept the Police-officer's perfunctory readings of his diary as proof of the statement when he could not remember what had been said. In 7 A. L. J. 668 = 11 Cr. L. J. 235, K'nox, J., refused to follow 36 C. 281 while KARAMAT HUSAIN J, dissented from him and approved of the ruling. See also the judgment of SUNDER LAL, J, in 13 O. C. 7 = 11 Cr. L. J. 117 who is of opinion that the reasons for excluding from evidence the written record of such statement, apply with equal force to a viva voce recital of such statement from memory by the Police-officer, 17 A. 57. But see 8 Pat. L. J. 241 approving 36 C. 281. See also 26 Bom. L. R. 965 overruling 39 Bom. 58 and 22 Bom. 596.

10. How far is the rule as to corroboration by former statements under s. 157 of the Evidence Act modified by this section?—The general provisions of s. 157 of the Indian Evidence Act must be taken to be controlled by the special provisions of s. 162, 7 A. L. J. 448 = 11 Cr. L. J. 235. The rule contained in s. 157 of the Indian Evidence Act is modified in the following respects, viz: (1) is a general rule, the written records of statements previously made by witness to a Police-officer which is referred to in the section as such writings, in the course of an investigation cannot be used as evidence, (2) such written record of the statement cannot be used (a) to corroborate the statement of a witness for the prosecution or (b) to corroborate a statement for the defence or (c) to impeach the credit of a witness for the defence and (3) it may be used to impeach the credit of a witness for the prosecution if (a) the accused person requests the Court to inspect the written record of the deposition and (b) the Court thinks it expedient in the interests of justice to allow a copy of such statement being granted to him. Per SUNDER LAL, J, in 13 O. C. 7 = 11 Cr. L. J. 117. Oral evidence of such statements may be given by the Police-officer, 36 C. 281, 35 M. 397; 39 B. 58. See Note above.

permissible for Police statements whether oral or written, to be put in evidence in order to corroborate a prosecution witness or to contradict a defence witness. To this extent the rulings in 22 B. 596 and 39 B. 58 are superseded by the enactment of the Legislature. 26 Bom. L. R. 965.

Lahore.—The decisions in 8 L. 35 and 6 L. 171 support the Bombay view and disapprove of 8 L. 324; 7 L. 284 upholds the decisions in 6 L. 24 and 6 L. 171.

Calcutta.—The decision in 30 C. W. N. 152 agrees with the above Bombay case and holds that s. 162 of the Code is clear enough to exclude any statement made by any person and directs that such statement shall not be used for any purpose not provided for by the section itself. So a map prepared in a criminal case should not have thereon any statement made by a witness to the person preparing the map noted thereon. Such statements in a map prepared by a Police-officer are inadmissible under s. 162 and as hearsay evidence. 30 C. W. N. 503 agrees with 30 C. W. N. 152.

Lahore.—In 7 L. 84 it was further held that s. 162 of the Code applies to the statements of persons as witnesses examined by the Police in the course of an investigation and not to the statement of an accused person, and that it does not override or modify the provisions of s. 27 of the Indian Evidence Act.

Patna.—In 5 P. 63 it was also held that the main object of the amendment of the section is to prevent the use of the statement of prosecution witnesses as corroboration under s. 157 of the Evidence Act. Sections 161 and 162 of the Code do not override the general provisions of the law with regard to the admissibility of statements made by accused persons as laid down in ss. 27 and 28 of the Indian Evidence Act of 1872.

Contrary to the above Bombay decision it has been now held in 43 M. 640 = 43 M. L. J. 195 that the provisions of s. 162 of the Code either as amended or as it stood before the amendment, were not an absolute bar to the use of such oral statements at the trial for any purpose admissible under the Indian Evidence Act.

11. Effect of wrongly admitting statement in evidence.—Where a Judge admitted in evidence a document recorded under s. 162 and referred in his address to the jury, the High Court set aside the conviction as in the circumstances of the case it may have misled the jury, 13 Cr. L. J. 244 (M).

PRODUCTION, INSPECTION AND COPIES OF WRITTEN STATEMENTS.

12. Procedure for production and use of record of statements.—Records of statements are liable to be produced only under the conditions laid down under this section sc., the accused may, at the time the witness appears before the Court, ask the Court to refer to them, and the Court may, if it thinks expedient in the ends of justice furnish him with copies of such statements for the purpose of impeaching the credit of the witness.

STATEMENTS OF ACCUSED PERSONS.

16. Does the section deal with the statements of accused persons made to the Police and recorded by them?—S 162 of the 1882 Code contained the following proviso "nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the provisions of s 27 of the Indian Evidence Act" This provision has been omitted in this Code, and it must only be because it was unnecessary. It has never been held or contended that, under the present law s 162 overrides s 27 of the Evidence Act, so that the confessional statements made by person in Police custody, or to the Police leading to the discovery of relevant facts must be excluded if the statements have been recorded by the Police. Such a result would render nugatory the provisions of s. 28 of the Evidence Act and the omission of the former proviso leads one to conclude that s 162 was considered to refer to statements of witnesses 6 N. L. R. 180, 12 Cr. L. J. 60. Statements of accused to the Police though reduced to writing not being confessions were held to be properly admitted in evidence, on being proved by oral evidence. See also 15 P. W. R. 1913 = 171 P. L. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. = 190 and Note 19

17. Incriminating statements of accused made to Police is not admissible.—A statement made by an accused person to Police-officer is not admissible in evidence against him when he is on his trial for the offence he is charged with, 11 P. L. R. 1905. This rule must be limited to confessions or admission of directly incriminating circumstance. See ss. 25 and 26 of the Indian Evidence Act, and 41 C. 601. In 26 C. 869, it was held that s 25 of the Evidence Act applies to every Police-officers including Police-officers of the Native States and is not restricted to the officers of the regular Police. As to Police Patels in Bombay, see 17 B. 435; 19 B. 363. See also 1 C. 207 at p 215; 1 C. L. R. 21; 26 C. 569. A Police-officer should not be allowed to depose to confessional statements, 15 Cr. L. J. 476 (Sindh). In 35 M. 397 five Judges of the Madras High Court, held that previous statements of an approver being confessions made to a Police-officer are inadmissible at the trial against an accused person under s 25 of the Evidence Act, while the other five were of opinion that the statements of approvers to the Police though inculpatory and confessional in their nature are not inadmissible under s. 25 of the Indian Evidence Act when it is not sought to use them against the persons making them. S 25 does not preclude them from being given as evidence of a fact which goes to show that the statements of the approvers at the trial were true. See also 13 A. L. J. 1077 = 17 Cr. L. J. 8 and (1917) M. W. N. 875.

18. Statements of accused to Police-officer not amounting to admission of guilt.—An admission made by an accused person may be proved if it does not amount to a confession, 3 N. L. R. 51 = 5 Cr. L. J. 434. An admission made by an accused person to a Police-officer before arrest is admissible in evidence, 6 C. 530 = 7 C. L. R. 341. See also 10 B. L. R. App 2; 5 Bom. L. R. 312; 37 C. 467; 41 C. 601, 72 P. L. R. 1916 = 17 Cr. L. J. 183 = 33 In Ca 823.

19. Accused a statement may be proved though writing containing it cannot be admitted.—It is not a correct interpretation of the meaning of this section that statements made by an accused person to a Police-officer holding an investigation under this Chapter cannot be proved against him, whether they be reduced to writing or not. The true meaning is that a statement reduced into writing under s. 161, se, the document containing such a statement shall not be used as evidence against the accused but not that the statement made by an accused person shall not be proved, 15 P. R. 1886; 5 P. R. 1891.

20. Confessional statements leading to discovery of facts.—S 27 of the Evidence Act is not intended to let in confessions generally, and no judicial officer dealing with that section should allow one word more to be deposed by a Police-officer detailing a statement made to him by an accused, in consequence of which he discovered a fact than is absolutely necessary to show how the fact that was discovered is connected with the accused, so as in itself to be a relevant fact against him, 6 A. 509; 11 C. 635; 4 A. 193; 33 P. R. 1900 at p 33; 12 M. 153; 11 B. H. C. R. 242; 10 B. 593, 25 C. 413, 14 B. 260; 28 P. R. 1894, 15 P. W. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 190; 8 P. W. R. 1914 = 38 P. L. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 6; 15 Cr. L. J. 833 (M).—While a statement forming part of a narrative made to the Police is not admissible in evidence, if it amounts to a confession that the accused himself committed the offence, 31 M. 127; a statement that stolen property would be found in a certain place is admissible, 26 M. L. J. 337 = 15 Cr. L. J. 533. The exception contained in s 27 to the general rule in s. 25 must be very strictly confined within its legitimate limits. When, therefore, the accused stated to the Police 'I will point out the place where I committed the murder' and pointed out the place, held the words 'I committed the murder' were inadmissible, 11 P. R. 1913. Where there are several accused and it is not possible to say which of them gave the information leading to the discovery of facts, the whole of the evidence of the joint discovery is inadmissible, 9 P. W. R. 1916 = 63 P. L. R. 1916 = 15 Cr. L. J. 409.

21. Statements as to ownership of property admissible.—Statements made by accused persons to Police-officers as to the ownership of property, which is the subject-matter of the proceedings against them although inadmissible as evidence against them at the trial for the offence with which they are charged, are admissible in evidence with regard to the ownership of the property in any inquiry under s. 523 held by the Magistrate, 9 B. 131. See also 6 C. 530 = 7 C. L. R. 541; 1 C. L. R. 21; 1 C. 207; 3 B. 12; 11 B. H. C. R. 242; 15 C. 587; 6 B. 34 and 6 R. 298 at p. 291.

DYING DECLARATIONS.

22. Instructions regarding dying declarations.—When a person whose evidence is required is in imminent danger of death, his statements should be recorded by a Magistrate exercising judicial functions. If this cannot be arranged for and it becomes necessary for some other person to record this dying declaration it should, if possible, be made in the presence of the accused or of attesting witnesses. A dying declaration, made to a Police-officer should, under the provisions of this section, be signed by the person making it.—Beng. Pol. Code, p. 377. It is advisable where a dying declaration is elicited by questions to set out the questions and answers and, if possible, it should be taken in the presence of the accused who should then be allowed to cross-examine if he likes, 6 C. W. N. 72.

22-A. Dying declaration, its evidentiary value.—In the case of a dying declaration which by the law of this country assumes a character widely different from what it is under the English Law, which is relevant under the Indian Evidence Act whether the person who made it was or was not at the time, when it was made under the expectation of death, and the weight to be attached to which depends not upon the expectation of death which is a guarantee of its truth, but from the circumstances under which it was made and upon the nature of the record that has been made of it, it becomes almost always a question of fact as to whether it should be relied upon or not 52 C. 987 = 29 C. W. N. 738. (R v Mitchell, 17 Cox C. C. 503 and 507 referred to)

23 Preliminaries to be ascertained when a man is in a dangerous condition and his statements are necessary.—When a Police-officer making inquiry in any case has reason to believe that a person whose statements may have an important bearing on the case, is in a dangerous state and likely to die before the completion of the proceedings, or before his deposition can be taken on oath in the presence of the accused before a Magistrate, he should be most careful first to ascertain in the presence of respectable witnesses, the apparently dying man's impression of his own condition, and next to take down his statement verbatim.—Beng. Pol. Man., p. 379

24 Signs might be treated as verbal statements.—In 7 A. 385 (F.B.), it was held by the Full Bench, that where the deceased at the time of questioning was conscious and able to make signs in response to questions asked the questions put and the signs taken together, might properly be regarded as verbal statements made by a person as to the cause of her death within the meaning of s. 32 of the Evidence Act and therefore evidence to prove the questions put and signs made was admissible. In such a case it is essential that the statement should be a true record of what actually took place and should show on the face of it the questions put and the nature of signs made in reply, 2 P. R. 1886, 9 P. R. 1900.

25 Dying statement made in absence of accused—admissibility.—The dying statement of a deceased person must be taken in the presence of the accused, if not so taken the writing cannot be admitted to prove the statement made. The statement may, however, be proved in the ordinary way by a person who heard it and the writing may be used for the purpose of refreshing the witnesses' memory, 8 C. 211 = 10 C. L. R. 11; 6 C. W. N. 72 and 921, 13 P. R. 1886; 6 Bur. L. T. 68 = 14 Cr. L. J. 396. In 6 C. W. N. 921, where a dying declaration had been recorded by a Police Sub-Inspector and attested by certain witnesses and the record of such statement was made, evidence, held, the writing could not be made evidence, but that the statements made by the deceased might be proved by persons who heard them. See, however, 16 Cr. L. J. 759 (M.), 7 L. 91, 49 C. 553.

26. To render dying statements admissible, the accused must be on his trial for causing death.—In 25 B. 45 a statement made by the deceased to and recorded by a Police jemadar to the effect that the accused who was concerned with dacoity, had stabbed him on the right side of the chest, was rejected on the ground that it was not shown that the death of the deceased was caused or accelerated by the dacoity. See also 7 L. B. R. 33 = 6 Bur. L. T. 183 = 14 Cr. L. J. 510.

27. Dying statement must be duly proved.—A dying statement which had been proved by taking evidence of the Magistrate who recorded it should not be accepted in evidence without such proof. The fact that the Magistrate who recorded the statement is the same as the committing Magistrate is legally insufficient to prove the dying declaration, 17 P. R. 1911 = 13 Cr. L. J. 225.

28. Dying statement how proved.—Where the document containing the dying declaration was not signed by the deponent and the Police-officer was not bound by law to take it down in writing; held, that the proper method of proving the oral statement of a dying man was by the oral testimony of any person who heard it he being allowed to refresh his memory by reference to the notes he made or read at the time, 10 N. L. R. 19 = 15 Cr. L. J. 243. See Note 25

163. (1) No Police-officer or person in authority shall offer or make, or cause to be offered or made, any such inducement, threat or promise as is mentioned in the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, section 24.

(2) But no Police-officer or other person shall prevent, by any caution or otherwise, any person from making in the course of an investigation under this Chapter any statement which he may be disposed to make of his own free will

Notes.—1. Evidence Act, s. 24.—Confession caused by inducement, etc., irrelevant in criminal proceedings.—A confession made by an accused person is irrelevant in a criminal proceeding if the making of the confession appears to the Court to have been caused by any inducement, threat or promise, having reference to the charge against the accused person, proceeding from a person in authority and sufficient, in the opinion of the Court to give the accused person grounds which would appear to him reasonable, for supposing that by making it he would gain any advantage or avoid any evil of a temporal nature in reference to the proceedings against him. No confession made to a Police-officer shall be proved as against a person accused of any offence.—s. 24, Evidence Act See 1 B. L. R. O. Cr. 15; 1 P. R. 1899; 9 B. H. C. R. 358; 20 B. 165; 20 W. R. 33. See Amir Ali and Woodroffe, Indian Evidence Act, ss. 24 to 29 for a discussion of the Law on the subject of confessions.

2. Police-officer does not include a Village Magistrate—A Village Magistrate is not a Police-officer, and therefore a confession made to him is not inadmissible in evidence, 7 M. 237. As to village headmen in Madras, see Explanation to s. 26 of the Evidence Act and Id., Pol. Man., Vol. I, p. 96 See Note 17 to s. 162.

3. Who are "persons in authority."—A too restrictive meaning should not be placed on the words, 9 C. W. N. 474. According to SERGEANT, C. J., "the test would seem to be, had the person authority to interfere with the matter, and any concern or interest in it would appear to be sufficient to give him that authority." 9 Bom. H. C. R. 338. So a Travelling Auditor in the service of a Railway Company, 9 Bom. H. C. R. 358, a Police Patel, 3 B. 12, an Honorary Magistrate, 1 W. R. 24; a Magistrate recording a confession, 10 C. 773; 2 A. 280, Thugly or village headman, 15 Cr. L. J. 651 (Bar); 6 Bar. L. T. 109; 14 Cr. L. J. 417. Village Magistrate, 26 M. 33, members of a panchayat 11 C. W. N. 904 = 6 Cr. L. J. 134; 9 C. W. N. 474, have been held to be persons in authority, but see 4 A. 46 and 4 Bom. L. R. 785. English Law—See 9 Bom. H. C. R. 358 as to applicability of English cases. An inducement to confess does not render the confession inadmissible unless it was held out by a person in authority or by person acting in the presence of and without the dissent of a person in authority, R v Pountney 7 C. and P. 302. All who are engaged in the arrest, detention, prosecution or examination of a prisoner are considered as persons of such authority that their inducements will exclude any confession thereby obtained. Thus an inducement held out by the prosecutor, the prosecutor's wife, or his attorney, or by a constable or other officer, or by some person assisting a constable, or assisting the prosecutor in the apprehension or detention of the prisoner, or by a coroner or a Magistrate acting in the case or other Magistrate a Magistrate's clerk or by a gaoler, or by a person having authority over the prisoner as the master or mistress of a servant in the case of an offence as against the person or property of either or by a person in the presence of one in authority with his assent whether direct or implied will be sufficient to exclude a confession made in consequence of such inducement, Russell on Crimes, p. 2158 See also Ibrahim v. King, 10 C. W. N. 703 (P. C.)

4. What inducement, threat or promise will exclude confessions?—The inducement must have reference to the charge against the accused, that is, the charge or an offence in the Criminal Courts, 4 A. 46. The inducement must have been made for the purpose of extorting a confession of the offence, the subject of that charge. It must reasonably imply that the prisoner's position with reference to it will be rendered better or worse according as he does or does not confess. And if the inducement be made as to one charge, it will not affect a confession as to a totally different charge. An inducement relating to some collateral matter unconnected with the charge will not exclude a confession. The inducement need not be expressed but may be implied from the verdict of the person in authority, the declarations of the prisoner or the circumstances of the case, nor need it be made directly to the prisoner. It is sufficient if it may be reasonably presumed to have come to his knowledge. Woodroffe and Amir Ali's Evidence Act 5th Edn., p. 258. Saying to the prisoner that

Explanation—It is not necessary that the Magistrate receiving and recording a confession or statement should be a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case

Note.—The section as amended confines the recording of confessions only to the superior Magistrates mentioned therein.—The Select Committee in this connection says that it is intended that under the section third-class Magistrates should have no power to record confessions and that second-class Magistrates should not do so unless specially empowered. The amendment makes it obligatory upon the Magistrate to record the fact that warning had been given by the Magistrate to the accused as provided by sub-section (3).

1—SCOPE AND OBJECT OF THE SECTION

Notes—1 Section applicable to Presidency towns of Calcutta and Bombay.—In the amended section a Presidency Magistrate is specifically mentioned. Therefore it is clear that the section applies to the Presidency towns of Calcutta and Bombay as the specific mention of a Presidency Magistrate in the amended section would be construed as a provision to the contrary under sub-section 2 of section 1 of the Code. So the decisions in 15 C. 595 and 21 B. 495 lose force so far as this section is concerned.

But it is now held by the Calcutta High Court that s. 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not apply to a confession recorded in Presidency towns in the course of a Police investigation not held under the orders of a Presidency Magistrate under ss. 153 and 156 in spite of the alteration that the section has undergone by the amendments by Act XVIII of 1923, 52 C. 67 (Emp v Panchowri Dutt)

In 30 C. W. N. 434 where at the request of the Burdwan District Police the Calcutta Police arrested the accused and brought him before the Presidency Magistrate in Calcutta and the Presidency Magistrate did not warn the accused and did not even inform him that he was a Magistrate. Held although the investigation under Chapter XIV was being held by the Burdwan Police still the accused's arrest in Calcutta and his production before the Magistrate must be regarded as something in the course of that investigation under Chapter XIV and the Presidency Magistrate was therefore bound to record the confession strictly in compliance with s. 164 of the Code.

In 50 B. 111 it was held that s. 164 does not apply to the Police in Bombay as the Bombay Police do not carry on their investigations under Chap. XIV of the Criminal Procedure Code. Therefore a confession recorded in Bombay of an accused brought before the Magistrate by the Bombay Police need not have the formalities and the certificate under s. 164 of the Code

But the Patna High Court has held contrary to the Calcutta and the Bombay view. In 8 Patna. 171 it is held that s. 1 of the Code bars the application of the Code to the Police in Presidency towns and not to a Magistrate and since the amendment of s. 164 in 1923 the Presidency Magistrate is empowered to record a confession in Calcutta in the course of a Police investigation.

Per BUCKNILL, J.—Even though the Police in Calcutta may not conduct their investigations in precise accordance with the provisions of Chapter XIV the construction of s. 164 which would exclude its utilisation in Calcutta during a Police investigation or at any time afterwards before the commencement of the enquiry or trial, is to read it in a strained and unnatural sense. Panchowri Dutt, 52 C. 67 and 15 C. 595 (F.B.) disapproved.

2 Object of the section—The object of Police proceedings is to collect information as a preliminary step to the production of evidence in a judicial proceeding against an accused person. For this purpose any person may be examined and any statement may be reduced to writing by the Police but no statement made to the Police (with the exception specified in the proviso to s. 162) can be used as evidence against the accused. To these provisions s. 164 seems to be supplementary. The Magistrate may prepare what the Police may not, a record of any statement be it confession or not, which is made to him before judicial proceedings commence. Proof of such statements is not prohibited on the contrary express provision is made for proving the document in s. 80 of the Evidence Act (where it is distinguished from a record of evidence), and in s. 533 infra. It is not expressed nor is it implied in the text of this section or in the context, that the statement of an accused person cannot be recorded unless it is a confession. It is easy to understand that the interests of justice may require that there should be some means of preparing a documentary record which shall be available as evidence of information elicited during Police investigation, and that the power of preparing such record, which is withheld from the Police as to statements made to them, should be conferred upon a Magistrate, as such, as to statement made to him. The distinction that is made in this section is between statements that are confessions and statements that are not, and not between the persons by whom statements of either character are made, and it is made for the purpose of prescribing different modes of record. The section certainly is not intended to make Magistrates the instruments of Police, for the purpose of recording statements at the desire of the Police, irrespective of the desire of the persons produced for the purpose of making statements, and it is easy to conceive circumstances under which a Magistrate would be fully justified in refusing to record the statement of a person accused or not accused who was produced by the Police for the purpose, although the statement was not a confession, per FRODIP, J., 2 P. R. 1893.

3. Section applies to 'statements of witnesses' as well as to 'confessions' of persons who may be charged.—This section authorizes a Magistrate to record the statement of a person who appears before him as a witness, as well as the confession of a person accused of an offence, 2 B. 543. The section provides for the recording both of statements of persons proposed to be called as witnesses and of persons whom it is proposed to charge with an offence. The former are called statements of persons and are recorded on oath, and the latter are called confessions and not recorded on oath, but in the manner prescribed by s. 364, 5 B. L. R. 174 = 13 Cr. L. J. 33. The word 'statement' here means the statement of a witness, as opposed to the confession of the accused. The method prescribed for recording such statement is strongly confirmatory of this view, per MACLEAN, C.J., 2 C. W. N. 702. If the term 'statement' was intended to include statements of accused persons as well as those of witnesses, it must have directed the former class of statements to be recorded in the manner prescribed in s. 364, instead of directing as it does, that statements within the meaning of the section are to be recorded in the manner in which evidence is recorded while confessions are to be recorded in the manner prescribed in s. 364. The reason why this section provides only for recording that class of statement of the accused which are or purport to be confessions and does not provide for the recording of statements of accused persons other than confession is that the section relates to a stage of the case namely, the Police investigation stage, at which statements of the accused which are other than voluntary confessions, and which are to be elicited by this examination are not intended to be obtained from him per BANNERJEE, J. 2 C. W. N. 702 at p. 715. But this view has not been generally accepted. See 5 C. W. N. 22; 5 B. L. R. 174 = 13 Cr. L. J. 33, 9 M. 224. Section 164 distinguishes sharply between statements of witnesses and confessions of accused persons. The same utterance might be regarded as a confession from one point of view and as a statement from another point. It all depends on the connection in which and the purpose for which it is sought to be

t' ins 164 of
the Code is not limited to a statement by a witness, but includes that made by an accused and not amounting to a confession. Such statements must be recorded under the section, and cannot be proved orally by the recording Magistrate when not so recorded, 49 C. 167.

Where an accused person makes a statement before a Magistrate under s. 164 and the statement is not a confession, but is of a self-exculpatory character, it is still admissible in evidence against him at his trial as evidence of a fact relative to the prosecution case, 4 P. 327.

II.—AT WHAT STAGE STATEMENTS, ETC., MAY BE RECORDED.

4. Section applies only to confessions made during investigation or after investigation but before inquiry or trial.—A confession under s. 164 must be made either in the course of an investigation under Chapter XIV or after it has ceased and before the commencement of the inquiry or trial. The condition requiring the confession to be prior to the commencement of the inquiry or trial is only imposed when the investigation has ceased, and not when it is made in the course of the Police investigation. Where a number of persons were arrested on the 1st May, and the confessions of some of them were recorded on the 4th and 5th, while others were brought in subsequently and their confessions taken while the Police investigation was then actually going on, and on the 17th an order under s. 196 was obtained and the Police report sent in, and on the next day the examination of the prosecution witnesses began. Held, that the Magistrate did not take cognizance under s. 190 of the Code, nor did the inquiry commence on the 4th and that the confessions were taken in the course of an investigation under Chapter XIV, 5 C. 955 and 5 A. 253 are no longer law, 32 C. 1085 distinguished 37 C. 467 at pp. 494—497.

5. Section applies only to statements recorded before inquiry or trial commences.—Where during an inquiry under s. 202, the Magistrate recorded a statement made by a person against whom the complaint was filed, held, that the statement cannot be considered as having been recorded under this section or s. 364, and being a statement made when the deponent was in the position of an accused person, cannot be evidence, 32 G. 1085. See also 15 P. R. 1894.

III.—ADMISSIBILITY IN EVIDENCE OF RECORD MADE UNDER THIS SECTION.

6. Admissibility of statements made in the absence of the accused.—Statement of witnesses recorded under s. 164 in the absence of the accused cannot be used as evidence against him. They are admissible only for contradicting the statements made by the witnesses at the trial and not for any other purpose. 17 O. C. 363.

7. Applicability of s. 91, Evidence Act discussed.—It is not clear how s. 91 of the Evidence Act can apply to a confession recorded under this section, for, an extra judicial confession to a Magistrate is not a matter required by law to be reduced to writing, it is merely a matter which a Magistrate is authorized to reduce to writing. In this respect it differs from an examination of an accused person under s. 364 which is a matter required by law to be reduced to writing. A confession recorded in due conformity with this section is liable to be excluded if it appear to be irrelevant under s. 24 of the Evidence Act and a fortiori, one irregularly recorded should be so liable, 82 P. R. 1887; 21 P. R. 1881. See also 33 M. 413. Statements made by the accused in a departmental inquiry are not confessions within the meaning of s. 164 and are therefore not matters required by law to be reduced to the form of a document. They are legally admissible in evidence although they are wanting in the formalities and safeguards prescribed by this section, 36 A. 222. See 3 P. R. 872.

8. Effect of s. 21, Evidence Act.—Relevancy of admission of accused.—S. 21 of the Evidence Act, no doubt lays down the general rule that admissions are relevant and may be proved as against the persons who make them, but that rule must be taken subject to the special provisions relating to confessions and statements of accused persons, enacted in ss. 24, 25 and 26 of the Evidence Act, and ss. 164 and 364 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Were it otherwise, confessions and statements of accused persons which are not recorded in accordance with the requirements of ss. 164 and 364 of the Criminal Procedure Code might nevertheless be proved as admissions by the accused, and the wholesome provisions laid down in those two sections practically reduced to a nullity. This could never have been intended. Per BANERJEE, J., 2 C. W. N. 702 at p. 714; 3 C. W. N. 22; but in 87 G. 467 it was held that sections 164, 342 and 364 of the Code are not exhaustive, and do not limit the generality of s. 21 of the Evidence Act as to the relevancy of admissions, Ratanlal 679 referred to and doubted.

9. Court may reject confession duly recorded and purporting to be made voluntarily.—It is open to any Court under s. 24 of the Evidence Act to reject a confession tendered by the prosecution. If any ground of exclusion specified in that section is made to appear, notwithstanding that it has been duly recorded under this section, and notwithstanding that at the time of recording, it appeared to be a voluntary confession, but the circumstance that confession purported to be made voluntarily is one to be taken into account, and is a fact of which the accused person may reasonably be expected to give some satisfactory explanation, 51 p. R. 1887. See also 9 C. L. J. 863. But a confession under this section made to a Magistrate other than the committing Magistrate, if tendered on the part of the Crown, cannot be rejected on the sole ground that the accused had been a long time in the hands of the Police, Ratanlal 720.

10. When prisoner does not cease to be in Police custody.—When a prisoner in Police custody is brought before a Magistrate for the purpose of having his confession recorded, he does not cease to be in the custody of the Police, even though no Police-officer is in the room while the confession is being recorded, Ratanlal 855; but the confession is none the less admissible if it is taken in conformity with the strict provisions of the law by a Magistrate, 24 P. W. R. 1909 — 10 C. L. J. 584; Ratanlal 720.

IV.—COMPETENCY OF MAGISTRATES TO RECORD CONFESSIONS, ETC.

11. Only Magistrates not being Police-officers can record.—Police-officers having magisterial powers are not competent to record statements or confessions under this section, 1 C. 207; 17 B. 483. But it was held, in Burma that a Magistrate exercising Police powers and possessing the title of a Police-officer, can record a confession, but a Magistrate so doing should be exceedingly careful to record fully the circumstances under which he records the confession, both in order to show that the confession was voluntarily made and also that he has, so far as possible, divested himself for the time being of his Police authority and of his Police surroundings or other signs of such authority before proceeding to record such confession, 7 Bur. 100.

12 Honorary Magistrate cannot record unless specially empowered.—An Honorary Magistrate who is a member of an independent Bench with third-class powers and who is not specially authorized in that behalf cannot act independently (see when not sitting on the Bench) and record statements or confessions under this section 29 C. 433

13. Village Magistrates not to record confessions.—Village Magistrates are absolutely prohibited from reducing to writing or taking the signature of an accused person to any confession or statement whatever made by him. Madras G O No 2883 J dated 17th December 1887 as amended by G O No 1881 dated 1st November 1909

14. Confessions may be recorded by a Magistrate subsequently conducting inquiry or holding trial.—The cases in 5 C. 954 and 10 Bom. H. C. 166 were decisions based on the Code of 1872 and are no longer law. It is now provided that every Magistrate may record a confession the word every being substituted for any and the explanation has also been added. These alterations make it clear that it can no longer be contended that a confession recorded by a Magistrate who afterwards holds the inquiry is outside the provisions of s 164 37 C 467 at p 498. However a confession may have been recorded whether under an investigation or during a judicial inquiry it is no longer material because this Code (of 1898) has placed them all on the same footing in regard to the means of providing a remedy for a defect in recording such a statement. At any rate in whatever stage of the proceedings the statement may have been recorded if it was admissible as evidence it would not become inadmissible because the Magistrate may have thought proper to conduct the subsequent proceedings in the case 30 C. W. N. 385 at p 391. A Magistrate is not debarred from recording the confession of an accused person by the circumstance that it may afterwards be his duty to hold a preliminary inquiry Ratanlal 121

15 Confession before a Magistrate not having jurisdiction in the case.—The practice of taking prisoners before Magistrate not having jurisdiction in the case for the purpose of getting a confession recorded is not generally desirable but such a confession legally admissible in evidence when duly proved 7 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 88, 24 P. W. R. 1909 = 153 P. L. R. 1909 = 10 Cr. L. J. 584. But such a confession cannot be used without evidence being given as to the identity of the person who made the confession. There is no presumption under s 80 of the Evidence Act 11 C. 880. Compare 8 P. W. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 6

16 Magistrate directing Police investigation not disqualified from recording statement under this section.—It is the duty of the Magistrate who directs a Police investigation or who holds a preliminary inquiry under this Code to record statements under s 164. It is his duty to see that accused confesses voluntarily and to record his confession truly. The Magistrate is not disqualified from performing those duties merely because he took part in the Police investigation. On the other hand the Magistrate's personal relations with the investigating Police should not be such that an accused who had been forced to make a false confession by the Police would think it of no avail to tell the truth to the Magistrate 58 L. R. 31 = 12 Cr. L. J. 489

17 Confession before a foreign Court.—A confession made before a foreign Court cannot be used against an accused person unless it is sworn to like confessions made to private persons Weir II, 125. A confession made by an accused before a Magistrate in a Native State cannot be admitted into evidence under s 80 of the Evidence Act. The Magistrate recording the confession must be examined to prove the confession before it can be used as evidence 16 Bom. L. R. 261 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 197 = 15 Cr. L. J. 433. See, however 12 A. 595, 22 B. 255, 2 P. R. 1909. In the last case it was held that a confession made to a Magistrate in a Native State was admissible in evidence in a trial in British India if it is duly recorded in proceedings under and in the manner required by the Code. Such a confession is none the less admissible even though the provisions of the Code have not been in every respect strictly observed provided the accused has not thereby been prejudiced on the merits and the fact that he made the statement is proved by evidence. The mere fact that the statement was actually written not by the Magistrate himself but by the Munshi does not in any way injure the accused as to his defence on the merits. But a confession so recorded is not entitled to the same weight as a confession recorded by a British Magistrate in strict conformance with the term of the Code and Courts should hesitate to convict the accused upon such a confession standing alone 8 P. R. 1907

17-A Confession recorded outside British India by a Magistrate having jurisdiction in British India.—It is very doubtful whether a Magistrate having jurisdiction within a district in the United Provinces who takes down a confession in a place outside British India (e.g. in the State of Gwalior) in connection with an offence committed in that district does thereby record or has power to record a confession with the meaning of s 164 of the Cr. Pro. Code 19 A. L. J. 338

V.—DUTIES AND POWERS OF MAGISTRATES IN RECORDING STATEMENTS AND CONFESSIONS.

18. Nature of Magistrate's function under the section.—A Magistrate acting under this section is neither taking part in the investigation by the Police, nor acting judicially (See 1899 A. W. N. 39) This Chapter gives him no power either to require the attendance of any person or to examine any person, nor is there any obligation imposed upon persons making statements to a Magistrate corresponding to that imposed by s. 161 upon persons interrogated by the Police. It seems that a Magistrate has no power to administer an oath or affirmation to any person whose statement he records. His function is simply to prepare a record in the manner and subject to the conditions prescribed in this section. A Magistrate before whom any person is brought up by the Police with a view to exercising his magisterial powers under this section is at liberty to endeavour to ascertain from him whether he is 'disposed to make a statement of his own free will, and until it appears that he is so disposed, the Magistrate is at liberty to bring to his notice that he is not under any obligation to make a statement, and that any statement he does make may be used against him. A statement may, of course, be voluntary, though it is not spontaneous to the extent that the idea of making a statement has been suggested by some person, as for instance, by the Police-officer Per FLOWDEN, J. 2 P R 1893. But as regards administering oath to witness, see Note 28 below.

19 Duty of Magistrate before recording confessions or statements.—Notifications—No Magistrate should record any confession or statement under this section, until he has first recorded in writing his reasons for believing that the accused is going to make such statement voluntarily and until he has explained to the accused, that he is under no obligation to answer any question at all and warned him that it is not intended to make him an approver and that anything he says will be used against him. If the Magistrate has a doubt as to whether the accused is going to speak voluntarily, he should remand him to the sub-jail before recording the confession or statement, such confession or statement should not in any case be recorded nor the warning abovementioned given in the presence of the Police-officers who have arrested or produced the accused, and if in any case the Police desire to use against others the information given to them by a person in custody, they should apply for sanction to make that person an approver and a statement under this section should not first be taken from him.—Mad GO No 2883, Judicial dated 17th December, 1887 [the whole of the GO from which the above is an extract and the representation of the High Court which led up to it, are worth careful study] It is desirable that Magistrates should act with deliberation in examining persons brought before them for the purpose of making confessions, and should, as far as possible satisfy themselves that the confession is voluntary, and this, not merely from the declaration of the accused, but from an attentive observation of his demeanour Watkins, p. 2. In cases sent to Magistrates, in order that the confessions of accused persons may be recorded under this section the Magistrates should invariably satisfy themselves that the confessions are voluntary, by all means in their power, including the examination of the bodies of the accused whenever feasible and should the accused persons consent to such examination. The record of confessions should distinctly show whether the bodily examination has been made or not and if not made whether the omission was due to reluctance on the part of the accused. In the event of such examination revealing prima facie grounds for suspecting violence, the Magistrate should have such accused persons examined by a medical officer Bom Govt. Gaz 1900, Pt I, p 919, Bom. H C Cr Cr., p 19

20 Voluntary character of confession should be first ascertained.—No hard and fast rule can or should be laid down as to the procedure which should be adopted when an accused person is placed before the Magistrate for the recording of a confession, but it is not sufficient to put one comprehensive question as to the nature of the confession or to make a note at the commencement of the record that the accused has been warned not to confess through any fear or inducement and that the Police have been removed. A Magistrate ought, by putting questions which occur to him to make himself conscientiously satisfied that the man is a free agent and that the confession he makes is a voluntary confession and that he has not been forced or deceived into making it, 15 Cr. L. J. 633 (Oadh), 25 B. 543. See also 18 Cr. L. J. 721. Where a Magistrate recorded a confession of the accused under this section without first satisfying himself about its being voluntary and then at the end of it put one comprehensive question as to the nature of the confession, it was held that he had not complied with the provisions of this section, which clearly denote that the Magistrate should not proceed to record any confession unless he first had reason that the person was about to make it voluntarily and that he should therefore, have begun by enquiring into that point. The unjustifiable violence used to the accused before his arrest, the illegal detention of the accused in

Police custody for more than 24 hours after his arrest and the marks of violence on his person unexplained are sufficient to vitiate the voluntary character of the confession of the accused and to make it admissible in evidence 1 Bom L R 357 Unless the Magistrate has made a real and substantial inquiry as to the voluntary nature of a confession a confession even before him is inadmissible in evidence, 3 L B R 173 = 4 Cr L J 198 The omission of the Magistrate to question the accused before recording his confession is a fatal defect rendering the confession inadmissible 3 L B R 213 = 4 Cr L J 358 See also 3 L B R 1. In 40 C 878 it was, however, held that the fact that the Magistrate instead of asking the accused about the voluntary nature of the confession at the commencement of the confessional statement asked him at the end was merely a defect of form that did not alter the character of confession In 8 Bom L R 950 it was laid down that the questioning need not precede the taking of the confession

21 Duty of Magistrate recording depositions of witnesses sent up by the Police—A Magistrate should abstain from recording the evidence of witnesses sent up by the Police unless he has some assurance from them that they attend voluntarily and are making statements to him voluntarily In the case of an accused the Magistrate is bound to make a certificate to that effect In the case of witness too it is important there should be equal safeguard although they are not required by law 7 C W N 345 See also 5 C W N 49 A Magistrate ought to be so satisfied before he proceeds to record the statement or confession 5 A 253, 3 C W N 1111

22 Impropriety of taking down statements of witnesses with a view to fix them to those statements—Where a witness made a statement before the Police incriminating the accused and the Police-officer without attempting to expedite the completion of the investigation or sending up the whole case to the Magistrate sent only that witness to be examined by the Magistrate under the section and the Magistrate examined her and recorded her statement as that of a witness and added a note that the statement was taken in the presence of the accused who had an opportunity to cross-examine her but did not do so Held that this section was not intended to enable the Police to obtain an incriminating statement by some person and as it were to put a seal on that statement by sending in that person to a Magistrate practically under custody to have her examined before the judicial inquiry or trial and therefore compromised in her evidence when judicial proceedings are regularly taken It may be observed that the law does not require that in the case of a witness so examined there should be a certificate after proper inquiry that the statement has been voluntarily made but the law also expressly protects a witness from unnecessary restraint or inconvenience at the hands of the Police A statement thus obtained always raises suspicion that it has not been voluntarily made 27 C 295 See also 7 C L J 246 = 7 Cr L J 315 where it was held that in a trial by jury the Judge ought to tell the jury that evidence of witnesses taken under this section for the purposes of pinning them down to certain statements must be accepted with a great deal of caution It is highly improper for a Magistrate to take during the investigation by himself of a criminal case the statements of certain witnesses on solemn affirmation out of Court and in the absence of the accused with the avowed object of proceeding criminally against the witnesses should they subsequently in open Court deviate from the statements formerly made Ratanlal 66 See also 4 C W N 49

23. Magistrate not to examine or question the deponent—Under this section a Magistrate is entitled in the course of a Police investigation to record any voluntary statement made by the accused person but he is not entitled to examine him in respect of the facts of the case That power is only given by s 342 under which he may examine the accused in respect of the evidence recorded against him for the purpose of explaining such evidence It is improper to cross-examine the accused 5 C W N 866, 2 P R 1893 The examination of the accused must not be made with a view to elicit the truth out of his mouth by constant questions as though he were a witness 5 C P Cr 13 But the mere fact that a statement was elicited by a question does not make it irrelevant as a confession under this section or s 29 of the Evidence Act though such fact may be material on the question of its voluntariness 37 C 467 at p. 498; 15 W R 71 referred to

24 Must not hold out any inducement—In Weir II, 137, the conduct of a Magistrate in holding out to a prisoner who had already confessed the inducement that in case he made a further confession he will be admitted as an approver was held to be most improper See Note 4 to s 163

25 Magistrate ought to be careful of the interests of accused as of prosecution—He should endeavour to ascertain the truth—In recording confessions or incriminating statements of accused persons in preliminary inquiries the Magistrate ought to be as much careful of the interests of the accused as of the prosecution to ascertain the truth of the case and endeavour that the innocent may not be convicted or the guilty escape with impunity. He should always therefore, record whether the accused has been brought up from the Police custody or from the jail and whether the Police-officers who made investigation in the case were present in Court while the accused was making his statement 1 G P Cr 115

26 Magistrate bound to warn prisoner.—The Select Committee say we consider that a statutory obligation should be laid on a Magistrate acting under this section to warn an accused person about to make a confession that the same may be used against him and we think that the certificate prescribed by sub-section (3) should record the fact that the warning had been given. It is now obligatory on every Magistrate acting under this section to warn the person making a statement to him that it might be used against him and that he is not bound to make a confession.

27 Statements of witnesses should be recorded by Magistrate when fresh.—In some districts it is the practice with the Police to wait for the Chemical Examiner's report before sending up a case to the Magistrate for trial. It is however of the greater importance in serious charges that the statements of witnesses should be recorded by the Magistrate when fresh. It is contrary to the wish of the Government to wait for the Chemical Examiner's report in such cases but the other evidence should be placed before the Magistrate as soon as it appears that prima facie case is made out.—Beng Pol Code p 383

28 Magistrate can administer oath.—Prosecution for false statement.—A Magistrate acting under this section has power to administer an oath and a charge of perjury can be framed with regard to such statements when he is so acting 16 M 421 A Magistrate acting under this section is a Court acting in the discharge of a duty imposed upon him by law and is therefore authorized to administer oath under s 4 of the Indian Oaths Act (X of 1873), 29 M 89, 5 B L R 174—13 Cr L J 33, 22 A 115 even to a suspected person 8 Bom L R 589 = 4 Cr L J 183, but see 82 C, 1095

But no oath can be administered to an accused under s 341 (4) and a confession recorded on oath is not a confession and is inadmissible in evidence 10 C P Cr 16 He cannot be examined as a witness but can be questioned only to the extent and for the purpose specified in s 342. But see 3 P R 1850. See also 27 C, 455, where it was held that it was illegal for a Magistrate to administer an oath to an accused person for the purpose of obtaining information on which to take proceedings

29 Is recording a statement under this section a judicial proceeding?—By the Full Bench decision in 45 B 834 = 23 Bom L R 1, it is held that a statement recorded by a Magistrate in the course of a Police investigation under s. 164 of the Cr Pro Code is not evidence in a stage of a judicial proceeding within the meaning of explanation 2 to s. 193 I P C. The decisions in 5 B 216, 16 M 421 and 29 M 89 laying down to the contrary were dissented from 30 Magistrate must not allow others to intervene in examining witnesses.—There is no warrant or justification for the intervention of a third party as a questioner directly or indirectly of a confessing prisoner 9 C L J 663, 13 C W N 861.

VI—CONFESSION SHOULD BE VOLUNTARY.

31 Confession must be free and voluntary.—A confession to be admissible must be free and voluntary that is must not be extracted by any sort of threat or violence nor obtained by any direct or implied promise however slight nor by the exertion of any improper influence by persons in authority because under such circumstances the party may have been induced to say what is not true. A simple caution to the accused to tell the truth if he says anything it has been decided not to be sufficient to prevent the statement being given in evidence and although it may be put that when a person is told to tell the truth he may possibly understand that the only thing true is that he is guilty that is not what he ought to understand. He is reminded that he need not say anything but if he says anything let it be true. R v Finley 1 Cox. 75 It is not part of the duty of a Magistrate to tell the accused that anything he may say will go as evidence against him 10 C, 775. See Note 96

It is not legal to use evil or against the person making it or against his co-accused a confession which is the direct outcome of the confessing accused being given to understand that, if he confessed there was a reasonable prospect of his receiving a pardon. Such confession is not admissible in evidence 45 A 300 and 45 A 633.

32. On whom does the onus lie to prove that confession was voluntary?—In English law the burden of proof lies upon the prosecution R v Thomson (1893), 2 Q B, 12, R v Rose 67 L J Q B 289. The prosecution must prove affirmatively that the confession was free and voluntary. Russell on Crimes p. 457

See also Ibrahim v. The King, 18 C. W. N. 705 = 15 Cr. L. J. 326 (F.C.) where all the cases are reviewed. It is submitted that the law in India ought to be the same. See 2 Bom. L.R. Journal 197. But in 25 B. 168, it has been held that in this country a confession is prima facie admissible unless the accused proves that the confession was not voluntary, disapproving of Bom. H C Cr. Ruling 3 of 1898. See also 2 C. W. N. CXXY and Amir Ali's Evidence Act p. 250.

33. Duration of Police custody is an important element in determining the voluntary character of the confession.—Confession after an accused person has been in Police custody for some time is always open to grave suspicion. 9 A. 528 at p. 566; 6 C. W. N. 380. The fact and duration of Police custody is very properly regarded as having a material bearing on the question whether confession is voluntary or not, 13 C. W. N. 861. When a Magistrate records the confession of a person who had been in detention by the Police he must ascertain and record, for the purpose of satisfying himself that the confession was voluntary, how long the accused has been in the custody of the Police. Where there is no record of such questioning, it is the duty of the Sessions Judge to whom the case has been committed to send for the Magistrate and satisfy himself on the point before holding the confession to be relevant, 25 B. 543. When it appeared that an accused person was illegally confined in solitary confinement for about a fortnight that the Police had access to him that pressure was brought to bear upon him through his father, mother and brother, that the desirability of a confession was pressed upon him by the District Magistrate as a means of saving himself and his relatives from threatened pains and penalties, that his father was illegally arrested and detained in hajat for a long time without any charge, that he then made a confession which was recorded without legal precautions and in the immediate presence of an officer who was the head of the Police and was officially and personally interested in the case and who put incriminating questions to accused and helped in amplifying the confession, and finally that the confession was retracted as soon as the accused was produced in Court. Held such confession was not voluntary and not admissible in evidence, 9 C. L. J. 663, 15 Cr. L. J. 633 (O), 1885 A. W. N. 59.

34. Voluntariness of confessions should appear at the beginning of a statement.—The fact that confession is made voluntarily, and that the accused was warned that he was not bound to make it, should appear at the beginning and not at the end of the statement, Weir II, 136. The only questions permissible are as to whether or not the confession is made voluntarily. 10 B. H C R. 166 at p. 175, 17 C. 662 at p. 871. Incriminating questions are highly improper.

35. Duty of Appellate Court when voluntary nature of confession is impugned.—The Court of Appeal is not precluded from inquiry into the nature of a confession to see whether it was voluntary or not because the recording Magistrate attached at its foot the memorandum prescribed in s. 164. It is a duty clearly incumbent on the Court of Appeal when the spontaneity and voluntary nature of the confession is impugned, 9 C. L. J. 663.

VII.—FORMALITIES TO BE OBSERVED AND OMISSIONS THEREOF.

36. Formalities to be observed in recording confessions.—Whenever a statement or confession is made by any person in the presence of a Magistrate under this section the Magistrate, in order to make it admissible as evidence against such person, should specially record the circumstances under which the statement or confession is made, and in whose custody the person is at the time, and he should carefully observe the following formalities—

(1) Every question and every answer must be recorded in full (s. 364).

(2) The signature or mark of the accused person must be affixed (s. 364).

(3) The Magistrate must make a memorandum at the foot of the confession as stated at end of this section—Bom. Cr. Cr. p. 1. See 1 B. 219 and 25 B. 168.

37. Provision as to the mode of recording confessions are mandatory.—The provisions of this section read with s. 364 are imperative and s. 533 infra will not render a confession admissible where no attempt at all has been made to conform to its provision. PER PARKER, J., 9 M. 224. That section does not contemplate to provide for any non-compliance with the law in this respect. S. 533 would only come into operation when a confession or other statement of an accused person recorded under this section and under s. 364 was tendered but a confession tendered in direct violation of those sections would not be a confession recorded under them, and the recorded statement to be proved must mean a statement recorded in accordance with the provisions of the Act and not in violation of them. It may be argued that, if the Magistrate recording the confession records it in a language other than that directed by law there is on his part a non-compliance with the provisions of the law which is cured by s. 533 as much as non-compliance with any other provision but there is a difference between non-compliance, an omission to do something which a person is directed to do and a direct violation of the law and the section seems to assume that the confession has been recorded in accordance with the provisions of the law. It is a section which provides a remedy in cases in which certain provisions of the law have not been fully complied with by the Magistrate and operating as it does against the accused person and not in his favour, it must be strictly construed. It would we think be extremely dangerous so to construe it as to include not only omission to comply with the law but infractions of it. Per MACPHERSON and HILL, JJ., in 17 C. 862 at p. 871, doubted in 18 C. 549 and dissented from in 21 B. 493 and 23 B. 221. But failure to comply with the rules prescribed by Government which have not the force of law does not preclude admission of evidence to prove the character of the confession but such a failure might be a circumstance to be considered in deciding the question whether the confession is made voluntarily or not, 33 M. 413. See also 4 C. 696.

The record of a confession did not show that the accused was warned by the Magistrate that he was not bound to make a confession and did not in clear terms show that the accused had been asked whether the statement was made voluntarily. The Magistrate was examined and he deposed that he had cautioned the accused and explained to him that he was not bound to make a statement but that if he did so it might be used in evidence against him. Held that the confession was admissible. 3 P. 672 (2 L. 323 dissented from.) See also 6 L. 88.

38 Police officers not to be present at confessions or statements.—A confession or statement should not in any case be recorded nor the warning that anything he says will be used against him be given in the presence of the Police-officers who have arrested or produced the accused. Madras GO No 2883 J, dated 17th December 1887 as amended by GO No 1481 J dated 1st November 1909. It is not desirable that the Police-officer making an investigation under this Chapter should be present when a confession is recorded under this section nor should any Police-officer remain in the Magistrate's Court, except such as may be necessary to secure the safe custody of the accused person which however can usually be done by the Magistrate's attendants other than Policemen. The record of the circumstances should include a statement that these requirements have been complied with.—Bom H C Cr Ctr p 2. A Police-officer should not be allowed to suggest questions to be put. Though a confession so taken would not be inadmissible as evidence the Court would not attach much weight to it as such a course would suggest that the Magistrate is not conducting the inquiry himself. See 9 C. L. J. 653. It is highly irregular for a Magistrate recording a confession to obtain from the Police a report of what the accused is alleged to have stated to them before he begins to record the confession. In 11 C. L. J. 273 = 11 Cr. L. J. 257, it was held that a confession taken in jail by a Magistrate with the Police-officer in the next room and subsequently retracted could not be acted upon unless supported by very good corroboration.

39 Confession recorded in a different language.—It seems that the provisions of this section as read with s. 364 would not be complied with where answers made by an accused to a Magistrate in one language are taken down in another unless it could be shown that it was impracticable to have taken down the answers in the language in which they were given and further that there would be grave doubt if such a defect could be cured by s. 533. 15 C. 595. See 17 C. 852; 18 C. 549, 2 G. W. N. 702, 9 M. 224, 8 C. 818 (Note) = 1 C. L. R. 1, 14 C. 539, 21 B. 405 at p. 501, 23 B. 221, 1892 A. W. N. 60, 10 O. C. 112 = 5 Cr. L. J. 94; 22 C. 817. A Magistrate when recording a confession put the question to the accused in Marathi and the accused gave his answers in the same language but the Magistrate recorded the confession in English. After the examination was concluded the Magistrate read out the confession sentence by sentence and the Sheristadar translated it into Marathi and then the accused admitted it was correct. Held having regard to the provisions of s. 533 and the prior evidence of the Magistrate and the Sheristadar at the trial that the confession was admissible and that the error had not prejudiced the accused as to his defence on its merits. 4 Bom. L. R. 783, where 9 M. 224 is distinguished.

40 Translation of confession should be filed with record.—Whenever a confession recorded under

41 Confession recorded by Magistrate's clerk.—Although the terms of ss. 164 and 364 are to be strictly observed by the Magistrate actually taking down the confession himself the defect of a confession having been recorded by the Magistrate's clerk can be cured under s 533 by examining the Magistrate, 2 P. R. 1909. See also 14 C. 539; but a Police-officer ought not to be employed, 9 C. L. J. 55.

42. Statement made through an interpreter in a language other than the Court language.—When the statement or confession is made through an interpreter in a language other than that of the Court, it is not necessary that it should be recorded in that language. The language in which it is conveyed to the Court by the interpreter is the language in which it should be recorded, 5 C. 826.

43. Refusal of accused to sign confession.—An accused person who refuses to sign a statement made at his trial in answer to questions put by the Court commits no offence punishable under s 180, I P. C., 4 B. 15; 3 L. B. R. 199. See 10 B. H. C. R. 166 at p. 177 as to the object of requiring the accused to sign. See also 9 C. L. J. 55. The signature is unnecessary when the confession is made to the trying Court, 3 C. 758.

44. Thumb-impression is not signature.—Where a document purporting to be a confession of an accused person who was able to write, bore a thumb-impression close to the printed words 'signature or mark of the accused' in the place where if he had signed, he would have placed his signature, held, that the thumb impression was not a signature within the meaning of s 3 (52) of the General Clauses Act X of 1897 and therefore the provisions of this section had not been complied with, 32 C. 550.

45. Signature of Magistrate essential.—The record of the confession as well as the memorandum must be signed by the Magistrate, 3 C. W. N. 387. The section does not require a memorandum that a statement as distinguished from a confession was made voluntarily, 27 C. 295. Having regard to s 533, the following decisions are no longer law, 10 B. H. C. R. 497; 5 C. 954 = 6 C. L. R. 297; 5 C. 958 = 6 C. L. R. 353, 4 C. 695; 5 C. L. R. 209.

46. Irregularity in making memorandum.—A confession does not become inadmissible merely because the memorandum required by the law to be attached thereto by the Magistrate has not been written in the exact form prescribed, 3 A. 333, but see 6 B. 283. But such a confession cannot be admitted under s 80 of the Evidence Act without proof of its having been properly made, 7 C. W. N. 220. See also 9 M. 224; 18 C. 549, 12 A. 595; 8 O. C. 395, 2 P. R. 1909; 15 N. L. R. 19 = 15 Cr. L. J. 243 following 7 C. P. L. R. 14 and 40 C. 873. See also 6 L. 58. See also Note 37 above.

47. Omission to record the circumstances under which confession is made.—The omission of the Magistrate before whom the confession of an accused person was made to record the circumstances that the accused was not in the custody of the Police at the time does not invalidate the confession, if the requirements of the Code were complied with by the Magistrate when he recorded the confession, Ratanlal 534; 5 C. 938.

48. Recording confession in narrative form.—The confession of an accused person was recorded in a simple narrative form instead of in the shape of question and answer as required by s 364. There was nothing in the character of the confession, or in the circumstances of the case to lead to the inference that the accused had been prejudiced by the error. Held that the error did not affect the admissibility of the statement in evidence, 8 C. 616; 4 Bom. L. R. 785 at p. 787; 9 C. L. J. 55; 14 C. 539 and 23 B. 221; 12 C. L. R. 120. See contra 10 B. H. C. R. 168 and 497. See also 1909 U. B. R. 1 Ex. 3 = 11 Cr. L. J. 41.

49. Omission to record that confession was voluntarily made.—Where in reply to the questions of the committing Magistrate, the accused made confessional statements which the Magistrate recorded and subscribed thereto the following declaration—"The statement made by this prisoner in my presence and hearing is taken down fully. It is read over to him and acknowledged to be correct." Held, the statements were not admissible in evidence, the provisions of this section not having been followed, Weir 11, 140 where observations are made as to the duty of the magistracy in recording confessions. In 12 Cr. L. J. 15 (A), however, where the accused was convicted on his confession recorded by a Magistrate who omitted to make the memorandum at the foot of the record to the effect that he believed that the confession was voluntarily made, the Judges of the High Court before whom the case came on appeal sent for the Magistrate who deposed that he believed that the confession was voluntarily made and that he inadvertently omitted the words. The Judges held that though ordinarily such a statement made by the Magistrate would be received with full confidence, in the circumstances of the case they could not act on the confession. See also 8 O. C. 395; 2 P. R. 1909; 6 L. 183.

50. Memorandum referred to in s. 364 not necessary.—Under the present amendment it is obligatory on the Magistrate to certify that the warning was given to the accused that if he makes a confession the same would be used against him. Therefore, omission to record such certificate would be illegal.

51. Recording Magistrate may be examined to prove statement voluntary.—Where a District Magistrate refused to make the memorandum referred to in this section, because it appeared to him that the statement was not the accused's free and spontaneous statement, but was made by him in consequence of certain hopes which a constable held out to the accused, which he thought probably be realised, the Appellate Court directed that the District Magistrate might be examined under s. 533 as to the statement made by the accused before him and on the District Magistrate proving that the statement was made voluntarily, the same was admitted in evidence, 8 O. C. 393; but see 17 Bom. L. R. 898 = 3 Bom. Cr. C. 110, and also 2 P. R. 1909; 12 Cr. L. J. 15 (All)

52. Confessions used in evidence, how quoted.—Whenever a statement or confession is recorded under this section, the Magistrate recording the statement or confession should indicate thereon the section of the Code under which it is recorded, and the Judge or Magistrate who afterwards makes use of the document as evidence should quote, at the head thereof by its name and serial number, the case or proceeding in which such document is recorded.—Bom H C Cr Cr, p. 3.

VIII.—RETRACTED CONFESSIONS.

53. Effect of confession subsequently retracted.—It is unsafe for a Court to rely and act upon a confession which has been retracted unless upon a consideration of the whole evidence in the case the Court is in a position to come to the unhesitating conclusion that the confession is true, i.e., to say, usually unless the confession is corroborated by credible independent evidence, 18 A. 78; 27 C. 295; 23 C. 829; 6 S. L. R. 34; 3 P. W. R. 1907; 10 M. 295; 12 M. 123; 19 M. 452. Retracted confessions are always open to suspicion, 22 C. 164. But it is not illegal to base a conviction upon the uncorroborated confession of an accused person, provided the Court is satisfied that the confession was voluntary and is true in fact 30 P. R. 1915 = 264 P. L. R. 1914.

54. Corroborative evidence not absolutely necessary, but generally required.—A retracted confession, if proved to be voluntarily made, can be acted upon along with the other evidence in the case. There is no rule of law that a retracted confession must be supported by independent reliable evidence corroborating it in material particulars. The use to be made of such a confession is a matter of precedence rather than of law, 19 B. 728; 23 B. 316; 20 A. 133; 29 A. 835. See also 1885 A. W. N. 221; 6 W. R. 73; 8 W. R. 80; 11 Bom. H. C. R. 137; 11 W. R. 20; 12 W. R. 49; 16 C. W. N. 1105; 30 P. R. 1914 = 50 P. W. R. 1914 = 264 P. L. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 626; 15 P. W. R. 1915, 11 P. W. R. 1915. "It cannot be laid down as an absolute rule of law that a confession made and subsequently retracted by a prisoner cannot be accepted as evidence of his guilt without independent and corroborated evidence. The weight to be given to such a confession must, it is clear, depend upon the circumstances under which the confession was originally given and the circumstances under which it was retracted including the reasons given by the prisoner for his retraction. It is obvious that a confession in itself reasonable and probable must, if repeated more than once and retracted only at a late stage in the proceedings, have greater weight attached to it than a confession made once only and retracted after a short interval. There are other circumstances which may go to diminish or to increase the weight that should be attached to a confession, 21 M. 83 at p. 88; 23 B. 316, 2 C. W. N. 637, 16 P. R. 1903 and 24 P. W. R. 1909 = 10 Cr. L. J. 534, 24 P. R. 1910 = 28 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 604; 30 P. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 626. "If a Judge believes that a confession made by a prisoner, although subsequently withdrawn, contains a true account of that prisoner's connection with the crime, the Judge is bound to act, so far as that prisoner is concerned on that confession which he believes to be true. Where a confession is not supported by the evidence of witnesses, a Judge must examine very carefully to see whether it gives those details which indicate that it is a natural narrative of what took place in the presence of the man making it and is not at variance with any evidence in the case which is believed, and is not merely a parrot like repetition of a story put into the man's mouth," 20 A. 133 at p. 134; 10 M. 295; 16 Cr. L. J. 179 (Bar), 30 P. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 626. See also 6 P. W. R. 1916, where 30 P. R. 1914 was followed.

55. Magistrate must inquire into all material points.—Where a confession is retracted, it is the duty of the Court that is called to act upon it, especially in a case of murder, to inquire into all the material points and surrounding circumstances and satisfy itself fully that the confession cannot but be true, 3 Bom. L. R. 441. Where confessions are retracted, allegations are frequently made of ill-treatment or other improper inducement on the part of the Police. Such allegations should be carefully inquired into and considered, 8 B. H. C. Cr. C. 126.

56. Mere retraction is no proof of unlawful inducement—English practice different.—In this country a confession duly recorded and certified under this section is admissible in evidence against the person making it (even though it is subsequently retracted), unless shut out by the provision of s. 24 of the Evidence Act

A mere subsequent retraction of a confession which is duly recorded and certified is not enough in all cases to make it appear to have been unlawfully induced. The law in England is not quite the same as to the relevancy and admissibility of confessions [L. R. (1893), 2 Q. B. D. 12]; as the Court there has to decide whether it has been proved affirmatively to be free and voluntary, 25 B. 168; 6 L. 415.

57. Retracted confessions should carry practically no weight against persons jointly tried with the maker.—It is not made on oath, it is not tested by cross-examination and its truth is denied by the maker himself who has lied on one or other of the occasions. The very fullest corroboration would be necessary in such a case, far more than would be demanded for the sworn testimony of an accomplice on oath, 28 C. 689. As to the value of confession in joint trials, see 6 B. 288; 6 C. 279; 10 B. L. R. 453 = 19 W. R. 67; 10 B. L. R. 455 (Note) = 19 W. R. 16; 15 C. W. N. 593 = 12 Cr. L. J. 258. Such a confession cannot stand higher than accomplice testimony, which generally requires corroboration, 4 C. 483 = 3 G. L. R. 270; 10 B. 231; 2 C. W. N. 749; 17 A. 324; 23 M. 151, 19 M. 432; 15 B. 66; 22 A. 445, 11 O. C. 328 = 8 Cr. L. J. 393; 12 O. C. 418 = 11 Cr. L. J. 71; 11 A. L. J. 73 = 14 Cr. L. J. 112; 264 P. L. R. 1914 = 50 P. W. R. 1914 = 30 P. R. 1914 = 13 Cr. L. J. 626; 163 P. L. R. 1915 = 22 P. W. R. 1915, 6 Bur. L. T. 47 = 14 Cr. L. J. 179; 29 A. 434. As to the proof of confessions made in the absence of the co-accused. See 8 B. 124; 7 C. 65 = 8 C. L. R. 352 = 10 C. 970. See also 17 Cr. L. J. 226 = 34 In. Ca. 642 (Pan.). But see 6 L. 415.

58. Self-exculpatory statements.—A statement was taken from a woman under this section to the effect that another person had murdered the deceased and had deposited the dead body in a certain place. She pointed out the place where the dead body had been buried and delivered up the jewels which the deceased had been wearing at the time of the murder. This statement was put in evidence at the trial of the deponent and the other person for murder. Held, the statement was inadmissible against the co-accused, because though when it was made the deponent was a witness she was no longer a witness at the trial and the co-accused had no opportunity of cross-examining her as to the facts and allegations contained therein. Further, it was inadmissible on the charge of murder against the deponent herself, who withdrew the same at her trial alleging that she was coerced into making the same, because it was no confession of guilt on her part and she did not implicate herself as a participator in the murder, 2 A. L. J. 100 = 2 Cr. L. J. 59. See also (1911) 2 M. W. R. 375. But see 4 p. 327.

IX.—POWERS AND DUTIES OF THE POLICE.

59. Police-officer cannot compel witness to go to a Magistrate or to make statement.—There is no provision of law which empowers a Police-officer to require a witness to go before a Magistrate not having jurisdiction over the offence to have his statement taken under this section, Ratanlal 488. S. 164 was not intended to enable the Police to obtain an incriminating statement, by some person and as it were to put a seal on that statement by sending in that person, practically under custody, to a Magistrate, 27 C. 295. The object of s. 162 which declares that a Police-officer shall not record a statement made to him by a person under examination is to enable the Police to deal with the person who has reason to believe that he is a witness and send the accused and his witness to the Magistrate having jurisdiction without delay. A Magistrate having no jurisdiction can, however, record the statement of a witness under this section, if the witness appears voluntarily before him. See also 7 C. W. N. 345.

60. Experience of Mr. Justice Straight as regards confessions in this country—Reprehensible conduct of Police in directing their attention to secure confession.—"My experience in this Court has conclusively satisfied my mind of two things: first, that in almost every case of serious gravity or difficulty, the primary object towards which the Police direct their attention and energies is, if possible, to secure a confession; secondly, that such confessions, if subsequently retracted, is, an item of judicial proof, unless corroborated by strong and independent evidence, positively worthless. It requires no very vivid imagination to picture what too often takes place when two or three of these not very intellectual or highly paid Police officials are called away to a village to investigate a grave crime of which there are no very clear traces. Naturally it is much the easier way for them to begin by endeavouring to obtain a confession from the suspected person or persons instead of by searching out the clues to the evidence from independent sources, and seeing what extraneous proof there is. But, as I have more than once been constrained to remark from this Bench, the effect of this sanction given by s. 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code to a Magistrate recording in the course of the investigation the confessions of accused persons thus obtained, not from the hands of the Police, is not so beneficial to the elucidation of guilt as is supposed, for it continually happens that, while the Police have been occupying themselves in getting the confession many of the traces of the crime which if at once followed up would have produced valuable proof have disappeared To repeat a phrase I used on a former occasion instead of working up to the confession they work down from it with the result that we frequently find ourselves compelled to reverse convictions simply because beyond the confession there is no tangible evidence of guilt Moreover I have said and I repeat now it is incredible that the extraordinarily large number of confessions which come before us in criminal cases disposed of by this Court either in appeal or revision should have been voluntarily and freely made in every instance as represented. I may claim some knowledge of, and acquaintance with the ways and conduct of persons accused of crime and I do not believe that the ordinary inclination of their minds which in this respect I take to be pretty much the same with humanity all the world over is to make any admission of guilt. I certainly can add that during fourteen years active practice in the Criminal Courts in England I do not remember half-a-dozen instances in which a real confession once having been made was retracted. In this country on the contrary the retraction follows almost invariably as a matter of course and though I am well aware how this is sought to be explained by a suggestion of the influence brought to bear upon the confessor by other prisoners in havalat the fact remains as an endless source of anxiety and difficulty to those who have to see that justice is properly administered. I say it in no harsh sense or disparagement but it is impossible not to feel that the average Indian Policeman with the desire to satisfy his superiors before and the terms of the Police Acts and Rules behind him is not likely to be over nice in the methods he adopts to make a short cut to the elucidation of a difficult case by getting a suspected person to confess 6 A 509 at p 542

61 Caution in relying upon confessions or admissions—Precautions to be observed in the investigation of crime—It is necessary to warn Police-officers against the practice of unduly relying upon confessions or admissions made by persons suspected of the commission of an offence and thereby falling to place before Courts cases fully investigated and at the same time complete and supported by the best evidence which can be procured. Experience shows that a person guilty of serious crime rarely gives an account of his acts and motives in accurate detail. Even while admitting the commission of a crime he will resort to various devices whereby he hopes to lessen his criminality in the eyes of the Court. The inaccuracy may consist in putting forward false and plausible motives for his act in exaggerating or extenuating as he thinks more expedient the surrounding circumstances in introducing other persons against whom he entertains a grudge as participants in his act or in any other expedient which may at the time commend itself to his brain. The Police may be and often are led first into adopting one of the inaccuracies and next into supporting it by evidence as to motive or surrounding circumstances and this evidence having no foundation is easily shown at the trial to be worthless. The prisoner then has only to retract his confession and the Court has no alternative but to acquit. A still more reprehensible practice is that in which an officer neglects to collect evidence and adopts a confession blindly in order to save himself the trouble and worry of a protracted investigation.—C P Pol Man p 168 Reg and Ord No IV p 363

The Inspector-General expects officers in cases investigated by them to look out vigilantly for and to work throughout upon evidence of a reliable character. The crimes are few in number which are not accompanied by traces which can be linked together and formed into a chain of reliable proof. All clues should be carefully followed up patient inquiry must be made from everyone who is likely to have been connected with events which the investigation shows did precede or which may in the ordinary course of things be presumed to have preceded the crime. The same treatment should be applied to events which may appear to have accom-

for and the evidence is not sufficient to establish the guilt of the accused unless it is proved false or is capable of being corroborated in whole or in part by good and independent evidence.—Reg and Ord No II p 10 A 363

62 Evidence to corroborate confessions must be obtained—Prosecution must not be launched on confession alone—It should be clearly realised that the successful recording by a Magistrate of the confession of an accused person is not a final, but is rather an initial stage of the investigation. The next step is to obtain the corroborative evidence without which confessions ordinarily are discredited by the Courts. If the confession be true evidence in support of some portion of it will be forthcoming and should be collected. When in his search for corroborative evidence the investigator satisfies himself that the statements in the confession are false he then realises that an attempt is being made to wreck his inquiry, and that it is his business to defeat this attempt by collecting independent evidence. If on the other hand, the statements are true he should be prepared with evidence to support them so as to secure against the not improbable contingency of the confession being subsequently retracted. All the rulings of the Courts are to the effect that it is incumbent upon the Police-officers to test the truth of confessions in every possible way—Beng Pol Code p 377. The Police are directed never to prosecute upon a confession alone, however spontaneously given. The only use they should make of admissions made by an accused person is to follow up every clue so given and to establish every fact and circumstance so indicated from other unquestionable sources. It will then make little odds whether the admission is repeated or not. Frequently, it is far better, when convincing proof can otherwise be produced not to allude in the judicial prosecution to admissions made before the Police only, but to rest the case entirely on the facts established by other testimony—Mad. Pol Man., p 95. A Superintendent present at the spot would attach no weight to a confession but would, as far as possible, make the evidence for the prosecution complete independently of it. A confession may lead to such evidence but should not be accepted as a substitute for it—Bom Pol Man., p 19.

X.—MISCELLANEOUS.

63. Confession before Village Magistrate whether admissible?—A Village Magistrate is not a Police-officer and therefore a confession made to him is not inadmissible in evidence, 7 M. 287, but if the accused is in Police custody, his confession to a Village Magistrate is inadmissible see the explanation to s 26 of the Evidence Act.

64. Prosecution for false evidence—There is no legal objection to framing a charge in the alternative under s 193, I P C. against an accused for making contradictory statements one under this section and the other before the Court 1908 A. W. N 73 = 7 Cr. L. J. 302, 22 A. 115. See Notes 28 and 29 under Heading V.

65. Right of accused to have copies of statements.—Before the commencement of the preliminary inquiry against an accused person, he is not entitled either under the general principles of common law or under the Code to copies of statements of various persons recorded by a Magistrate under ss. 162 and 164, 20 M. 466. See Note 14 at p 356.

66. Oral confessions—There is nothing in the law to support the proposition that in order to make an oral extra-judicial confession admissible in evidence, it must be recorded 11 P. R. 1918 (Cr). But in 21 Bom L R. 1065, SHAI, J., held that oral confession before a Magistrate was not admissible and HAYWARD J held it otherwise when it was proved by the testimony of the Magistrate.

¶ 165. (1) 'Whenever an officer in charge of a Police-station, or a Police-officer making an investigation has reasonable grounds for believing that anything necessary for the purposes of an investigation into any offence which he is authorized to investigate may be found in any place within the limits of the Police station of which he is in charge, or to which he is attached, and that such thing cannot in his opinion be otherwise obtained without undue delay, such officer may, after recording in writing the grounds of his belief and specifying in such writing so far as possible, the thing for which search is to be made, search, or cause search to be made, for such thing in any place within the limits of such station

Search by Police-officer

Police station of which he is in charge, or to which he is attached, and that such thing cannot in his opinion be otherwise obtained without undue delay, such officer may, after recording in writing the grounds of his belief and specifying in such writing so far as possible, the thing for which search is to be made, search, or cause search to be made, for such thing in any place within the limits of such station

(2) A Police-officer proceeding under sub-section (1) shall, if practicable conduct the search in person

(3) If he is unable to conduct the search in person and there is no other person competent to make the search present at the time, he may after recording in writing his reasons for so doing require any officer subordinate to him to make the search, and he shall deliver to such subordinate officer in order in writing, specifying the place to be searched and so far as possible the

* Sub-sections (1) and (2) were substituted for the original by Act XVIII of 1923 s 26. Sub-section (3) was added by Act XVIII of 1923 s 26.

† The words in inverted commas "after recording" thing for which search is to be made' and such subordinate officer may thereupon search for such thing in such place

(4) The provisions of this Code as to search warrants and the general provisions as to searches contained in s 102 and s 103 shall so far as may be apply to a search made under this section

* (5) Copies of any record made under sub-section (1) or sub-section (3) shall forth with be sent to the nearest Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence and the owner or occupier of the place searched shall on application be furnished with a copy of the same by the Magistrate

Provided that he shall pay for the same unless the Magistrate for some special reason thinks fit to furnish it free of cost

Note—Referring to the amendment of this section the Select Committee say Suggestions have been made that section 165 as redrafted by the bill goes too far and that it should only permit a search to be made for something specified. We think the utility of the section would be largely impaired if effect were given to these suggestions but we have provided a safeguard by requiring that an officer acting under sub-section (1) or sub-section (3) shall record in writing his reasons for making a search or requiring a search to be made Safeguards to protect the individual from unnecessary trouble have been introduced by the amended section by requiring the Police-officer to record in writing the grounds of his belief and the thing of which search is to be made and sub-section (5) it is obligatory to send a copy of the record to the nearest Magistrate and a copy to be supplied to the owner on application.

Notes —1 Provisions for searches—See ss 96—99 The Court can issue a search warrant under s. 96 or in 165 if that the Magistrate may himself search under s. 103 s. 165 deals with searches by a Police-officer and not by a Magistrate 35 C. 433 at p 448

2 At what time house search to be made.—United Provinces Rules—House-search may be made at any time House-search by night is neither illegal nor contrary to orders still when the search can be delayed without danger to the chance of recovering property it should be postponed till sunrise. In excise cases however search should only be made between sunrise and sunset. In excise and other cases the senior Police-officer with the search party shall always enter the premises himself and not allow the informer to enter the premises without first searching irregularities in this procedure lead to oppression false charges and frequent acquittals.—Reg and Ord N W P s 10 p 273 See 27 C. 692

Bengal Rules—Search must be made between sunrise and sunset though it is not illegal if made by night under special circumstances rendering delay dangerous to the chance of recovering property etc. In such a case the fact must be reported to the District Superintendent of Police for the information of the Magistrate having jurisdiction. If a search is required in any place within the limits of another station it can only be made through the officer in charge of the latter on the requisition oral or written of the former—Ben Pol Man 2nd Ed pp 222 and 402.

Madras Rules—Though the law does not require searches to be made by daylight yet great circumspection is required and as a rule daylight should be awaited precaution being taken to get inmates out of the house if the case is a grave one—Mad Pol Man Vol I p 114

3. The conduct of searches.—Before entering the premises the exterior of the place to be searched will be examined and it will be ascertained whether there is easy access or opportunity of introducing articles without the knowledge of the inmates precautions will be taken to prevent this being done while the search is in progress The Police-officer or other persons who are to make the search will submit to be searched in the presence of the witnesses before he and they go in. No one else should be allowed to enter and the search should be carried through from beginning to end in the presence of the witnesses.—C P Pol Man. p 164

Madras Rules—(a) The Law requires that search be made in the presence of two or more respectable persons. If possible the head of the village should be present. Care must be taken that these persons observe every part of the search. Great attention must be paid to getting respectable witnesses and to seeing that they actually enter the places searched and stand over the searching officer observing every part of the search (b) Before entering the premises care will be taken to examine minutely the exterior of the place to be searched and to observe whether there is easy access or opportunity of introducing articles without the knowledge of the inmates. A note of this point will be then and there made. The persons or the Police-officers who are to enter will be scrupulously examined before the witnesses, before going in, not more than two should be allowed to enter and they should search together and in the presence of the witnesses (c) Should anything be discovered care will be taken to observe with great minuteness all facts and appearances relating to it—whether it would be possible for the article to be placed where found without the knowledge of the inmates etc. and a note of the fact should be made then and there. The witnesses should be invited to give their opinions freely on these points. These opinions should be noted down. Police-officers will be carefully instructed as to the utter futility of this kind of evidence when the article found is some small common article of no great value easily concealed about the clothes of the searcher or easily thrown into the place where found and bearing no proportion to the property lost. District officers will vigorously enquire into every case in which there is the slightest suspicion of foul play and prosecute every man connected with a case in which these practices have been resorted to—Mad Pol Man, Vol I, p 113

4 Search to be in the presence of witnesses.—See s. 103 which provide that search should be made in the presence of witnesses. The Advocate-General has given as his opinion that a respectable inhabitant of the locality is under an obligation to attend and witness a search when called upon to do so by a Police-officer about to make the search and that if he departs without lawful excuse before the completion of the search without signing the searchlist he would be guilty of the offence described in s. 187 I P C. The offence would fall under the first portion of s. 187, in case of searches under ss. 163 and 166 Cr P C and in the case of searches instituted upon a search warrant, under the second paragraph of the section—M P O No 23 of 1900

5 Searchlist should be prepared.—A list of all seized things in the course of a search and of the places in which they are respectively found should be prepared by the officer superintending the search and be signed by the witnesses called upon to witness the search. Such lists will be carefully prepared in trifol at the scene of search immediately after the search has been completed, the original being sent with an Occurrence Sheet to the Magistrate having jurisdiction the counterfoil being attached to the Station house report of the day and the trifol kept at the station. The Police-officer conducting the search must have in his note book a list of all articles found with full particulars of how and where each article was found—Mad Pol Man Vol I p 114

6 No house should be searched unless search will result in finding things sought for.—It is a common practice when a theft or burglary has been committed and for some reason or other the Police suspect a particular person search this person's house in the hopes of finding the stolen property and to carry off to the Police post anything found in the house though it is not the property of which the Police were in search and is of an everyday description e.g. pots and pans knives jewellery of trifling value clothes and so forth. The articles seized are exhibited at the station house and claimants are invited to come forward. The result naturally is that many of the things are claimed and the person whose house was searched is charged on most unsatisfactory evidence with theft of being in possession of stolen property. This procedure is wholly incorrect. Before a Police-officer can seize any property he must have reason to believe it to have been stolen or that some offence has been committed with reference to it. No house should be searched unless there is some reason to believe that the search will result in the finding of the things sought for—C P Pol Man p 108

7 House search not to be made on mere suspicion of complainant, but on inquiry into circumstances of the case.—The indiscriminate search of houses should be discouraged as much as possible. The spirit of this section should be strictly observed. Frequently houses are searched on the mere assertion of the complainant that he suspects the owner, without any inquiry into the circumstances of the case or the grounds upon which the assertion has been made. By such procedure the feelings of respectable persons are wantonly outraged.—Bom. Pol. Man p 96

Superintendents of Police and their assistants will bring to the notice of their District Magistrates instances of search-warrants being issued to the Police on sufficient grounds by Sub-Magistrates—Mad Pol Man Vol I p 114

8 Reasons for search to be recorded beforehand.—In every case in which an officer in charge of a Police-station exercises the powers vested in him under this section he will record concisely but explicitly in the Station-house Register his reasons for deciding to search or cause search to be made in any house. This should, as a rule, be done before the S H O proceeds himself to the search, or issues his order in writing to his subordinates. Inspecting officers will carefully look into this matter when examining Crime Registers and Note Books and ascertain if the reasons for searching were recorded before the search was made—which should always be done if possible—Mad. Pol Man, Vol I, p 114

Where the search was conducted by a Sub-Inspector without recording any order in writing and giving his reasons under s. 165 and on the threats of the Sub-Inspector the accused, on being assaulted struck two blows on the forehead of the Sub-Inspector which proved fatal. Held, that the accused had a right of self-defence against the assault on his person and could not be said to have voluntarily caused death and was entitled to an acquittal 23 A. L. J. 1037.

9. Persons empowered to search—Under s. 12 of Act V of 1861 it has been declared that the Extra Assistant Superintendents of Police, attached to a detective department shall have the powers of officers in charge of Police-stations for the purpose of searching houses in each district where they may be employed. They, Extra Assistants, while exercising these powers can, under the terms of this section, by written order in any particular case, direct the Head Constables in the detective department who are subordinate to them to make search in any house or place—Beng Pol Man, 2nd Ed., p 402.

10. District Magistrate cannot search under this section—This section deals with searches by a Police-officer, and not by Magistrate, 36 C. 433 at p 448.

11 Deputation of Subordinate Police-officer by the S. H. O. must be by an order in writing—7 M. W. P. H. G. R. 209, the conviction of the accused under ss. 143 and 303, I P C., for resisting a search was quashed on the ground that the subordinate Police-officer conducting the search was not empowered by an order in writing. A subordinate Police-officer is not empowered without a warrant to enter a house in search of property, though he may certainly do so in search of a person who is charged with having committed an offence for which he is liable to be arrested without a warrant, 7 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca 50; 6 S. L. R. 1 = 16 Cr. L. J. 15; but see 1892 A. W. N 1. If a constable goes for search without any written authority, he does not under sub-section (3) of this section lawfully exercise the power of a public servant. To such a case s. 99, I P C., has no application 6 C. L. J. 753 = 6 Cr. L. J. 439. See as to the question of private defence, 18 A. 246 and 6 S. L. R. 1 = 16 Cr. L. J. 15.

12. Police-officer must conduct search in person.—In 17 M. L. J. 323 = 6 Cr. L. J. 103, where an Inspector acting under this section seated himself outside the house of the accused and sent a constable into the house to conduct the search. The accused asked the constable for a list of the articles he had come to search for and when none was produced he objected to the search being carried out by the constable and pushed him out, it was held distinguishing 19 M 349, that the accused could not be convicted under s. 353 I P C. The Inspector himself should have personally conducted the search and he was not justified in sitting outside and directing a subordinate to search without giving a written order specifying the articles to be searched for. This ruling was dissented from in 23 M. L. J. 445 = (1912) M. W. N 1111 = 13 Cr. L. J. 783, and it was held that all that was intended by this clause was that the officer should be present on the spot and exercise a general supervision over the search in contradistinction to the cases where he is unable to go to the spot and therefore deposes a subordinate by a written order to conduct the search in his place.

12-A. Place must be within the local limits of the circle.—A Station-house Officer has no power to search any place beyond the local limits of his circle 6 S. L. R. 1 = 16 Cr. L. J. 15. The procedure under s. 166 must be adopted. See, however 12 P. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 551. A Police-officer conducted a search in a house not situate within the local limits of his circle accompanied by a Police constable of the circle in which the house was situate but the constable had no order from his own officer. While engaged in the search they were assaulted, held the search was illegal and the conviction under s. 353 was set aside, 16 Cr. L. J. 559 (A). But see Note 1 to s. 166.

13. Search without warrant for stolen property—No house should be searched without warrant merely because the occupier is a registered bad character. Such a search should only be made under the circumstances mentioned in this section and when the Police-officer has reason to believe that the thing searched for will be found in the house to be searched. Police-officers should record in their diaries the reason for such search though they are not obliged to give the name of the person upon whose information they act. When suspected property is found in a house, all the property in the house is not to be seized. Property seized must be either alleged or suspected to have been stolen or found under circumstances which created suspicion of the commission of an offence and nothing can justify the seizure of the whole of a man's property because he is suspected of having stolen some particular article or articles—Beng Pol Code p 380

14. Does section authorize a general search?—This section does not authorize a general search (e.g., for stolen property). It speaks of a specific document or thing which may be the subject of a summons or order under s 94, 38 C. 304. Seem the section is confined to the production of something which is considered necessary for the conduct by the Police-officer of an investigation into an offence which he is authorized to investigate and does not cover e.g., a search for arms generally, 36 C 433 at pp 440, 443, 452. The law does not empower a Police-officer to search an accused's house for anything but the specific article which has been or can be made the subject of summons or warrant to produce. A general search for stolen property is not authorized and law cannot be got over by using such an expression as 'stolen property relevant to the case'. Such expressions are vague and misleading and the terms of the law are extremely specific, 16 C W. M 1078 = 13 Cr L J. 764. This section does not prevent a Police-officer from making a search of an accused's house for a specific stolen property relevant to the case. It only prohibits making a search for stolen property generally. 38 C. 304 and 16 C. W. N 1078 distinguished. 41 C 261. This section does not authorize a general search on the chance that something may be found the things searched for should be specified. 13 A L J. 979 = 38 A. 14. See also 35 M. L J 127.

15. Power of search under other Acts.—(a) Under s 23 of Act V of 1861 it is lawful for every Police-officer for the purpose mentioned in that section without a warrant to enter and inspect any drinking shop, gaming house or other place of resort of loose and disorderly characters, as to searches for contraband salt, see s 28 of Bengal Act VII of 1864 ss 21 and 23 of Madras Act I of 1882 s 8 of Bombay Act VII of 1873 and ss. 15 and 18 of Act XII of 1882. (b) as to excise articles see Bengal Act XII of 1873. (c) under s 7 of Act XIV of 1858 for stamped paper not bearing the proper distinguishing mark and not authenticated as having been purchased from Government, (d) searches under s 30 of the Indian Arms Act VI of 1878, may in Bengal be conducted only in the presence of a Magistrate or Police officer not below the grade of Inspector—Cal Gaz 1878 Pt II, p 850. (In the Chittagong division this has been extended to Police-officers not below the grade of Sub-Inspector—Cal Gaz 1899 Pt I p 73.) See p 138.

See s. 153 as to the inspection of weights and measures.

16. Police not bound to disclose source of information.—No Police officer shall be compelled to say whence he got any information as to the commission of an offence. See s 125 of the Evidence Act.

17. Action for damages on account of illegal search.—The power of search given under this section is incidental to the conduct of investigation into any offence which a Police-officer is authorized by law to investigate. Therefore if he makes investigation into a non-cognizable offence he has no right to enter into a house to make search under this section. If he does so he acts illegally and an action for damages will lie against him for illegal search. 24 C 691. See also 36 C. 433.

18. Penalty for vexatious search is imprisonment for two months or fine of Rs 500 or both—Bom. Dir. Pol Act, s. 63.

19. The consequences of an illegal search.—See Notes to s 537 on illegalities in summonses, warrants, etc., Note 24.

166. (1) An officer in charge of a Police station^{*} or a Police-officer, not being below the rank of Sub-Inspector making an investigation may, require an officer in charge of another Police station, whether in the same or a different district, to cause a search to be made in any place, in any case in which the former officer might cause such search to be made within the limits of his own station.

When officer in charge of Police-station may require another to issue search-warrant.

(2) Such officer, on being so required shall proceed according to the provisions of section 165 and shall forward the thing found if any, to the officer at whose request the search was made.

* The words in inverted commas or a Police-officer may were inserted by Act XVIII of 1921.

* (3) "Whenever there is reason to believe that the delay occasioned by requiring an officer in charge of another Police-station to cause a search to be made under sub-section (1) might result in evidence of the commission of an offence being concealed or destroyed it shall be lawful for an officer, in charge of a Police-station or a Police-officer making an investigation under this Chapter to search, or cause to be searched, any place in the limits of another Police-station, in accordance with the provisions of section 165, as if such place were within the limits of his own station

* (4) Any officer conducting a search under sub-section (3) shall forthwith send notice of the search to the officer in charge of the Police station within the limits of which such place is situate, and shall also send with such notice a copy of the list (if any) prepared under section 103 and shall also send to the nearest Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence, copies of the records referred to in section 165, sub-sections (1) and (3)

* (5) The owner or occupier of the place searched shall on application be furnished with a copy of any record sent to the Magistrate under sub-section (4)

Provided that he shall pay for the same unless the Magistrate for some special reason thinks fit to furnish it free of cost "

Note—Search conducted by Police-officer of another circle.—It should be noticed that under s 166, as amended by the addition of sub-clause (3), an officer in charge of one Police-station under circumstances mentioned in that sub-section is authorized to search or cause to be searched any place within the limits of another Police-station in accordance with the provisions of s 165 as if such place were within the limits of his own station.

167. (2) The Magistrate to whom an accused person is forwarded under this section may whether he has or has not jurisdiction to try the case, from time to time, authorize the detention of the accused in such custody as such Magistrate thinks fit, for a term not exceeding 15 days on the whole. If he has not jurisdiction to try the case or commit it for trial, and considers further detention unnecessary, he may order the accused to be forwarded to a Magistrate having such jurisdiction

* | Provided that no Magistrate of the third class and no Magistrate of the second class not specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government shall authorize detention in custody of the Police

(3) A Magistrate authorizing under this section detention in the custody of the Police shall record his reasons for so doing

(4) If such order is given by a Magistrate other than the District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate, he shall forward a copy of his order, with his reasons for making it, to the Magistrate to whom he is immediately subordinate

Notes.—1. Referring to the amendment to this section, the Select Committee say : "In s. 167, however, which confers a power to ask for a remand we would confine the operation to investigating officers not below the rank of Sub-Inspector

We consider that the bill does not go far enough in its restriction of the Magistrates who should be authorized to remand to Police custody. We would confine the power to first-class Magistrates and second class Magistrates specially empowered

S 61 provides that persons arrested shall not be detained by the Police for more than 24 hours. S 344 provides for remand during inquiry or trial. See Notes to s 61

2 Detention and remand defined—s 167 and s 344—For the purposes of Police rules detention means detention in Police custody in a Police lock up or otherwise and remand means remand to custody in a magisterial lock up or to a Magistrate's camp guard or under bail or recognizances, during a postponement or adjournment of an inquiry or trial. The broad distinction between this section and s 344, that this section applies to cases which have been instituted on a Police report and are still under investigation, whereas s. 344 refers to cases already on the file of the Magistrate in which the inquiry or trial has begun or is about to begin. Section 344 relates to proceedings in inquiries or trials and has nothing to do with Police investigations and it contemplates a remand to jail, not to Police custody, 23 B 32

3 When order for detention may be applied for—When in the investigation of a cognizable case it is necessary to arrest the accused person at an early stage of such investigation and it is apparent that such investigation cannot be complete within 24 hours after such arrest the investigating Police-officer may apply to the nearest Magistrate for a special order authorizing such further detention as may be reasonable and necessary upon any one of the following grounds :—

(a) To compare the accused's footprints with the tracks to and from the scene of the offence when the distance renders it impossible to make such comparison by daylight within the first 24 hours after arrest.

(b) When the accused persons offers to point out stolen property, or property taken in the offence or weapons or other articles with which the offence was committed, or evidence of value in the case and there is reason to believe that such offer is made bona fide, and it is impossible to proceed to the place and obtain such property weapons, articles or evidence within the first 24 hours after arrest

(c) When it is necessary to ascertain whether persons along the supposed route taken by the accused or injured person recognize the accused person and when by reason of distance it is unreasonable to expect persons to come forward upon the chance of being able to give evidence and it becomes essential to take the accused along such route and it is impossible to do so by daylight within the first 24 hours after arrest.

(d) And other good and sufficient reason for such detention.

Explanation—Except for valid reasons similar to those stated above applications for detention shall be discouraged and no such application shall be made on the ground that an accused person is likely to confess—
Rul and Ord. Pny, p 387

4 Remand under what circumstances allowed—Special orders for the detention of accused persons under this section must not be granted to the Police without good and sufficient cause shown as a general rule, accused persons should be brought before the Magistrate having jurisdiction, who if further investigation seems necessary, can adjourn his inquiry from time to time under s 344, Cr P C. When, however a prisoner is brought before a Magistrate under this section, the Magistrate before granting an order for his detention must be satisfied that—

(a) there is substantial ground for suspecting that the prisoner had committed a definite offence such as to warrant his arrest and detention, and that

(b) his remaining in the hands of the Police is really necessary, such detention may often tend to defeat justice rather than further it and should not be ordered without evidence sufficient to warrant it on the principles above stated. The High Court will regard as a serious dereliction of duty any failure on the part of any Magistrate to exact and enforce strict compliance of the law on the part of the Police.—Don H C Cr Cir p 2

5 Right of Magistrate to remand—Under this section a Magistrate on the mere perusal of the entries in the Police diaries relating to the case to which the accused have no access may from time to time authorize the detention of the accused in custody for a term not exceeding 15 days on the whole. Thereafter he can under s. 344 by a warrant remand an accused for any term not exceeding 15 days at a time, if sufficient evidence has been obtained to raise a suspicion that the accused may have committed an offence and it appears likely that further evidence may be obtained by such remand 36 C. 166.

6. Further remand how obtained—When in the course of a Police investigation, inculpatory facts against the accused have come to light but the case is not in a state for submission to the Magistrate having jurisdiction the accused should be forwarded under this section to the nearest Magistrate, for the purposes of remand. A copy of the entries in the diary directed to be kept under s. 172 should be forwarded at the same time. No detention of the accused is justifiable on account of delay in preparing the diary or copy thereof—Ibid p. 3 19 A 390 at p. 404. The nearest Magistrate may be a Magistrate having jurisdiction or not. In the town of Madras the Commissioner of Police is a Magistrate within the meaning of the section.

7. Accused must be forwarded to Magistrate—Before a Magistrate remands an accused person to Police custody the accused must be produced before him, 16 C. W. N. 145 = 13 Cr. L. J. 65. It is illegal to remand on the application of the Police, an accused not produced in Court 89 P. R. 1887.

8. Remand to be granted in cases of real necessity—A remand to Police custody ought only to be granted in cases of real necessity, and when it is shown in the application that there is good reason to believe that the accused can point out property or otherwise assist the Police in elucidating the case. The Police are too often desirous of retaining the accused in their custody for a longer period than 24 hours merely in the hope of extracting some admission of guilt from him. This is contrary to s. 163 etc. and to the spirit of the Code generally and Magistrates must be careful not to facilitate this object by too great a readiness in granting remands.—Punj Cir p. 176.

9. Reasons for remand must be given and must show necessity—Reason must be given 16 C. W. N. 145 = 13 Cr. L. J. 65. A Magistrate has no authority to further detain the accused in custody without some reason made manifest to him either in the shape of sworn testimony given before him or in some other form, 20 W. R. 25. Magistrates in recording their reasons for the detention or remand should set forth all the information they are able to obtain on the subject, 1885 A. W. N. 69. The reasons which are to be recorded must be reasons showing the particular necessity which exists in each particular case for leaving the prisoner in the hands of the Police. Under no circumstances should an accused person be remanded to Police custody unless it is made clear that his presence is actually needed in order to serve some important purpose connected with the completion of the inquiry. In all other cases in which time is required by the Police to complete the inquiry, the accused person should be detained in magisterial custody—Ibid, p. 177 23 B. 32. Sub-sec. (3), by requiring a Magistrate to record his reason for authorizing detention in Police custody, contemplates that the Magistrate shall consider whether on the facts placed before him, there are good grounds for allowing such detention. There should be at least something to satisfy the Magistrate that the presence of the person arrested while the Police investigation was being held would assist in some discovery of evidence, and that his presence was indispensable for this purpose, as for instance when he had confessed before the Magistrate and had pointed out some of the properties stolen and was waiting to do more but was unable to do so because the Police were by law unable without a special order to detain him. In ordering further detention in Police custody when there are good reasons for such an order, a Magistrate should invariably limit the terms as much as possible to what may be necessary, for the object in view, 11 C. W. N. 554 = 9 Cr. L. J. 85. That the accused will have to be taken to the place of occurrence for individually pointing out the places of their action and journey in committing a dacoity and also for their identification is not a sufficient reason for their remand 7 C. W. N. 437. A person cannot be detained on a mere expectation that time would show his guilt, 17 P. R. 1872; 43 A. 186 = 18 A. L. J. 1114.

10. Remand for indefinite period illegal—Remand should always be for a fixed period and in no case is it legal to grant a remand sine die—Punj Cir, p. 177. The intention of the Legislature is that an accused person should be brought before a Magistrate competent to try or to commit for trial with as little delay as possible 5 M. 63.

11. Procedure for obtaining remand in N-W P.—When the accusation or information is not well founded, and when inquiry is per contra so imperfect as to leave it doubtful whether the 'reasonable suspicion on which the accused was arrested will be capable of confirmation or not, and yet that reasonable suspicion has not been removed at the expiry of hours it is incumbent on the officer in charge of the station to forward his prisoner to the nearest Magistrate with a copy of the entries in the diary relating to the case stating the charge and the grounds of suspicion on which arrested and which are under investigation. The District Superintendent, or Head Police-officer in attendance on the Magistrate, will draw up a remand sheet with which to adduce the prisoner before the Magistrate, and on which he should obtain an order for the detention of the accused, pending the completion of the investigation.—Reg and Ord., N-W P, s 19, p 362

12. Procedure for obtaining remand in Bengal.—The grounds upon which the application to the Magistrate is based must be distinctly stated and be at once communicated to the District Superintendent. Every application for remand shall be made personally by the Chief Police-officer present to the Chief Magistrate officer present. Thus at a headquarters station the District Superintendent and at a sub-division the officer in charge of the sub-district should appear before the Magistrate of the district or sub-divisional officer, as the case may be, to make such an application, unless it is impossible, owing to the absence of one of the officers concerned, or to some other exceptional cause.—Beng Pol Code, pp 379–383, 16 C. W. N. 143 = 13 Cr. L. J. 85.

13. Period of remand not to exceed 15 days.—The right construction of this section is that in Police investigations the period of remand cannot exceed in all 15 days including one or more remands, 11 M. 98; 23 B. 32; 1 W. R. 5, 19 W. R. 36, 5 B H C R. Cr. Ca. 31. See Notes to s 61 at pp. 96 and 97. See 24 F. R. 1902, where a person was kept in custody for ten months. As to place of detention, see 7 W. R. 3 at p. 6.

14. Magistrate to take notice of accused's detention for more than 24 hours.—Every Magistrate should on an accused person being brought before him under this section, because the Police investigation has not been completed note when the accused was first sent for by the Police and when he arrived at Court, and how long he has been under the surveillance or influence of the Police. If, making due allowance for time spent in travelling, the 24 hours detention allowed has been exceeded, notice should invariably be taken of the matter, and the Magistrate of the district should call the Police to account. Subordinate Magistrates should not fail to bring every known instance of unauthorized detention to the notice of the Magistrate of the district. The whole period of detention by the Police under this section cannot exceed 24 hours plus 15 days, exclusive of the time occupied in travelling to the Magistrate's Court after the arrest of the prisoner. When this time has expired any further order of remand must be passed under s 344, after the case has come before a Magistrate having jurisdiction for trial.—C. P. Cr. Cr., Part II, No 12, see also 1885 A. W. N. 59.

15. Practice.—Copies of remand order to be submitted to Divisional and District Magistrates.—Copies of all orders of remand together with reasons for such orders shall be transmitted by Subordinate Magistrates to the Divisional and District Magistrate within 24 hours from the date of the same.

16. Custody under order of Magistrate, lawful custody.—While a case was being investigated under this Chapter by A, a Police-officer, I presented a petition to the Magistrate having jurisdiction to try the case accusing W of being concerned in the commission of the offence and prayed that he might be arrested and sent to the Police-officer investigating the case. W was accordingly arrested and brought before the Magistrate who, having examined I on oath and taken W's statement, made an order on the petition to the following effect:—As no Police report has been made on this matter, and the petitioner only has presented this petition ordered that these papers of W be sent to the District Superintendent of Police, and if a report of the matter be made, the case may be sent up according to rule with the papers. In accordance with his order, W was taken to the Superintendent and was sent by the officer to A who, on negligently allowing W to escape, was tried and convicted under s 222, 1 P. C., it being held that the order of the Magistrate might be taken to have been passed under this section and therefore that W was lawfully committed to the custody of A, 6 A. 129.

17. Arrests under Chapter VIII not governed by this section.—Where a person dealt with under Chapter VIII was arrested and on the application of the Police was remanded to Police custody to enable the Police to arrest others jointly accused with him, held that the order of remand was illegal as this section applies only to investigations under Chapter XIV and gives no authority to a Magistrate to remand an accused person in custody under Chapter VIII. 5 Bom. L. R. 27, 8 C. W. N. 779; 36 A. 262.

168. When any subordinate Police-officer has made any investigation under this Chapter, he shall report the result of such investigation to the officer in charge of the Police-station.

Report of investigation by subordinate Police-officer

Note.—Evidence to be sent in as found.—A preliminary inquiry before a Magistrate is not the same thing as a trial before a Judge. The evidence should be sent in as found not kept by the Police till they have made it all complete. 5 W R 6

169. If upon an investigation under this Chapter, it appears to the officer in charge of the Police-station or to the Police-officer making the investigation * that there is not sufficient evidence or reasonable ground or suspicion to justify the forwarding of the accused to a Magistrate such officer shall, if such person is in custody release him on his executing a bond with or without sureties as such officer may direct to appear, if and when so required, before a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence on a Police report and to try the accused or commit him for trial

Note.—Referring to the amendment of the section.—The Select Committee say We see no cogent reason for the first amendment of ss 169 and 170 which substitutes the words upon the completion of an investigation for upon an investigation. In the case of s. 169 we agree that the power contemplated by the section should be exercisable by investigating officers and we see no reason in this case to restrict the power to officers not below the rank of Sub-Inspector. With regard to s. 170 however we consider that the direct responsibility for sending up case should rest with the officer in charge of the Police-station. S 168 undoubtedly contemplates that the officer in charge is to assume responsibility and to enable all investigating officers to send up cases under s 170 without reference to the officer in charge would tend to make s 168 of no effect.

The words to the officer making the investigation give power to such an officer to release on bail an accused person if there is not enough evidence against him. This agrees with para 188 of the report of the Police Commission.

Notes—1 Forms.—For forms of bonds to be executed under this and the next section see Bch. V, Nos 20 and 26

2 Deposit of cash or Government promissory notes.—Under s. 513 a Police-officer has discretion to permit the deposit of a sum of money or Government promissory notes to such amount as he thinks fit in lieu of bond or sureties.

3 Rules regarding bail.—It should be noted that the bail or recognizance bond taken from persons in a case reported in Form B differ from the bonds taken in cases reported in Form A. Persons executing the former need not appear in Court unless their attendance is required by the Magistrate but those executing the latter must appear on the day fixed by the Police-officer and mentioned in the bond. The first are taken under s 169 and the second under s. 170 of the Code.—Beng Pol Code p 383

4 Application for withdrawal of complaint.—A Police-officer is not authorized to entertain an application for withdrawal of a complaint. The permitting a complainant to withdraw is a judicial act, the exercise of which is vested in the Magistrate by ss 248 and 343 and the Police have no authority to interfere in such matters. Ratanlal 91.

5 Action of Police subject to control of Magistrate.—The admission to bail by the Police under this section being a purely provisional arrangement when the Magistrate determines that there is a prima facie case of a non-bailable offence the accused should be re-arrested and forwarded to the Magistrate in custody. Ratanlal 131

6 Police to fix date in bond.—Where a security bond is taken by the Police for the appearance before Magistrate of an alleged offender under the Railway Act, Police-officer shall fix a date in the bond and warn witnesses to appear on the date. They shall at once inform the Magistrate concerned of the nature of the crime charged the date fixed and the number of witnesses to be heard.—Oudh Cr Dig., p 6

170. (1) If, upon an investigation under this Chapter, it appears to the officer in charge of the Police-station that there is sufficient evidence or reasonable ground as aforesaid such officer shall forward the accused under custody to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence upon a Police report and to try the accused or, commit him for trial or, if the offence is bailable and the accused is able to give security, shall take security from him for his appearance before such Magistrate on a day fixed and for his attendance from day to day before such Magistrate until otherwise directed

(2) When the officer in charge of a Police-station forwards an accused person to a Magistrate under this section, he shall be bound to produce before the Magistrate all persons who appear to such officer to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case as he may think necessary, to execute a bond to appear before the Magistrate as thereby directed and prosecute or give evidence (as the case may be) in the matter of the charge against the accused.

(3) If the Court of the District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate is mentioned in the bond such Court shall be held to include any Court to which such Magistrate may refer the case for inquiry or trial, provided reasonable notice of such reference is given to such complainant or persons

(4) The day fixed under this section shall be the day whereon the accused person is to appear, if security for his appearance has been taken, or the day on which he may be expected to arrive at the Court of the Magistrate, if he is to be forwarded in custody.

(5) The officer in whose presence the bond is executed shall deliver a copy thereof to one of the persons who executed it and shall then send to the Magistrate the original with his report

Notes.—1. On a day fixed, sc. on a particular day, 11 W. R. 47; but not after a long interval, 6 W. R. 52. This is the only section under which a Police-officer can take recognizances from an accused person for his appearance before a Magistrate. He can exercise this power only after the investigation is complete.

2. Evidence should be sent in as found.—In a preliminary inquiry before a Magistrate, the evidence should be sent in as found and not kept by the Police till they have made it all complete, 5 W. R. 6.

3. Accused to be sent to Magistrate when substantial case is made out.—When the facts brought to light constitute a case which can properly be submitted to the Magistrate having jurisdiction, the accused should be sent immediately to such Magistrate according to the provisions of this section. If the first step of the Police investigation discloses a substantial case against the accused, he should at once be forwarded as contemplated in this section, B H C Cr Cr, p 3

4. Case must be sent to the Magistrate who ordered the Police inquiry.—When a Magistrate having cognizance of a case refers it to the Police for inquiry and report, the Police have no power to prefer a charge-sheet before another Magistrate and the latter has no jurisdiction to take cognizance of the case, 16 Cr. L. J. 665 (M.)

5. Binding over witnesses for prosecution.—When a District Superintendent in looking into the case finds that any witnesses have been unnecessarily sent in, he should at once report the circumstances to the Magistrate, in order that the witnesses might be discharged before the trial, should the Magistrate think proper. When such witnesses are dismissed, the Superintendent should inform the Police-officer who sent up the case and point out the reasons of their not being required, thereby instructing him in his duty—Beng Pol Man, 2nd Ed., p 352.

6. Police not to bind defence witnesses.—It is not the duty of the Police to bind over and produce before the Magistrate the witnesses for the defence. This section and s. 173 refer to witnesses in support of the complaint, and it cannot be supposed that the power of detaining witnesses in custody which is given by s. 171 was intended to apply to the prisoner's witnesses. It is not that when the case comes on before the Magistrate, the witnesses for the defence may sometimes arise. But considering the qualms of the Magistrate, it is probable that grave inconvenience would arise, if the Police were instructed to bind over their witnesses—Mad Pol Man, Vol I, p 90

7. Payment to witnesses.—For rules in Bengal see Calcutta Gazette, 1895 PI I, p 621. See also Notes to s. 544

8. In case of an offence under the Railway Act when case should be sent as cognizable.—When an arrest is made under the Indian Railway Act of a person who there is reason to believe, will abscond or whose name and address are unknown and he refuses to give them, or when given are reasonably believed to be incorrect, the case should be sent to the Magistrate in accordance with this section as a cognizable case as defined in cl. (f) of s. 4, although the offence alleged against the accused be not itself cognizable.—Bom H C Cr Cir, para 10-a, p. 4

9. When copy of bond to be sent to Commanding Officer.—If the complainant or other person is a soldier in His Majesty's Army, the officer in charge of Police-station should immediately after taking such bond, send a copy thereof to the Commanding Officer of the Regiment in which he is serving.—Bom Pol Man, p. 90

10. Copy of Police charge-sheet cannot be given at the beginning of trial.—At the beginning of a trial in a Presidency Magistrate's Court, an application was made on behalf of the accused for a copy of the Police charge-sheet, which contained the whole of the prosecution evidence as set forth by the Police, and extracts from, if not copies, of the Police diaries. The application was rejected by the Magistrate; held that the Magistrate was not wrong in refusing the application at the stage of the proceedings and the High Court would not interfere in revision, 19 M. 14. In commenting on this, the Madras Law Journal observes (6 M. L. J. 154) 'We think this decision is likely to work considerable mischief. The learned Judges no doubt expressed themselves somewhat guardedly that at the stage of the proceedings they would not in revision set aside the order of the Magistrate refusing a copy of the charge-sheet. The Subordinate Magistrate is apt to extend the scope of this decision to all cases. It seems to us that the Police charge-sheet corresponds to the complaint of the private individual on which criminal proceedings are initiated. S. 191 of the Cr P C. specifies the modes in which criminal proceedings are started, the complaint of a private individual and the report of the Police being the modes in which the jurisdiction of the Magistrate is invoked. The accused is entitled to a copy of the complaint and for the same reason to a copy of the charge-sheet. The fact that the charge-sheet may contain matters which are also in the diary is no argument in favour of refusing a copy. For as we have more than once pointed out, s. 161 places the result of the Police investigation on a footing entirely different from the diary under s. 172.' It is to be borne in mind that from the description given by the Magistrate of the Police charge-sheet, it more resembled a brief for the prosecution prepared for Magistrate's information than a mere complaint.

Complainants and witnesses not to be required to accompany Police-officer

171. No complainant or witness on his way to the Court of the Magistrate shall be required to accompany a Police-officer, Complainants and witnesses not to be subjected to restraint.

or shall be subjected to unnecessary restraint or inconvenience, or required to give any security for his appearance other than his own bond

Recusant complainant or witnesses may be forwarded in custody

Provided that, if any complainant or witness refuses to attend or to execute a bond as directed in section 170, the officer in charge of the Police station may forward him in custody to the Magistrate, who may detain him in custody until he executes such bond, or until the hearing of the case is completed

Notes.—1. No objection to complainant or witness accompanying Police of his own accord.—Under the

2. Restraint exercised upon witness by Police illegal.—Where a witness was kept under surveillance for four days by the Police and the Sessions Judge considered that under the circumstances of the case they were perfectly justified in keeping her in this state. Held that there is no warrant for the Police to subject a witness to any unnecessary restraint whatsoever, and the control exercised over the witness being unnecessary her evidence cannot be accepted as that of a witness speaking voluntarily, 4 C. W. N. 49 at p. 54. Disobedience of the provisions of this section will be punishable under s. 166, I P C.

172. (1) Every Police officer making an investigation under this Chapter shall day by day enter his proceedings in the investigation in a diary, setting forth the time at which the information reached him the time at which he began and closed his investigation the place or places visited by him and a statement of the circumstances ascertained through his investigation

in investigation

(2) Any Criminal Court may send for the Police diaries of a case under inquiry or trial in such Court and may use such diaries not as evidence in the case, but to aid it in such inquiry or trial. Neither the accused nor his agents shall be entitled to call for such diaries, nor shall he or they be entitled to see them merely because they are referred to by the Court, but if they are used by the Police officer who made them, to refresh his memory or if the Court uses them for the purpose of contradicting such Police-officer the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act 1872 section 161 or section 145 as the case may be shall apply.

Notes—1 Provisions of the Indian Evidence Act.— Any writing referred to under the provisions of the two last preceding sections must be produced and shown to the adverse party if he requires it such party may, if he pleases cross-examine the witnesses thereupon s 161 A witness may be cross-examined as to previous statements made by him in writing or reduced to writing and relevant to matters in question without such writing being shown to him or being proved, but if it is intended to contradict him by the writing his attention must before the writing can be proved be called to those parts of it which are to be used for the purpose of contradicting him s. 145 See also ss 159 and 160

Case Diary No

Offence—Murder s 302 I P C

January 12th 1891 8 a.m.—Budhu complainant, resident of Dharampet came to the station and reported that his brother Sukhlall had left his house on the previous evening to visit a neighbour and as he did not return during the night a messenger was sent to enquire about him. The messenger (Ramlall Gorait) came back and reported to Budhu that the body of Sukhlall was lying by the side of the road between M Dharampet and M Paldi with the head laid open by a sword cut. Therefore the complainant demanded enquiry

8-30 a.m.—I Narnin Lall Sub-Inspector started for the spot.

9-30 a.m.—I arrived in the village of Dharampet and commenced enquiries. I found the body of Sukhlall lying at the place indicated by the complainant. Life was extinct and the corpse which had three sword cuts on it was first made the subject of an inquest under s 174 Cr P C (the Panchayatsnama dady signed has been forwarded to the Magistrate having jurisdiction) and then sent in the custody of constable Asgar Ali to the Civil Surgeon for examination. The usual descriptive roll was sent with the corpse

10 a.m.—Ramlall Gorait was despatched in search of Hira a man suspected by complainant.

10-25 a.m.—Inspector Mohamed Hussein arrived and under express orders from headquarters took over the investigation.

(Sd) NARAIN LALL

Sub-Inspector

On arriving I Mohamed Hussein Inspector in accordance with express orders given to me took charge of the case. In the course of enquiries I found that deceased had an intrigue with the wife of Devidin Brahmin living in a hamlet about 600 yards from the village where deceased resides and that deceased left his house last evening with the intention of meeting Devidin's wife.

4 p.m.—Ascertained from Dadu Kahar that Devidin and Nain Sukh were seen following deceased towards the village of the latter and that these two men were armed—one with a sword the other with a gurrasa I therefore searched the house of these two men in the presence of themselves and Jadab Chander Mukerji and Mohan Singh—two respectable inhabitants of the place. The arms indicated by Devidin were found buried in an inner room in Devidin's house both of them stained with blood. A blood-stained dhoti was also found hidden in the thatch of the same building. Both Devidin and Nain Sukh were thereupon arrested. Ramlall Gorait identifies the gurrasa as belonging to Nain Sukh. He also recognized the sword. Bihari dhoti stated that he had frequently washed the dhoti for Devidin. I carefully wrapped paper round the sword and gurrasa head to preserve the stains of blood.

5 p.m.—Nain Sukh volunteered to state that Devidin had committed murder in his company that they took two silver karas from the body of deceased that it might appear that he had been killed by robbers and that these ornaments had been buried by him and Devidin under a bush in Devidin's field.

5.30 p.m.—I the Inspector taking the prisoners and Lalljee Srikishna and Thakur Pershad Malguzars and residents of Gooma made search in the field and found the two karas buried as indicated. The ornaments were identified by the complainant and they were then carefully labelled and numbered. An accurate list of them will be found in column 10 of the trial-sheet. Devidin's wife admits that deceased came to see her on the evening of his death. She said her husband returned home suddenly and found them together. Deceased then left her house and her husband after digging up his sword from the ground (where he had buried it for concealment) followed deceased attended by Nain Sukh his servant. The latter carried a gurrasa.

6 p.m.—Inquiry completed. Prepared trial-sheet and despatched it with the two prisoners the two karas the sword gurrasa and blood-stained cloth in custody of constables Puran Singh and Sudhan Khan. The constables were instructed to lodge the prisoners at the station for the night and proceed to headquarters in the morning. Security bonds for appearance before the Court on the 13th instant have been taken from complainant and witnesses and are attached to the trial-sheet.

District Inspector

NB—The case diary should contain only such information as will indicate clearly what is being done in order to complete the case. It should contain only facts. No hypothesis or theory should be entered.—C P Pol. Man p 159. In addition to the particulars required by this section the diary should show (a) date of despatch (b) constable in charge (c) number of the constable and his rank (d) beat or duty (e) number of constable met and of what station and (f) information obtained.

3. Proper use of the special diary.—In 19 A 390, the Full Bench laid down the following rules as to the use of the special diary—

(a) Extent of its use—If the special diary has been used by the Court to contradict the Police-officer who made it or by the Police-officer who made it to refresh his memory the accused person or his agent has a right to see that portion of the diary which has been referred to for either of these purposes that is to say, the accused person or his agent is entitled to see the particular entry which has been referred to and so much of the diary as in the opinion of the Court is necessary in that particular matter to the full understanding of the particular entry so used but no more. See 8 C 789.

(b) Court cannot make a standing order for their production—A Sessions Judge although he has power in any particular case which is before him to send for the special diaries connected with the case if he thinks it necessary to peruse them, has no authority to issue a general order that in every case committed for trial to the Court of Session and in every criminal appeal the Police diaries shall be submitted to the Court simultaneously with the Magistrate's record of the case. Such an order was said to be illegal.

(c) Accused not entitled to copy—In no case is an accused person entitled as of right to a copy of any statement recorded by a Police-officer in the special diary prepared under the authority of this section (though under the new proviso to s. 162, supra he can be furnished with a copy if the Court thinks it expedient in the interests of justice).

(d) How the Court might use the special diary—(i) The special diary might be used by the Court to assist it in the inquiry or trial by suggesting means of further elucidating points which need clearing up and which are material for the purpose of doing justice between the Crown and the accused but the entries in the special diary cannot by themselves be taken as evidence of any date fact or statement therein contained.

(ii) The special diary might also be used by the Court for the purpose of contradicting the Police officer who made it and the special diary might be used by the Police-officer who made it but by no witness other than such officer for the purpose of refreshing his memory.

4 When accused entitled to inspect diary.—The proper procedure is for the accused at the time the witness whose statement is recorded appears before the Court to ask the Court to refer to such writing and furnish them with copies, 33 C 1023 and see Note 14 to s. 162. The accused may look at the particular writing before or at the time the witness uses it to refresh his memory, 8 C 739.

5 Special diary is a privileged record.—Statements of witness examined not to be entered in the special diary.—The proceedings in case of investigation subsequent to information will be recorded in a special diary which is a privileged record, only to be referred to as evidence by the Court for its own information. The statements of witnesses for the prosecution, recorded by an investigating Police-officer, form no part of the diary, such statements therefore shall not be entered in the special Police diary, but shall be separately recorded.—Reg and Ord, N-W P, s 10 p 263 In 33 C 1023 the practice of incorporating such statements in the special diary was severely condemned. The privilege given by this section does not extend to statements taken under s 161 and entered in a diary kept under this section, 20 C 642. The diary must contain everything material heard or done by a Policeman in the course of the day with reference to his work, and for obvious reasons is not subject to inspection by the parties. It is not necessary to enter into the diary the statements made by witnesses on an oral examination made by a Police-officer. The fact that a Police-officer examined certain witnesses is a part of his proceedings, but the actual statements of the witnesses are not proceedings of the Police-officer, but he may lawfully reduce into writing in the special diary the full and unabridged statement made by a person whom he is examining or has examined, and if he does so, his record of such statement is part of the special diary, and is just as much privileged as any other entry in the diary, 19 A. 390 (F.B.)

6 Statements of circumstances ascertained in investigation.—These should be as brief as is consistent with clearness and need not include statements or report, in extenso, or copies of Panchanamas or other proceedings. When statements are taken separately, the diary need contain only a brief reference to the recorded statements. The fact that the Panchanamas have been recorded or reports made should be entered as part of the history of the investigation, but a statement of their contents should appear, if at all only as a portion of the narrative of results.—Bom Pol Man, p 89

The case diary must contain only such information regarding the results of investigation as will indicate clearly what is being done in order to complete the case. It shall record facts only, no hypothesis or theories of the officer making the investigation will be entered.—C P Pol. Man, p 159.

7. District Magistrate must see that the diary is regularly kept.—The Magistrate of the district should see that the diary is regularly kept up and that each day's diary has been forwarded to, and has regularly reached, the District Superintendent in course of post, this being the only security against the contents being ante-dated.—Punjab Cir, p 174

8 Neither Police diaries nor reports are evidence.—Neither Police diaries nor Police reports are evidence of the matters stated therein. The facts stated therein must be proved by examining the writer as a witness, Weir II, 143; 1893 A. W. N. 143; Weir II, 142; 19 A. 390 (F.B.) In 10 C. W. N. 800, it was held that facts and statements written in the Police diaries cannot be used as materials to help the Court in a Criminal trial to come to a finding on the evidence in the case, and that what the Court should do with the Police diaries is to discover out of them any matter of importance bearing upon the case and then call for the necessary evidence to have the matter legally proved. See also 15 C. W. N. 47, 1 P. W. R. 1914. The provision any criminal Court may send for Police diaries to aid in such inquiry or trials etc., does not authorize a Court in making a summary of their contents part of its judgment and apparently making the statements contained therein virtually evidence in the case, 1894 A. W. N. 153. Diary ought not to be referred to as corroborative evidence when the witness who made it did not use it to refresh his memory, 45 Cr. L. J. 256 (M). A diary made by the investigating Police-officer under s 172 Cr. Pro. Code, may be used under that section to assist the Court which tries the case by suggesting means of further elucidating points which need clearing up and which are material for the purpose of doing justice between the Crown and the accused, but not as containing entries which can by themselves be taken to be evidence of any date, fact, or statement contained in the diary. The Police-officer who made the diary may be confronted with it, but not any other witness. 33 M. L. J. 553 (P.C.) = 15 A. L. J. 473 approving 19 A. 390 (F.B.)

9. When used for refreshing memory may be made part of record.—Notes of Police-officers of seditious speeches in a trial for offences under s 124 of I. P. C. may be allowed to become part of the record in the case if they are used for refreshing the memories of Police-officers, 32 M. 3 at p. 13. It is only the officer who made the special diary that can refresh his memory, 19 A. 390 (F.B.)

10. Police-officer cannot be compelled to refresh his memory by referring to his diary.—A prisoner on his trial is not entitled to insist that a memorandum made by a Police-officer shall, in the course of the examination of such officer, be referred to by the latter for the purpose of refreshing his memory. The right is the right of the Court, 8 C. 134 = 10 C. L. R. 51. In this case Wilson, J., remarked "I know of no authority for saying that a witness can be compelled to refresh his memory from any document unless the document is either in the possession of the party who desires to put it to the witness or is at least such as we can insist on having produced." See also 9 C. 333 and 8 C. 739.

11. Court has no power to make a general order for production of diaries.—A Sessions Court has no power to make a general order for production of Police diaries in all criminal appeals before it but only to summon the diaries when and as required in each particular case, 1894 A. W. N. 181.

12. Police diaries cannot be placed before the Jury.—They are useful, not as evidence but to aid the Court in trial so as to enable it to make a thorough inquiry on all material points and to elicit in the examination of witnesses and especially of Police witnesses the real facts of the case. A Sessions Judge cannot rely on Police proceedings or put the same to the jury without examining Police-officers as witnesses so as to explain such proceedings, 37 C. 293.

13. Mode of using statements in Police diaries.—Statements contained in the Police diaries may be used, e.g., for the purpose of assisting the Court in the examination of witnesses, but no statements in the diaries can be used as evidence, 1894 A. W. N. 135, 10 C. W. N. 600 = 3 Cr. L. J. 408.

14. Object of maintaining diaries.—The early stages of investigation which follow on the investigation of a crime must necessarily in the majority of cases be left to the Police and until the honesty, the capacity, the discretion and judgment of the Police can be thoroughly trusted it is necessary for the protection of the Police against criminals, for the vindication of the law and for the protection of those who are charged with a criminal offence that the Magistrate or Judge before whom the case is for investigation or for trial should have the means of ascertaining what was the information, true, false or misleading, which was obtained from day to day, by the Police-officer who was investigating the case and what were the lines of investigation upon which the Police-officer acted, 19 A. 290; 16 C. W. N. 145 = 13 Cr. L. J. 65. The Police diaries are generally useful in the inquiry or trial as suggesting means of further elucidating points which need clearing up and which are material for the purpose of doing justice between the Crown and the accused. The diaries are often, when regularly kept, of the very greatest use in enabling Criminal Courts to test the value of the testimony of witnesses especially those belonging to the Police, to establish dates and to ascertain particulars which enable such a Court to judge of the weight to be attached to the evidence given at the trial. Moreover, being indicative though not of probative effect they may furnish the means of directing appropriate questions or supply the basis of a cross-examination. It requires the utmost discrimination and discretion to make a proper use of such records and while they may fairly be appealed to for the history of the several stages through which the Police investigation into a crime has passed they afford no safe or certain material from which conclusions of guilt can be drawn, 1 Leg. Rem. 26. See also 1 P. W. R. 1916.

15. Statements taken in absence of accused.—Although under s 145 previous statements made by witnesses may be used for the purpose of contradicting statements made by them subsequently at the trial of the accused person, yet they cannot, if they have been made in the absence of the accused, be treated as independent evidence of his guilt or innocence. S. 238, will not avail anything for this purpose, 23 C. 351.

16. Mode of submitting station diaries.—Station-house reports will be sent from the station house to the Divisional Inspector who will check and verify the information contained in them and will then forward them to headquarter or sub-division office, as the case may be. Inspectors will send lokuds at once to their station-house officers when anything in their reports calls for explanation or remark, noting in red ink thereon what they have done for the information of the office, and, if necessary, the office can return through Inspectors, the station-house reports for further remarks. In the office a general supervision will be maintained in order to secure due attention of Inspectors, and to check register.—Mad. Pol. Man., Vol. I, p. 82.

17. Production of other Police records.—When other Police records are required in a case, the officer in whose custody they are, should be summoned to produce them or certified copies of them subject to the provisions of the Evidence Act. No document, precept or official paper of any kind or any copy of such paper, belonging to or in the custody of the Police, will be furnished to any private individual or other person not authorized by law to require it, unless a precept of a competent Court, or order of a competent authority requiring him to give it, be presented to the Superintendent of Police.—Mad. Pol. Man., Vol. I, p. 118.

18 Privy Council's observations—On the use of Police diaries to test the credibility of witnesses, 19 Bom L. R. 510.

Report of Police officer 173. (1) Every investigation under this Chapter shall be completed without unnecessary delay, and, as soon as it is completed the officer in charge of the Police-station shall—

(a) forward to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence on a Police report a report in the form prescribed by the Local Government setting forth the names of the parties the nature of the information and the names of the persons who appear to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case, and stating whether the accused (if arrested) has been forwarded in custody or has been released on his bond and, if so whether with or without sureties, and

(b) communicate, in such manner as may be prescribed by the Local Government the action taken by him to the person, if any, by whom the information relating to the commission of the offence was first given

(2) Where a superior officer of Police has been appointed under section 158 the report shall, in any cases in which the Local Government by general or special order so directs be submitted through that officer and he may, pending the orders of the Magistrate direct the officer in charge of the Police-station to make further investigation

(3) Whenever it appears from a report forwarded under this section that the accused has been released on his bond the Magistrate shall make such order for the discharge of such bond or otherwise as he thinks fit

† (4) A copy of any report forwarded under this section shall on application be furnished to the accused before the commencement of the inquiry or trial

† Provided that the same shall be paid for unless the Magistrate for some special reason thinks fit to furnish it free of cost.

Notes—1 The number of investigations into a crime is not limited by law and where one has been completed by the submission of a report another may be begun on further information being received 35 M. L. J 127

2 No investigation is complete until the report is submitted —See Note 9 to s. 155

3 Order to strike off case is not judicial —The Magistrate's order directing a case reported to him by the Police under this section to be struck off is not a judicial order dismissing a complaint or discharging an accused which can be reviewed by the Sessions Judge under s. 437, Ratanlal 531 See also Ratanlal 91 and 121, referred to in Notes 4 and 5 to s. 169

4 Right of accused to copies of report before trial —Under the new sub-section (4) an accused is entitled on application to a copy of any report forwarded under this section before the commencement of the inquiry or trial.

Note—Under the amended section it is the duty of the Police-officer under sub-clause (1) (b) to communicate the action taken by him to the person if any by whom the information relating to the commission of the offence was first given. Under the new sub-section (4) an accused person is entitled on application to have a copy of any report forwarded under this section, before the commencement of the inquiry or trial.

5 Three kinds of reports contemplated —This Chapter contemplates three kinds of reports at three different stages of the Police investigation. The first is a preliminary report under s. 157 from the S. H. O. to the Magistrate. The second is under s. 168 from a subordinate Police-officer to the S. H. O., and the third or final report is the one referred to in this section. In all cases coming under Chapter XVI I. P. C.—Offences affecting the human body—arrest must be made and charge-sheets submitted as in all other cases with all reasonable promptitude. The want of medical officer's certificate will not justify any delay. Medical officers can be examined orally like other witnesses and their statements must be recorded and made use of—Mad. Pol. Man. Vol. I, p. 84

* Sub-section on (1) has been substituted in the place of the old sub-section by Act XVIII of 1923

† Added by Act XVIII of 1923

6 Report in the form prescribed—The final or completion report under this section is what is known as Charge-sheet.* The superior Police-officer making an investigation is the proper person to prepare and submit the charge-sheet.—Mad Pol Min. Vol I, p 83 It is special report bearing upon a particular case coming up for investigation and must be submitted to the Magistrate. It should contain all necessary information and Police-officers must pay particular attention to the preparation of the same. In Municipal cases the charge-sheet, in which offences should be consecutively entered, will be a duplicate of the Case Register the word 'Charge-sheet' being prefixed to the form. The book containing the charge-sheets must when full be deposited in the Magistrate's record room.—Mad Pol Min., Vol I p 83

The High Court have directed that, when it is necessary to put in evidence the substance of a report the report itself should be called for and not the Crime Register and that the register should be called for only in cases in which it is shown that its production cannot be dispensed with and the purpose for which it is required cannot be effectively answered by the production of an office copy.—Mad Pol Min. Vol I p 118

7 Police report must set forth nature of information—The Police report referred to in s. 190 (1) (b) is the report made by the Police under this section s. 8, L. R. 1 = 12 Cr. L. J. 92; s. 8, L. R. 82 = 13 Cr. L. J. 752. Having regard to the language of s. 190 (1) (b), a Magistrate should not act on a Police report which does not set forth the nature of the information. If he does take cognizance of an offence on such a report his proceedings are liable to be set aside.—37 C. 49

8. Can a Magistrate ignore a Police report and order further inquiry by Subordinate Magistrate?—Where a Magistrate who might have under s. 190 (c) taken cognizance of the case on a Police report did not do so but proceeded to make over the case to Subordinate Magistrate for inquiry and report as though the matter he was dealing with was on a complaint under s. 200, held that the proceedings of the deputed Magistrate so far as they bore on the case based on a Police report were not in consonance with the provisions of law.—17 C. W. N. 1004.

174. (1) The officer in charge of a Police-station or some other Police-officer specially empowered by the Local Government in that behalf on receiving information that a person—

- (a) has committed suicide or
- (b) has been killed by another, or by an animal, or by machinery or by an accident or
- (c) has died under circumstances raising a reasonable suspicion that some other person has committed an offence shall immediately give intimation thereof to the nearest Magistrate empowered to hold inquests and unless otherwise directed by any rule prescribed by the Local Government or by any general or special order of the District or Sub-divisional Magistrate shall proceed to the place where the body of such deceased person is and there in the presence of two or more respectable inhabitants of the neighbourhood shall make an investigation and draw up a report of the apparent cause of death describing such wounds fractures bruises and other marks of injury as may be found on the body and stating in what manner, or by what weapon or instrument (if any) such marks appear to have been inflicted

(2) The report shall be signed by such Police-officer and other persons or by so many of them as concur therein and shall be forthwith forwarded to the District Magistrate or the Sub-divisional Magistrate

(3) When there is any doubt regarding the cause of death or when for any other reason the Police-officer considers it expedient so to do he shall subject to such rules as the Local Government may prescribe in this behalf, forward the body with a view to its being examined to the nearest Civil Surgeon or other qualified medical man appointed in this behalf by the Local Government if the state of the weather and the distance admit of its being so forwarded without risk of such putrefaction on the road as would render such examination useless

* For the form in which ss. 174, 175 and 176 should be read in their application to the area comprised within the local limits of the ordinary original jurisdiction of the High Court at Madras see s. 4 (2) of Act V of 1893 (Madras Coroner's Act) printed in the Madras Code Ed. 1901 Vol I p. 1888

(4) In the Presidencies of Fort St George and Bombay investigations under this section may be made by the head of the village who shall then report the result to the nearest Magistrate authorized to hold inquests

(5) The following Magistrates are empowered to hold inquests viz any District Magistrate * Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class and any Magistrate, specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government or the District Magistrate

1—INQUEST REPORTS

Notes.—1 Powers of village headmen in Bombay—S 11 Bombay Village Police Act VIII of 1867 authorizes Police patels to hold inquests in cases of sudden or unnatural deaths. The law empowers them to take evidence on oath and is obviously intended to make justice effectual by means of prompt inquiry in the face of all villagers and by delivery of a verdict of men not open to the suspicions of undue zeal often alleged against the District Police

Like any other Coroner's inquest it saves the innocent from false charges as people are not likely to bring such charges against an innocent man when they have kept silence at the inquest. But the inquest under s 11 of the Act must be held forthwith so that all the circumstances of the murder might be reported forthwith to the District Police Ratanlal 740

Refusal to serve on an inquest when called on by a Police patel specially empowered under s 15 of the Bombay Village Police Act VIII of 1867, is not a refusal to obey a lawful order of a Police patel punishable by the Police patel himself under that section Ratanlal 614

2 Power of village headmen in Madras—A village headman acting under s 174 has only the powers of a Police-officer acting under s 175 1910 M W N 386 = 8 M L T 198 Under the 1861 Code it was the duty of village headmen in Madras and Bombay to make the inquiry and report and apparently it was intended that the Police should not hold inquests where a head of the village was at hand. Now the word 'say' in sub-sec. (4) indicates that the village headman and the Police-officer are to hold each a separate and independent inquiry—See s 19 of Mad Reg XI of 1816

3. Inquest in the Presidency towns of Bombay and Calcutta—See the Coroner's Act IV of 1871 printed in the Appendix That Act was framed on the principles and on the forms of a regular inquiry by a Magistrate Evidence is given on oath before a jury who may question the witnesses and evidence on behalf of the accused must also be received. Also confessions made to a Coroner are to be considered as confessions to a Magistrate. The evidence is recorded in writing and submitted to the High Court and the Coroner has also the power to arrest the accused after verdict The Act also gives the Coroner power of commitment Historically this power is a relic of the larger jurisdiction at one time held by that officer 18 B 159 at p 160

4 Coroner's Court not an open Court—In England it has been held that the Coroner though nowhere expressly ordered to hear witnesses on both sides is bound by the rules of justice to hear one side as well as another seeing that his sole object is the truth (2 Hale P C 60, Reg v Ingham 3 B & E 257). As the inquiry is wide and indeterminate and no individual is charged and it may end in no accusation being made at all there is good ground for holding that the Coroner's Court is not an open Court and that the Coroner has a discretion as to admitting persons not interested or not closely connected with the inquiry Cases may occur in which privacy may be requisite for the sake of decency others in which it may be due to the family of the deceased and the propriety of the Coroner's decision on the subject cannot be questioned Garnett v Ferrand 6 B & C 611

5 Magistrates empowered to hold inquests—District Magistrate should inform District Superintendents of Police which of the Subordinate Magistrates have been authorized under s. 37 read with this section to hold inquests The District Superintendent of Police will thus be enabled to instruct his subordinates as to the particular Magistrates to whom the intimation required by this section is to send and the intimation will give those Magistrates the opportunity of proceeding under s 176 post when it may be desirable to do so—C P C Cr Part II No 10

* The words 'Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class' were substituted for the words 'or Sub-divisional Magistrate' by Act XVIII of 1925

In the Punjab, all Magistrates of the first and second class have been specially empowered to hold inquests under this section.—Punjab Gazette, 1883, p. 23.

6 There can be no inquest unless the body is forthcoming.—It seems necessary to point out that where the body is not found or has been burned, there can be no investigation under this section. In such cases, if there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that a cognizable offence has been committed, the Police-officer should make an ordinary investigation without summoning persons to be associated with him. It has been the practice for Police-officers in charge of stations and superior Police-officer, mero motu, and also under departmental orders, to hold a second or further investigation in one and the same case. There is no writ in the Punjab or melius inquirendum and as, in the Coroner's Act (see s 11), it is assumed that Coroners have the power to make further inquiries the practice seems perfectly good. See also 37 P. R. 1908 = 9 Cr. L. J. 105.

7. Inquest reports must be distinguished from final reports under s. 173.—A verbatim report of the statements of witnesses examined at the inquest may often be of great use to the Court in testing the value of the evidence subsequently given (1911) M. W. N. 133. Madras Rules. Inquest reports must be distinguished from final or completion reports referred to in s 173. Inquest reports are to be written up and completed on the spot where inquest over corpse is being held. Immediately the inquest is closed, the report thereof will be put into a cover and handed over in the presence of Panchayatdars to the constable about to take the corpse to the medical officer's station for examination.—Mad. Pol. Man., Vol. I, p. 85

8 Bengal Rules.—The Lieutenant-Governor does not think that special diaries are intended or necessary in all cases of inquiry into unnatural deaths. The report prescribed in s. 174, Cr. P. Code, is very much the same in character as the special diary of s 172. If the Police-officer investigating see reason to suspect crime, the inquiry becomes one under s. 172 and special diaries become as a matter of course necessary, but, in ordinary cases, in which the inquiry is made and completed in a few hours there seems to be no necessity for reporting the facts, first, in a special diary and then in the report prescribed by s 174. When, however, the inquiry is prolonged or lasts over more than one day, the diary should be sent to inform the District Superintendent and Magistrate of what is going on.

The Lieutenant Governor would therefore rule that in cases of any complexity, or in which the inquiry lasts over one day, or in which crime is suspected, special diaries should be sent in anticipation of the final report which will be made under s. 173 if a crime is detected and under s. 174 if the death is from accident or unnatural causes. It is to be understood that in the station diary everything done by the Police will be entered.—Beng. Pol. Cir., 1872, p. 107

In case of doubt the officer conducting the inquest should proceed under sub-sec. (3). In all cases evidence of the condition of the body when first discovered and of the surrounding circumstances should be recorded.—Oudh Cr Dig p 9 But the personal opinions of the persons called upon to attend the inquest and of the Police-officer regarding the supposed facts of the case ie as to who struck the blows or killed the deceased or for what reasons must on no account be entered in the Inquest Report. These are matters which will find entry in the special diary of the investigation. The Inquest Report must be confined to the points specified in the section—Reg and Ord N W P p 275

12. Sudden or suspicious death of an European.—Whenever information of the sudden or unnatural death of an European is reported at a Police-station, the officer in charge of the station shall send an urgent immediate information to the District Superintendent, and the Inquest Report, required by s 174 of Act X of 1882, shall be taken by an European officer, and unless death has been caused by violence, the marks of which are apparent, no native officer shall have the right of examination of the body. Under no circumstances shall any examination be taken when the deceased is of the female sex. In such case a Police-officer, not below the rank of Head Constable, will remain with or accompany the body till receipt of orders from the Magistrate.—Reg and Ord, N W P, s 10, Art 158, p 275

13. Unnatural death of Soldiers.—"It appears to the Government of India that it will be better, if inquiries into cases of sudden and unnatural deaths of soldiers, are made by Magistrates and not by the Police. The Police should however report all such occurrences to the Magistrate."—No 1398, dated 10th October, 1878

14. Rules in force in the N-W. P. as to holding inquests.—The inquest should be held before the body is touched or removed, and the 'report' should state the apparent cause of death, describing such wounds, fractures, bruises and other marks of injury as may be found on the body, and stating in what manner or by what weapon, or instrument if any, such marks appear to have been inflicted the position, length, breadth and depth of wounds being accurately described. The report shall be signed by the Police-officer and other persons or by so many of them as concur therein.

The personal opinions of the persons called upon to attend the inquest and of the Police-officer, regarding the supposed facts of the case, i.e. as to who struck the blows or killed the deceased, or for what reasons, must on no account be entered in the 'report' of inquest, these are matters which will find entry in the special diary of the investigation, but the "report of inquest" must be confined to the "apparent cause of death," to the existence of marks of violence or otherwise, and as to manner, or by what weapon or instrument such mark seem to have been inflicted.—Reg and Ord, N W P, p 275

15. Procedure to be observed in inquests in cases of death caused by poisoning, etc.—in order to obtain as much important medico-legal evidence as is possible in cases of poisoning or death, the following rules are laid down for the guidance of officers investigating —

F—In cases of suspected cattle poisoning

(Addition in the Bengal Police Code, p 413)

(1) The carcass should be first carefully examined, especially about the genitals and soft skin of the thighs and neck. If any puncture is found, it is possible that Sutaris—poisoning [Chap XXI, Rule 5, Chamars (4)] has occurred. The spike or Sutaris should then be sought for, if anyone be found, it should be wrapped in paper, and be sealed and be labelled.

(2) The mouth should be examined and anything found in it should be preserved and labelled.

Until the arrival of one of such officers, the officer in charge of the Railway Police-station concerned shall take all necessary measures to facilitate such investigation.

(d) Rules for disinterment of bodies—If at the time of receiving information of an unnatural or sudden death or if at any time before or after he arrives at the place where the body of the deceased person is said to be the officer in charge of a Police-station or Police-officer concerned learns that such body has been buried such officer shall be guided by the following rules that is to say—

(1) an officer in charge of a Police-station and any superior officer of Police lawfully making an investigation into the unnatural or sudden death of any person may cause the body of such person to be disinterred for the purposes of such investigation

(2) no such disinterment shall be caused or effected until the respectable inhabitants required to take part in the investigation under the provisions of s 133 (now s. 174) of the Code, are present, and unless and until the Police-officer lawfully making the investigation shall have recorded in writing the information which has reached him and the ground on which he considers it necessary to proceed to such investigation

(3) when such investigations are made by an enrolled Police-officer and there is a Magistrate authorized to hold inquests in the immediate neighbourhood either of the grave or the Police-station in which such grave is situate, it shall be the duty of such Police-officer to guard the grave and ascertain whether such Magistrate will attend at once at the disinterment. The disinterment of the body shall be postponed pending such Magistrate's reply. If such Magistrate is unable to attend the disinterment at once such Police-officer shall proceed in manner hereinbefore prescribed to disinter body

(4) in all cases Police-officers shall examine witnesses to prove the identity of disinterred bodies with the persons supposed to have died unnatural or sudden deaths before commencing their investigation on such bodies

(5) in every case in which a body has lain in the grave for a period exceeding three weeks no disinterment shall be caused or effected by any Police-officer until the opinion of the Civil Surgeon has been obtained and then only with the concurrence of the District Magistrate

(6) in cases in which the body has not been identified a careful descriptive roll should be prepared for publication in the Vernacular Police Gazette

(e) Procedure after disinterment—When a competent Police-officer has disinterred a body under the last preceding paragraph he shall proceed to hold the investigation in the manner provided in paragraph 8

OPINION OF GOVERNMENT ADVOCATE REGARDING EXHUMATION OF BODIES

In my opinion no alteration has been made in the new Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882) in reference to the power of the Police to exhume bodies when making investigations under s 174. I am not prepared to say that under the rule of expressio unius est exclusio alterius, the last paragraph of s 176 would preclude the Police acting under s. 174 from disinterming a body and the former section it is to be observed refers exclusively to cases where persons die while in the custody of the Police. On the whole I am of opinion that no amendment of the law was intended or has been made.—Letter of Government Advocate, Punjab No 1228 dated 2nd July, 1883

The Hon ble the Lieutenant Governor concurs in the opinion expressed by the Government Advocate Circular No 16 of 1883

(f) Report of investigation—(1) When the investigation has been completed the Police-officer conducting it shall draw up a report stating the apparent cause of death of such deceased person and any marks of violence which may be found on the body and stating in what manner or by what weapon instrument such mark appears to have been inflicted.

(2) Such report shall be drawn up in one of the forms given in Appendix I see pp. 367 and 368, infra or to the like effect.

(3) The report shall be signed by such Police-officer and other persons making the investigation, or by so many of them as concur therein, and shall be forthwith forwarded to the Magistrate of the district, or, when the Magistrate of the district as so directed, to the Magistrate of the division of the district in which such investigation was made.

(4) The plan of the scene of death, the inventory of clothing, etc., and when bodies or articles are sent for medical examination a list of the things on and with the body and the particulars as to things sent for medical examination shall form part of such report.

(5) In cases of death by hanging, the report shall state particulars as to the height of the support and the sufficiency of it, and the things used to bear the weight of the body.

(6) A copy of every such report shall be made in Police-station Book No VI.

(g) Reports how sent—(1) Reports forwarded to the Magistrate of the district under the last preceding paragraph shall ordinarily, unless such Magistrate direct to the contrary, be forwarded through the District Superintendent of Police who shall read and pass them on without delay.

(2) A District Superintendent of Police shall when reading an investigation report, record on it any orders he may make in reference to further investigation.

(h) Information in poisoning cases—(1) The ordinary symptoms caused by common poisons are described in Appendix II see p. 371, infra.

(2) Police-officers making investigations in cases where poison has been administered shall record in their reports all information likely to be of value in assisting Civil Surgeons or the Chemical Examiner to form an opinion as to the precise poison employed.

Explanation—As the tests used for the discovery of different poisons vary with the poison and as the substance available for analysis is often very limited it is very important that none should be destroyed by the use of wrong tests. For these reasons full information shall be carefully sought for and supplied.

(i) Making over of property—When the Police-officer has concluded the investigation, he shall make over to the proper persons all property which he may have taken into his charge in the course of the investigation and which is not required for the ends of justice. A receipt shall be taken for property so made over in Police-station Book No VI (Miscellaneous).

(j) Where cognizable offence disclosed—If the facts disclosed on the investigation disclose the commission of a cognizable offence, and the person who appears to be guilty of such offence is arrested the Police-officer concerned shall, when he has completed the investigation of such offence take recognizances from the witnesses as provided by law.

(k) Correspondence with Chemical Examiner—Police-officer shall not correspond with the Chemical Examiner direct in matters relating to human bodies. Any necessary reference in relation to such subject shall be made to the Civil Surgeon.

(l) Chemical Examiner not to be referred to on insufficient grounds—No case of human poisoning, with regard to which the Civil Surgeon does not recommend investigation by the Chemical Examiner, shall be referred to that officer without a special order from the Magistrate.

(m) Language of reports—Copy to be sent to Assistant Inspector General—(1) Report submitted by Police-officers ignorant of English shall be in Vernacular, but in all cases of death caused by a railway accident, an English translation shall be made.

(2) A copy of all report relating to deaths caused by railway accidents shall, when made by a Police-officer other than a Railway Police-officer be forwarded to the Assistant Inspector General of Railway Police.

17 Inquest report must be proved to be admitted in evidence.—It is necessary if a Panchanama is to be put in that it should be legally proved for it does not prove itself as apparently is sometimes supposed

18. Verdict at inquest not subject to revision by the High Court.—It is not open to the High Court to revise under s 435 inquest proceedings held by a Magistrate under this section 3 C. 742 followed in Ratanlal 843.

II.—POST-MORTEM AND CHEMICO LEGAL EXAMINATIONS

Notes.—1 Disposal of body on conclusion of inquest.—When the investigation is concluded and it is unnecessary to send the body for medical examination or to keep it for identification the Police-officer conducting the investigation shall make over the body to deceased's relatives or if there are no relatives or friends to receive the body shall have it decently buried or burned as may be proper under such rules as may be made by the Magistrate of the district in this behalf

When there is no reason to doubt the cause of death despatch of the body to the nearest medical officer is uncalled for—Mad. Pol Man, Vol I p 85

2 Preservation of body for identification.—(1) When it is necessary to keep a body for the purpose of identification it shall be placed in the coolest room available and the doors and windows shall be closed and watched. Carbolic acid powder shall (if available) be freely used in such room.

(2) If no identification can be obtained within the period during which such body can be safely kept the Police-officer concerned shall before it is buried or burned record a careful description of it giving all marks peculiarities deformities or distinctive features which might lead to recognition.

(3) When the case is one of importance and photographs or casts can be taken of the face a photograph or cast shall be taken

(4) When for sanitary reasons it is necessary to bury or burn the body the course prescribed in the last preceding paragraph shall be adopted.

3. Bodies to whom sent for medical examination.—Bodies for medical examination shall be sent to the nearest Civil Surgeon. In Madras all Commissioned Medical Officers all Warrant Medical Officers and also Hospital Assistant Medical Officers are authorized to examine bodies forwarded to them for that purpose—Fort St George Gazette Notification 11th December 1874 p 1834

4. When body to be so sent.—In cases where there is any doubt regarding the cause of death and in cases where the bodies of persons who have been apparently run over by railway engines or trains are not identified the body shall be sent for medical examination if it is likely to arrive in a sufficiently sound state to admit of such examination.

Explanation.—Poisoners have been known to place the bodies of their victims across the line of rails with a view to its being thought that death was caused by a railway accident

Mode of sending bodies.—With respect to the sending of bodies for medical examination the following regulations shall have effect that is to say —

(1) a light and strong doolie (litter) with a covering to protect it from sun and rain shall be supplied and maintained at the expense of the Judicial Department at every Police-station,

(2) the clothing left on the body shall be properly secured round it any instrument likely to have caused death remaining in or on the body shall be left there if it can be secured,

(3) a layer of charcoal two inches deep shall be placed in the dootie the body shall be covered with charcoal freely dusted with carbolic acid powder and some leafy branches placed over all

(4) Police-officers along the route shall be bound to assist in obtaining men to carry such dooties so that the body may be sent in as rapidly as possible

(5) two Police-officers who were present at the investigation shall accompany the body and if necessary suitable means of conveyance shall be provided for them

(6) expenses for charcoal and portorage of dooties shall be recovered from the Sheriff

(7) on the arrival of the body at district headquarters, it shall be at once placed and watched in the dead house and intimation shall be sent through the District Superintendent of Police to the Civil Surgeon as quickly as possible

(8) when forwarding such intimation the District Superintendent of Police shall give the Civil Surgeon all available information as to the supposed cause of death

(9) after depositing a body in the dead-house the Police shall have nothing to do with its disposal either by sending portions to the Chemical Examiner or ultimately by burying or burning it.

6 Things sent for medical examination.—Things for medical examination shall when bodies are so sent in be sent with the body under charge of the same escort, and when bodies are not sent in with an escort which shall take them to the Civil Surgeon without relief

7 Rules regarding things sent for medical examination—With respect to things sent in for medical examination the following provisions shall have effect that is to say—

(1) liquids vomit excrement and the like shall be placed in clean wide-mouthed bottles or glazed jars and the stoppers or corks shall be tied down with bladder leather or cloth and the knots of the cords shall be sealed with the seal of the Police-officer who made the investigation such bottles or jars shall be tested by reversing them for a few minutes to see whether they leak or not

(2) supposed medicines or poisons being dry substances shall be similarly tied down in jars or made up into sealed parcels

(3) blood-stained weapons articles or cloths shall be marked with a seal and shall be made up into sealed parcels

(4) on each bottle jar and parcel shall be a label describing the contents and stating where each was found and on such label shall be impressed a counterpart of the seal used a copy of each label and a counterpart impression of the seal used shall be given in the report hereinafter prescribed

(5) if the things are to be despatched by post the precaution described in the resolutions given below shall be taken.

Precautions to be taken in Despatching substances for Chemical analysis by post

The Governor General in Council has resolved to prescribe the following rules for experimental adoption in regard to the mode of packing substances of the nature above described

(1) The suspected viscus or other portion of the body to be sent for examination should be enclosed in a glass bottle or jar fitted with a stopper or sound cork.

(2) If liable to decomposition it should be immersed in methylated spirits of wine which should be used in the proportion of one-third of the bulk of the material.

N.B.—The use of spirits of wine in packing viscera should be invariable whether the season is hot or cold and care should be taken that common bazaar spirit is not used.

(3) The stopper or cork should be carefully tied down with bladder or leather and sealed To ascertain that it has been securely closed the bottle or jar should be placed for some minutes with its mouth down

(4) The glass bottle or jar should then be placed in a strong wooden or tin box which should be large enough to allow of a layer of raw cotton at least three-fourths of an inch thick being put between the bottle or the jar and the box

(5) The box itself should be encased in common gurah cloth, which should be sealed in accordance with usual rules of the Post Office as to parcels.

(6) Despatching officers will be held personally responsible that these instructions are carefully followed. Whenever practicable, such parcels should be packed under the immediate supervision of the District Civil Surgeon.

(7) At all stations where there is a District Civil Surgeon the parcels should invariably be sent to the Post Office by that officer, and not by a subordinate officer, but where there is no Civil Surgeon, they may be sent through the sub-divisional officer.

(8) A declaration of contents to the officials of the Postal Department is unnecessary and should not be made.

8 Rules for the Guidance of Medical Officers in conducting Post-mortem examinations and examining Wounded persons.—See Cir No 1353, dated 23rd April 1868 and Bombay Gazette, 1873 p 338, 1874, p 947

Extract from "Bombay Government Gazette, dated 20th November, 1873"

The following rules for the guidance of Medical Officers in conducting post mortem examinations and examining wounded persons are published for general information—

(1) The Medical Officer shall, immediately on receiving from any person for examination a corpse or any other substance, inquire and note down the name and residence of such person, and if he be a District Police-officer, his number and rank, and shall without delay grant to such person a receipt for the corpse or other

(2) In cases where the body is sent to him, the Medical Officer should note the time of its arrival, the date and hour of the post mortem examination, and sex and height and apparent age of the deceased, the state of the body, whether well nourished or otherwise, the existence or absence of any caste or other marks not of recent origin, such as cicatrices and deformities and the like, and whether the marks upon it correspond with those mentioned in the Police report

(3) In cases where he has been taken to the place where the body lies besides the above, he should note the place and nature of the soil (if out in the open country) where he found the body also its position and the state of the clothes if any. He should also note in cases of death from violence the position of the body in reference to surrounding objects such as sharp stones and the like contact with which, it may be alleged, has produced the injury also whether any blood stains are visible on such objects or anywhere near the corpse, and whether any weapons are lying near it. In case of suspected death from poisoning, he should note whether any appearance as if of vomited matters etc., is present in the neighbourhood of the body

(4) In every case he should describe the condition in which he found the body, noting the degree of coldness warmth, rigidity and putrefaction and the amount and nature of the clothing or covering on it.

(5) Commencing at the skull and terminating at the feet, he should examine the bones to determine whether any of them are fractured or dislocated, and inspect the vertebral column throughout, also the teeth, hair, orifices of the body and general surface, and also note the state of the pupils whether contracted or otherwise, and whether any substances are grasped in the hands.

(6) If there be any wound or contusion on the body, he should describe its position length and breadth. He should note the depth and direction of all wounds whether there are any cuts on the clothes corresponding to them, and examine the wounds carefully for the presence of foreign bodies, preserving such as are found. He should also state whether in his opinion the wound was mortal, giving his reason for such opinion and he should be specially careful to examine the neck for marks of compression.

(7) He should state his opinion as to whether the wounds, if any, could have been self inflicted, or whether they might have been the result of accident, giving reasons for his opinion.

(8) He should carefully examine any gun sword blood-stained instrument, stick or stone, by which the wounds may have been inflicted and mark such instrument, so as to be able to recognize it if asked to do so. He should also compare the weapon with the wound alleged to have been caused by it, and state whether in his opinion, it was possible for the wound to have been produced by it.

(9) He should commence his dissection of the body by removing the top of the skull in the usual way with a saw and note anything that may appear unusual.

(10) He should make an incision from the chin down to the pubes, so as to be able to examine the wind pipe, heart lungs liver, stomach, spleen kidneys and intestines, also the urinary bladder, and note whether any of these organs appeared diseased and whether any wound on the outside of the body communicates with the contents of the chest or abdomen.

(11) In making his examination he should disturb as little as possible any organ which may communicate with an external wound, if he has reason to think that the body may be re-examined by another medical man.

(12) In the case of females, he should examine the ovaries and uterus, bearing in mind that abortion is sometimes caused by the introduction in the uterus of pointed instruments which may cause death. He should note the presence or absence of pregnancy, the probable period to which pregnancy had advanced, and examine the external generative organs for marks of violence.

(13) In the case of infants he should note the condition of the umbilicus and cord if any of the latter remain, he should also remove the lungs and try whether they sink or nearly sink in or float in water.

(14) In case of suspected poisoning he should not neglect to examine every organ of the body and should pay special attention to the rules issued by the Inspector General Indian Medical Department.

(15) He should bear in mind that death may possibly have been the result of starvation, exposure to cold or heat smothering, drowning, lightning, strangulation poisoning or disease, and see whether death was due to any of these causes, giving his reasons. He should also bear in mind the instructions already published for the guidance of Police officers in cases of death from drowning hanging and the like.

(16) He should keep all his original notes even though he may make a fair copy of them afterwards, and should not lend them to any one to read.

(17) In all cases the examination of the body should be thorough and the notes of the appearance discovered should be as minute as possible.

(18) Full notes should be made in cases of examination of wounded persons.

(19) When summoned to give evidence in any case in which he has made a post mortem examination or examined a wounded person, the Medical Officer should bring with him to Court the original notes made by him at the time of conducting such examination.

(20) The notes of the examination in all cases or a fair copy of them in the hand writing of the Medical Officer should be at once made in a book kept at the hospital or dispensary for the purpose and should be signed by him.

A.—The following instructions* issued by the Chemical Examiner on 11th January, 1883 as amended subsequently are divided into two sections viz —Section 1—Containing rules for the guidance of Magisterial and Police-officers. Section 2—Containing rules for the guidance of Medical Officers. Neither section is complete by itself, the two sections being complementary to one another.

* These instructions are issued as an Appendix to G.O. No. 218 Public dated 21st February 1889 to show the arrangements in force regarding examination by Medical Officers of corpses sent to them by Police-officers or heads of villages under s. 174 Cr. P. C. Commenced Medical Officers and Medical Subordinates down to Hospital Assistants (now styled Sub-Assistant Surgeons) that is to say Native Surgeons. Assistant Surgeons. Warrant Medical Officer. Civil Assistant Surgeon. Hospital Assistant Surgeon. Hospital Assistants are authorized to Examiner the rules regarding packing should be observed. At a station where there is no Civil Surgeon substances may be packed and forwarded direct to the Chemical Examiner by the subordinate-officer in charge of the hospital or dispensary.

SECTION I—RULES FOR THE GUIDANCE OF MAGISTERIAL AND POLICE-OFFICERS

Notes.—1 Instructions for guidance of Magistrates, Superintendents and Assistant Superintendents.—

The following instructions are issued for the guidance of Magistrates Superintendents and Assistant Superintendents of Police with regard to the transmission of substances to the Chemical Examiner for examination in cases of suspected poisoning or other cases in which the aid of the Chemical Examiner may be required.

2. Substances to be forwarded to Chemical Examiner only under orders of Magistrates, Superintendent or Assistant Superintendent.—In future substances will not be forwarded by Medical Officers to the Chemical Examiner except upon receipt of an order to that effect from a Magistrate Superintendent or Assistant Superintendent of Police. It will therefore be necessary that orders for the transmission of substances to the Chemical Examiner for analysis should be issued with promptitude. And an order should invariably be granted if the Medical Officer considers it advisable to obtain the opinion of the Chemical Examiner whilst on the other hand Magistrates Superintendents and Assistant Superintendents of Police should issue an order for examination, if they consider it desirable to consult the Chemical Examiner although the opinion of the Medical Officer be adverse to such a proceeding.

*(1) Should it at any time be found necessary to forward suspected substances from the Native States under his Government to the Chemical Examiner Madras for examination the order for the transmission of the substance should be issued by the officials designated below

(1) Travancore—the substance will be forwarded to the Chemical Examiner Madras under the orders of the Diwan.

(2) Cochin—the order may be issued by the Superintendent of Police Cochin or by the District Magistrate Anjankmal or by the District Magistrate Trichur

(3) Pudukottai—the order may be issued by the Chief Medical and Sanitary Officer of the State or by the Chief Magistrate or by the Diwan.

(4) Sandur State—by the Diwan.

(5) Banganapalle—by the Assistant Political Agent.

(ii) In the case of Medico-legal analysis required by the Hyderabad State the Chemical Examiner will recognize any requisition of a Medical Officer of the Nizam's service which purports to be made under the specific authority of His Highness's administration. The Resident in Hyderabad will be also acquainted for the information of the Durbar

(iii) The foot notes at pages 254 and 258 of the Civil Medical Code should be cancelled and the rules in the Code should be amended in accordance with the orders now issued.

3. Forwarding officer to furnish a brief history of the case.—Magistrates Superintendents and Assistant Superintendents of Police on instructing Medical Officers to forward articles for analysis to the Chemical Examiner to Government should at the same time address the latter officer quoting the number and date of their order to the Medical Officer and should furnish the Chemical Examiner with a brief summary of the history of the case.

4. Points on which information should be furnished in cases of suspected poisoning.—The principal points on which Magistrates Superintendents and Assistant Superintendents of Police in cases of suspected poisoning should furnish information to Chemical Examiner are as follows—

(a) What interval was there between the last eating or drinking and the first appearance of symptoms of poisoning?

(b) What interval was there between the last eating drinking and death (if this occurred)?

(c) What were the first symptoms?

(d) Were any of the following symptoms present? If so state which—

(1) Vomiting and purging

(2) Deep sleep.

(3) Tingling of the skin and throat.

- (4) Convulsions or twitchings of the muscles
- (5) Delirium and clutching at imaginary object
- (e) Were any other symptoms noticed?

(f) Did any other persons partake of the suspected food or drink, and did they also suffer from similar or other symptoms of poisoning?

5. Other available information.—Any other information available, likely to prove serviceable as a guide to the class of poison administered, should at the same time be furnished

6. Certificate of chemical analysis by Medical Officers.—Certificates of chemical analysis are not to be accepted from Medical Officers, as these officers are not in a position to conduct analysis as they should be carried out for judicial purposes. But any Medical Officer who may be provided with a suitable microscope should be able to recognize recent blood stains and to conduct examinations of suspected seminal stains

7. Procedure in cases of suspected human or cattle poisoning.—In every case of suspected human or cattle poisoning, it is desirable that all the substances requiring analysis should be packed and forwarded to the Chemical Examiner by the nearest Medical Officer. If special circumstances should render it desirable to forward any articles directly to the Chemical Examiner, the instructions given in section 2, paragraphs 4—12, must be carefully attended to

8. Rules for forwarding suspected blood stains.—Suspected blood stains.—Articles requiring examination for the presence of blood stains may, if desirable (vide paragraph 6), be forwarded direct to the Chemical Examiner, the following rules being strictly attended to—

(1) When clothes are sent up any stains considered to be suspicious should be indicated by means of pencil marks or pins. Stains on walls floors the ground, or articles of furniture, etc., are not to be scraped off. But the stained area is to be carefully cut out, and when the material is brittle, as in the case of earth or chunam it should be carefully wrapped in cotton wool and packed in a box, so that the surface may be preserved from injury

(2) All articles requiring examination should be carefully labelled, and each label should bear the signature of the forwarding officer and the number and date of the letter of advice addressed to the Chemical Examiner. All parcels should be carefully sealed by the despatching officer and packed in such a manner that they cannot be opened without destroying the seal. The seal used should be the same throughout, and a private seal or an official seal which is kept in safe custody. A letter of advice should be separately forwarded to the Chemical Examiner. This letter should contain—

- (a) An impression of the seal used in closing the packets and description hereof.
- (b) A list of the articles forwarded and a statement as to how the articles have been forwarded
- (c) Information as to whether any of the weapons, cloths, etc., are to be returned after examination.

9. Miscellaneous examinations.—Magistrates, on forwarding coins, documents, salines, liquors, etc., to the Chemical Examiner, should follow the instructions laid down in paragraph 8, clause 2, and in section 2, paragraph 11, so far as they may be applicable, and should be careful to include in their letter of advice to the Chemical Examiner's information as to the nature and object of the examination required, and to furnish any other information likely to assist the Chemical Examiner in making the required examination.

SECTION II—INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE GUIDANCE OF MEDICAL OFFICERS

Notes. 1.—Medical Officers to maintain supply of unmethylated spirit and suitable bottles.—Medical Officers in charge of Hospitals and Dispensaries are required to maintain a supply of unmethylated spirit and suitable bottles, etc., in readiness for the transmission of viscera and other matters to the Chemical Examiner when occasion may arise. In cases of suspected poisoning, it is exceedingly important that viscera and other suspected matters liable to rapid decomposition should be placed in spirit as soon as practicable. And every care should be taken lest doubt may be raised in Court as to the identity of articles likely to require examination, or as to the possibility of their having been accidentally contaminated or improperly interfered with

2. Post-mortem examination to be made thoroughly.—Post-mortem examinations are to be made as thoroughly as circumstances will permit whenever desired by Magisterial or Police-officers. Attendance upon midwifery cases or other similar excuses will not exempt Medical Officers from the performance of the too frequently unpleasant though most important duty of making a post-mortem examination. Advanced decomposition does not prevent the detection of metallic poisons in the body. Hence remains of viscera may be forwarded for examination when the condition of the body as such is to render any attempt at dissection useless.

3. Contents of the stomach how secured for transmission.—On making a post-mortem examination whenever there is any suspicion of poisoning, the stomach should be tied at both ends (a double ligature being applied at the pyloric extremity, so that the contents of the intestines may not escape) and removed from the body in such a manner that its contents may be retained, after removal it should be opened, the contents received into a perfectly clean bottle and the mucous surface of the stomach carefully examined, its appearance noted, and any suspicious particles found adherent thereto should be picked off with a pair of forceps and placed in a separate small phial for transmission. And the mucous membrane of the mouth, pharynx and œsophagus should be examined and any unusual appearance or marks of corrosion thereon carefully noted.

4. Articles to be forwarded in case of death from presumed poisoning.—In all cases of death from presumed poisoning, the following articles should be forwarded for analysis each in a separate bottle, unless otherwise indicated. It will, however, be understood that other matters should be forwarded if, in the opinion of Medical Officer, the special circumstances of any case render such a proceeding advisable—

(a) Stomach.

(b) Contents of the stomach which may, if it be convenient be put in the same bottle with the stomach.

(c) Suspicious particles (if any have been found) removed from the mucous membrane of the stomach.

(d) A portion of the liver, not less than 16 oz. in weight or the whole liver if it weigh less than 16 oz., and one kidney.

(e) The vomited matter, if any. The earlier and the later vomits should, when practicable, be sent up in different bottles. And the labels should state at what period the matters were vomited. Special directions are given in paragraph 6 for the disposal of vomited matters mixed with earth etc.

(f) A specimen of the spirit used, 4 oz. is sufficient.

When it is suspected that a vegetable poison has been used the following matters should also be forwarded—

(g) The contents of the small intestines.

(h) Any urine which may have been separately collected after the commencement of symptoms, or found in the bladder after death.

5. Strong unmethylated spirit to be added.—Strong unmethylated spirit should in all cases be added, as laid down in the rules for the transmission of articles for analysis, detailed in paragraph 11, to the contents of bottles A, D, G, H and also to the contents of bottles B and E, unless it be suspected that alcoholic poisoning has been the cause of death. No spirit need be added to the contents of bottle C. Care should be taken that no vessel containing fluid matters is quite filled.

6. Packing of vomited and purged matters in metallic poisoning.—Vomited and purged matters are frequently received by Medical Officers mixed with earth etc. If the admixture of earth be sufficient to render the evacuated matters dry and inoffensive they may be packed without spirit in any convenient manner, other wise they must be packed with spirit. Vomited and purged matters if they have, as frequently happens, been allowed to fall on the ground should be carefully scraped up, not taking more earth than is necessary. The superficial scrapings should be packed separately. It is rarely necessary to remove the earth to a depth greater than half inch, even in cases of suspected metallic poisoning, unless the soil be of a very loose character. Except when a metallic poison is suspected, it is very rarely necessary to forward purged matters.

7. Poisonous food, medicine and fruits how preserved and sent up.—If articles of food, medicine, etc., suspected to have been the vehicle by which poison has been admitted, require examination they should each be packed up separately and spirit invariably added, as in the case of viscera, to such as are liable to decomposition. Fruits, such as plantain and custard-apple, if suspected to contain poison, should be carefully inspected, and if it should appear that some resin substance has been inserted, this should be picked out and sent up for examination. If one suspicious substance can be discovered, the fruit should be forwarded.

8. Report by Medical Officer of the result of post-mortem examination of Magistrates, etc., to obtain order for transmission to Chemical Examiner.—After having made a post mortem examination in a case of suspected poisoning, and having preserved in spirit all articles liable to rapid decomposition, which are likely to require examination, the Medical Officer should report the result of his examination to the Police, and on receipt of an order from a Magistrate, or from a Superintendent or Assistant Superintendent of Police, but not before, forward the viscera of the deceased and such other articles as may require analysis to the Chemical Examiner to Government for examination. In cases where no death has occurred, but where it is suspected that poison has been administered, the Medical Officer having preserved in spirit all articles liable to rapid decomposition which are likely to require examination, should similarly report the case to the Police, and on receipt of an order from a Magistrate, Superintendent or Assistant Superintendent of Police, forward the vomited matter or contents of the stomach removed by the stomach pump of the affected individual, or other matters requiring analysis, to the Chemical Examiner to Government. Though Magistrates, Superintendents and Assistant Superintendents of Police are required to grant an order for analysis, should the Medical Officer consider such an examination necessary, they can, if they consider it advisable, order viscera, etc., to be sent to the Chemical Examiner when in the opinion of the Medical Officer, such a proceeding may be quite unnecessary.

9. Letter of advice by Medical Officer to Chemical Examiner what to contain.—When on receipt of the necessary order of a Medical Officer forwards articles to the Chemical Examiner for examination, he should address at the same time a letter to the Chemical Examiner advising him of their despatch. This letter should contain—

- (a) An impression of the seal used in closing in the bottles and a description thereof
- (b) A list of the articles forwarded, and a statement as to how the articles have been forwarded
- (c) The name of the officer from whom the order has been received to forward the articles, and the number and date of such order.
- (d) A detailed account of the post mortem appearances observed.
- (e) If he has seen the case during life, an account of the symptoms observed and a statement of the treatment, if any, adopted

10. Packets to be carefully sealed.—All bottles and packets should be carefully sealed by the Medical Officer, and closed in such a manner that they cannot be opened without destroying the seal. The seal used should be the same throughout, and a private seal, or an official seal, which is always in safe keeping. Each bottle or packet should be labelled and each label should bear the number and date of the letter of advice to the Chemical Examiner relative to the case as well as a short description of the contents, and should be signed by the Medical Officer.

11. Rules for transmission of suspected substances for analysis.—Rules for the transmission of substances for analysis—suspected substances may be forwarded by post carriage bearing by passenger train, or steamer or in charge of a constable. The latter method is recommended in all cases in which wealthy or influential parties are implicated. Officers forwarding viscera, etc., by post, by rail, or steamer, or by constable to the Chemical Examiner will be held personally responsible that the following instructions are carefully followed.—

Transmission by post.—When viscera etc., are forwarded through the post, the following rules are to be observed—

(1) The suspected viscus or other material to be sent for examination should be enclosed in a glass bottle or jar fitted with a stopper or sound cork.

(2) If the material sent is liable to decomposition it should invariably be preserved by one of the following methods—

(i) In case of suspected poisoning in man other than alcoholic poisoning, the material sent should ity to cover the material immersed in t bear a less proportion to the bulk of spirit is not used.

(11) In cases of suspected alcoholic poisoning in man the contents of the stomach and its washings in pure water should be placed in a bottle with a sufficient quantity of clean table salt to saturate the solution and leave a little salt undissolved. The stomach itself, after being washed in pure water, as above, may be preserved in alcohol as in (1). * A sample of the water and of the table salt so used should also be invariably forwarded for examination.

(3) Great care should be taken that the stopper or cork of the bottle fits tightly. This precaution is especially necessary when alcohol is used as a preservative, in such cases a ring of bees or candle-wax should be placed round the lip of the bottle so as to cover the shoulder of the stopper. The stopper should be carefully tied down with bladder or leather and sealed.

(4) The glass bottle or jar should then be placed in a strong wooden or tin box which should be large enough to allow of a layer of raw cotton at least three-fourths of an inch thick being put between the vessel and the box.

(5) The box itself should be encased in common gurah cloth which should be securely closed and sealed. The seals should be at intervals not exceeding three inches long each line of sewing. All the seals must be of the same kind of wax and must bear distinct impressions of the same device. The device should ordinarily be the office seal of the officer despatching the parcel. The device must in no case be that of a current coin or merely a series of straight, curved or crossed lines.

(6) Despatching officers will be held personally responsible that these instructions are carefully followed. Whenever practicable such parcels should be packed under the immediate supervision of the Civil Surgeon.

(7) At all stations where there is a Civil Surgeon the parcels should invariably be sent to the Post Office by that officer and not by a subordinate officer, but where there is no Civil Surgeon they may be packed and forwarded direct to the Chemical Examiner by the subordinate officer in charge of the hospital or dispensary.

(8) A declaration of contents to the officials of the Postal Department is unnecessary and should not be made.

Transmission by Rail or Steamer—When viscera etc. are forwarded by rail or steamer, it is unnecessary to encase the box in cloth but with this exception the rules for forwarding articles through the post must be observed in forwarding articles by passenger train or steamer.

Transmission by Constable—When viscera, etc. are forwarded in charge of a constable it will not be necessary to pack the bottles etc., in a strong box in order to protect them from rough handling during transit. But it is desirable that glass bottles containing viscera etc. should be wrapped in cloth or paper so as not to be offensive to other passengers.

In every other respect the same rules should be observed as in the transmission of viscera, etc. by rail.

12. Suspected Blood stains.—Medical Officers are in many instances expected to deal with these cases themselves—vide section 1 paragraphs 6 and 8.

13. Suspected Seminal stains.—Vide section 1 paragraph 6—As the cloths requiring examination in these cases are usually exceedingly dirty it is advisable, when practicable to cut out any suspicious stains pack them in cotton wool and forward them only for examination instead of the whole garment. In cutting out stains about half an inch of the surrounding cloth should be removed also. In any case cotton wool should be used and every precaution taken to prevent the stains being damaged in transit. For information regarding packing and despatch of letter of advice see instructions under head of Blood stains—vide section 1 paragraph 8.

14. Cattle Cases.—

(1) Some precautions should be taken to ensure that viscera etc. are not sent for examination in cases where death obviously occurred from causes other than poison. A careful search should be made for any indications of the presence of a suit when this mode of poisoning is suspected and if anything resembling a suit be found it should be forwarded for examination. A chemical examination of the viscera is useless in cases of suit poisoning as in such cases poison cannot be detected in the viscera.

(2) The entire alimentary canal should be opened and its contents inspected for suspicious-looking substances. If any suspicious-looking substance be detected in the alimentary canal, it should be packed in a separate vessel, and spirit should not be added unless necessary for its preservation.

(3) About two pounds of the contents of the stomach, with about a pound of the contents of the intestines, should be placed in a clean glass or well-glazed earthen vessel or vessels and strong unethylated spirit added in the proportion of not less than one-fourth of the apparent bulk of the material when the contents are nearly dry, but if much liquid be present spirit should be added in the proportion of one-third of the bulk of the material. Also about a pound of the liver and a similar weight of the stomach should be placed in a separate clean glass or well-glazed earthen vessel and unethylated spirit should be added in the proportion of one third of the bulk of the material. A sample of the spirit used in packing should also be sent, 4 ounces are sufficient.

(4) Dried cattle-dung may be sent without addition of spirit.

(5) Suspected cattle poisons rarely require the addition of spirit for their preservation, and spirit should not be used unless necessary.

(6) The instructions given as to the packing and transmission to the Chemical Examiner of substances requiring chemical examination in cases of suspected human poisoning are applicable to these cases and should be carefully attended to and the same precautions must be adopted as to sealing and labelling the different vessels—vide paragraphs 9, 10 and 11.

(7) When under instructions received from a Magistrate or Superintendent or Assistant Superintendent of Police, a Medical Officer forwards articles to the Chemical Examiner for examination, he should at the same time address and forward separately a letter to the Chemical Examiner advising their despatch. This letter should contain—

(a) an impression of the seal used in closing the vessels, and a description thereof,

(b) a list of the articles forwarded and information as to how the articles have been forwarded,

(c) the name of the officer from whom the order has been received to forward the articles and the number and date of such order

(d) information as to the number and kind of animals affected and number of deaths,

(e) any information obtainable as to post-mortem appearances, nature and duration of symptoms and which may be likely to indicate the probable nature of the poison.

15. Analysis of water.—(1) Before forwarding a sample of water to the Chemical Examiner for analysis, it is necessary to write to the Chemical Examiner and ascertain when it will be convenient to receive the sample or samples which may require to be examined, it being desirable that samples should be examined shortly after they are received at the laboratory.

(2) The duty of collecting the samples should always be undertaken by a responsible person. The employment of peons or servants for this purpose is strictly prohibited. The bottles used should be thoroughly cleansed, and then well washed out twice with water from the same source it is intended to fill them from, just before finally filling them.

(3) Glass-stoppered bottles are best, but if those are not procurable, new corks are to be used with the ordinary quart wine bottle of light-coloured glass. In filling the bottles, a little space should be left between the cork and the water.

(4) Not less than one gallon of each sample of water is to be forwarded.

(5) Each bottle to be labelled with the name of the well and date of collection.

(6) On forwarding water for analysis, the Medical Officer should, at the same time forward separately a letter to the Chemical Examiner. This letter should contain—

(a) An impression and description of the seal used in closing the bottles.

(b) Information as to the number of samples sent, and a statement as to how the samples have been forwarded.

(c) An explanation as to the reason for which the examination is required and information as to by whom it is desired.

(d) A statement as to the source from which each sample was collected and by whom and when each sample was collected.

C—QUANTITATIVE ANALYSIS BY CHEMICAL EXAMINER

Quantitative analysis to be made only in mineral poisoning—The Chemical Examiner's report is legal and important evidence in an investigation or trial. In the case of Vegetable Poisoning Quantitative Analysis of human viscera etc. is likely to be fallacious in its results and as such worthless as legal evidence. Quantitative Analysis should therefore be made in addition to Qualitative Analysis only in the case of Mineral Poisoning for finding out the amount of poison found in each article—(Vide G.O. No 1307 Judicial dated 17th August 1905.

D—FEE TO MEDICAL OFFICERS

(i) For conducting a Postmortem or Medico-legal Examination—The fee to be paid to a Medical Subordinate other than an officer of commissioned rank for conducting a Postmortem or Medico-legal Examination when it does not fall within the ordinary scope of his duties, shall be Rs 4. It is to be understood that Medical Subordinates lent by the Government to Municipalities or Dispensary Committees will be required to perform these examinations as part of their regular duties, without further remuneration. In the case of Officers of Commissioned Rank the fee shall be Rs 16 for Postmortem Examination and Rs 10 for Medico-legal Examination—(G.O. No 694 Judicial dated 15th March 1884).

(ii) For Attendance in Court—A Medical Officer, not being a Civil Surgeon or an officer in Medical charge of a Civil Station shall be entitled to a fee of Rs. 16 for conducting Postmortem Examination and to a fee of Rs. 10 for conducting a Medico-legal Examination other than a Postmortem Examination in cases not falling within the ordinary discharge of his duties whether or not he is required to give evidence in a Court of Justice in connection with such examination. When he is required to give such evidence in a Court of Justice he shall not be entitled to any remuneration in addition to the fee sanctioned above other than the usual expenses paid to a witness—(G.O. No. 1367 Judicial dated 21st September 1882).

(iii) For grant of certificate or Medical opinion—Paragraph 381 of the Civil Medical Code shall be amended as follows—(Vide G.O. No 755 Public, dated 12th September, 1908) —(a) Medical Officers who are public servants shall in no case receive any fee from the public revenues for giving certificates opinions or evidence regarding any proceeding of public interest such as inquests or judicial inquiries. Certificates shall invariably be granted when required by the Police. If in any case a Medical Officer considers that unnecessary or improper use is made of this rule by the Police he should, after granting the certificate, report the matter to the District Medical and Sanitary Officer who will bring it to the notice of the District Magistrate. If the officer is himself the District Medical and Sanitary Officer or a Civil Surgeon, he will similarly report the matter to the District Magistrate. (b) A fee may be charged subject to the provisions of clause (d) below, for a certificate or opinion given by a Medical Officer in Government, Municipal or Local Fund service at the instance of a private person treated or examined by him in his official capacity for any purpose whether it be in connection with a civil or criminal proceeding or not, and the fact such person was treated in a State Municipal or Local Fund Hospital shall not exempt him from the payment of such fee to the certifying officer. When such a certificate or opinion is given by a Commissioned Medical Officer or a permanent Civil Surgeon he shall be entitled to a fee at the usual rate of remuneration admissible to him in the case of an ordinary certificate. When it is given by a Subordinate Medical Officer, the fee shall not exceed two days salary (i.e. pay without allowances) of such officer subject to maximum of Rs. 5. Provided that where a private person pleads that from poverty he cannot pay the fee demanded the Medical Officer shall not therefore refuse to treat or examine such person and shall record the results of the examination. He may however in such case refuse to grant a certificate without the payment of a fee but if he does so, he shall record his reason for such refusal. * Provided further that a Medical Officer shall not levy a second fee for giving evidence in a Court to prove a certificate or opinion previously given by him to private person and for which he has already received a fee. There is however, no objection to a Medical Officer taking a fee from a private person for giving evidence in a Court in cases in which the officer has not obtained a fee beforehand for consultation or for a certificate in regard to the same matter and in which he has been summoned to give evidence in Court by that person and not by the Court or another party.

(c) Treatment not to be postponed.—A Medical Officer shall not be at liberty by directing the appli

(d) No fee for certificate under M. S. Act.—Notwithstanding anything contained in the above rules no fee shall be charged by Medical Officers for certificates granted with reference to section 36 of the Merchant Shipping Act 1906 on the requisition of the port authorities.

C.—Bengal Rules.—The following rules and orders under s. 174 are in force in Bengal —

At every division of a district where there is a Sub-Assistant Surgeon or European Medical Officer, the post mortem in all cases of violent or suspicious deaths occurring in that division should be held by such officer

Where there is only a Native Doctor, where the state of the dead body, the distance, the weather, or the condition of the roads renders it improbable that the body will reach the Sudder Station in such condition as to enable the Civil Surgeon satisfactorily to hold a post mortem examination on it, the body must be sent to the Sub-divisional Medical Officer. A copy of the report of such officer will, however, be submitted to the Civil Surgeon, who will make any remarks he thinks proper on the margin of the report, for the information of the Sub-divisional Officer. When the body has external marks of violence, as in the case of hanging, fractures or severe cuts, the Sub-divisional Magistrate should himself, if possible, view the body in the presence of the Native Doctor

When, on the other hand, circumstances permit, the body should be sent to the Sudder Station for examination by the Civil Surgeon, and at such examination the Sub-Assistant Surgeon, or the Native Doctor of the Sudder Station, should be present, so that he may be able to attend. If required at the Sub-divisional Court, and, give evidence as to causes of death in cases in which the absence of Civil Surgeon on his duty would be attended with serious inconvenience to those under his medical charge—Resolution, Bengal Government 10th October, 1863

9. Evidentiary value of a post-mortem report.—A post mortem report cannot be used as evidence at the trial except by way of refreshing the memory of the person who made it or to contradict him, 6 C. W. N. 98, 9 C. 455 = 11 C. L. R. 869.

10. Disposal of the body.—The Police-officer sent in charge of a corpse need not be present throughout the details of the post mortem examination. It will suffice if he stands sufficiently near to be able to testify that the body which has been in his charge was the one which was examined by the Medical Officer. In all cases where the Police bring a body for post mortem examination, they should arrange for the subsequent disposal of the body. If the relations or friends of the deceased will arrange for the burial the body should be given to them. If they decline the Police should arrange for the burial of the body themselves—Mad. Pol. Man, Vol. I p 80

POINTS TO BE REQUIRED IN CASE OF DEATH FROM RUPTURE OF THE SPLEEN

Report on Rupture of the Spleen by Dr Brown Principal of the Lahore Medical College

Rupture of the spleen usually occurs from violence affecting the spleen when it is already diseased, but it may occur when the structure is quite healthy if the violence is very great, or it can happen without violence if the spleen is in a very diseased state, when rupture has occurred either from muscular efforts or straining, coughing or vomiting or even it is stated, spontaneously in intermittent fever, but these cases are very rare. It is, therefore of great importance to determine what was the condition of the spleen in all cases in which death has been caused by rupture of this substance.

When the spleen is ruptured by violence, the marks of that violence can sometimes be seen on the body, but not in all cases, since rupture of the spleen often produces death so rapidly that no effusion of blood can occur, and also sometimes the violence appears only to affect the spleen, and not to injure other parts

It is therefore quite possible that the spleen should be ruptured by violence, and yet no evidence of the injury be seen on the skin or other parts of the body

The condition of the spleen previous to rupture can generally be determined by its size and consistency after death. A healthy spleen measures about 5 or 5½ inches long, 3 or 4 inches wide and 1 to 1½ inch thick, and it weighs about 6 ounces—varying from 4 to 8. When the spleen is so diseased as to render a rupture from slight violence probable, it will often weigh from 10 to 30 ounces and measure from 7 to 12 inches in length. The healthy spleen does not project beyond the ribs, but the diseased spleen does so—often to a considerable distance.

The consistency of the spleen when healthy is moderately firm, so that it may be cut with ease, leaving a sharp edge and smooth surface when divided, but in disease the spleen may become quite soft and pulpy, or even diffuent, so as to fall away like a thick liquid when the capsule is divided. This condition, however, may also occur from putrefaction if the body is kept long after death, or if the weather is very warm, and therefore these circumstances should also be ascertained.

The enlargement and softening of the spleen from disease is usually a result of previous attack of intermittent fever or ague; it may also occur in other diseases, especially typhoid fever, scurvy and purpura.

The part of the spleen which is usually ruptured is the concave or inner surface, and the extent of the rupture varies greatly, but death usually occurs more rapidly in proportion as the rupture is larger and deeper. When the rupture is small, the patient may live several days, or may even recover entirely.

If the rupture is extensive, the person is usually incapable of moving from the place where the rupture occurred.

Lastly, in some instances, the spleen is covered with a layer of membrane caused by previous attacks of inflammation; this may delay or even prevent death by limiting the rupture or preventing excessive bleeding.

The questions, therefore, which appear necessary to ask in cases of death from rupture of the spleen are—

1st.—What appearances of external violence were perceptible on the body?

2nd.—What was the size and weight of the spleen after death?

3rd.—How far did it project beyond the ribs?

4th.—What was the consistency of the spleen—hard, firm, soft, pulpy or diffuent?

5th.—How long after death was the body examined and what was the temperature of the air?

6th.—Was the body much putrid?

7th.—What was the position of the rupture?

8th.—What was the length and depth of the rupture?

9th.—Is it your opinion that the rupture was caused by external violence or not? State your reasons for your opinion.

10th.—Were there any adhesions about the spleen, if so, were they older than the rupture or not?

12. Statement of the conditions of Medico legal enquiry in India as compared with such enquiry in England

Extract from the Report of the Chemical Examiner, Punjab for 1873.

Conditions of the enquiry in India compared with Europe—The investigation and proof of Medico-legal cases in India are generally conducted under very different conditions and by very different means from those in most countries of Europe, and it is very necessary for the officers engaged in this country, to understand the value and the significance of the various parts of the investigation that each has to perform, and especially for the Magistrate to know how its decision is to be modified by the way in which the investigation has been conducted.

The proof of poisoning, though it may be clear by other evidence, depends mainly on establishing the existence of certain symptoms, or of death that is it rests principally on scientific evidence. Of this evidence there are three parts—the symptoms, the post-mortem appearances if death occurred, and the chemical evidence—from the proper investigation and correlation of which the unknown cause may be established.

Evidence as to symptoms in Europe—In Europe there is a class of qualified medical practitioners distributed almost universally, who certify to the causes of death, the public registration of which is compulsory. When a person is seized with sudden illness followed or not by death there is almost always a medical attendant sufficiently skilled in diagnosis to recognize the symptoms as those of some known disease or if not he is able in one class of cases to give an opinion that those symptoms are not those of any known disease but that they are those of certain injury, or poison or class of poisons, while in another class of cases he may only be able to say that they may possibly be those of a certain disease, but that they suspiciously resemble those of some poison or injury.

Evidence as to symptoms in India—In India qualified practitioners not being generally diffused among the people, the causes of sudden illness or death are not recognized by the ignorant relatives and attendants. In this way many cases of disease may be attributed to poison or injury, or witchcraft, and from ignorance, doubt or enmity be reported to the Police. On the other hand cases of real poisoning may be passed over as cases of disease. This part of the investigation has generally to be conducted by the Police who cannot be supposed to be skilled in the observation and estimation of symptoms. In addition they have to get an account of the symptoms after they have occurred and from ignorant witnesses and they have to contend with a difficulty in getting them to speak the truth unknown in Europe. The evidence so far is therefore generally defective and must be so till there be a class of practitioners spread among the people sufficiently skilled to certify to the causes of deaths. In all possible cases the Police should have the assistance or advice of a Medical Officer, and the evidence of attendant hakims, who often show considerable keenness in observation should be taken down and signed by them.

Post mortem examination in Europe—The second part of the investigation, the post mortem examination, is generally made in Europe by the medical attendant along with another doctor. In one class of cases an opinion can be affirmed that the post mortem appearances are or are not those of the suspected disease but that they are not or are those of the suspected injury, poison or class of poisons. In another class in which the post mortem appearances are not so diagnostic, an opinion can only be given expressing probability or uncertainty.

Post mortem examination in India—In India the evidence from post mortem examination is also generally less definite from various causes. Not only is the evidence regarding symptoms which ought to guide in distinguishing suspected and possible causes of death, more imperfect, but very often the autopsy has to be performed without any information at all. The number of possible causes of death being numerous it is in such cases only possible to give an opinion of certainty or probability when marked and profound lesions are left by disease, injury and poison, and there is a chance of uncommon lesions or slight appearances which might prove important in evidence being overlooked. Again the body often reaches the Medical Officer advanced in decomposition, when the slighter appearances left by disease, injury or poison may not be recognizable. But in all cases it is distinctly to be understood that the examination should be made, as even in such cases many causes of death may be established or negatived. Also in all cases a complete and not a partial examination is more necessary in this country on account of the imperfectness of the preliminary evidence as to the possible causes of death. Different causes may afterwards be suggested in the evidence regarding which judicial enquiries may be made.

In order to render this part of the evidence more definite and valuable it is necessary that the Police in handing over the body for examination should at the same time hand over an account of all that is known as to the suspicious circumstances of death and it should be noted by the Medical Officer whether he was in possession of this information or not when making the post mortem examination.

Chemical evidence in Europe—In Europe the third part of the evidence—the chemical—is one of the most definite in its results. The symptoms and post mortem appearances recorded by duly qualified and informed observers are laid before the Chemical Examiner and the question asked is whether one poison or at most one of a class of poisons, be present in the substances sent and he certifies to the presence or absence of those poisons indicated which can be identified by chemistry.

Chemical evidence in India—In India, from the imperfectness of the preceding evidence, the problem proposed is more indeterminate and often insoluble. As a general rule substances have hitherto been sent for analysis with no information as to what poisons might possibly have been used. This problem, which is seldom met with in a lifetime by an expert in Europe, resolves itself into a search for the poisons, commonly used in the country, unless some suspicious appearance or particles lead to a conjecture in another direction. The number of substances that may cause death being practically indefinite, it would be impossible with a limited amount of material and time to attempt anything else.

In order that the Chemical Examiner's evidence may be as definite as possible, if no poison is found, he should distinctly certify as to the poison he was led to examine for and whose absence he demonstrated

Position of the Magistrate in England—The position of the Magistrate as regards the scientific witness differs in India and England. In England the scientific witness are really cross-examined by the defence, both as to the facts they have observed and the opinions they bring forward, and similar witnesses may be brought forward to challenge their statements.

Position of the Magistrate in India.—In India this is very seldom possible. The Civil Medical Officer has practically functions rather resembling those entrusted to him in some countries of Europe. He is a Government official charged with the investigation of facts, regarding which he has to give evidence in the same way as the Police-officer. In addition he has to interpret to the Court the precise value, significance and limits of the scientific evidence, and it is his duty to bring forward with judicial carefulness any conclusions or opinions connected with the facts. In India, also, it is physically impossible for the Chemical Examiner to be cross-examined and his evidence has therefore to be taken without any other proof of attestation than his signature. He should, therefore, restrict himself to a statement of observed or demonstrated facts, and should, on no account, make mention of probabilities or opinions, unless specially asked, but it is his duty to reply to any questions regarding the meaning or limits of the scientific evidence which the local Medical Officer may wish to be referred or which the Court may choose to propose.

Estimation of the value of the evidence.—If the cause of death be not satisfactory proved by the scientific evidence the Magistrate has to consider to what extent it proves or disproves anything. It is purely negative in value in the case of poisons not detectable by chemistry which do not produce symptoms and post mortem appearances distinguishable with certainty from those of disease or injury. It is also negative in the case of detectable poisons of which the symptoms and post mortem appearances alone are not decisive, when the Chemical Examiner has not been led to examine for those poisons. In this class of cases the proof principally depends on whether the Medical Officer was in possession of the suspicious circumstances of death when making the post mortem examination and whether the Chemical Examiner knew both these when examining for poisons. If the latter had no information, he could only certify to the absence of common poison, and it is to be remarked that the large number of poisoning cases proved in this country is due to the ignorance of the natives, and that as intelligence spreads, uncommon poisons will be used more frequently.

Meaning of "no poison found".—If no poison has been found, it should be noted that it may have been administered in the following cases:—

1st—If a poison has been given for which there are no chemical tests.

2nd—If a detectable poison were used for which the Chemical Examiner was not led to examine.

3rd—If a volatile poison has been used which has been placed in circumstances in which it might have volatilized.

4th—If certain organic poisons have been used, and a sufficient time has elapsed for their decomposition.

5th—In the case of most organic poisons it is only the part left in the stomach after death that can be discovered, that which is absorbed into the system becomes chemically changed, so that it is really the part that does not cause death that is detected. Consequently, if the stomach has been well cleared out by the stomach pump or vomiting, or if sufficient time has elapsed before death to allow the poison to be absorbed, none may be detected.

6th—Even in the case of metallic poisons which can be detected after absorption, if sufficient time (three weeks to a month) elapse before death, the whole of the poison may be eliminated from the system by the kidneys, etc., and the patient may die from the lesions caused by the poison.

7 Assistance in holding the inquiry.—(1) Whenever any accident has occurred in the course of working a railway the Agent or Manager shall give all reasonable aid to the District Magistrate or the Magistrate appointed or deputed under Rule 16 and to the Government Inspector, Medical Officer, the Police and others concerned enable them promptly to reach the scene of the accident and shall assist those authorities in making inquiries and in obtaining evidence as to the cause of the accident.

(2) When any enquiry under Rule 16 or any judicial inquiry is being made the Agent or Manager shall arrange for the attendance as long as may be necessary, at the office or place of inquiry of all railway servants whose evidence is likely to be required

8 Arrest of offender.—Whenever any accident has occurred in the course of working a railway and any offence referred to in s. 131 of the Indian Railway Act 1890, has been committed the Agent or Manager or some officer of the railway nominated by him or if there be no such officer the railway officer of highest rank present may direct the senior Police-officer or Policeman present or if there be no member of the Police Force present a railway servant at once to arrest the offender and no railway servant shall arrest any person under the authority of the said section without such direction except for the purpose of preventing him from making his escape provided that when such offender is a railway servant whose arrest is considered for any reason undesirable proper precautions shall be taken to prevent his escape

9 Medical aid to sufferers.—Whenever any accident occurring in the course of working a railway has been attended with serious personal injury it shall be the duty of the Agent or Manager to afford medical aid to the sufferers and to see that they are properly and carefully attended to till removed to their home or handed over to the care of their relatives or friends. In such case or in any case in which any loss of human life has occurred the local Medical Officer should be communicated with if he is nearer than any Railway Medical Officer

10. Duties of Police-officers.—The Railway Police may make an investigation into the causes which led to any accident occurring in the course of working a railway and shall do so—(a) whenever any such accident is attended with loss of human life or with grievous hurt as defined in the Indian Penal Code, or with serious injury to property or to a great pecuniary loss due to any criminal act or omission or (b) whenever the District Magistrate or the Magistrate appointed under Rule 16 has given a direction under cl. (c) of that rule. Provided that no such investigation shall be made when a magisterial inquiry has been commenced or ordered under Rule 16 cl. (a) or cl. (b).

11 Who to conduct the Police investigation—(1) Whenever an investigation is to be made by the Railway Police—(a) in a case in which an accident is attended with loss of human life or with serious injury to persons or property, or (b) in pursuance of a direction given under Rule 16, cl. (c), the investigation shall be conducted by the officer in charge of the Railway Police or, if that officer should be unable to conduct the investigation himself then by an officer to be deputed by him.

(2) An officer deputed under cl. (1) of this rule shall ordinarily be an Assistant Superintendent of Police but if in any case it should be found impracticable to depute an officer of that grade, an Inspector of Police may be deputed.

12 Mode of conducting the Police investigation—The officer who is to conduct an investigation in pursuance of Rule 11 shall proceed without delay to the scene of the accident and conduct the investigation there and shall at once advise the Agent or Manager of the railway and the Traffic officer of the district, by telegraph of the date and hour at which the investigation will commence so that, if possible the presence of a railway official may be arranged for to watch proceedings and to aid the officer making the investigation. The absence of a railway official must not however be allowed to delay the investigation which should be made as soon as possible after the accident has taken place.

13. Railway Police to communicate with District Police—(1) In every case to which Rule 11 applies immediate information shall be given by the Railway Police to the District Police, who, if so required shall afford all necessary assistance, and shall if occasion arise, carry the investigation beyond the limits of the railway premises. But the Railway Police are primarily entrusted with the duty of carrying on the investigation within such limits.

(2) Subject to any provisions elsewhere contained in these rules the further prosecution of the case on the conclusion of the Police investigation shall rest with the Railway Police.

14. Communication of the report of investigation—The result of every Police investigation shall be reported at once to the Magistrate of the district or other officer appointed in this behalf by the Local Government, and to the Agent or Manager of the railway.

15 District Police to act in the absence of Railway Police—Where there are no Railway Police the duties imposed by Rules 10 11 12 and 13 cl. (2), and Rule 14 on the Railway Police or on the officer in charge of the Railway Police shall be discharged by the District Police or by the District Superintendent of Police, as the case may be.

16. Duties of Magistrates.—Whenever an accident such as is described in s. 83 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, has occurred in the course of working a railway, the District Magistrate or any other Magistrate who may be appointed in this behalf by the Local Government, may either—(a) himself make an inquiry into the causes which led to the accident or (b) depute a Subordinate Magistrate who, if possible should be a Magistrate of the first class to make such an inquiry or (c) direct an investigation into the causes which led to the accident to be made by the Police.

17. Notice of magisterial inquiry—Whenever it is decided to make an inquiry under Rule 16 cl. (a) or cl. (b) the District Magistrate or other Magistrate appointed as aforesaid or the Magistrate deputed under Rule 16 cl. (b) as the case may be shall proceed to the scene of the accident and conduct the inquiry there and shall at once advise the Agent or Manager of the railway and the Government Inspector, by telegraph of the date and hour at which the inquiry will commence so as to enable the Railway Administration to summon the requisite expert evidence.

18 Power to summon witnesses.—A Magistrate making an inquiry under Rule 16 may summon any railway servant, and any other person whose presence he may think necessary and after taking the evidence and completing the inquiry shall if he considers there are sufficient grounds for a judicial inquiry, take the requisite steps for bringing to trial any person whom he may consider to be criminally liable for the accident. Whenever technical points are involved the Magistrate should be careful to call for and take the opinion of the Government Inspector or other professional persons.

19. Communication of the result of magisterial inquiry.—The result of every inquiry made under Rule 16 shall be communicated by the Magistrate to the Agent or Manager of the railway and to the Government Inspector.

20. Summoning railway employees—If in the course of any judicial inquiry into an accident occurring in the course of working a railway, the Magistrate desires the assistance of the Government Inspector or of the Agent or Manager of the railway, or the attendance of any officer of the railway, to explain any matter relating to railway supervision, management or working, he will issue a requisition to such officer to attend the Court, stating at the same time the nature of the assistance required. In summoning railway servants, the Magistrate will take care not to summon so large a number of the employees, specially of one class, on the same day, as to cause inconvenience to the working of the railway. In the case of very serious accidents it will generally be advisable for the Magistrate to receive either the evidence of, or a report from, both the Government Inspector and the Agent or Manager of the railway in regard to the accident before finally concluding the judicial inquiry.

21. Report of magisterial inquiry—On the conclusion of any such judicial inquiry, the Magistrate shall send a copy of his decision to the Agent or Manager of the railway and shall unless in any case he thinks it unnecessary to do so report the result of the inquiry to the Local Government.

22. Duties of the Government Inspector appointed under s. 4 (1) of the Indian Railways Act, 1890.—Whenever the Government Inspector receives notice under s. 83 of the Indian Railways Act 1890 of the occurrence of an accident which he considers of a sufficiently serious nature to justify such a course, he shall report the occurrence direct to the Government of India by telegraph.

Every such report shall contain the particulars prescribed by Rule 2.

23. (1) The Government Inspector shall proceed to the scene of the accident to note the facts and to inquire generally into the causes which led to the accident whenever he receives notice as aforesaid of an accident which he considers serious enough to warrant an inquiry or investigation being made under any of these rules.

If the Government Inspector, after reporting to the Government of India the occurrence of an accident in accordance with Rule 22, decides that an inquiry or investigation is not necessary, he shall in every such case advise the Government of India accordingly.

(2) Whenever an inquiry under cl. (1) of this rule is made by the Government Inspector, he shall, if practicable be present at the departmental inquiry (if any) made under Rule 4.

24. Report of Government Inspector.—Whenever the Government Inspector has made an inquiry under Rule 23 cl. (1) he shall submit a report, in writing through the Senior Government Inspector, to the Local Government or Administration controlling the railway, and to the Government of India, or in the case of a railway which is directly administered by the State to the Government of India only, and shall forward a copy of such report to the Agent or Manager of the railway concerned, and if a magisterial inquiry has been made to the Magistrate who made such inquiry.

25. Form and contents of Government Inspector's report.—In the case of all serious accidents, such reports shall be submitted in the form adopted by the Inspecting Officers of the Board of Trade, in order to admit of their reproduction in a uniform shape in the Quarterly Accidents Returns, and shall contain—

(1) A brief description of the accident, (2) a description of the locality of the accident, (3) a detailed statement of the evidence taken, (4) the conclusion arrived at by the Government Inspector, (5) an appendix stating the damage done, and (6) (when necessary) a sketch illustrative of the accident.

26. In important cases, where the occurrence of an accident appears to show that a change in the system of working is necessary, the Government Inspector shall inform the Government of India or the Local Government or Administration controlling the railway, of the steps which have been or are proposed to be taken by the Railway Administration to prevent a recurrence of similar accidents, and whether, in his opinion further action in the matter is desirable.

27. The Government Inspector shall, as far as possible assist any Magistrate making an inquiry under Rule 16, or a judicial inquiry, whenever he may be called upon to do so.

N.B.—These rules do not limit the exercise of any of the powers conferred on Government Inspectors by s. 5 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890.

175. (1) A Police-officer proceeding under section 174 may, by order in writing, summon two or more persons as aforesaid for the purpose of the said investigation and any other person who appears to be acquainted with the facts of the case. Every person so summoned shall be bound to attend and to answer truly all questions other than questions the answer to which would have a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge or to a penalty or forfeiture.

(2) If the facts do not disclose a cognizable offence to which section 170 applies such persons shall not be required by the Police-officer to attend a Magistrate's Court.

Notes.—1 Witness bound to answer truly—scope of section—In this section the word 'truly' is still kept probably through an oversight though it is now omitted in s. 161. See Notes to that section. Investigations in the nature of inquest consist of the investigation of the apparent cause of death. Such an investigation ceases when the cause of death is ascertained ie when it is determined whether the death is natural, suicidal or accidental or due to homicide. Once it is established that the death was due to homicide the inquiry becomes one under s. 161 and there was no obligation on the witness to speak the truth. As soon as the punchnama and report are made and the death is determined to be homicidal then the investigation becomes one under s. 161 and the witness is not bound to speak the truth. 15 K. L. R. 143 = 2 Cr. L. J. 590. See Notes to s. 161. See also 5 M. L. T. 356 where sanction to prosecute in respect of a statement made by a Police-officer under s. 174 contradicting statement before a Magistrate was upheld.

2 Section not applicable to Madras City—So far as regards the area comprised within the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court of Judicature at Madras this section is replaced by s. 4 of Act V of 1889. It is also notified that—

I. When from the information received by an officer in charge of a Police-station he has reason to believe—

(a) that the deceased person is an European or East Indian or

(b) that any person has been killed by the act or neglect of another or has died under circumstances raising a reasonable suspicion that some other person has committed an offence such officer after giving written information to the Commissioner of Police as required by s. 174 and stating therein his belief that the event is one falling under cl. (a) or cl. (b) of this rule and the grounds of such belief shall not proceed to discharge any of his further functions under this section.

II. If the Commissioner on receiving intimation as aforesaid considers that there are sufficient grounds for believing that the event therein reported falls under cl. (a) or cl. (b) of Rule I he shall either himself discharge the further functions imposed on the officer in charge of a station under s. 174 or shall depute some Police-officer of not lower rank than Inspector to discharge such functions.

Provided that when the deceased is an European or East Indian such further functions shall be discharged by a Police-officer who is himself an European or East Indian.—Notification No. 187 Fort St. George Ga. 111 1889 Pt. I p. 336

3. Statements of witnesses may be recorded—There is nothing in this Code which prevents the statements of the witness examined at an inquest being recorded verbatim in the report, (1911) 11 M. W. N. 133 = 12 Cr. L. J. 124.

4 Reports to be submitted by the Police-officer—When a person is accused and arrested upon an inquest, the Police will send in three reports possibly to three different Magistrates viz. (i) the intimation under s. 174 (1) to the nearest Magistrate empowered to hold inquests (ii) the report under s. 174 (2) to the District or Sub-divisional Magistrate and (iii) the report under s. 170 (1) to the Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence.

176. (1) When any person dies while in the custody of the Police, the nearest Magistrate empowered to hold inquests shall, and in any other case mentioned in section 174, clauses (a) (b) and (c) of subsection (1) any Magistrate so empowered may hold an inquiry into the cause of death either instead of, or in addition to the investigation held by the Police-officer, and, if he does so he shall have all the powers in conducting it which he would have in holding an inquiry into an offence. The Magistrate holding such an inquiry shall record the evidence taken by him in connection therewith in any of the manners hereinafter prescribed according to the circumstances of the case.

(2) Whenever such Magistrate considers it expedient to make an examination of the dead body of any person who has been already interred, in order to discover the cause of his death, the Magistrate may cause the body to be disinterred and examined.

Notes—1 A similar power is entrusted to the Coroners of Calcutta and Bombay.—See the Coroners' Act IV of 1871, as amended by Act V of 1899, printed in the Appendix.

2 Concurrent jurisdiction of the Coroner and Presidency Magistrate in Bombay and Calcutta.—A Presidency Magistrate is not ousted of his jurisdiction in the case of an offence by which death has been caused because the Coroner has held an inquiry into the cause of death and drawn up an inquisition under the Coroners Act IV of 1871. He has jurisdiction to deal with the case according to law and is in no way bound by the Coroner's proceedings. He may hold an inquiry notwithstanding a commitment for trial has been made to the High Court by the Coroner. Ratanlal 540; 16 B. 159.

3. Section not applicable to Madras City.—So far as regards the area comprised within the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court of Judicature at Madras is concerned, this section is replaced by s. 4, Act V of 1899.

4 Proceedings not void.—If any Magistrate not empowered holds an inquest under this section erroneously in good faith, his proceedings are not on that account to be set aside. See s. 529 (c).

5 Report by Magistrate is not judicial proceeding.—There is nothing in the language of this section which requires a Magistrate holding an inquiry under it either to make a report or to come to a finding. The report, sent by him to the District Magistrate, could not be considered as part of a judicial proceeding, and that therefore, the High Court has no power to send for it under s. 435. No analogy exists between a Coroner's inquest and an inquiry into the cause of death under this section. 3 C. 742 = 3 C. L. R. 59, followed in Ratanlal 543.

PART VI.

PROCEEDINGS IN PROSECUTIONS

CHAPTER XV.

OF THE JURISDICTION OF THE CRIMINAL COURTS IN INQUIRIES AND TRIALS

Notes—1 Illegality of arrest does not affect the jurisdiction of Courts to try the offender.—The irregularity of an arrest will not render invalid the subsequent trial and conviction of the accused in British India, 6 P. R. 1899; 26 M. 124, 1 P. R. 1911 = 4 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 113. If the Magistrate before whom an accused has been charged has jurisdiction to try the offence, his jurisdiction to inquire into or try, cannot be affected by any illegality in connection with his arrest, 35 B. 225. See also 17 B. 369, 31 C. 857; 17 P. R. 1906 and Note 15 at p. 84. In 35 B. 223, the case of Mitho ned Yusufuddin (1897) 24 J. A. 137 was distinguished, as follows: "The judgment does not purport to deal with the question whether an illegal arrest in foreign territory vitiates an inquiry by a Magistrate into an offence against the Indian Penal Code charged against the person arrested when brought before the Court, nor does it appear from the report that the question was argued. The Chief Court of Burma, however, in 7 Bar. L. R. 83 relying on 24 J. A. 137 held that when a person is illegally arrested and brought before a Magistrate, and the warrant is found to be illegal, the Court is bound to stay further proceedings against the accused in respect of charges of offences for which the warrant was issued. The accused had the right of being replaced in the same position and place as he would have been in, had no illegality been done."

2 General Rule.—National or territorial jurisdiction depends upon the locality of the crime.—All crime is local. The jurisdiction over the crime belongs to the country where the crime is committed, McLeod v Attorney General, L. R. (1891) A. C. at p. 458, see also 17 B. 369; 5 B. 338. In the view of English Law, crime is purely local viz., depends on the law of the place in which it is committed, and not on the nationality of the person who commits it, Sirdar Gurdial Singh v. Rajah of Faridkote (1894) A. C. 670. On this principle aliens are amenable to the English Criminal Law, in respect of crimes committed in England, Barronels case 1 E. and B. 1, and British subjects are not amenable to that law in respect of offences committed outside England unless committed within the Admiralty jurisdiction or unless specially provided for by statute. Russell on Crimes, Vol. I, p. 19. Apart from statute, existing English Courts cannot take cognizance of any crime committed on land outside England whether by a British subject or an alien, Archbold, p. 25. Extra territorial jurisdiction is, however, vested in the Governor General in Council in his executive capacity and also in the Indian Legislature. See Notes 4 and 5 to s 188.

(a) National or territorial jurisdiction must be distinguished from local venue—Venue or local jurisdiction is quite distinct from national or territorial jurisdiction, Mozambique Co v. British South Africa Co (1893) A. C. 602; N v. Ellis (1899) 1 Q. B. 230; 24 P. R. 1901 (F.B.). Whether an accused is to be tried in one or other local area is a question of procedure (cf. s 531), while the question whether a local Court can try a person for an offence committed outside the realm is a question of jurisdiction. See 35 P. R. 1888; 24 P. R. 1901. According to the English Common Law, the Courts of common law had apart from statute no power to try any offence not committed within the body of the realm viz., their criminal jurisdiction was territorial and not personal, McLeod v. Attorney General of N. S. Wales (1891) A. C. 455; Sirdar Gurdial Singh v. Rajah of Faridkote (1894) A. C. 670. But the liability of a subject to be made answerable for crimes committed out of the jurisdiction has been affirmed by statutes for more than three centuries and a half in England see Hall, Foreign Power and Jurisdiction of the British Crown (1894), Pt. I, Chapter, p. 12. As to the powers of the Indian Legislature and the Governor General in Council. See Note 5 to s 188.

2. Jurisdiction of British Indian Courts when offences committed outside British India.—(a) No jurisdiction over foreigners for offences committed in foreign territory—No proposition of law can be more incontestible or more universally admitted than that according to the general law of nations, a foreigner cannot be held criminally responsible to the law of a nation not his own, for acts done beyond the laws of its territory, Franconia case (1876) 2 Ex. D. 63; Jameson (1896) 2 Q. B. 430. An act will not be construed as applying to foreigners in respect of acts done by them outside the dominions of the sovereign power enacting. That is a rule based on International Law, by which one sovereign power is bound to respect the subjects and the rights of all other sovereign powers outside its own territory, 1 P. R. 1901. S 181 is intended to regulate the jurisdiction of Courts in British India and cannot vary or abrogate the ordinary rule that no foreign subject shall be tried in British India for an offence committed outside British India, 23 A. 372. Where the offence of theft is committed by a subject of a Native State within its limits, a British Indian Magistrate has no jurisdiction to try such a person 2 Bom. L. R. 337; 6 M. H. C. R. Appx 3. See also 20 P. R. 1878; 30 P. R. 1889; 7 P. R. 1894; 28 A. 372; but if there is a special treaty, the British Courts have jurisdiction, see 3 M. H. C. R. 354, as to jurisdiction of British Courts over residents of Ramandrug in the Sandur State. Where the instigation of an offence by a foreigner is complete in a Foreign State, the British Courts have no jurisdiction, 10 Bom. H. C. R. 355; but if the offence is completed in British territory, the foreigner if found in British India may be tried, 36 B. 524. Non British subjects found in a Native State in possession of property stolen in British India cannot be tried in British India for an offence under s. 412, 1 P. C., 9 A. 523; 22 P. R. 1888; 16 P. R. 1830. III (b) to s. 180 has no application to such a case 18 C. W. N. 1178 = 15 Cr. L. J. 537. It must, however, be noted that a foreigner may while residing in British India initiate acts which may take effect outside British India and the foreigner will be amenable to the jurisdiction of the local Courts if the acts committed by him amount to an offence, See ss 125 and 126, 1 P. C. See also 20 C. W. N. 62 = 17 Cr. L. J. 123 = 33 In. Ca. 301; 8 C. 933 and 18 C. W. N. 1178 = 15 Cr. L. J. 537.

(b) British Indian Courts have jurisdiction over such offences when committed—(1) By Native Indian subjects wherever the offence may have been committed (2) By British subjects and servants of the King within the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India.—See ss. 3 and 4, 1 P. C., and the definition of an 'offence,' s 40, 1 P. C. Having regard to the provisions of s 5 it seems to be clear that the Code is applicable to all such offences. Then the question arises as to which local Courts have jurisdiction to try such offences and the relation of s 188 to ss. 177 to 184 has to be considered.

(c) Is the venue of such offences governed by ss 177 to 184 or is it dealt with by s. 188 exclusively?—In a large number of cases it has been held that ss. 177 to 184 are applicable only to local areas in British India; and they have no application when the offence is committed outside British India. See 10 Bom. H. C. 356; 1 M. 171; 8 M. 23; 16 C. 667; 7 E. L. R. 17 = 14 Cr. L. J. 439. Therefore it held that all offences committed outside British India would fall within the provisions of s. 188 and the provision to that section governs the trial of all such offences. Sections 177 to 184 must be read subject to the provisions of s. 188. Where an offence has been committed outside British India a Magistrate of British India cannot take cognizance without certificate of the Political Agent or the sanction of the Local Government. A British Indian Court cannot take cognizance of the offence of criminal breach of trust committed in foreign territory merely because part of the property was retained in British India, 5 B. L. R. 266 = 13 Cr. L. J. 530. Offence of kidnapping when complete outside British India cannot be tried in British India merely because the minor is within the local limits, 1 P. R. 1901. S. 181 (4) has no application. That section implies that the offence has been committed in British India and refers to Courts of different local areas whose jurisdictions have been created by the Code. When, therefore, a minor was taken away from the custody of her husband in a Native State, detained there for some time and then removed to British India, held the British Court had no jurisdiction over the offence of kidnapping completed outside British India, 7 B. L. R. 17 = 15 Cr. L. J. 439. See also 21 M. L. J. 441 = 1910 M. W. N. 143 = 8 M. L. T. 54 = 11 Cr. L. J. 306. In favour of this view it may also be urged that the special provision made by s. 188 should not be qualified by the general provisions in ss. 177 to 184.

SADASIVAIER, J., however, in 38 M. 779, held dissenting from 5 B. L. R. 266; 21 M. L. J. 441 and Madras Cr. M. P. No. 97 of 1911 that s. 188 must be read as auxiliary to ss. 177 to 184. 'I should rather think that s. 188 which follows ss. 179 to 184 was intended rather to draw into the net of the jurisdiction of the British Indian Courts cases which notwithstanding the full use of ss. 179 to 184 could not be brought within the jurisdiction of any British Indian Court, than to restrict by its first proviso the extended jurisdictional privileges conferred by ss. 178 to 184 on Courts, which, according to the ordinary rule of s. 177, would not have had jurisdiction. See also 14 Bom. L. R. 147 = 13 Cr. L. J. 426. It is submitted that having regard to the language of ss. 179 to 184 and the possible danger of a Native Indian subject being tried twice over for the same offence by a Non-British Court and a British Court, which it was the intention of s. 188 and proviso thereto to avoid, that the above decision is wrong.' See Note 6 to s. 188.

4. Jurisdiction in respect of offences on the High Seas.—See s. 188 does not apply to offences on the High Seas, 4 Bur. L. T. 53 = 5 L. B. R. 221 = 12 Cr. L. J. 198 (F.B.). By virtue of the Statute 12 and 13 Vict., c. 90 ss. 2 and 3, extended jurisdiction over offences committed within the limits of the ordinary jurisdiction of such Court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine such case as if the said crime or offence had been committed as last aforesaid. Thus it will be seen that even with regard to offences committed at a distance of more than three miles from the shores of British India, the British Indian Courts have jurisdiction over British subjects and the procedure applicable is also the same, 14 B. 227. It may reasonably be argued that by the Statute 12 and 13 Vict., c. 96 and 23 and 24 Vict., c. 88, it was intended to apply the Indian Law of procedure including the law of evidence to cases of offences by Native Indian subjects while it was intended by 37 and 38 Vict., c. 27, to apply the substantive law of penalties in force in India. Per TWENTY, J., at 5 L. B. R. 221 = 4 Bur. L. T. 53 = 12 Cr. L. J. 198. For other cases, see Note 5 to s. 188.

5. Subsequent transfer of territory where offence was committed to a Native State does not affect jurisdiction of British Courts.—Subsequent to the commission of an offence, the place where the offence had been committed was transferred to the independent Native State of Benares. The offender who was a British subject and never ceased to be so was apprehended long after the transfer, and committed to the same Sessions Court which would have tried the case had the territory not been transferred. Held, that the Sessions Court had jurisdiction to try the offender, 34 A. 451. Transfer of territory does not take away the jurisdiction of an Appellate Court to dispose of the appeal then pending in it in respect of offences committed within the transferred territory, 33 A. 578.

6. Sections 177 to 189 deal with the place of inquiry or trial of 'offences' only.—For definition of offence, see s. 4 (O). All these sections from 177 to 189 deal with the place of inquiry and trial of an 'offence'. These sections have therefore no applications to (a) inquiries under Chapters VIII, X or XII. These are specially provided for, see 3 C. W. N. 143, where it was held that s. 182 did not apply to a proceeding under s. 145.

12 A. L. J. 390 = 15 Cr. L. J. 520, where it was held that s. 185 had no application to a proceeding under s. 145 (b) Nor to maintenance proceedings under s. 488 3 P. R. 1893; 13 P. R. 1885. See s. 488 (9) for the special provision made for such proceedings.

7. Provisions of this Chapter apply to Investigation by Police.—See s. 156

A—Place of Inquiry or Trial

Ordinary place of inquiry and trial. 177. Every offence shall ordinarily be inquired into and tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it was committed

Notes.—1 Exceptions to the General Rule.—The rule given in the section is a general one. Exceptions to it may be found in various Acts which make special provisions for place of trial of offences created by those Acts. S. 1 gives these special provisions and limits the application of the general provision enunciated in this section e.g. see ss. 47 and 48 of Act V of 1897 (Native Passengers Ships) and ss. 44 and 48 of Act XIV of 1887 (Indian Marine), s. 134 of Act I of 1860 (Railways), s. 52 of Act XIV of 1887 (Pilgrim Ships).

(a) By s. 60 of the Indian Ports Act V of 1889, any person offending against the provisions of that Act in any port subject to that Act is liable to be punished by any Magistrate having jurisdiction over any district or place adjoining the port and such Magistrate may exercise all the powers of a Magistrate under that Act in the same manner and to the same extent as if the offence had been committed locally within his jurisdiction.

(b) Place of trial for offences under the Stamp Act.—Every offence under the Indian Stamp Act committed in respect of any instrument may be tried in any district or Presidency town in which such instrument is found as well as in any district or Presidency town in which such offence might be tried under the Code of Criminal Procedure for the time being in force.—S. 72 Indian Stamp Act II of 1899

(c) Place of trial in case of offences under the Breach of Contract Act 1859—Where the contract and its breach take place in a foreign territory British Indian Courts have no jurisdiction to arrest the accused on a warrant in such territory, and try the offender under Act XIII of 1859 though the work is to be done in British India, 7 M. 356. See Notes under Appendix VII

(d) Offences under the Assam Labour and Emigration Act VI of 1901—A recruiter who induces a person at Cawnpore to go to Fiji but on the way takes him to a cooly depot at Arrah and induces him to proceed to Sylhet in contravention of the Assam Labour and Emigration Act VI of 1901 commits no offence under s. 184 of that Act at Cawnpore but only at Arrah and a Magistrate of the latter place has jurisdiction to try such offence 37 C. 27

2 Conflict of jurisdiction in the case of military offenders.—S. 101 of the Mutiny Act is merely permissive of a military trial but does not deprive Criminal Courts of jurisdiction over British soldiers committing offences within the territorial limits of such Courts, nor does it render the exercise of their jurisdiction dependent upon the sanction of the Commander-in-Chief 5 G. 124 = 4 G. L. R. 432. Therefore when the civil authorities have taken up the investigation of the offence and the military have not availed themselves of the alternative procedure of trying the offenders by a General Court-martial the Magistrate is competent to proceed under this Code. S. 549 provides for delivery to military authorities of persons liable to be tried by Court-martial

3 Venue where accused charged with several offences.—Where a Magistrate has jurisdiction to inquire into or try one offence and has no jurisdiction over another offence committed in the course of the same transaction, the two offences should be inquired into or tried by a Magistrate having jurisdiction in respect of both the offences and not by different Courts. Welz II, 144.

4 Procedure in cases of doubt.—Whenever any doubt arises as to the Court by which any offence should be inquired into or tried the High Court within the local limits of whose appellate criminal jurisdiction the offender actually is may decide by which Court the offence shall be inquired into or tried. See s. 185 and Notes thereunder of inquiry, that the case can be more conveniently tried in another district. In the event of the latter contingency, he should suspend further proceedings and place himself in communication with the Magistrate of such other district, recommending that the case be removed to that district. If the Magistrate of that district should concur, but not otherwise, the proceedings and the accused should be forwarded to such other Magistrate, and the prosecutor directed to attend and prosecute his complaint. If the other Magistrate should differ from him in his opinion as to the district in which the investigation and trial can be most conveniently held, the first Magistrate should either proceed with the inquiry and trial, or refer the question of venue for the determination of the High Court.—Punjab Cr. Vol. II, pp 123-124

5. Jurisdiction as to contempt of High Court.—The provisions of s 5, relating to the procedure under which "all offences under any other law" are punished do not include a contempt of the High Court committed by the publication of a libel out of Court when the Court is not sitting, although such contempt may include defamation—such a contempt being more than mere defamation and of a different character, 10 C. 109 (P.C.) The jurisdiction of the High Court as a superior Court, of record, to commit for contempt has not been affected by this Code

6. Effect of trial at an unauthorized place.—(a) Outside British India A District Magistrate cannot legally dispose of a criminal case at a place not in British India, though the offence was committed within his jurisdiction, Ratanlal 376. But having regard to s. 12 (2), the jurisdiction of and powers, a Sub-divisional Magistrate extends throughout the district unless specially restricted by the terms of his appointment, 29 C. 389

(b) In a different local area—S 531 declares that venue is not a matter of jurisdiction when the question whether a trial or inquiry ought to have been held in some other local area in British India, than that in which it was held, 44 P. R. 1885, approved in 2 P. R. 1902. Ss 177, 179, 180, 181 and 183 must be read together with s 531. The intention of s. 531 is to provide against the contingency of a finding, sentence or order regularly passed by a Court in the case of an offence committed outside its local area being set aside when no failure of justice has taken place, 30 M. 94, 32 A. 397.

7. Commitment to a wrong Sessions Court.—If an order of commitment, contrary to the requirements of this section directs the commitment to be made to a Court of Session which has no territorial jurisdiction, it is not to be set aside unless it "appears that the error" has occasioned a failure of justice, 8 B. 312; 2 Bom. L. R. 394, 18 A. 350. But the Madras High Court applying the principle laid down in 9 A. 191 (P.C.) held that where a commitment is made to a wrong Sessions Court, the High Court can only set it aside and cannot uphold it and transfer the case to the right Sessions Court, 36 M. 387.

8. Effect of inquiry and commitment by a wrong Magistrate—Where a Magistrate empowered to commit, enquires into an offence committed in a place over which he has no territorial jurisdiction and commits the case to the Sessions Court for trial, the order of commitment is valid unless such error has in fact occasioned a failure of justice, 8 B. 312; 16 B. 200; 17 M. 402. A committal by a Magistrate who has authority to commit but has not territorial jurisdiction in the place where the offence is committed is valid, unless it appears that failure of justice has in fact been occasioned by such committal 26 M. 640; 36 M. 387. See 42 Mad. 791.

9. Section subject to power of High Court to transfer.—The provisions of this section are controlled by the power of the High Court under s 526 to transfer cases. See 42 Mad. 791.

10. Rules and procedure where Magistrates are of opinion that a transfer is necessary.—The following rules have been made by the Chief Court of Punjab concerning the place of inquiry and trial. See Punjab Cr. Vol. II, p 226

Transfer of criminal cases—There is reason to believe that Magistrates on their own authority not unfrequently transfer for trial to other districts cases in which the accused person, under the provisions of ss. 178—183 of the Cr P. C., may be tried either in the district in which he has been arrested or in some other district. The practice is objectionable and should cease. A Magistrate should act under these sections solely with reference to the public convenience. Ordinarily, the proper district for the inquiry and trial of offences falling under those sections would be the district in which the witnesses could, with the least inconvenience, attend.

Transfer of cases how to be effected.—If the Magistrate be of opinion that the inquiry or trial can be more conveniently held in another district, he should at once address the Magistrate of that district. If the Magistrate of that district concur, the case will be transferred. If he dissent the first Magistrate should either proceed with the inquiry or the question may be referred to the Chief Court and the Court, under the provisions of s. 185 will decide in which district the inquiry or trial shall be held.

Application to be made through District Magistrate.—If the transfer is proposed by a Subordinate Magistrate the application should be submitted through the District Magistrate who will if he considers the transfer desirable forward it with his own recommendation to the Magistrate of the district in which he thinks the case should be tried.

Short statement of case to accompany application.—An application for the transfer or withdrawal of a criminal case should always be accompanied by a short statement of the case and of the reasons for making the application.

11 Case under Indian Copyright Act, 1914.—Where a printing of a book for sale took place at L, only the Court at L has jurisdiction under this section to try an offence under s. 7 of Copyright Act of 1914 25 P. R. 1916 (Cr).

Power to order cases to be tried in different Sessions divisions.

178 Notwithstanding anything contained in section 177, the Local Government may direct that any cases or class of cases committed for trial in any district may be tried in any Sessions division.

Provided that such direction is not repugnant to any direction previously issued by the High Court under section 15 of the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, or under this Code, section 526.

Notes.—S 526 deals with power of the High Court to transfer a case to a Subordinate Court or to itself.

1. Cases and Criminal Cases.—Act XI of 1874 introduced a distinction between 'Cases' and 'Criminal Cases' and this distinction is continued and extended to this section and ss. 192, 528 and 558 on the one hand where the wording is 'Case' and ss. 526 and 527 on the other, where the wording is 'Criminal Case'. These terms are not used indiscriminately or interchangeably, 23 C. 709. See, however, Notes to s. 526.

2. Local Governments (Burma) power to transfer cases.—The Local Government has no power under s. 178 to transfer for trial to the Court of a Commissioner a criminal case duly committed for trial to the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon but such Government has power to transfer a case from the District of Rangoon to the Sessions Division of Pegu 10 C. 863. See now the Lower Burma Courts Act VI of 1900.

3. High Court's Act, 1931, is the 24 and 25 Vict. c. 104 an Act of the British Parliament for establishing High Courts of Judicature in India. See s. 15 of the Act printed at p. i of the Appendix.

179. When a person is accused of the commission of any offence by reason of anything which has been done and of any consequence which has ensued such offence may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any such thing has been done or any such consequence has ensued.

Accused triable in district where act is done or where consequence ensues.

Illustrations

(a) A is wounded within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court X and dies within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Y. The offence of the culpable homicide of A may be inquired into or tried by X or Y.

(b) A is wounded within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court X and is during ten days within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Y, and during ten days more within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Z, unable in the local limits of the jurisdiction of either Court Y or Court Z to follow his ordinary pursuits. The offence of causing grievous hurt to A may be inquired into or tried by X, Y or Z.

(c) A is put in fear of injury within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court X and is thereby induced within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Y, to deliver property to the person who put him in fear. The offence of extortion committed on A may be inquired into or tried either by X or Y.

(d) A is wounded in the Native State of Paroda and dies of his wounds in Poona. The offence of causing A's death may be inquired into and tried in Poona.

Notes.—1. When the offence is complete where it has been initiated, this section has no application. Where the complainant was assaulted and the injury, viz., fracture of the leg was complete in the Baroda Territory and subsequently the complainant was in hospital for over a month in British India held the accused could not be tried for the grievous hurt in British India as no ingredient of the offence had occurred in British India, 8 Bom. L. R. 513 = 4 Cr. L. J. 54. An offence under s 477 A is complete where the accounts are falsified and the offence cannot be tried at any other place, 4 M. L. T. 481 = 9 Cr. L. J. 82. The offence of criminal breach of trust is completed by the misappropriation or conversion of the property dishonestly and must be tried at the place where the misappropriation or conversion took place, 38 M. 639. See, however Note 7 to s 180 and also 1 P. R. 1901 = 121 P. L. R. 1901

2 Must the consequence be a part and parcel of the offence?—By reason of any consequence which has ensued There is a difference of opinion as to the exact scope of these words. In 7 P. R. 1910 = 7 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 253, 5 A. L. J. 333 = 7 Cr. L. J. 394, 34 A. 487, 38 M. 639; 29 M. L. J. 178 = 15 Cr. L. J. 491 it is laid down that the consequence means a consequence which forms a part and parcel of the offence and does not mean a consequence which is not such a direct result of the act of the offender as to form any part of that offence so that a loss resulting from a criminal breach of trust is no part of the offence. The consequence referred to must be one of the facts to be proved to establish the offence. It must form an integral part of the offence but not be a consequence arising from it, 5 L. B. R. 57 = 10 Cr. L. J. 86, 12 P. R. 1902; 24 P. R. 1901, 19 A. 111, 32 A. 397; 35 A. 29, 38 M. 779, a wider construction has been adopted, consequence being taken to include the direct effect of the offence, loss resulting to an employer by criminal breach of trust, failure to account for moneys misappropriated at the head office of a firm. The section applies not only to cases in which the offence is completed by reason of a consequence ensuing within the local limits of another jurisdiction (as e.g. the case of a man being wounded in one district and dying in another), but also to cases in which the fact of a consequence ensuing in another jurisdiction is the cause of the offender being accused of the offence, 18 P. W. R. 1908 = 8 Cr. L. J. 78. See Note 6. In 29 M. L. J. 178 = 16 Cr. L. J. 491, it was doubted whether s 179 applied to offences of criminal breach of trust, when there was a special provision, s 181 dealing with them. See also 19 A. L. J. 69 where the duty of servant to account to his master at a particular place was held to give jurisdiction to a Court of that place. See 46 Bom. 471.

3. The act or omission must form a part of the offence.—By reason of anything which has been done This would also include illegal omissions, see s 4 (2). The act must be one constituting the offence or part of it and the consequences referred to should be such as modify or complete the act, 6 Agra 36 and 46; 4 O. C. 376. The section does not therefore apply to an offence which consists of an illegal act or illegal omission alone, and to complete which no consequence is necessary, e.g., the offence of buying or obtaining possession of a minor for the purpose of prostitution is complete where the act of buying or obtaining possession takes place. Where, therefore a person obtained possession of a minor for such purpose in a Native State and merely brought the girl into British India, it was held, that the British Magistrate had no jurisdiction to commit him to the Court of Session, 1 Leg. Rem. at P. 1. See also 6 Agra 46 and 135; 3 A. 251, 1 P. R. 1901, 1 B. 60.

4 Scope of Illustrations.—The illustrations are not exhaustive and to hold that all the consequences prescribed by the Legislature in framing the section as conferring jurisdiction are ejusdem generis with the consequences specified in the illustration is not justified by the language of the section, 18 P. W. R. 1908 = 8 Cr. L. J. 78; 7 P. R. 1900, but see 19 A. 111

5. Is s 179 subject to section 188?—In 38 M. 779, it was laid down that s. 179 cannot be read subject to s 188. If, therefore, a Native Indian subject commits an offence which falls within the scope of s 179 the British Court within whose jurisdiction the consequence arises, may try the offender and no certificate is necessary as required by the proviso to s 188. See Note 3 at page 393 and Note 6 to s 188

6. Section applies to foreigners and to offences part of the essential elements of which takes place outside British India.—This section must now be read with s 188. Illustration (d) which is new, renders no longer necessary the assumption that the offence has been committed within the local limits created by the Code. But it is necessary that the accused should be in British India. A foreigner in foreign territory who initiates an offence which is completed within British territory, is if found within British territory liable to be tried by the British Court within whose jurisdiction the offence was completed. Where, therefore, the accused who was a subject of the Cambay State conspired with one A and sent A to a professional forger B residing in British territory, with instructions to instigate B to forge a valuable security, and B committed the forgery in pursuance of the conspiracy, and was charged before the Additional British Court of Ahmedabad with the offence of abetment of forgery, and an objection was raised that he was not amenable to the jurisdiction of that Court, held, that the accused was triable by the British

Court when found within its jurisdiction, as the offence of abetment was (by conspiracy) completed only in British India, where the consequent act, namely, the forgery of the document, was done, 14 Bom. L. R. 147 — 13 Cr. L. J. 425. But where the instigation of the crime has been wholly committed within the foreign territory, the instigator, a foreigner, can not be tried in British India 10 Bom. H. C. R. 335

In R v Munton (1793) 1 Esp. 80, the defendant who was the principal storekeeper at Antiqua bought certain stores in England at a nominal price agreed between him and the sellers and then charged to Government his full nominal price misappropriating the deductions allowed to him by collusion with the sellers. Held, he could be tried in England where the false returns were received and where the fraud had been complete by their having been there allowed. In R v Oliphant (1905) 2 K. B. 5, the accused being employed in Paris by a London firm to manage their Paris branch fraudulently misappropriated certain sums, having omitted to enter them in certain slips which it was his duty to transmit to London in order that the amount might be incorporated in the London cash book, held, he was triable in London where his false slips had been received. See also A v De Marney (1907) 1 K. B. 333, where the accused, the editor of a newspaper, was convicted in London of the offence of causing and procuring obscene books to be sold by advertisements inserted in his paper which related to sale of obscene books by foreigners. In A v Stoddart (1909) 23 T. L. R. 612, the indictment was a charge of obtaining money by false pretences with reference to a coupon competition. Postal money orders and letters containing money were in consequence of the advertisement of the competition, posted in London to the accused in Holland. It was contended that the obtaining of the money was in Holland and the London Central Criminal Court had no jurisdiction but the contention was overruled on the ground that the offence was complete on the posting of the letters in London. The trend of the decisions in England and the United States is to the effect that a person who when abroad, is concerned in directing a crime, may be punished for the same if arrested or found where the crime was committed although he was at the time of commission and concoction out of the latter's jurisdiction. See Russell on Crimes, Vol. I, pp 52—57, Archbold, p 33. Where a person caused a letter to be posted in Calcutta to his agent at Gorakhpore, inciting him to the commission of an offence at Gorakhpore, it was held he was guilty of the offence of abetment as soon as the letter was received by the agent at Gorakhpore and that he might be tried at Gorakhpore, 16 A. 339. See Note 3 to s 180

7. Offences of criminal breach of trust and criminal misappropriation.—See Note 7 to s. 181 See also 44 C. 912

8. Offence of defamation.—In a charge of defamation it appeared that the defamatory matter complained of was contained in a petition signed by the accused and addressed to the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab, which the accused stated he placed in the Lieutenant Governor's petition box at Lahore. The petition asked the Lieutenant-Governor to have an inquiry into the truth of the charge contained in it, made from the native gentlemen of Amritsar and also from two persons who carried on business there and in consequence of this request the libel was sent to Amritsar and published there. Held (SPITTA, J., dissenting), that the Amritsar Courts had jurisdiction to try the case, as when the complainant could show that the publication at Amritsar took place at the request of the accused he was at liberty to reply on the publication at that place as being that which completed the offence, and if that publication be regarded as a consequence naturally arising from the accused's acts, it was also a consequence by the reason of which he was charged with the offence of defamation within the meaning of this section 45 P. R. 1335; 14 P. R. 1839. Where a libel is sent from one Court to another the venue may be laid in either country, R v Burdett, 4 B. and Ald 95, R v Ellis, (1899) 1 B. 230; R v Watson, 1 Camp. 215. See also remarks of West, J., in 5 B. 333 at p 363 as to the effect of sending a libel by post which is published abroad. Cf 17 W. R. 15 where it was stated that, it is considered settled law that an indictment for sending a threatening letter may be tried either in the county in which the offender sent the letter or in the county where the prosecutor received the letter. "When a crime of libel is committed by publication in any paper in the State against a person residing in the State, the jurisdiction is in either the county where the paper is published, or in the county where the party libelled resides. But the defendant may have the place of trial changed to the county where the libel is printed, on executing a bond to the complainant in the penal sum of not more than 250 dollars nor less than 100 dollars, conditioned, in case the defendant is convicted for the payment of the complainant's reasonable and necessary travelling expenses in going to and from his place of residence and the place of trial, and his necessary expenses in attendance thereon, which bond must be signed by two sufficient sureties to be approved of by a Judge of a Court of Record exercising criminal jurisdiction." N Y Cr Pro Code, s 138 See 44 W. L. J. 648

9. Offence of Cheating—ss. 417—420, I. P. C.—(i) May be tried at the place where the accused was bound to account—Where it is proved that the accused, the complainant's agent at Shalimar (outside the Presidency town of Calcutta), received money from complainant's firm at Calcutta and rendered false accounts to them at Calcutta, Held, that the Presidency Magistrate had jurisdiction to take cognizance of complaint of the offence of cheating under ss. 417, 418 and 420, and of using a forged document under s. 471, I. P. C., 25 C. 746; 2 P. R. 1302. In 1908 A. W. N. 115 = 5 A. L. J. 333 = 7 Cr. L. J. 394, however, it was held, that the words embrace only such consequences as modify or complete the act alleged to be an offence, therefore, where G at Aligarh purchases certain hundies at Halhras and sent them to the accused at Calcutta for realization and the accused was charged with the offence of cheating for having realized the hundies after becoming insolvent. Held, that the Court at Aligarh had no jurisdiction to try the offence which should be tried at Calcutta. See also 5 L. B. R. 57 = 10 Cr. L. J. 86 and 13 A. L. J. 1067. (ii) *May be tried at the place where the head office of the firm cheated is and where the loss ensued—*At the instance of G, of Lahore, A sent goods from Karachi under false description A was brought from Karachi to Lahore to stand his trial there with G for offences under the Indian Railways Act, 1890, and for cheating and abetment thereof. Held, that as regards the offence of cheating this section conferred on the Courts at Lahore jurisdiction by reason of the loss in freight being caused to the Railway Administration at Lahore, where its headquarters were, 7 P. R. 1900. Where D residing at Lahore was charged with an offence under s. 420, I. P. C., for having recovered money from a Bank at Bombay on a forged draft of the Amritsar Branch of the P. N. Bank at Lahore and was also charged under ss. 420 and 109 I. P. C., for having abetted I, residing at Amritsar, in recovering money on a similar draft from the Multan Branch of the P. N. Bank. Held that under this section the Lahore Court had jurisdiction inasmuch as the consequence, namely, loss to the Bank, whose drafts were forged contemplated in his section, ensued at Lahore where the Head Office of P. N. Bank was situate. The loss occurred at the place where the accounts of the Bank are made up and its business as a Company is situate 18 P. W. R. 1908 = 8 Cr. L. J. 75; 24 P. R. 1901 at p. 17; 26 C. 746. Where the accused at M induced certain persons to part with money on certain representations which were subsequently discovered at A to be fraudulent, held the offence of cheating was complete at M and the discovery of the fraud at A was not a consequence 13 A. L. J. 1067 = 16 Cr. L. J. 328. The complainant at M ordered and received goods from a firm at C which were found to be not in accordance with the order but the complainant had already sent in advance the money by post held the offence of cheating was committed if at all at M, 12 A. L. J. 1022 = 15 Cr. L. J. 719; 17 Bom. L. R. 389 = 8 Bom. Cr. Ca. 52 = 16 Cr. L. J. 433. See Note 2 and s. 18.

10. Criminal conspiracy.—See s. 120-A of the I. P. C. added by the amending Act VIII of 1913 "Conspiracy may be tried in the place where the conspirators agreed to do the wrongful act which is the object of the conspiracy, but as the place of agreement is often unknown conspiracy is generally a matter of inference deduced from the criminal acts of the accused persons which are done in pursuance of a common criminal purpose and are often not confined to one place, a charge of conspiracy may consequently be laid in any county where one of these criminal acts is committed, although no act may have been done by some of the accused in that county, yet if all the accused had a common criminal purpose and jointly co-operated in forwarding in different counties, the venue may be laid in any county in which overt acts are done by some one of them in prosecution of the conspiracy"—Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. IX, p. 283.

Conspiracies.—In indictments of conspiracies, the venue may be laid in any county in which it can be proved that an act was done by anyone of the offenders in furtherance of their common design, Rex v. Brisse (1803) 4 East 164 = 7 R. R. 557. This was a case of fabricating false vouchers on board a man-of-war and it was held that the offence was triable in Middlesex where some of the false vouchers transmitted by one of the conspirators had been received, citing R. v. Beates, 1 Term Rep. 696 = 1 R. R. 363, as an authority for the principle that "the conspiracy as against all having been proved from the community of criminal purpose, and by their joint co-operation in forwarding the objects of it, in different places and counties, the locality required for the purpose of the trial was holden to be satisfied by an overt act done by some of them in prosecution of the conspiracy in the county where the trial was held". In the case of conspiracies, s. 34, I. P. C., provides not only for liability to punishment but also for the subjection to British jurisdiction of a conspirator who resides in foreign territory, 14 Bom. L. R. 157 = 13 Cr. L. J. 426. See also R. v. Burdett, 4 B. and Ald. 95. In the above Bombay case it was held citing R. v. Oliphant, (1805) 2 K. B. 67 and R. v. Rogers, (1877) 3 Q. B. D. 23, that even where the instigation is committed by a person in a foreign territory of an offence in British India through human agency, the instigator may be tried in British India. The above English cases only lay down that there is no difference between sending information by post (or telephone) and giving the same information by direct personal communication. It is a matter of some doubt where an intelligent active agent is interposed between the foreigner initiating the crime and its commission in England, whether the Courts of the place when the offence was committed have jurisdiction over the foreigner, Badische Anilin und Soda's Fabrik v. Basse Criminal Works, (1898) A. C. 200. A, a member of a conspiracy sent money by post from Calcutta to other conspirators at Patna who also did acts at Patna in furtherance of the conspiracy, Hell A could be tried at Patna, 47 W. R. 15 = 9 B. L. R. 36.

But it should be observed that if a conspiracy is entered into in district A and acts are committed in pursuance of the conspiracy in district B, the Magistrate of district A can try the offence of conspiracy, but cannot try the accused in the same trial for offences committed outside his district.

S 239 of the Code cannot give jurisdiction to a Magistrate who has no jurisdiction to try the offence under the provisions of Chapter XV of the Code, 28 G. W. N. 975.

11. Falsification of accounts—S. 477-A, I. P. C.—A person accused of an offence under s. 477 A, I. P. C., falsification of accounts, made in one place cannot be tried in another place by reason of any consequence which has ensued, as the offence is complete under s. 477 A, I. P. C., where the accounts are falsified with intent to defraud. The venue of an offence under s. 409, I. P. C., is now governed by 181 (2) 4 M. L. T. 431 = 9 Cr. L. J. 92.

12. Bigamy—In England, the offence of Bigamy may be tried in any county or place where the offender is apprehended or is in custody, 24 and 25 Vict., c. 100, s. 57. The same rule applies to Forgery, Post office and Revenue offences.

180. Where an act is an offence by reason of its relation to any other act which is also an offence or which would be an offence, if the doer were capable of committing an offence a charge of the first mentioned offence may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction either act was done

(a) A charge of abetment may be inquired into or tried either by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the abetment was committed, or by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offence abetted was committed.

(b) A charge of receiving or retaining stolen goods may be inquired into or tried either by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the goods were stolen, or by any Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any of them were at any time dishonestly received or retained.

(c) A charge of wrongfully concealing a person known to have been kidnapped may be inquired into or tried by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the wrongful concealing, or by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the kidnapping took place.

Notes—1 S. 180 must be construed subject to s. 152.—The general provisions of this section are controlled by s. 188. See 26 M. L. J. 511 = 1910 M. W. N. 143 = 8 M. L. T. 54 = 11 Cr. L. J. 306. This case was doubted in 38 M. 779. See Note 6 at p. 411.

2. Place of trial for abetment by letter sent through post—Where one person instigates another to the commission of an offence by means of a letter sent through the post, the offence of abetment by instigation is completed so soon as the contents of such letter become known to the addressee, and such offence is triable at the place where such letter is received 18 A. 339. For the purpose of giving jurisdiction, a letter speaks continuously from the moment of its being posted until its receipt of the addressee R v. Rogers (1877) 3 Q. B. D. 23. See 14 Bom. L. R. 147 = 13 Cr. L. J. 426. Note 8 to s. 179 and also 8 B. 312 and 15 A. 350.

3. Where abetment and offence are in different territories—

(a) Abetment in British India of an offence committed in foreign territory—The accused, a Native Indian subject of Her Majesty abetted the commission of murder, or of rioting under ss. 302 and 147, I. P. C. The alleged abetment consisted of words spoken in British territory by the accused, inciting certain Portuguese subjects to kill one Bhama if he attempted to remove the produce of certain lands situate in the Portuguese territory of Damaun. A disturbance afterwards occurred at Damaun in connection with this matter, in which one man was killed and another wounded. Held, that s. 168 had no application to the present case, the alleged offence of abetment not having been committed outside British India, 19 B. 105. See also 5 B. 338 and 7 Bom. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 89.

This difficulty is now removed by the addition of s. 108 A to the Indian Penal Code which is as follows—

"S 108-A A person abets an offence in British India within the meaning of this Code, who in British India abets the commission of any act without and beyond British India, which would constitute an offence if committed in British India."

Illustrations

"A in British India instigates B, a foreigner in Goa, to commit a murder in Goa. A is guilty of abetting murder."

(b) Abetment in foreign territory of offence committed in British India—A subject of a Native State who by acts done in that State and not in British territory, abets the commission of an offence in British territory is not liable to be tried in British India, 20 P. R. 1878, but if he is a Native Indian subject, he may be tried in British India if a certificate is obtained. Madras C. M. P. N. 97 of 1911, but see Note 6 to s. 178.

Where a foreign subject, resident in foreign territory, instigated the commission of an offence which in consequence was committed in British territory, held, that the instigation not having taken place in any district created by this Code, the instigator was not amenable to the jurisdiction of a British Court established under the Code, 10 B. H. C. R. 356, 20 P. R. 1878; 35 P. R. 1880. Now, see however, the new illustration (d) to s. 178.

4. Venue for the trial of the offence of receiving stolen property—ss. 411, 412, I. P. C., if theft in one territory and receiving in another.—(i) Theft in British India, possession of stolen property in Foreign State by British Indian subject—Where a Native Indian British subject was found in a Native State in possession of property alleged to have been stolen at a dacoity in British India, held, he could under s. 180 be tried in British India for an offence under s. 412, I. P. C., but a certificate of the Political Agent under s. 188 would be necessary, 21 M. L. J. 441 = 1910 M. W. N. 143 = 8 M. L. T. 58 = 11 Cr. L. J. 308.

(ii) Theft in British territory, possession of stolen property in Foreign State by non-British subject—Certain Non-British subjects were found in a Native State in possession of stolen property, the subject of a dacoity committed in British India. It was not proved that they had taken any part in the dacoity, or received stolen property in British India, held, that they could not be convicted of offence under s. 412, I. P. C., as no offence was committed within the jurisdiction of a British Court, 9 A. 323. A foreigner residing in foreign territory if arrested therein is not triable by a British Indian Court for the offence of being in possession of stolen property in such territory as the Magistrate has no jurisdiction 22 P. R. 1898; 16 P. R. 1880; 4 Bom. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 38. The operation of the Code cannot be extended beyond British territory, so as to give jurisdiction to a British Court to try a person residing outside British India for the offence of retaining stolen property outside British India, though the properties may have been stolen in British India. Illustration (b) of this section has no application to such a case, 18 C. W. N. 1178 = 13 Cr. L. J. 537.

(iii) Theft in Foreign State, retention of stolen property in British India—Where the offence of theft or dacoity takes place in a Foreign State, a conviction under s. 411, I. P. C., may be sustained if the stolen property is brought or retained in British India. See s. 410, I. P. C., as amended by Act VIII of 1882, 1 B. 50 and 6 C. 307 = 7 C. L. R. 411. The opinion of the majority in 5 B. 333 is no longer law. If the person who commits theft or dacoity outside British India brings the proceeds of the offence into British India, he may be convicted of the offence of retaining stolen property under s. 411, I. P. C., though he cannot be tried in British India for the offence of theft or dacoity which was completed outside British territory, 10 B. 186; 28 A. 372. See also 1 M. 171, 4 Bom. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 38 and Weir II, 143, where conviction of the offence of mischief in respect of an animal stolen in foreign territory was upheld.

5. Venue in English law for the offence of receiving goods stolen abroad—The Larceny Act 1896 (59 and 60 Vict., c. 52), s. 1, sub-sec. (1) enacts that "if any person without lawful excuse, receives or has in possession any property stolen outside the United Kingdom knowing such property to have been stolen he may be indicted in any county or place in which he has, or has had, the property."

181. (1) The offence of being a thug, of being a thug and committing murder, of dacoity, of dacoity with murder, of having belonged to a gang of dacoits or of having escaped from custody, may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person charged is

Being a thug or belonging to a gang of dacoits, escape from custody, etc.

(2) The offence of criminal misappropriation or of criminal breach of trust may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any part of the property which is the subject of the offence was received or retained by the accused person or the offence was committed

Criminal misappropriation and criminal breach of trust

* (3) The offence of theft or any offence which includes theft or the possession of stolen property, may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such offence was committed or the property stolen was possessed by the thief or by any person who received or retained the same knowing or having reason to believe it to be stolen

Theft

(4) The offence of kidnapping or abduction may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person kidnapped or abducted was kidnapped or abducted or was conveyed or concealed or detained

Kidnapping and abduction

Note.—With regard to this section the Select Committee say we accept the clauses but would enlarge the enumeration of offences to include the possession of stolen property. This will also cover the case of extortion. See the definition in s. 410 I P C.

The only important change in this sub-section is the addition of or any offence which includes theft or possession of stolen property. See 24 A L J 148

Notes.—1 No jurisdiction over foreigners for offences committed in foreign State.—There is nothing in this section which contravenes the general rule of international law that no Court has jurisdiction over foreigners in respect of an offence committed in foreign State. 1 P R 1901, 20 P R 1878, 2 Bom L R 337. See also 28 A 372, 7 P R 1896, 1 P R 1901, 20 P R 1878. See Notes 2 and 3 at p 392

2 Section applies only to British Courts of different local areas. The section only applies as between Courts of different local areas where jurisdiction has been limited under s 12 and to which this section applies. It has no application to an offence committed in a Native State and of such offence the Magistrate cannot take cognizance except on the certificate of the Political Agent given under s 188. A British Indian Magistrate cannot take cognizance of a criminal breach of trust committed in a Native State merely because part of the property was retained by the accused within his jurisdiction. 5 B. L. R. 268 = 13 Cr L J 530. So also where the offence of kidnapping was completed in a Native State and the minor was brought subsequently to British India held the British Court had no jurisdiction. 14 Cr L J 439 (Sindh). 1 P R 1901

3. Escape from lawful custody in a foreign State.—British Courts have no jurisdiction.—The accused was arrested in the Mysore State by the State Police on suspicion of having committed theft in British India. While in the State lock up he effected his escape for which a Magistrate in British India tried and convicted him under s 224 I P C. Held that as the offence of escape from lawful custody was committed out of British India the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to try the accused for it. Ratanlal, 870. Even if the person in custody be afterwards declared to be innocent the offence of escape from custody will be complete provided only the custody be lawful. 24 W R. 45. See however 12 G. 190 and 5 M 22

4. No jurisdiction to try offence of theft or dacoity committed in foreign territory by foreign dacoits even if property retained by them in British territory.—Where a dacoity was committed at Velanpur in an allied territory and a part of the stolen property found where it had been concealed by the accused in British territory it was held that a conviction of dacoity could not be sustained that being a substantive offence completed as soon as perpetrated at Velanpur although, had Velanpur been in British territory, the subsequent acts in the process of taking away the property might in legal sense have coalesced with the first and principal one so as to give jurisdiction under this section in each district into which the property was conveyed. But on a conviction of retaining stolen property, the sentence awarded could it was held be sustained the retaining having taken place in British territory, 1 B 50, 6 G. 307 = 7 C. L. R. 411, 10 B 185, 28 A. 372

* Sub-section (3) was substituted for the original sub-section (2) by the Cr P. C. Amendment Act XV of 1923 s. 42

This decision is now superseded by Act VIII of 1882, which amends s 410 of the I P C by adding the words "whether the transfer has been made, or the misappropriation or breach of trust has been committed within or without British India." See also 5 B 338, 10 B. H. C. R. 356; 4 B. H. C. R. 38.

In the case reported in 1 M. 171, the accused stole property in foreign territory, and was apprehended with it in his possession in a district in British territory. It was held, that s 67, Act X of 1872, did not give the Courts of such district jurisdiction to try him for the theft. Illustration (f) to that section apparently treated a theft completed in one district as continuing in three others to which the stolen property is carried. If this is the meaning, the Magistrate would have had jurisdiction if the theft had been committed in a district within British India and consequently subject to this legislative provision. In such a case one of the Municipal Courts would have had jurisdiction and the effect of this rule of procedure would be to give it also to another. The rule, however, is applicable only to the scope of the relative jurisdictions of Courts in British India, and cannot be applied to an offence not committed within the jurisdiction of either of them. Then the general rule applies that a Court trying an offender must have jurisdiction over the place of the delict.

5. Venue for the offence of belonging to a gang of dacoits—A resident of a Native Indian State was arrested in that State and brought before a Magistrate of the G District in British India and charged with the offence of belonging to a gang of dacoits along with others who had committed certain dacoities within his jurisdiction and it was not alleged that the prisoner had participated in any dacoity or associated with dacoits in the G District and the Magistrate committed the accused to the Sessions. On its being argued that the commitment should be quashed it was held, that the Magistrate had jurisdiction over the accused as he was in G District at the time of the charge, 1 P. R. 1911 = 4 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 113.

6. Meaning of "may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person charged is."—The word 'is' does not mean 'is of his own accord'. The word 'is' after the word 'charged' gives the Magistrate jurisdiction equally whether the accused has come within the local limits of his jurisdiction of his own accord or has been brought there by force, 6 B. 622 and Punjab Cr A No 2089 of 1907 referred to, 1 P. R. 1911 = 4 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 113.

7. Criminal Breach of Trust and Criminal Misappropriation—as 403–409, I. P. C.—

(i) Is s 179 applicable?—In accordance with the ordinary rules of construction the special provision in s 181 (2) should ordinarily receive effect unqualified by the general provisions of s 179. Unless, therefore, clear reason is shown in the particular facts of the case, s 179 does not seem to be applicable. See 29 M. L. J. 178 = 18 Cr. L. J. 491.

(ii) Is loss a necessary consequence?—As to whether loss resulting from a criminal breach of trust is a necessary consequence as to attract the provisions of s 179 there is a difference of opinion. The trend of the decisions seems to be that the Courts in which the wrongful conversion takes place and the primary loss occurs must be usually resorted to and that whenever there is uncertainty as to where the property was received or the offence was committed, recourse may be had to the place where the complainant, who is entitled to the property misappropriated and where it is to be accounted for resides. See Notes 2, 3 and 9 to s 179.

(iii) Have the courts where the complainant who suffers loss occasioned by the offence resides jurisdiction by reason of the consequence loss? See Note 1 to s 179.

Madras.—The offence of criminal breach of trust is completed (assuming a preliminary trust) by the misappropriation or conversion of the property dishonestly, i.e., with the intention of causing wrongful gain or wrongful loss. It is only the intention which is essential. Whether wrongful gain or loss actually resulted is immaterial, it is a consequence, but no essential part of the offence, and a person is not accused by reason of it. The offence of criminal breach of trust by reason of dishonest use or disposal of property in violation of a contract is committed where the dishonest use or disposal takes place—not where the contract was made or should have been performed, 34 A. 487 followed 38 M. 639. In this case, a merchant at D in the Madras Presidency sent hundies to the accused at Bombay for encashment the accused was charged under s. 403 I P C, with having cashed the hundies and misappropriated the proceeds. held, that the Magistrate at D had no jurisdiction. The Court in 29 M. L. J. 178 = 18 Cr. L. J. 491, dissented from 38 M. 639 in so far as it laid down that the existence of dishonest intention not the ensuing of loss, was the essential element in the offence of criminal breach of trust. For we are unable to conceive any case in which more than mere preparation or attempt could be held established but no loss whatever, it may be only a temporary or highly insignificant one could be found to have been caused. Our conclusion is in fact that the loss ensues immediately on the conversion because by it the property of the principal entrusted to the agent, is diminished in the latter's hands. A firm at Madras employed the accused at N to sell the oil sent to him and remit the sale proceeds to Madras. The accused was charged under ss. 406 and 409, I P C., with having misappropriated the cash realized. Held that the Magistrate at Madras had no jurisdiction. The origin of the loss was immaterial as the offence charged was the misappropriation of the money and not of the oil. The primary loss occurred at N immediately the proceeds were converted. It was further contended in the last case that although the firm's loss at N may have been a primary consequence, the loss at Madras, the firm's headquarters where its funds were kept and where the firm ordinarily received the accused's accounts and remittances was a secondary loss and the Court at Madras had jurisdiction. Held however, that such a secondary loss was not contemplated by s. 179, and could not give the Madras Court jurisdiction. 34 A. 437; 35 A. 29 and 8 Bom. L. R. 513 were referred to, 29 M. L. J. 178 = 16 Cr. L. J. 431.

Both these cases dissented from 33 M. 779, where it was held that failure to account for the property misappropriated was a part of the offence, acts including illegal omissions. The facts of the case were that complainant at V in British India entrusted the accused with certain jewels for sale on commission, and he was alleged to have dishonestly converted two jewels to his own use by pledging them at B in a Native State and misappropriated a third jewel at M in British India and that it was part of the arrangement that the accused should account for the jewels or their price at V, held, that as the loss which ensued, occurred, at V, this was sufficient under s. 179 for the Magistrate at V to have jurisdiction. 19 A. 111 and 35 A. 29 were followed. See also 4 M. L. T. 431 = 9 Cr. L. J. 92.

Allahabad.—(a) When it is difficult to say where the actual offence of breach of trust was committed s. 179 may be resorted to and the offence may be tried at the place where the loss, the consequence of the breach of trust occurred.—A company at Cawnpore complained that its servant B being in charge on behalf of the Company at a place in Bengal of certain goods belonging to the Company, failed to account for them or return them to Cawnpore or pay their price. He was charged with criminal breach of trust under s. 408, I P C. Held, that the Courts at Cawnpore had jurisdiction to inquire into the charge, inasmuch as the consequence of B's acts, namely, loss to the Company, occurred in Cawnpore, 19 A. 111. Accused was an agent of a firm at M. Goods were entrusted to him for sale in various places in Bengal and from time to time he sold some of the goods and remitted money, but finally failed to account for some of the goods or money he had received for them, he was tried and convicted at M. The conviction was upheld following 19 A. 111, as it was impossible to state exactly where the act or acts of embezzlement took place, 32 A. 397. In 35 A. 29 the cases in 19 A. 111 and 32 A. 397 were followed and it was held that the loss resulting from criminal breach of trust is a consequence which completes the offence and the Court within whose jurisdiction such loss occurs may try the offence. In this case also it was difficult to state where actually the offence was committed. The complainant alleged that the accused was an agent in charge of the machine in question permitted to exhibit it at various places in India for her and her husband's benefit and was bound to return it and account for its profits to her at Cawnpore. The entrustment and criminal breach of trust were both outside Cawnpore. Held, the Cawnpore Court where the accused had to account had jurisdiction. In this case 4 O. C. 376 was dissented from.

(b) When, however, the place where the offence is committed is known, the Courts of that place ought to be resorted to, as that is the place where the primary loss occurs—In 34 A. 437, KARAMAT HUSSAN, J., was of opinion that 'consequence' means a consequence which forms a part and parcel of the offence and does not mean a consequence which is not such a direct result of the act of the offender as to form no part of that offence and held distinguishing 26 C. 746 and 19 A. 111 and following 5 A. L. J. 333 = 7 Cr. L. J. 396, held that where the offence of misappropriation is completely committed in a branch of a firm by an agent the Courts at the head office of the firm have no jurisdiction. Accused A was employed at G as the gumasta of a branch firm whose head office was at C, the accused was charged with having misappropriated the money of the firm at C which he had to send to C. Held that the Court at C had no jurisdiction since the loss to the principal firm at C is not a consequence of the act of the accused committed at the branch of the firm within the meaning of s. 179. See also 5 A. L. J. 333 = 1903 A. W. N. 113, when the charge was one of cheating.

Calcutta.—See the cases of 26 C. 746 and 41 C. 305 and 44 C. 913 and 26 C. W. N. 175.

Where the accused is under a liability to render accounts at a particular place and fails to do so by reason of having committed an offence of criminal breach of trust, the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction that place is situate, may inquire into and try the offence under s. 181, sub-sec. (2) 29 C. W. N. 432.

Punjab.—A firm having its head office at Karachi had a branch office in the district of F in the Punjab. The branch office appointed the accused as their purchasing agents in the district of J and they were accountable to the branch office and had no dealings direct with the head office. A general deficiency on settlement of accounts being found, the accused were tried and convicted at F of the offence of criminal breach of trust. It was argued that the loss was to the Karachi head office and the offence was committed in J. Held, that the accused were rightly tried at F as the general balance was payable at F where the accounts had to be rendered and it might be said to have been retained at F within the meaning of sub-sec (2), 2 P. R. 1902. Where, however, certain specific items have been misappropriated and the accused is not tried for a deficient balance, the Court at F may have no jurisdiction, Cr. Mis 58 of 1900 (Punjab), 22 P. R. 1915. In 7 P. R. 1910 = 7 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 253 also it was held that where the complainant despatched goods from Delhi to the accused at Calcutta for sale on commission, and the accused mortgaged the goods and misappropriated the money to their own use, the offence of misappropriation was complete as soon as the money had been misappropriated and that the Calcutta Court alone had jurisdiction. The words "any consequence that has ensued" mean some consequence modifying or completing the acts constituting the offence and do not include the loss resulting to an employer from criminal breach of trust by his servant, following 5 A. L. J. 333 = 7 Cr. L. J. 394; 67 P. L. R. 1901 and dissenting from 19 A. 111. In 223 P. L. R. 1913 a servant was employed by a master in a district different from the one in which he lived. The servant then committed a criminal breach of trust whereby the master suffered a pecuniary loss, held the servant cannot be tried under s 179 where the master lived. In 22 P. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 775, the complainant at R, filed a complaint wherein he stated that the accused who was engaged at R to manage a branch business at P had made false entries in respect of various items and had committed the offence of criminal breach of trust, held the case was triable at P, and not at R.

Ondh—The complainant in his complaint under s 409 alleged that he consigned goods from F, where he lived, to the address of the accused in the Central Provinces who misappropriated the goods there, held that the accused could not be tried at F by virtue of s 179. S 179 was inapplicable as the accused was not charged with the commission of an offence by reason of any consequence which ensued at F or elsewhere, but solely by reason of what they were alleged to have done in the Central Provinces, 40 C. 876.

Rangoon—Where the accused, an agent at Kobe (in Japan) of the complainant at Rangoon misappropriated certain moneys entrusted by the complainant, held that the accused committed criminal breach of trust in Kobe and that s 179 of the Code has no application. 1 R. 56 (35 A. 29 dissenting from 34 A. 437 and 44 C. 912 followed).

8 Entrustment in British India and breach in foreign territory.—Where B who was entrusted with rice at Mangalore for conveyance to Calicut took the cargo to Goa, in foreign territory, and there sold it. Held, that the Sessions Court at Mangalore had no jurisdiction to try the offence and that no offence was committed on the High Seas so as to give the Court jurisdiction under 12 and 13 Visd, c 96, extended by 23 and 24 Visd, c 88, s 5 M. 23. But now see s 188, 7 M. 354 and 38 M. 779.

9. Venue for trial of embezzlement under English law.—The locality of a crime varies with the nature of the crime. If the crime is an act of omission, the place where the crime is committed is the place where the act which is omitted ought to have been done, R v Milner, (1846) 2 Car. and Kir. 310. So in the case of an act of commission such as embezzlement, when there is no evidence of embezzlement except non-accounting, the venue may be laid in the place where the non-accounting occurred, but this does not apply where there is distinct evidence of misappropriation elsewhere, for then the offence is triable in either place, R v Davison and Gordon, (1855) 7 Cox. C. C. 185. Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol IX, p 280.

10. Kidnapping or abduction in foreign territory and conveying through British India.—
(a) Foreigner. This section has no application to a foreigner committing an offence out of British India, the intention of the section being evidently to provide for the case of an offender proceeding from one local jurisdiction in British India to another. Where, therefore, a foreigner kidnapped a girl in a foreign State and while conveying the girl by rail from that State through British India, he was arrested, tried and convicted of the offence of kidnapping, it was held, that the British Court had no jurisdiction, as the offence was complete out of British India and no consequence ensued in British India so as to bring the case within s 179. Nor was the offence a continuous one to bring it under s 182. The words "was conveyed" do not import any kidnapping was complete previous to such conveying, 1 P. R. 1853; 2 C. W. N. 81; 19 A. 409, 4 C. W. N. 643; 8 P. R. 1894. J. 931, 18 L. R. 104 = 8 Cr. L. J. 361; 1 M. 173; 18 A. 350, as to when kidnapping from lawful guardianship is complete. See also 20 C. W. N. 62 = 17 Cr. L. J. 123 = 33 In. Ca. 204, 8 C. 985 and 15 C. W. N. 1177 = 15 Cr. L. J. 537.

(b) Native Indian subject of His Majesty.—A Magistrate would have jurisdiction to try Native Indian subjects of His Majesty accused of the offences of kidnapping, abduction, etc., committed outside British India if the conditions required by s. 188 are observed, 7 B. L. R. 17 = 14 Cr. L. J. 439. A subject of a Native State cannot be tried in British India for the offence of the abduction of a woman (s. 362, 366, I. P. C.) committed in a Native State, but if the woman brought to British India is removed from there by the same deceitful means employed to induce her to leave her native place, an independent offence of abduction is committed in British India over which the British Courts have jurisdiction 7 B. L. R. 128 = 15 Cr. L. J. 511.

11. Detention.—Offence of detaining a married woman enticed away for purpose of illicit intercourse is to be enquired into in the district where detention occurs, 51 P. L. R. 1918.

Place of inquiry or trial where scene of offence is uncertain,

182. When it is uncertain in which of several local areas an offence was committed or or not in one district only, where an offence is committed partly in one local area and partly in another, or or where offence is continuing, where an offence is a continuing one, and continues to be committed in more local areas than one, or or consists of several acts

where it consists of several acts done in different local areas, it may be enquired into or tried by a Court having jurisdiction over any of such local areas

Notes.—1. S 135 of N. Y. Cr. P. C. provides that when a crime has been committed on the boundaries of two or more counties, or within 500 yards thereof the jurisdiction is in either county. See also 7 Geo. 4, c. 84, s. 12, where if felony or misdemeanour is committed on the boundary of two or more counties or within 500 yards of the boundary or is begun in one county and completed in another, the venue may be laid in either county.

2. Section applies only to offences.—This section only relates to cases of offences, i.e., acts which are punishable by law, and a case under s. 145 is not a case relating to an offence, 3 C. W. N. 148.

3. "Local area" does not include foreign territory.—The words, "local area" used in this section only apply to a "local area" over which the Criminal Procedure Code applies, and not to a "local area" in a foreign country or in other portions of the British Empire to which the Code has no application, 16 B. 687. They include and were intended to include 'District, Province, Sub-division and Sessions Division,' 25 C. 858.

4. Scope of Section—Conflict of areas.—This section in reality intends to provide for the difficulty which would arise where there is a conflict between different areas in order to prevent an accused person getting off entirely because there may be some doubt as to what particular Magistrate has jurisdiction to try the case. Each portion of the section refers to this conflict, 16 C. 687 at p. 676. In 25 C. 858, this section was applied to a case where it was known where the offence took place but it was uncertain to which sessions division the place belonged. Where the accused who was employed by a firm at A as a travelling agent to sell goods, sold the goods, remitted some money and misappropriated the balance and failed to account to his principals, and it was impossible to state exactly where the act of embezzlement or the various acts of embezzlement took place, but they must have taken place either at A or at one of the various districts where the accused travelled, held, applying s. 179 and this section the Court at A had jurisdiction, 32 A. 397. See also 23 C. 85 and 2 C. W. N. 450. The Director of a Company is liable under s. 32 cl. 4 of the Indian Companies' Act VII of 1913, for default in filing a copy of the annual list of members and the summary prescribed therein in the Office of the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies, Calcutta. A Presidency Magistrate has jurisdiction to try such offence under s. 182 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and if not s. 531 cures the defect.

183. An offence committed whilst the offender is in the course of performing a journey or voyage may be enquired into or tried by a Court through or into the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offender, or the person against whom, or the thing in respect of which, the offence was committed passed in the course of that journey or voyage

Offence committed on a journey,

Notes.—1. Compare s 136 of the N Y Cr P C. Under it when crime is committed on board a vessel navigating a river, lake, canal, etc., or lying there in the course of a voyage the jurisdiction is in any county where such voyage terminates, or would terminate if completed. See also the Criminal Law Act 1836 (7 Geo 4 C 64) s 13, and the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881 (44 and 45 Vict, c 69)

2. The journey must be a continuous journey from one terminus to another.—The section gives jurisdiction to the local tribunal at the place where the offender, etc., first stops or breaks his journey or voyage. Where an offence was alleged to have been committed during a journey from Bombay to Calcutta, and was in fact committed between Bombay and Allahabad, at which latter place the complainant and the accused halted and separated, and proceeded to Calcutta by different trains. Held that the Magistrate at Howrah had no jurisdiction to try the case. In order to give jurisdiction to the Magistrate, the journey must be a continuous journey from one terminus to another terminus, regard being had, for the purpose of estimating the continuity to all the ordinary incidents affecting journeys of the particular kind which may be under consideration. 21 W. R. 66 = 13 B. L. R. Appx 4. In 1 M. H. C. R. 193 the Madras High Court construing s 35 of Act XVIII of 1862 held, that if a person be accused of an offence committed whilst a journey or voyage is going on he may be tried if any part of that journey or voyage during which the offence is alleged to have been committed lies within the local limits of the Court's jurisdiction. In that case a Railway guard was charged under s 27 of the Railway Act with drunkenness whilst in charge of a train and he was removed from that train and detained at Arkonam a place beyond the local limits of the High Court, but he broke away and continued the journey to Madras. It was held that the High Court had no jurisdiction as the journey on which the offence was alleged to have been committed ended so far as regarded the person accused of the offence, at a place beyond the local limits of the High Court's jurisdiction. See also 1 G. L. J. 334 = 2 Cr. L. J. 411.

3. Journey not broken by halt.—A box containing money having been missed during a halt at S in the district T, from a boat, which was on the way to C. Held, that the journey was not broken by the halt at S and the case could be tried at C. 25 W. R. 45. The stoppage was due to the nature of the journey itself.

4. Committed in the course of journey or voyage.—The journey referred to in the first part of this section is the journey which the offender is in the course of performing, and the words that journey at the end of the section refer to the same journey. Where, therefore, a Surang was charged under s 280 I P C., with rashly navigating a vessel so as to endanger human life held that the only Courts which have jurisdiction to try the offender are the Courts through or into the local limits of whose jurisdiction, the offender in the course of that journey passed. 1 G. L. J. 334 = 2 Cr. L. J. 411.

5. Section not applicable to journey or voyage beyond British India.—This section is part of the Code of Procedure for the trial of offences committed in British India. The words 'journey or voyage' spoken of in it do not include a voyage on the High Seas or in foreign territory, but are confined in their meaning to a journey or voyage within the territories in British India. The section has relation only to a trial of an offence committed in British India in which the only defect is that some Court in British India, other than the Court which actually tried the charge, had local jurisdiction over the offence, 5 M. 23, see, however, next Note.

6. Offence committed during a voyage on the High Sea.—The complainant and the accused left in a vessel from Bombay to Honwar. During the voyage, within nine miles off the Janjira State the accused threw overboard a box belonging to the complainant, for which on arrival at Honwar, he was charged with mischief. Held that the Magistrate at Honwar, through whose jurisdiction the accused passed on the voyage had jurisdiction to try the accused. Ratanlal 181.

7. What particulars should be given in the charge.—In order to confer jurisdiction over an offence committed on board a boat upon a canal in respect to the cargo thereof, it must be averred in the indictment and proved that the crime was committed on board the boat or vessel, and on that trip or voyage she had passed through some part of the country where the indictment was found.—Larkin v. People 51 Barb 226.

Offences against Railway Telegraph,
Post Office and Arms Acts.

184. All offences against the provisions of any law for the time being in force relating to Railways Telegraphs, the Post Office or Arms and Ammunition may be inquired into or tried in a Presidency town, whether the offence is stated to have been committed within such town or not.

Provided that the offender and all the witnesses necessary for his prosecution are to be found within such town

Notes.—1. Railway—Act IX of 1890; Telegraph—Act XIII of 1885, amended by Act XI of 1888, Post Office—Act VI of 1899, Repealing Act IV of 1866, Arms and Ammunition—Act XI of 1878

High Court to decide in case of doubt, district where inquiry or trial shall take place.

 185. (1) Whenever a question arises as to which of two or more Courts subordinate to the same High Court ought to inquire into or try any offence, it shall be decided by that High Court

(2) Where two or more Courts not subordinate to the same High Court have taken cognizance of the same offence, the High Court within the local limits of whose appellate criminal jurisdiction the proceedings were first commenced may direct the trial of such offender to be held in any Court subordinate to it and if it so decides all other proceedings against such person in respect of such offence shall be discontinued. If such High Court, upon the matter having been brought to its notice, does not so decide, any other High Court within the local limits of whose appellate criminal jurisdiction such proceedings are pending may give a like direction, and upon its so doing all other such proceedings shall be discontinued

Note.—"In view of the conflicting decisions in the Indian Law Reports, 44 G. 895 and I. L. R. 40 M. 835, it is proposed to make it clear that one High Court has no power whether by implication or otherwise to transfer a case to itself from another High Court or vice versa,* or to decide which of two other High Courts should try a particular case. Statements of Objects and Reasons, 1921

The procedure laid down in this subsection will relieve the High Court of following the round about way of reference to the Governor General under s. 527

Notes.—1. Place of trial where offence is alleged to have taken place in another district.—On a reference by a District Magistrate for the transfer of a case pending before a Cantonment Magistrate within whose jurisdiction the accused were alleged to have committed an offence under s 493, I P C., to another district in which the offence was alleged to have occurred, the High Court declined to pass any order holding that if the fact relevant to s 498 occurred in the other districts, and if the Cantonment Magistrate is empowered under s 188 of the Code, he can deal with the matter under that section, Ratanlal 849

2. Courts subordinate to two High Courts.—Where Court of two Magistrates subordinate to two different High Courts have jurisdiction to try an offence the High Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offender actually is, may decide by which Court the offence shall be tried, 5 L. R. R. 17 = 9 Cr. L. J. 581. In 17 C. W. N 761 = 14 Cr. L. J. 398, two charges were laid one at Guranwalla in Punjab and another at Chittagong in respect of the same matter, the accused in one case being the complainant in another, the Calcutta High Court held that it could pass an order under this section that the case should be inquired into at Chittagong and transfer the case from the Court of the District Magistrate at Guranwalla to the Court of the District Magistrate at Chittagong. Proceedings in the case were, however, stayed for two months to enable the accused to take civil proceedings

3. Nature of the doubt—Scope of section.—The doubt contemplated by this section is only as to the Court by which the offence is to be inquired into or tried—not, e.g., a doubt as to the competency of a committing Magistrate to commit an accused for trial, 13 P. R. 1887; 3 A. 251. In 5 L. R. R. 17 = 9 Cr. L. J. 581, it was held that s 185 is not restricted to cases in which there is doubt as to whether one Court or another has jurisdiction, but is applicable also to a case in which the doubt is on the point whether the choice between two Courts both of which have jurisdiction, should be decided on the ground of public convenience. But in 41 C. 305 it was held that s. 185 does not warrant interference by the High Court merely on the ground of convenience. The decision of the High Court within the local limits of whose appellate jurisdiction the offender actually is, can only be sought where a doubt arises as to the Court by which an offence should be inquired into or tried. In this case a prosecution was instituted at Lahore by a Company against persons residing at Chittagong for offences under ss 409, 420, 467, 477, I P C The High Court held that there was no doubt that on the allegation of the prosecution that the Courts at Chittagong and Lahore were equally competent to exercise jurisdiction. See also 44 C. 595 (F.B.) See also 40 M. 835, which has been adopted by the amending Act XVIII of 1923 21 A. L. J. 621 following 44 C. 595

4 When place of offence uncertain.—B, resident of Almora, in the Kumaon District, was travelling in the plains, accompanied by H, who had charge of his money and other personal property On arriving at Shahabad, in the Bulandshar District, B demanded an account from H and found a considerable sum unaccounted for and certain movable property missing After B's return to Almora, H was arrested in the Kumaon District and his house searched, but none of the property was found there The property was given at different places, and it was not very clear where it was given, while the discovery of the breach of trust was made at Shahabad Held, that the Magistrate of Bulandshar had jurisdiction to try the case, 1883 A. W. N. 88; 1908 A. W. N. 115; 5 A. L. J. 333 = 7 Cr. L. J. 394

5 Section not applicable to proceedings under s 145.—This section has reference only to cases where some offence is being inquired into or tried It has no application to proceeding under s 145 12 A. L. J. 390 = 15 Cr. L. J. 520.

6. Section not applicable to a Magistrate outside the jurisdiction of the High Court, 40 M. 835.

186. (1) When a Presidency Magistrate, a District Magistrate, a Sub divisional Magis-

Power to issue summons or warrant for offence committed beyond local jurisdiction

time being in force, be

Magistrates procedure on arrest

inquired into or tried within such local limits, but is under some law for the time being in force in British India, such Magistrate may inquire into the offence as if it had been committed within such local limits and compel such person in manner hereinbefore provided to appear before him, and send such person to the Magistrate having jurisdiction to inquire into or try such offence, or, if such offence is bailable, take a bond with or without sureties for his appearance before such Magistrate

(2) When there are more Magistrates than one having such jurisdiction, and the Magistrate acting under this section cannot satisfy himself as to the Magistrate to or before whom such person should be sent, or bound to appear, the case shall be reported for the orders of the High Court

Notes.—1. Validity of warrant issued from foreign territory.—It is not essential to the validity of a warrant issued under this section that the Magistrate issuing it should be, at the time he issues it, within the local limits of his jurisdiction He may issue a warrant from a place in foreign territory, 1 B. 240. See also 23 P. R. 4910; 17 A. 36.

2 When Magistrate can decline jurisdiction.—If a Magistrate not empowered under this section finds that he is without jurisdiction under Chapter XV, he can decline to exercise jurisdiction, Ratanlal 849.

3. Powers of the High Court.—It was held in Wells II, 146, that the High Court has jurisdiction under s. 29 of the Letters Patent to make an order directing a Magistrate to hold a preliminary investigation and in the event of a prima facie case being made out to commit for trial to the Sessions a case which falls within this section. But where the circumstances of a case fall exactly within the terms of this section the procedure must be governed by such special provision and the High Court will not exercise the general powers conferred upon it by the Letters Patent, unless the case is of an extremely exceptional character

4. Magistrates specially empowered.—All Magistrates of the first class have been specially empowered to act under this section. For Madras see Gazette 1873 p. 717, N-W Provinces Gazette, 24th December, 1873; Oudh Gazette 1873 p. 3 Punjab Gazette 1873 p. 75, and Gazette, 1833, Pt. 1 p. 2 Bombay Gazette, 1872, p. 1325

5 Proceedings of Magistrates not empowered.—If any Magistrate not specially empowered acts under this section his proceedings will not be set aside merely on the ground of his not being so empowered see s. 529 (d).

6. Object of the inquiry under this section.—The object of the inquiry under this section is only to satisfy himself that there are prima facie grounds for sending the person believed to have committed the offence to a Magistrate having jurisdiction over it. Such inquiry should be conducted as prescribed by Chapter XXIII of this Code.

187. (1) If the person has been arrested under a warrant issued under section 186 by a Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate such Procedure where warrant issued by Subordinate Magistrate

Magistrate shall send the person arrested to the District or Sub-divisional Magistrate to whom he is subordinate unless the Magistrate having jurisdiction to inquire into or try such offence issues his warrant for the arrest of such person in which case the person arrested shall be delivered to the Police-officer executing such warrant or shall be sent to the Magistrate by whom such warrant was issued.

(2) If the offence which the person arrested is alleged or suspected to have committed is one which may be inquired into or tried by any Criminal Court in the same district other than that of the Magistrate acting under section 186 such Magistrate shall send such person to such Court.

Note.—It is unnecessary for a first-class Magistrate to send the accused to the District Magistrate where certificate has been obtained.—Where an offence was suspected to have been committed by a Native British subject in a place without and beyond the Indian territories under the dominion of Her Majesty and the offender is arrested in British territory under the authority of a warrant from a Magistrate of the first class there. Held that the Magistrate was authorized to complete the inquiry himself and s. 174 of Act V of 1872 (now s. 186) made it unnecessary for him to send the accused to the District Magistrate as the certificate required by s. 188 had been duly furnished by the Political Agent Ratanlal 97

Liability of British subjects for offences committed out of British India

188. When a Native Indian subject of Her Majesty commits an offence at any place without and beyond the limits of British India or when any British subject commits an offence in the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India or when a servant of the Queen (whether a British subject or not) commits an offence in the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India

he may be dealt with in respect of such offence as if it had been committed at any place within British India at which he may be found

Provided that notwithstanding anything in any of the preceding sections of this Chapter no charge as to any such offence shall be inquired into in British India unless the Political Agent if there is one for the territory in which the offence is alleged to have been committed certifies that in his opinion the charge ought to be inquired into in British India and where there is no

Political Agents to certify fitness of inquiry into charge.

Political Agent the sanction of the Local Government shall be required

Provided also that any proceedings taken against any person under this section which would be a bar to subsequent proceedings against such person for the same offence if such offence had been committed in British India shall be a bar to further proceedings against him under the Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act, 1879 in respect of the same offence in any territory beyond the limits of British India

Note.—The recent amendment to the first proviso makes it clear that ss. 177 to 184 are controlled by the provisions of section 188. This amendment was necessitated by a contrary view held in 38 M 779. The Select Committee observe: "Certain decisions of the Madras High Court seem to make it doubtful whether

s 188 is subject to the provisions of ss 177 to 184, and we think it desirable to clear this up. We are not satisfied that this was the intention of s. 188, and in our opinion it is safer, when a man is tried in British India in respect of an offence committed in a Native State to require the Political Agent's certificate in every case. See Note 6 below.

Notes.—1. The provisions of this section shall not apply to any offence referred to in s 57 of Act VI of 1898 (Postoffice).

2. Definitions.—India.—'India shall mean British India together with any territories of any Native Prince or Chief under the Suzerainty of Her (His) Majesty exercised through the Governor General of India or through any Governor or other officer subordinate to the Governor General of India.' S 3 (27) of General Clauses Act X of 1897

British India—See Note 1 to s. 1 at p 11

British subject—See Notes to s 4 (i) at p 19

'Political Agent,' shall include (a) the principal officer representing the Government in any territory or place beyond the limits of British India, and (b) any officer of the Government of India, or of any Local Government appointed by the Government of India or the Local Government to exercise all or any of the powers of a Political Agent for any place not forming part of British India under the law for the time being in force relating to foreign jurisdiction or extradition.' S 3 (40) of General Clauses Act X of 1897

Servant of the Queen—The words "Servant of the Queen" denote all officers or servants continued, appointed, or employed in India by or under the authority of the said Statute 21 and 22 Vict, c 106, entitled 'An Act for the better Government of India,' or by or under the authority of the Government of India or any Government. S 14 of the Indian Penal Code (XLV of 1860). For the Legislative authority of the Government of India, see s. 22 of 24 and 25 Vict, c. 67

Native Indian subject of Her Majesty—The term does not include "Servants of His Majesty" 16 B. 178. The Legislative authority of the Government of India is expressly declared to extend to all Native Indian subjects. S 1 of the Indian Councils Act, 1865 (32 and 33 Vict, c 98). A son of an alien born in British territory, who did not become a naturalized subject at the time of the annexation of the Punjab, is, notwithstanding his father's non-naturalization a natural-born subject of the British Crown, 9 P. R. 1893. Merely owning land in British India and occasionally residing in British India does not make one 'a Native Indian subject.' That term means only native subjects as jure and not de facto and occasional residence in British territory cannot be taken to render a person who is not de jure a subject, a subject for the purpose of criminal jurisdiction being exercised over him for an act committed by him in foreign territory which, if committed within British territory, would have been an offence cognizable by Municipal Courts 1 P. R. 1895. See also 6 B. 522

Nor does the mere fact of non-residence divest a person of his nationality. Subject to certain modifications of the Governor General in Council, the whole Criminal Law of British India follows only (1) all Indian Native subjects of His Majesty in any place beyond British India, and (b) all European British subjects in the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India 2 A. 218 (F.B.)

Offence.—The term offence used in this section means an offence under the Indian Penal Code, and where offences under ss 182, 193 and 211, 1 P. C., were committed against the Police or the Courts of a Native Indian State and certificate of the British Resident was obtained under s 183 of the Code, held, that the complaint could not be entertained by the City Magistrate of Surat in India, inasmuch as the acts charged having been committed in relation to Courts and authorities outside British India did not constitute offences under the Indian Penal Code, 47 B. 807.

3. Section does not confer jurisdiction over foreigners committing offences in foreign territory.—A foreigner is not liable to be dealt with in British India for an offence committed and completed outside British territory, 7 P. R. 1894; 2 Bom. L. R. 337. Where two persons, one a British subject and the other a foreigner, were committed on a charge of robbery (perpetrated in a Native State) to the Sessions Court at Jhansi, it was held that neither of the accused could be tried for the robbery, for the reason that one of the accused was not a British subject and as to the other the certificate required by this section was wanting. But both of them might be tried on a charge under s 411, 1 P. C., in spite of the fact that the accused themselves were the actual robbers in the Native State, 28 A. 372, where 10 B. 186 is followed. See also 30 P. R. 1894 and see Notes 2 and 3 at pp 391-392

4. Foreigner—servant of the Queen amenable to the jurisdiction of the British Courts.—A foreigner in the service of the Punjab Government who commits a murder in Jhindh (a Native State) may be tried and convicted of murder at any place in British India in which he may be found. See III (c) to s. 4, 1 P. C.

This clause supersedes the decision in 16 B. 178, where it was held that a British Court had no jurisdiction to try a servant of the Queen not a British subject for an offence in foreign territory. But the Governor-General in Council has directed that for offences committed in some of the Native States (including Jhind) the persons accused should, except under certain circumstances, be handed over for trial to the Courts of the State. Gazette of India, 16th August, 1876, No 87 J

5. Object and scope of the section.—Extra territorial jurisdiction is vested in the Governor General in Council in his executive capacity and also in the Indian Legislature. The Legislative powers are derived from three Acts of Parliament. These are—(i) The Indian Councils Act, 1861 (24 and 25 Vict., c 67). "For all servants of the Government of India within the dominions of Princes and States in alliance with Her Majesty" (ii) The Government of India Act 1863 (28 and 29 Vict., c 15). "For all British subjects of Her Majesty within the dominions of Princes and States in India in alliance with Her Majesty whether in the service of the Government or otherwise" (iii) The Indian Councils Act 1869 (32 and 33 Vict., c 98). "For all persons being Native Indian subjects of Her Majesty without and beyond as well as within the Indian territories under the dominion of Her Majesty"

The jurisdiction of the Governor-General in Council in his executive capacity is much wider and is now declared in the Indian (Foreign Jurisdiction) Order in Council 1902, see Gazette of India, Part I, p 687. This Foreign Jurisdiction is delegated to the Governor General in Council by His Majesty the King, and the Foreign Jurisdiction of His Majesty is declared in similar terms in the preamble to the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890 (53 and 54 Vict., c xxxvii). S 188 has been amended so as to conform exactly with the above statutes and is intended to prevent a conflict of jurisdiction between the Courts in British India and the Courts of Foreign Sovereigns and Courts established by His Majesty the King by Order in Council under the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, or by the Governor General in Council either under ss 4 and 5 of Act XXI of 1879, or under the Foreign Jurisdiction Order in Council 1902. The first paragraph of s 188 corresponds to the Indian Councils Act 1869 the second with the Government of India Act 1863 and the third with the Indian Councils Act, 1861.

For the application of s. 188 the Act committed in a Native State must be an offence under the I. P. C.—Where false information was given to a Native State Police and perjury was committed in the Court of a Native State held that a complaint could not be entertained by a Magistrate in British India inasmuch as the acts charged against the accused having been committed in relations to Courts and authorities outside British India, did not constitute offences under the I. P. C. 47 B. 907.

6. Does this section restrict the scope of sections 177 to 184 when offences committed outside British India?—Is a certificate necessary when a Court may get jurisdiction by virtue of ss 179 to 184?—It was all along held (see Note 9) that in every case where an offence committed outside British India was tried in British India a certificate would be necessary to give jurisdiction and such an interpretation could be justified only on the footing that s. 188 is the only section which deals with offences committed outside British India, as the proviso deals only with 'such offences as are referred to in the section'. If a person could be tried in British India by virtue of ss 177 to 184 for an offence outside British India it is difficult to see why a certificate or sanction under s. 188 should be obtained. In the cases noted in Note 9 it was consistently held that ss 179 to 184 had no application where the offence was committed outside British India.

In 38 M 779 SADASIVIER, J., was of opinion that s 188 did not limit the scope of ss. 177 to 184. The scheme of Chapter V, sub-chapter (A) in which ss 177 to 189 appear, seems to me to be intended to enlarge as much as possible the ambit of the sites in which the trial of the offence might be held and to minimise as much as possible the inconvenience which would be caused to the prosecution by the success of a technical plea that the offence was not committed within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the trying Court. Ss. 178 to 184 all confer more extended powers and larger jurisdiction to Courts than would belong to them if the ordinary rule found in s. 177 were carried to its strict logical conclusions. S 188 comes in almost at the end of the sub-chapter to make their further encroachments on the general rule of 177, and he further held that the proviso to s. 188 will come into operation only when the British Indian Court cannot get jurisdiction under ss. 179 to 184 and has to depend on the first part of s. 188 to get such jurisdiction and he dissented from 21 M. L. J 441 = (1910) M. W. N. 1435 & S. L. R. 266 = 13 Cr. L. J 530 and Madras Cr. M. P. 97 of 1911. This decision is, it is submitted wrong. See also Note 3 at p 392, and also the introductory note to the section above.

7. Scope of the proviso.—Is it restricted only to territories of Native Princes and Chiefs in India?—In 4 Bur. L. T. 58 = 5 L. B. R. 221 = 12 Cr. L. J. 193, it was laid down that the word 'territory' in the proviso is used in reference only to territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India and that the word cannot include the High Seas since they are not part of the territories of any State and that for offences on the High Seas no sanction of the Local Government is necessary. It is submitted that the generality of the words used and the history of the section do not warrant such a narrow interpretation. In 5 B. L. R. 260 = 14 Cr. L. J. 298 it was held that the proviso was universal in its application and was not restricted to Native States in India and therefore a Native Indian subject cannot without the sanction of the Local Government be tried in British India for the offence of criminal breach of trust committed in Spain. But see 41 B. 667, which decides that the first proviso to s 188 is limited to territorial jurisdiction and had no bearing upon the question of jurisdiction to try an offence committed on the High Seas. Consequently it was held that the Magistrate had jurisdiction to try a case without the sanction of the Local Government under s 188 even though the offence was committed on the High Seas.

8. "May be found."—This expression must be taken to mean not where a person is discovered, but where he is actually present, 6 B. 622, 13 B. 147, 2 A. 216; 1 P. R. 1911 = 4 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 119; 33 B. 225 and Note 1 at p 391.

9. Want of a certificate invalidates trial.—Want of a certificate by the Political Agent will invalidate any inquiry, trial or commitment, 24 B. 287; 8 Bom. L. R. 513 = 4 Cr. L. J. 54. The defect cannot be cured by a 532 or by the subsequent production of the certificate, 13 M. 423. See also 10 B. 190; 24 A. 256; Ratanlal 870; 1884 A. W. N. 85; 5 M. 23; Weir II, 148; 1910 M. W. N. 143 = 8 M. L. T. 54 = 11 Cr. L. J. 305, 6 B. L. R. 260 = 14 Cr. L. J. 298; 1 Bur. 8 R. 334; 12 Bom. L. R. 667. In 13 M. 423, 5 M. 23; 19 A. 109, a certificate was held to be necessary, even when the District Magistrate who tried the case was himself the Political Agent. In 24 A. 256, it was held, that the actual existence of a certificate at the date of commitment, but which, at the time of commitment had not come into the hands of the committing Magistrate would not make the commitment valid. The want of a certificate is an absolute bar to the trial of a case. See 17 A. L. J. 450. The proviso to this section is prohibitive. 19 A. 109. Also see 1 Bur. 8 R. 334; 24 B. 287. In 8 Bom. L. R. 507 = 4 Cr. L. J. 49, the commitment was held good where the certificate of the Political Agent had been received after the examination of the witnesses for the prosecution, but before the commitment order was made, though it would have been more regular, had the Magistrate recalled the witnesses already examined. See also next note. But in Punjab it has been held, that the trial of a Native Indian subject in the absence of such certificate is an error or omission in the proceedings before trial and not a defect of jurisdiction and it is therefore curable under s 537 if the objection is not taken at the trial of the case, but a late stage of the appeal, 33 P. R. 1898 approved in 30 P. R. 1899 and followed in 4 P. R. 1902 (F.B.), but in 11 P. R. 1889, it was held that as the defect arising from want of a certificate had been noticed and objection thereon raised before the trial of the accused, the commitment was bad and must be quashed. See 41 A. 452 following 19 A. 109. See also 8 L. 416.

10. Preliminary steps to inquiry not prohibited.—The section still leaves a Court competent to issue process such as a summons or warrant or to take any other steps which are merely preliminary to an inquiry.—Puny Ch C V Vol II, s 31. All that the proviso requires is that the offence should not be inquired into without a certificate. There is nothing in the language of the proviso making illegal the obtaining of the certificate after the complaint has been filed and the inquiry has begun or been completed as far as the framing of the charge. 12 Bom. L. R. 667 = 11 Cr. L. J. 543. This decision is open to doubt.

11. Trial on a charge not mentioned in certificate valid.—Where the Political Agent has certified "that the accused is a Native Indian subject" and committed him to trial on a charge which is not mentioned in the certificate, the trial is valid. The certificate granted under this section is declared in the certificate, will suffice to sustain. The Magistrate is not restricted to the sections mentioned in the certificate, 33 A. 514.

12. Political Agent cannot recall certificate.—When a District Magistrate, as Political Agent had once granted his certificate for the trial of the case against the applicant by a second class Magistrate in the district, the latter was legally seized of the case and the Political Agent had no authority, thereafter, to recall his certificate, or issue as District Magistrate a warrant for the arrest of the applicant. Ratanlal 293, 14 Bom. L. R. 277 = 13 Cr. L. J. 537.

13. Certificate may be granted after issue of a warrant under a. 7 of the Extradition Act.—A Political Agent at the instance of the authorities of a Native State issued a warrant for the arrest of an accused in British India under s. 7 of the Extradition Act 1903, and subsequently at the instance of the accused issued a certificate under this section. It was contended that the issue of the certificate after the issue of the warrant was bad in law as it contravened Rule 3 framed by the Governor General in Council under s. 22 of the Extradition Act (p 1831 of Vol. III of the General Statutory Rules), viz., 'if the accused person is a British subject the Political Agent shall before issuing a warrant consider whether he ought not to certify the case as one suitable for trial in British India. Held, that the direction or admonition in Rule 3 did not control or purport to control s. 188, and therefore the certificate was good 14 Bom. L. R. 377 = 13 Cr. L. J. 537.

14. Extradition of criminals from Native States.—The following procedure should be followed to obtain delivery from a Native State of a subject of such State charged with an offence committed in British territory. Such cases are not governed by the Extradition Act XV of 1903, which relates only to the surrender to Native States of their criminals taking refuge in British territory. That Act in no way affects the demand of the British Government on Native States, whether extradition treaties exist with them or not. Magistrates should act promptly in the manner prescribed below.

The offences for which the surrender of the subjects of Native Feudatory States is demanded should be limited to those for which authority may be given to British officers to surrender the subject of Native States. In the case of British subjects a larger catalogue should be allowed, but in every case in which a demand is made, it should be made by British Magistrates not to the State direct, but to the Political Officer where there is one, and the demand should invariably be accompanied by a copy of any depositions made, or where no evidence has yet been taken, by a statement of the information on which the arrest of the offender is deemed necessary. It should rest with the Political Agent, if necessary to call on the Magistrate for further evidence, but if the Political Agent possesses the influence and weight he ought to have he should seldom fail to obtain compliance with any reasonable demand made to the Darbar to which he is accredited for the surrender of an absconded criminal.—Reg. and Ord. N W P., s. 10 p. 538.

N.B.—See Appendix II for the Extradition Act XV of 1903 and various orders and rules relating to the subject of extradition of fugitives from justice.

189. Whenever any such offence as is referred to in section 188 is being inquired into or tried, the Local Government may, if it thinks fit, direct that copies of depositions made or exhibits produced before the Political Agent or a Judicial Officer in or for the territory in which such offence is alleged to have been committed shall be received as evidence by the Court holding such inquiry or trial in any case in which such Court might issue a commission for taking evidence as to the matters to which such depositions or exhibits relate.

Power to direct copies of depositions and exhibits to be received in evidence.

Note.—As to the issue of commissions of inquiry, and the Courts by which commissions may be issued, see s. 503.

B.—Conditions requisite for Initiation of Proceeding.

190. (1) Except as hereinafter provided any Presidency Magistrate District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate, and any other Magistrate specially empowered Cognizance of offences by Magistrates. in this behalf, may take cognizance of any offence—

(a) upon receiving a complaint of facts which constitute such offence,

(b) *upon a report in writing of such facts made by any Police-officer,

(c) upon information received from any person other than a Police-officer or upon his own knowledge or suspicion, that such offence has been committed.

(2) The Local Government, as the District Magistrate subject to the general or special orders of the Local Government, may empower any Magistrate to take cognizance under sub-section (1), clause (a) or clause (b) of offences for which he may try or commit for trial.

(3) The Local Government may empower any Magistrate of the first or second class to take cognizance under sub-section (1) clause (c) of offences for which he may try or commit for trial.

Note.—Clause (b) of section (1) is amended by substituting the words 'upon a report in writing' for the words 'a Police report.' For the probable effect of this amendment see Note 19, infra.

Notes.—1. The section was s. 191 of Act X of 1882. Section 190 of that Act contained the definition of the term Political Agent and as that term is defined in s. 3, sub-sec. (40) of the General Clauses Act, X of 1897, it is omitted from the Code. The old s. 191 is now split up into two sections, viz., 190 and 191.

2. Object of the section—The object appears to be, that before proceedings are taken against an accused person, such as would bring him to a Court of Justice, a Magistrate must have before him knowledge based either upon a complaint or upon a Police report. If he chooses to take action without such independent report, he is bound to inform an accused that he is entitled to have the case tried by some Court other than the Court of such Magistrate. Per KNOX, J., 11 A. L. J. 331 = 14 Cr. L. J. 218.

3. Meaning of 'taking cognizance'—cognizance of an offence must be in one of three ways specified in clauses (a) (b) or (c)—The expression 'to take cognizance' has not been defined in the Code and it is difficult to ascertain at what precise stage of a case cognizance is said to be taken. 17 C. W. N. 795 = 14 Cr. L. J. 425. Taking cognizance does not involve any formal action, or indeed action of any kind but occurs as soon as a Magistrate as such applies his mind to the suspected commission of an offence. 37 C. 412. Where an officer who was also a Magistrate holds a departmental inquiry and charges are made before him he cannot be said to have taken cognizance. 19 B. 51. Where there was only an oral complaint to a Magistrate, which was not recorded under s. 200 and there was no Police report, nor did the Magistrate take cognizance of the offence suo motu it was held, that the Magistrate had not duly taken cognizance of the case under this section and that the arrest of the accused in the presence of the Magistrate and the warrant remanding the accused to custody were illegal. Weir II, 449 and 241. See, however, 17 C. W. N. 795 = 14 Cr. L. J. 425. A Magistrate who issues a warrant under the peculiar powers conferred on him by s. 6 of the Bombay Gambling Act IV of 1887, cannot be said to take cognizance of the case at all, 8 B. L. R. 86 = 15 Cr. L. J. 657. See also 14 C. 707 and 39 C. 119.

A Magistrate is not debarred by any provision in the Criminal Procedure Code from taking cognizance of an offence only because another Magistrate has taken cognizance of the same and is in session of the case, and a multiplicity of trials can be avoided by a transfer of the cases to one of them. 50 C. 492.

4. No power to take cognizance of an offence where sanction, etc., wanting.—In cases provided for by ss. 132, 188, 195—199, 480, 485 etc., the Magistrate is not competent to take cognizance of an offence upon a mere complaint unaccompanied by the requisite sanction or certificate, etc., properly given, 27 C. 820, 118 Cr. L. J. 751 (B.). A complaint was made before a Magistrate of an offence under s. 399 I P C., and he was informed that an application for sanction under the Explosive Substances Act had been made as the same facts constituted an offence under that Act also and it was not known at the time the complaint was made that the bombs in possession of the accused were of the kind mentioned in s. 4 (b) of that Act. Held that the Magistrate had not taken cognizance of the offence under the Explosive Substances Act. 59 C. 119.

When sanction is not availed of Magistrate may himself proceed under cl. (c).—Where a sanction given by a Magistrate is not proceeded under, it is open to the District Magistrate to take up the case without complaint under cl. (c) of this section. 4 C. 712. See also 27 P. R. 1903; 12 M. 47; 8 W. R. 9; 22 C. 131, 1 S. L. R. 119 and Note 73 to s. 195.

5. Proceedings against a witness—is s. 351 independent of s. 190?—A Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence against a witness in a case which is pending before him, upon the facts disclosed by the evidence of another witness, does so under cl. (c) of this section, and not under s. 351, 1 C. W. N. 105. But in 5 N. L. R. 113 = 10 Cr. L. J. 303, it was held following 3 C. W. N. 279, that s. 351 was self-contained and complete in itself and quite independent of s. 190 and necessarily of s. 191. One J. was arrested by the Police and sent up for trial on Police report to a second-class Magistrate. In the course of the trial the Magistrate saw reason for believing that the offence had been committed not by J., but by one I., who had given evidence before him. The Magistrate professing to act under s. 351, took cognizance of the case against J., arrested him and reported the case for transfer to another Magistrate. The Sessions Judge reported the proceedings on the ground that under s. 190 (c) the Magistrate's proceeding was ultra vires. Held, that the Magistrate was empowered to take cognizance of the offence against I. In 4 S. L. R. 258 = 12 Cr. L. J. 399, it was also held that a Magistrate acting under s. 351, if he has already taken cognizance of the offence on a complaint or a Police report is not proceeding under s. 190 (c) and may join as a co-accused any person attending Court who seems to him to be implicated in the case under trial. The expression 'cognizance of any offence in this section is not equivalent to cognizance of any offender, for the definition of complaint includes a complaint that some person unknown has committed an offence.

6. Under which clause does a Magistrate act when after taking cognizance on complaint or Police report or on transfer, he takes proceedings against persons, or for offences not mentioned therein?—Generally when a Magistrate has taken cognizance of an offence and proceeds with the trial of the case it is his duty to proceed to deal with the evidence brought before him and to see that justice was done in regard to any person who might be proved by the evidence to be concerned in that offence. But when he takes proceedings against other persons or in respect of offences not mentioned in the report if he is to be deemed as taking cognizance under cl. (c), then he must comply with the provisions of s. 191, and failure to do so would invalidate the conviction. It is to be noted that the expression 'cognizance of an offence' in this section is not equivalent to the cognizance of an offender, for the definition of complaint includes a complaint that some person unknown has committed an offence, 4 B. L. R. 258 = 12 Cr. L. J. 399, nor is it necessary that the person aggrieved should be the complainant 41 G. 1013.

(a) Where the Magistrate takes the initiative on a complaint and issues processes against other persons whose names transpire in the prosecution evidence during the trial, he does so under cl. (a).—A complaint under ss 342 and 363, I P C, was made against four persons by the husband of a girl against whom the offences were said to have been committed, whereupon the Magistrate ordered the complainant to prove his case but before the date fixed he filed a petition withdrawing the complaint. The Magistrate, however, examined witnesses on the date fixed and proved that there was no satisfactory evidence against the four accused, but holding that there was sufficient evidence against two other persons, he issued processes against them under ss. 342 352 and 363, I P C, though he was not empowered to take cognizance under cl. (c), held, following 4 G. W. N. 367 and 3 G. W. N. 279 and not following 1 G. W. N. 103 that where the Magistrate who had taken the initiative on a complaint, took cognizance of the case against the others on the evidence adduced on behalf of the prosecution, he did so under cl. (a) and not under cl. (c), 41 G. 1013. Where a person complained to a Magistrate by a petition in which he charged three persons with certain offences and the Magistrate thereafter examined the complainant and certain witnesses on his behalf and issued summonses against the three persons as well as against a fourth person not named in the complaint for an offence other than those mentioned in the complaint petition. Held, that the Magistrate took cognizance of the offence as against the fourth person also under cl. (a) and not under cl. (c), the Magistrate in effect having received a complaint of facts stated in the deposition of the complainant constituting the offence, and that consequently the Magistrate was not debarred from trying the case, 26 C. 788 followed, 32 P. R. 1904. See also 4 G. W. N. 367 and 1907 A. W. N. 93 = 5 Cr. L. J. 276. Where, however, after the institution of a complaint and before any proceedings were instituted the names of some more accused persons, which were not in the original complaint, were added by the Public Prosecutor under instructions from the District Magistrate. Held that the case against the newly added accused was taken cognizance of by the District Magistrate under s. 190 (1), (c) and that s. 191 applied to the case, 14 Bar. L. R. 327 = 9 Cr. L. J. 84.

(b) Police Report—Where a Magistrate takes the initiative on a Police report and he issues processes against other persons concerned in the offence, he does so under cl. (b) and not under cl. (c).—See Note 23. A complaint was lodged before a Police-officer against four persons. One accused was sent up for trial and was convicted and sentenced. At the trial it appeared upon the evidence of one of the witnesses for the prosecution that two others were concerned in the crime. The Magistrate issued summonses against the two. held that the Magistrate did not act without jurisdiction. The case having been duly referred to him, and having cognizance of the offence it was his duty to proceed to deal with the evidence and to see that justice was done in regard to any person who might be proved by the evidence to be concerned in that offence 4 G. W. N. 367; 41 G. 1013; 82 P. R. 1904; 9 N. L. R. 65 = 14 Cr. L. J. 290; 26 C. 788. A Magistrate not empowered under sub-sect. (c) while acquitting A sent up by the Police stated that B had in his opinion committed the offence and that the Police should take action against B. B was accordingly sent up and convicted, held, that the Magistrate had acted within his powers, 4 L. B. R. 137 = 7 Cr. L. J. 414. The Police sent in one S for trial on a charge of stealing. The Magistrate began his proceedings by examining the Inspector, and on his evidence the Magistrate directed the applicant who was present in custody on another charge to be put in the dock along with S, tried and convicted them. held following U. B. R. 1897 = 10, 156 that the Magistrate took cognizance under cl. (b) and not cl. (c), U. B. R. 1910 Cr. P. C. 2 = 11 Cr. L. J. 439. But where three persons were sent up for trial by the Police with a remark added to the Police report that it had been elicited from the accused that one A had instigated the offence and that Court was at liberty to take proceedings against A on legal evidence being tendered, and the Magistrate at the conclusion of the trial of the accused sent up, issued a non-bailable warrant against A for abetment of the offences of which the accused were convicted, held that the Magistrate who was not empowered to act under (c) had no jurisdiction to take cognizance of the offence under s. 190 (c) and as the Police report was defective he could not act under s. 190 (b) and the order of the Magistrate was set aside, 5 B. L. R. 1 = 12 Cr. L. J. 92. He could not proceed under s. 351 either, as A was not in attendance at his Court. Where the trial of the second accused is not on the same evidence on which the first accused was tried, but on other evidence adduced on behalf of the defence of the first accused, such proceedings cannot be regarded as proceedings upon complaint or any other foundation upon which the case originally proceeded, and must be regarded as being within the terms of cl. (c) of this section, 3 G. W. N. 279. In Ratanlal 951; it was also held that where under s. 170 A was sent up by the Police before a first-class Magistrate charged with the offence of robbery and in the inquiry that ensued the Magistrate after reading certain statements which appeared in the diary of the chief constable and examining two witnesses, issued warrants for the arrest of B, C, D and E. Held, that the Magistrate was bound to commit all the five accused to the Court of Session on a charge of dacoity, as under the circumstances the Magistrate must be held to have taken cognizance of the offence against B, C, D and E, in the manner mentioned in cl. (c) of this section. Where a Magistrate directs the Police to send up a prosecution witness for trial before him, held, that the Magistrate took cognizance of the offence under sub-clause (b) and not clause (c), 23 Bom. L. R. 842.

(c) On transfer—As to jurisdiction of a Magistrate to deal with the person who appears to be implicated in a case which has been transferred to him, see Notes 7 (b). Where the accused was charged with the offence of assaulting a public servant (s. 352, I P C), but the evidence disclosed that he had assaulted a witness (s. 352, I P C) and he was convicted therefor, and the conviction attempted to be justified on the ground that the Magistrate acted under cl. (c) Held that the conviction was wrong as there was no complaint by the private person, and if the Magistrate acted under clause (c), he was bound to take further proceedings under s. 191 & G. W. N. 202.

(d) Where, however, the Magistrate institutes proceedings against other persons and for an offence disclosed in evidence adduced on behalf of the defence, the Magistrate must be deemed to act under cl. (c)—In the trial of one B it appeared from the evidence given by the witnesses for the defence that another person R was concerned in the same transaction or offence. The Magistrate proceeded against R and examined witnesses who had been already examined in the trial of B as witnesses for the prosecution against R. It was held 'although as it has been held, the Magistrate is competent at the trial against one person to proceed against another who may appear upon the evidence taken to be concerned in that offence, and in doing so it cannot be properly regarded that he is acting within the terms of cl. (c) so as to enable the accused person to object to that Magistrate proceeding further in the case, still in laying down this view of the law it was contemplated that the two persons should be on trial together in the same case or for the same offence. It was never intended that this rule should be applied to a case when the trial of the second accused was not for the same offence for which the first accused was tried but on other evidence adduced on behalf of the defence of the first accused.' It was further held that such proceeding, cannot be regarded as a proceeding upon a complaint or any other foundation upon which the case originally proceeded, but must be regarded as being within cl. (c), 3 G. W. N. 279. In 41 G. 1013 this case was distinguished on the ground that it was there held that the Magistrate had taken cognizance under cl. (1), (c) not because R was not mentioned in the complaint, but because his name did not transpire in the evidence for the prosecution.

(e) When a Magistrate institutes proceedings for a different offence against the same accused—See 3 G. W. N. 279.

7. When Magistrate is properly seized of a case, he alone is competent to proceed against all persons connected—(a) Absence of power to take cognizance does not render the Magistrate incompetent to proceed against others implicated in the same case—A Magistrate not having jurisdiction to take cognizance of an offence tried and convicted some persons, but refused to proceed against others who had absconded and against whom warrants had been issued. Held that having taken cognizance of the offence, he had jurisdiction to hold judicial proceedings in regard to all persons who, the evidence showed, were the offenders. His action is in no way limited in regard to proceedings against persons concerned in an offence by his powers in regard to taking cognizance of an offence as it may be originally disclosed, 4 G. W. N. 560. When a case is referred to by a superior Magistrate to a Subordinate Magistrate, the latter has power, though not specially empowered, under cl. (c), sub-sec. (1) to take cognizance of the case against persons not before the Court, but whose connection with the offence is disclosed by evidence in the case referred, 4 G. W. N. 367. But where on a complaint of a cognizable offence, the Police sent up only some of the accused persons who were tried and convicted, and the District Magistrate, later, while inspecting the Police outpost made a note that the remaining accused should be sent and thereupon the remaining accused were sent up before the same Deputy Magistrate. Held, that nothing was made over to the Deputy Magistrate at first except the case of the accused previously convicted and that the proceedings taken against the remaining accused, without anyone formally taking cognizance of the case, were irregularly instituted and should be set aside. 3 G. L. J. 87 = 3 Cr. L. J. 290.

(b) On transfer. Magistrate is completely seized of the case as regards all persons in any manner connected with it.—Where cognizance had been taken of an offence on a Police report and the case made over to a Subordinate Magistrate, so long as the case connected with the offence remains with the Subordinate Magistrate, no other Magistrate is competent to deal with it and application for warrants against other persons concerned in that offence should be made to the Magistrate before whom the case is, and to no other Magistrate, 27 C. 979. See also 27 C. 798; 30 C. 449 and 7 C. L. J. 249 = 7 Gr. L. J. 318; 3 C. W. N. 490; 32 C. 783; 4 C. W. N. 367. See Note 7 (b) at p. 427

(c) Power of District Magistrate to take cognizance of offence against accused mentioned in Police report made to a Sub divisional Magistrate—A complaint was laid against M and ten others that they committed rioting and looted complainant's crops from his land. Warrants of arrest were issued against all of them upon Police report, but proceedings were commenced against five of them only and they were convicted. Thereupon the complainant again moved the same Magistrate to issue warrant against the remaining five persons and to try them but the application was rejected on the ground that conviction of some of the accused previously tried was sufficient to meet the justice of the case and it was not necessary to proceed against the remaining accused. The complainant then moved the District Magistrate who made an ex parte order to the effect that the case should be proceeded against the remaining accused upon the original complaint. Held, that it was not proper for the District Magistrate to direct proceedings to be taken on the Police report unless he had withdrawn the whole matter from the Court of such Subordinate Magistrate, 4 C. W. N. 242. See 5 C. W. N. 488, where in similar circumstances the District Magistrate was held to have acted under sub-sec. (1) cl. (c)

I.—MAGISTRATES EMPOWERED TO TAKE COGNIZANCE.

8. Magistrate competent to act.—In Madras all Magistrates of the first class are empowered to act under this section (Fort St George Gazette, 1873, p. 717). Further, under sub-sec. (2) the District Magistrate may empower any Magistrate to take cognizance under clauses (a) and (b) of sub-sec. (1), while the Local Government alone can empower a Magistrate (not being a third-class Magistrate), to act under clause (c) of sub-sec. (1). Magistrates cannot act under this section in those taluks in which those taluks, where there are Stationary Sub-Magistrates, Tahsildars exercise extraordinary powers of Magistrates of the second class, except the powers of taking cognizance of offences under this section and of committing for trial under s 206 Fort St George Gazette, 1893 Pt I, p. 579

In Bengal and Bombay, Magistrates are empowered under this section only on special applications, but in Bombay they should not be Honorary Magistrates—Calcutta Gazette 1873, p. 63 and Bombay Gazette, 1873, p. 16

In the Punjab all Magistrates of the first and second class are invested (see Punjab Gazette, 1883, p. 32) with power to take cognizance of offences upon complaint and upon information, but not on their own knowledge or suspicion, 20 P. R. 1901. Magistrates of the first class have also power, subject to the control, of the District Magistrate to entertain cases without complaint—Punjab Gazette, 1878, Pt I, p. 361

In the United Provinces all Magistrates of the first class have been empowered to act under this section.—Allahabad Gazette, 1873 p. 903

As to additional powers conferrable on Magistrates, see s. 37 and Schedule IV

9. Effect of action by Magistrate not empowered.—If a Magistrate acts in good faith under clause (a) or (b) of sub-sec. (1) his proceedings shall not be set aside merely on the ground of his not being so empowered. See s. 529 (c). But as to cl. (c), see s. 530 (k) which makes his proceedings void. See Ratanlal 554.

10. Successor of Magistrate taking cognizance competent to have process.—In a case begun by one Magistrate and continued by his successor, the latter has power under clauses (a) and (b) of this section to issue process for the arrest of an accused against whom the process was not issued by the Magistrate who began the trial, Ratanlal 652.

11. Competency of Magistrates not curtailed by the Bombay District Municipal Act, 1873.—S 82 of the Bombay District Municipal Act (VI of 1873) does not deprive a Magistrate of the power conferred by this section of taking cognizance of an offence upon a complaint or upon information, etc., or a Police-officer of the power conferred by s. 23 of Bom. Act VII of 1867, of laying information of such an offence before a Magistrate, Ratanlal 335.

II.—CLAUSE (a)—COGNIZANCE UPON COMPLAINT.

12. Complaint.—For definition, see s 4 (k) and Notes thereunder—(a) No complaint where no offence alleged.—See Note 4 at p 16 Where a petition supported by an affidavit was presented to a Magistrate under s 82 of the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882) but did not contain any allegation of any specific offence as defined in s 4 (a) having been committed, nor did the Magistrate profess to act under cl. (c) on any information knowledge or suspicion that any such offence had been committed Held, that the proceedings of the Magistrate were ultra vires, as he had not sufficient materials before him to take cognizance of any offence under this section, Weir I, 720; II, 149.

(b) Complaint must be with a view to set the criminal law in motion.—Complaint being an allegation made to a Magistrate with a view to his taking action under the Code, a petition to a Magistrate alleging that an offence has been committed against the petitioner, but that the petitioner did not wish the Magistrate to take any action is not a complaint and under cl. (a) the Magistrate cannot act on such a petition on his own responsibility as there is neither a complaint nor the examination of a complaint taken before himself. But under cl. (c) the Magistrate can take cognizance of the offence as upon his own knowledge, 6 C. W. N. 926.

(c) Proceeding on informal complaint or demi-official note illegal.—Magistrates in the mofussil are very apt to commence criminal proceedings against accused when they are moved by informal or demi official notes and when there is no formal complaint before them. A letter commenced "My dear D, and concluded after making certain suggestions, what say you? Yours truly, J H O and was addressed to R D, Esq. On the strength of this letter the accused was prosecuted and convicted. On revision the Chief Court remarked, a Magistrate who is prepared to receive a document such as this as a complaint must have some peculiar notions of the dignity of his Court and of the office of Magistrate. The document might be regarded notwithstanding its objectionable form as being "information received from a person, other than a Police-officer," but this is carefully distinguished in s 190 from a complaint and a complaint was essential under s 186 of the Municipal (Punjab) Act, 2 P. R. 1892 and cf 3 P. R. 1892. A document was addressed to the Commissioner of R by the Municipal Committee of B requesting that in accordance with the Committee's proceedings of a certain day a second prosecution might be instituted against A under s 169, Punjab Municipal Act. The Deputy Commissioner thereon endorsed that a case be instituted and be made over to a Tahsildar of S Held, that this was not a proper complaint which a Magistrate could take cognizance of, 1 P. R. 1892. A memorandum under the signature of the Collector sanctioning a prosecution is not a complaint, 5 Bom H C. R. Cr. Ca. 43; 16 P. R. 1890. A petition having been presented to the Collector (who was also the District Magistrate), complaining of the conduct of one of the Collector's subordinates and requesting the Collector to redress the petitioner's grievances the Collector got the petitioner to repeat the statements in the petition and proceeded to deal with the case as though it was a complaint. Held, that the petition was not a complaint and the Magistrate was not justified in arbitrarily turning departmental complaint into a criminal complaint, 30 C. 413.

(d) Police Report, when a 'complaint'.—See Note 11 at p 9

13. Does complaint include deposition of complainant?—Complaint includes not only the written complaint but also the examination of the complainant, at any rate prior to the issue of process, Ratanlal 884. In this case the Magistrate was held justified on the allegations made in the complainant's examination prior to issue of process to add a charge under s 498, I P C to those mentioned in the written complaint. A complainant in her petition charged the accused with committing the offences mentioned in ss 352 and 354 I P C, but in her examination on oath alleged facts which in the opinion of the Magistrate constituted an offence under s 193 read with s 109 I P C. Held, that the Magistrate took cognizance of the offence under cl. (a) and not cl. (c), and that he was not debarred from trying the case under s 191, 28 C 788; 14 Bom L R. 231 = 15 Cr. L. J. 287. In a complaint of criminal trespass the complainant in his written petition made no mention of the offence which the alleged trespasser intended to commit, but on his being examined by the Magistrate stated that the offence intended was that of criminal intrigue with his wife. Held, that there were sufficient materials before the Magistrate to enable him to take cognizance of the offence against the accused, 1899 A. W. N. 212. See also 25 A. 209. A complainant, after stating the manner in which he was defamed, concluded with the prayer, "your petitioner therefore charges the said accused person under Chap. XXI I P C, and prays that they may be dealt with according to law." In his examination before the Magistrate he charged the accused under s. 500 and said "the matters stated in my written complaint are to the best of my belief true." Held that though the complaint was defective in not stating all the facts necessary to constitute an offence under s. 502, I P C, as required by s. 189 there was in the petition a complaint before the Magistrate of offences falling under ss 500 501 and 502 I P C. 8 P. R. 1891. In 10 A. 39 following 5 A. 233, it was however, held that a charge of detamation could not, subsequent to the presentation of the complaint be added by the Magistrate on the statements made by the complainant in his evidence, whether of his own accord or with reference to suggestions made by the Magistrate. See also 14 Bom. L. R. 141 = 13 Cr. L. J. 237 and 14 Bom. L. R. 1166 = 14 Cr. L. J. 1. Cf 6 G. W. N. 202; 3 G. W. N. 279.

14. Who may complain.—See Note 3 at p 17. As a general rule it is the right and, in some cases, also the duty of any person having knowledge of the commission of an offence to set the law in motion by a complaint, even though he is not personally interested or affected by the offence. To this rule there are exceptions created by Statute, e.g., ss. 195 and 198, offences about the Stamp laws, about Lotteries, etc. There is nothing in the Code showing an intention to confine prosecution to the persons directly injured, 13 B 600 followed in 18 A. 485; 10 Cr. L. J. 18 (A) 14 Cr. L. J. 403 (Oudh.), 7 S. L. R. 77 = 15 Cr. L. J. 369. See also 20 G. 331; 21 B. 536.

(a) Complaint by Magistrate's servant—The fact that the complainant is a servant of the Magistrate does not deprive the latter of his jurisdiction, though in such a case it would generally be expedient for him to refer the complainant to another Magistrate, 9 B. 172.

(b) Complaints by Court or public servants of offences mentioned in s 195—This section applies to offences mentioned in s 195 as well as to others, i.e., a Magistrate can only take cognizance of an offence mentioned in s. 195 in one of the three ways specified in this section and s 195 further declares that except where the Court or public servant concerned is the complainant its or his sanction is necessary. The Code does not contemplate a Court or public servant giving sanction where no application for sanction has been made. If a Court or public servant thinks it necessary to initiate a prosecution the proper course is to make a complaint. As far as Civil, Criminal and Revenue Courts acting in the course of a judicial proceeding are concerned, the procedure to be followed is prescribed in s 476. Other Courts or public servants are not specially provided for. They are in the category of ordinary complainants. Where it is the Court or public servant that wishes to prosecute, sanction is not required. All that is wanted is the complaint of the Court or public servant, 1907 U. B. R. Cr. P. C. 1 = 6 Cr. L. J. 25. Where an Assistant Collector trying a rent suit came to the conclusion that the plaintiff had committed perjury and submitted the records to the Collector and District Magistrate for starting a case under s. 193 1 P. C. Held that the Assistant Collector's order cannot be regarded as one under s. 476 and it fell within the definition of complaint so that the Collector and District Magistrate had power to act upon it under this section, 26 A. 514 where 23 A. 249 is followed.

15. Where there is a complaint, Magistrate must be presumed to act under cl. (a)—Where a complaint is made to a Magistrate, the Magistrate takes cognizance under sub-sec. (a) and not sub-sec. (c) even though he may record on the complaint that he acts under sub-sec. (c), 14 Bur. L. R. 250 = 4 L. B. R. 300 = 8 Cr. L. J. 505; 9 Bom. L. R. 212, 11 P. R. 1911 = 32 P. W. R. 1911 = 146 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 217; 7 S. L. R. 77 = 15 Cr. L. J. 269.

15-A Stamp on complaint and process fee.—A petition of complaint in a non-cognizable case presented to Criminal Court must bear a stamp of ½ rupee. See the Court Fees Act VII of 1870 Sch. II, Art I (b). Where a complainant being liable, under Rule 11 of the H. C. Cr. Cir., p. 7, to pay process-fee, neglects or refuses to pay the same, the Magistrate should dismiss the complaint unless he considers that there should be a prosecution in the interests of the public under this section, Ratanlal 491. See s. 204.

16. Magistrate bound to take cognizance upon a proper complaint.—(i) Magistrate has no option—The use of the term "may take cognizance of any offence" in this section does not make it optional with a Magistrate to hear a complainant but refers rather to the action of the Magistrate in taking cognizance of an offence in either of the specified courses in which the facts constituting the offence may be brought to his notice. He is bound to examine the complainant, and then can either issue summonses to the accused or order an inquiry under s. 202 or dismiss the complaint under s. 203, 13 G. 334; also Ratanlal 363; 29 G. 410. See also Notes under ss. 200 203. (ii) Complainant not going to Police is no ground for not taking cognizance—A Magistrate cannot refuse when properly called on to do so, to exercise jurisdiction merely on the ground that the complainant might reasonably have had recourse to the Police instead of the Magistrate, 12 B. 161; 14 W. R. 36. (iii) District Magistrate not acting—A Subordinate Magistrate is not precluded from taking cognizance of a formal complaint when the Magistrate of the district has refused to act upon communication received through post regarding the same subject matter. Such refusal does not amount to dismissal of complaint, 1399 A. W. N. 201; cf Weir II, 149. (iv) Offence requiring severer punishment—A Magistrate duly empowered under the Opium Act of 1878, cannot refuse to take up a case on the ground that the gravity of the offence required a severer punishment than the Magistrate could inflict, Ratanlal 375.

(v) Magistrate cannot decline jurisdiction because number of others jointly concerned in the offence have been convicted.—A Magistrate cannot decline jurisdiction and refuse to issue process in a case where there has been a legal complaint against persons concerning whom there is prima facie evidence. It may sometimes be expedient for the authorities to stay their hands after a certain number of people have been convicted but if the persons offended against claim to have tried the persons against whom there is evidence, there is no provision of the law which can prevent the case from proceeding 13 C. W. N. 103. See also Notes under s 200 (vi) Must not merely accept the conclusion of the Police—When a person appears before a Magistrate and states that an offence has been committed and requests that it might be investigated by calling and examining his witnesses this is tantamount to a complaint which the Magistrate is bound to inquire into. He could not avoid the responsibility of making the inquiry himself merely by accepting the conclusion of the Police on the subject 14 C. 707. See also 40 C. 71, 4 C. W. N. 221 (vii) Illegality of arrest—Where a Magistrate refused to take cognizance of a case on the ground that the accused had been improperly arrested and brought before him it was held, that the Magistrate was bound to take cognizance of the offence as the question whether the officer who effected the arrest was acting within or beyond his powers does not effect the question whether the accused were guilty or not of the offence with which they were charged 26 M. 124. See also Note 15 to s. 54 at p. 84 and Notes to s. 200.

17 Receiving complaint is a judicial act—A Magistrate taking cognizance of a complaint and issuing a summons thereon acts not ministerially but judicially 5 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 29.

18 Complaints under other Acts—Prosecutions under miscellaneous Acts and persons by whom they must be instituted. (The list is not exhaustive)

Act XVI of 1908 (Registration Act) ss 82 and 63—By or with the permission of the Inspector General, the Registrar or Sub-Registrar within whose local jurisdiction the offence is committed, see also 35 A. 334

18-A. As regards offences under s 20 of Cattle Trespass Act, a Magistrate can take cognizance upon receiving complaint, 21 Bom. L. R. 1084 = 41 B. 42.

III.—CLAUSE (b)—COGNIZANCE UPON POLICE REPORT.

19. What amounts to a Police report.—Police reports include all kinds of Police reports and not merely Charge-sheets or formal reports under Chapter XIV in cognizable cases (1904-05) U. B. R. Cr. P. G. 25 = 1 Cr. L. J. 1047; 29 C. 417. A Police report in a non-cognizable case is a Police report within the meaning of cl (1), (b) and there is no authority in the Code for examining the Police-officer submitting the report as if he were a complainant, 1914 U. B. R. 19 = 16 Cr. L. J. 97. There is no reason or authority for limiting the "Police report" for the report mentioned in s. 170 and the preceding sections of the Code. S 155 shows that Police officers are empowered to investigate a non-cognizable case, provided that they act under the orders of a Magistrate having power to try such a case and, as a natural consequence, they can send in a report under s 173, 11 A. L. J. 331 = 14 Cr. L. J. 218. Police report includes also a report under s. 62, 3 P. R. 1910 = 35 P. W. R. 1809 = 11 Cr. L. J. 150. See Note 11 under s 4 (1), (a) at p 9 and s. 173. Where a Police-officer carrying out the orders of the Magistrate under ss 87 and 88 on being obstructed, sent a private person to inform the Magistrate of what had taken place, and the Magistrate thereupon sent the Senior Inspector to take up the case, instructing him at the same time that he should take the statement of the attaching Police-officer as the first information of the occurrence and forward the same to him (the Magistrate) for cognizance to be taken under this section, held that the proceedings thus instituted were proper and legal 29 C. 417. But in 28 B. 150 (F.B.) it is held that there is no section in the Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, which empowers a Police-officer to make, of his own motion, any report to a Magistrate in a non-cognizable case, hence where he files a formal complaint in such a case, he cannot be said "to make a report" and his complaint falls within the definition of "complaint" in s 4. So the Magistrate will be taking cognizance in such a case under sub-cl (a) of sub-sect. (1) of s 190 and not under sub-cl (b) of the same sub-section. It is doubtful whether by the present amendment by doing away with the word "Police report" and substituting the words "upon a report in writing by any Police-officer" the Legislature intend to do away with the technical sense in which the word "Police report" is understood by the Bombay High Court and thereby to overrule the Bombay decision in 26 B. 150. If this be so then the report of a Police-officer in a non-cognizable case will have to be regarded as a report under cl (b) and not a complaint under cl (a) and the Magistrate will not have to follow the procedure under s 200 but see 46 C. 307 and 523 C. W. N. 490 which holds that a Magistrate by section 190 (i), (b) can take cognizance both in cognizable and non-cognizable offences upon a report such as is mentioned in section 190 (1), (b).

20. Police Chalan in the Punjab.—A Police chalan is a Police report of the fact constituting an offence, with the further incident that the accused and the witnesses accompany the report. Therefore a Magistrate is competent to take cognizance of the offence of working an illicit still, under Act XII of 1896 on the chalan of a Deputy Inspector of Police who is also an Excise Officer in the Punjab. See 22 P. R. 1900 and 8 P. R. 1901; see also 9 P. R. 1903, 15 P. R. 1937 and 4 P. R. 1993.

21. Magistrate not bound to take cognizance on Police report.—A Magistrate having before him a Police report submitted under s. 157 (b) may determine as he thinks expedient either to take no further steps or to take cognizance of the offence under cl (b) to this section or to proceed under s. 203, Weir II, 119 and 150. A Magistrate is competent to refuse to initiate proceedings on a Police report in a case in which there is no complaint, but only a report to the Police, and if he wrongly makes an order for the discharge of the accused under s. 253, his order is to be taken as one refusing to initiate proceedings under this section and the High Court will not revise such an order, 1 A. L. J. 609. But where the Police have reported the case as true and the Magistrate believes in its truth he cannot decline to order a judicial inquiry, merely because in his opinion there is no chance of a conviction and no useful purpose would be served by the inquiry. He is bound to examine the complainant and issue process, 29 C. 410.

21-A. Report of a Police-officer in Bombay arresting a woman under s. 10 (1) of the Bombay Prevention of Prostitution Act, 1923.—An arrest by a Police-officer, who is not specially authorized in this behalf by the Commissioner of Police in Bombay, under s. 10 (1) of the Bombay Prevention of Prostitution Act, without a complaint for an offence under s. 3 of the Act, is illegal, and the Presidency Magistrate has no jurisdiction under s. 190 of the Code to try the woman for the offence unless a complaint within the meaning of s. 4 (1), (b) is before him because in the City of Bombay a valid report by a Police-officer of the kind contemplated by cl (c) of s. 190 can only be made (1) in the case of cognizable offence and (2) when it contains information of a cognizable offence which he has been authorized by the Presidency Magistrate to investigate, 26 Bom. L. R. 1225. See Notes on s. 4 (b)

22. Duty of Magistrate when Police report defective.—Section 173 indicates what a Police report should set forth and provides that it should among other things set forth the nature of the information. Where the Police report was absolutely silent on the point, the prosecution instituted on such a Police report was set aside 37 C. 49. In this case no cause was shown against the rule. The Police report referred to is the report under s. 173, 1e made by the Police after they have investigated the case and ascertained the fact and come to the conclusion that there were sufficient materials to justify forwarding the person reported to the Magistrate. When a Magistrate took cognizance on a report which fulfils none of these conditions, his order may be set aside 58 L. R. 1 = 12 Cr. L. J. 92. If the Police report is defective, the Magistrate may treat the report as a complaint, in which case he would have to call upon the Police-officer to appear and substantiate the report on oath 16 C. W. N. 1049 = 13 Cr. L. J. 691.

23. Magistrate taking cognizance of case on information derived from the Police report acts under cl. (b)—The Police report need not set out the name of the accused person to give the Magistrate jurisdiction to deal with him under cl (a) or (b) 1905 U. B. R. Gr. P. C. 1. A Magistrate after perusing a Police report which set out that proceedings should not be instituted against two persons, directed the prosecution of a third person, held, that the Magistrate had not acted under cl (c) and no transfer was necessary, 1907 A. W. N. 93 = 5 Cr. L. J. 275. Where during the investigation on a Police report of an offence against L, the Magistrate considering that one S also should be joined as an accused person, issued process to him and tried and convicted both. Held, that the Magistrate took cognizance of S's offence under cl (b) and not under cl (c) of sub-sec. (1) of this section and was therefore not bound first to take action under s. 191, 9 N. L. R. 65 = 14 Cr. L. J. 280. Although a Magistrate not empowered under cl (c) of this section cannot take cognizance of an offence on his own motion he has the powers on receipt of information from the Police to order the prosecution of any person, who, in his opinion, ought to be put on the trial, a fortiori he can after taking evidence, know whom the Police ought to put up before him and order such person to be put up before him, 4 L. B. R. 137 = 7 Cr. L. J. 414. A Magistrate may take cognizance under this section of an offence brought to his notice by a Police report which affords ground for suspicion that an offence has been committed, but, as a matter of sound judicial discretion, a Magistrate should not so proceed and direct that the person suspected be tried until some person aggrieved has complained or until he has before him a Police report on the subject based on an investigation directed to the offence to be tried, 14 C. 707 (F B). When a Magistrate received a paper by post to the effect that certain Chowkidars had committed an offence and the Magistrate then and there sent the paper to the Police for inquiry, who sent a report suggesting the prosecution of the accused and thereupon the Magistrate took proceedings under s. 204, held that it must be presumed that the Magistrate acted upon the Police report, 11 A. L. J. 331 = 14 Cr. L. J. 218.

24. Magistrate taking cognizance of case on Police report directed by himself acts under cl (b)—Where on a complaint against certain persons to a Magistrate an investigation is made by the Police and a report made to the Magistrate implicating several other persons not mentioned in the complaint, and if the Magistrate thereupon takes cognizance of the offence against the persons not mentioned in the original complaint he does so under cl (b) and not under cl (c) of this section, so that s. 191 does not apply to such a case, 8 C. W. N. 864.

25. Appellate Court re-trying a case itself, acts under this sub-section.—Where a Magistrate acting under s. 423 (1) (6) sets aside on appeal the sentence of the original Magistrate and tries the offender himself the Magistrate acts under sub-sec. (b) and not (c) as he has before him the Police charge-sheet stating all the facts 30 M. 229

25-A.—A letter written to the Superintendent of Police to his superior charging a Police-officer with extortion was placed before a Magistrate who issued a warrant on the strength of it. Without examining the Superintendent held the letter was not a Police report but a complaint, 20 Cr. L. J. 875.

IV—CLAUSE (c)—INFORMATION, KNOWLEDGE OR SUSPICION

26 Application of clause (c) is for vindication of public justice—Clause (c) of this section applies only to cases in which a private individual who is injured or aggrieved or someone on his part does not come forward to make a formal complaint. It is a provision of law for enabling a public official to take care that justice may be vindicated notwithstanding that the persons individually aggrieved are unwilling or unable to prosecute 5 B. L. R. 274 = 13 W. R. 27

27 Sources of information.—(a) Communication through post—A communication received by a District Magistrate through post is not a complaint but it is an information coming under cl (c) of sub-sec. (1) and may be acted upon by such Magistrate if he choose but he is not bound to deal with it judicially 1899 A. W. N. 201; 11 W. R. 1 It is competent to a Magistrate to receive and take action on petition relating to criminal charges when transmitted to him by post whether the Magistrate should do so or not is a matter within the Magistrate's discretion in each particular case. The language of cl (c) would clearly cover such a case—even an anonymous letter being information received from any person other than a Police-officer Weir II, 149 See also 4 M. L. T. 481 The opinion was expressed obiter that a Magistrate not specially empowered under s. 190 (c) cannot issue a warrant for the arrest of a person in the absence of a complaint and on the information contained in a telegram to him from a would-be complainant.

(b) Anonymous petition—Where a Magistrate takes cognizance of a case on anonymous communication he does so under cl (c) of the section and the accused is entitled to ask for its transfer to some other Magistrate 3 G. W. N. 63

(c) Cognizance of a case upon inquiry held by Sub-Magistrate—When a District Magistrate takes cognizance of offences under ss. 161 and 116 I. P. C., on an inquiry held by a Subordinate Magistrate which was directed to consider an altogether different question held that the case was instituted in the manner described in cl. (c), and that the Magistrate was on the objection of the accused debarred from holding the trial himself 3 G. W. N. 262

(d) Information received from another Magistrate—A Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence on information received from another Magistrate acts under cl. (c) and the accused is entitled to have the case transferred to another Magistrate 10 P. W. R. 1916 = 15 Cr. L. J. 261

(e) Meaning of information received from person other than a Police-officer—Section 190 (c) cannot possibly include a case of information derived from the Police and does not oblige a Magistrate acting on such information to adopt the procedure under s. 191 3 P. R. 1910 = 35 P. W. R. 1909 = 11 Cr. L. J. 150 The expression information received from any person other than a Police-officer in s. 190 (1) (c) clearly means only such information as does not constitute a complaint or a Police report Per IRWIN, O.C.J. in 14 Bur. L. R. 250 = 4 L. B. R. 300 See Note 23

28 Illegal order of District Judge directing the prosecution of a person is not information.—The order of a District Judge as a civil officer directing the prosecution of a man nor under the Guardian and His Heirs Act cannot be regarded as information within the meaning of cl (c) as his order was illegal and there was no authority for the prosecution 87 P. L. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 602 See however 11 Cr. L. J. 736 (Burma)

29 Has Magistrate no power to take cognizance on information derived by himself in another public capacity?—In 37 C. 221 it was held following 10 G. W. N. 775 that a Magistrate who has received information of an offence in another public capacity e.g. as manager of an encumbered estate cannot act on it in his capacity as a Magistrate and take cognizance under s. 190 (1) (c). If the Magistrate desires to institute proceedings he should follow the ordinary procedure and have a proper complaint lodged. But CARNDUFF J. was of opinion that the ruling in 10 G. W. N. 775 went too far. Where a Magistrate is personally interested in a case he cannot under s. 556 try it or commit it for trial without special permission but the line is drawn at trial or commitment and does not go the length of impeding mere cognizance of crime. See 12 G. W. N. 438 But 43 M. 709 agrees with the opinion of CARNDUFF J. and holds that the fact that a Magistrate who happens to be also the President of the District Board receives in the latter capacity information as to the commission of an offence by a servant of the Board does not debar him from taking cognizance of the offence under s. 190 cl. (c) of the Code. 10 G. W. N. 775, dissented from.

And in 2 p. 439 it was held that where the District Registrar was also the District Magistrate and found that a document in an appeal before him, was a forgery and ordered the prosecution of the appellant under s. 471 I. P. C. held that although the District Registrar was not a Court within the meaning of s. 476 he could as District Magistrate take cognizance of the offence under s. 190 (1), (c).

30 Cognizance of case put up before him by the order of another Magistrate is under cl (c) —A Magistrate passing orders for the issue of summons against the accused in a case placed before him by an order of the Collector to the effect that the case should be put up before the Magistrate for the issue of necessary orders takes cognizance of the case under sub-sec. (c) 12 C. W. N. 433 = 7 Cr. L. J. 224. See also 14 Bur. L. R. 327 = 9 Cr. L. J. 64. The Police reported an information of their lodged against the petitioners by S to be false and recommended the prosecution of S, the Deputy Magistrate in charge on receipt of the Police report ordered a judicial inquiry although there was no complaint by S and made over the case for disposal to another Magistrate B who issued summonses against the petitioners, held, that the first Magistrate who really contemplated taking proceedings against the accused was the Magistrate B and that it was clear that he did not act either upon a complaint or a Police report and although (c) did not strictly apply it was desirable that the case should be tried by another Magistrate 15 C. W. N. 795 = 14 Cr. L. J. 425. Where a District Magistrate holding an inquiry under the Land Revenue Code, comes to the conclusion that a case had been made out against the accused under ss. 161 and 162, I P C, and after obtaining the sanction of the Government transfers case to a Subordinate Magistrate Held that it was the District Magistrate who took cognizance of the offence and not the Subordinate Magistrate, 7 Bom. L. R. 537 = 2 Cr. L. J. 582.

31. What the information must contain—To justify a Magistrate in taking cognizance of an offence under s 190 (c), upon information received from any person other than a Police-officer, the information need not contain all the allegations necessary to be proved to establish the offence, it is sufficient if enough is alleged to justify the Magistrate in dealing judicially with the matter, 35 C. 1076.

32. If a Magistrate acts on insufficient information, High Court may stay proceedings in the absence of evidence.—Where prosecution against one P under the Opium Act, having failed, the District Magistrate without any further information on that subject directed proceedings to be taken against S and his servants, the consignors of the (opium) parcel, and that they should be held by a Sub-Magistrate, and that "when the case was disposed of, the record will be put up before the District Magistrate for executive action. Held, that the District Magistrate having himself instituted the proceedings took cognizance of the offence under cl. (c), and by the fact of his having directed that the trial should be held by a Sub-Magistrate, his action cannot be regarded other than that of a Magistrate acting judicially, and that the proceedings having been taken without any evidence at all should be stayed 4 C. W. N. 825. Where a Revenue Officer who is also a Magistrate himself institutes proceedings under cl. (c) and directs one of his Subordinate Magistrates to proceed with the trial the action of the Revenue Officer certainly cannot be regarded, as other than that of a Magistrate acting judicially, 4 C. W. N. 825. See also 9 Bom. L. R. 212 = 5 Cr. L. J. 202.

33. Procedure on getting information—(a) Magistrate bound to record the information on which he acts—Where a Magistrate takes cognizance of an offence on information from any person, other than a Police officer, he should at least record the information on which he has acted though it may not be obligatory upon him to disclose the sources of his information. But where the Magistrate is himself directly interested in the case as the Agent to the Court of Wards he was held not competent to act on the information which has reached him as such agent and to issue warrants, as by so doing he was practically making himself a Judge in his own case, 10 C. W. N. 775 = 3 Cr. L. J. 473, where 5 B. L. R. 274 and 13 W. R. 1 are followed.

(b) So much of the information should be recorded as to make out a prima facie case—What allegations or how much of the information should be recorded by the Magistrate in such a case, it is difficult to lay down in general terms, but when it is found that the recorded information is sufficient to justify the Magistrate in considering that a prima facie case has been made out, the High Court will not interfere with the Magistrate's action in taking cognizance under s 190 (c) 33 C. 1076.

(c) No power to administer oath to a person from whom Magistrate seeks information—A Magistrate wishing to ascertain whether there were sufficient grounds for his taking action under cl. (c) of this section against some person not before the Court has no authority to administer an oath to a person from whom he seeks information, and the person so examined is not bound by any provision of law to speak the truth, 27 C. 455, 7 N. L. R. 65 = 12 Cr. L. J. 326

(d) Magistrate must inform the accused that he is entitled to have the case transferred See s 191 and Notes thereto

34. 'Knowledge.'—A gratuitous suspicion or belief founded on private information contained in an anonymous petition is not 'knowledge'. A Magistrate is bound to disclose the information, private or otherwise, on which he has issued a warrant for the arrest of the accused, 4 B. L. R. Appx 1 = 13 W. R. 1.

35. Taking cognizance under cl. (c) does not deprive Magistrate of jurisdiction to try.—This section very clearly shows that the mere fact that a Magistrate who is authorized under cl. (c) to take cognizance of offences has directed the institution of proceedings upon his own knowledge or upon his own suspicion does not preclude such Magistrate from jurisdiction to hear and determine the case which may in fact have been instituted upon his own peculiar knowledge of the fact. In such cases s. 191 enables the accused to apply for a transfer of the case to some other Magistrate but unless the accused exercises that privilege the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to institute hear and determine the particular case is unquestionable. A merely pre-conceived opinion as to the guilt of an accused does not necessarily deprive a Magistrate of jurisdiction to adjudicate on the charge 1893 A W N at p 79

35 Provisions of cl (c) do not extend to proceedings under Chapter VIII —The provisions of cl. (c) of this section and of s 191 do not as a rule apply to proceedings under Chapter VIII 27 A 172 But where a Magistrate had initiated proceedings under s 110 in some measure though not mainly on his own knowledge it was thought undesirable that he should proceed with the inquiry 29 C 392 See Note 15 at p 182

Y—MISCELLANEOUS

37 Fresh proceedings against person discharged —Where a Subordinate Magistrate has discharged an accused the District Magistrate is not competent acting under sub-sec. (1) cl (c) of this section to direct another Magistrate to re-hear the case 2 B 535 But see 6 B L R Appx 67—14 W R 65 and 8 W R 61 See also 25 C 652 (F B) 29 C 726 (B F)

38. As a general rule, no limitation for lodging a complaint —It is only by express statutory provisions that rules of limitation can be made applicable to criminal proceedings 20 B 543.

All offences under the Penal Code may be prosecuted after any lapse of time the only exception expressly provided in respect of offences requiring previous sanction and for which sanction has been granted But the maxim Nullum tempus Occurrit regi is becoming more and more obsolete and sundry special and local laws have been from time to time passed which prescribe periods within which offences against their provisions must be prosecuted.

The following are some of these laws —

191. When Magistrate takes cognizance of an offence under sub-section (1) clause (c)

Transfer or commitment on application of accused.

of the preceding section the accused shall before any evidence is taken be informed that he is entitled to have the case tried by another Court and if the accused or any of the accused if there be more than one objects to being tried by such Magistrate the case shall instead of being tried by such

Magistrate be committed to the Court of Session or transferred to another Magistrate

Notes.—1 What amounts to taking cognizance under cl. (c) of s. 190, see Notes 3 and 27—33 to s. 190

2. Accused must be informed of his right to claim transfer.—His silence is no waiver.—These words shall be construed as entitling are mandatory and a Magistrate cannot refuse to comply with them 13 A 345. Silence on the part of the accused to take any objection as to the trial by a Magistrate taking cognizance of the case against him under cl. (c) in the face of the obligation imposed on the Magistrate by law to inform the accused of his right to object to the trial by such Magistrate cannot prejudice him and there cannot be any waiver of his right in such a case 3 G. W. N 279. See also 6 G. W. N 202. The accused if he elects to be tried by another Court must signify his election before any evidence is taken 29 P. R. 1894 at p. 82.

3. Omission to inform the accused of his rights under the section, not mere irregularity.—This section is a modification of the same section of Act X of 1882 as amended by Act III of 1884, and it is now made clear that the accused shall be informed of his right to be tried by another Court and that an opportunity must be given him of making his choice before any evidence is taken. Such an omission cannot be held to fall within the provisions of s. 537 especially when he Magistrate had interested himself very considerably in preparing the case against the accused, 13 P. R. 1898. When cognizance has been taken under cl. (c), the accused is entitled to have the case transferred and the Magistrate has no option or alternative but to grant such application of the accused or commit him for trial. A Magistrate who, notwithstanding an application by an accused for transfer, proceeds to hear the case, acts without jurisdiction and any error or defect in his procedure is not cured by s. 537, 13 A. 345. A Magistrate is not competent to try the case until he has informed the accused. Omission to inform will invalidate the conviction, 6 P. L. R. 333 (1903), 28 A. 212; 5 N. L. R. 113; 4 Bur. L. T. 259 = 13 Cr. L. J. 52. The fact that the Magistrate did not inform the accused that he was entitled to have the case transferred, is a ground for having the proceedings set aside, but not for making an order for transfer, Weir II, 151. Where a Cantonment Magistrate warned the accused that he must not tie his buffaloes in a certain spot, but the accused persisted and the Magistrate on a local inspection finding the place filthy, charged and convicted the owner on his own personal knowledge. Held, the mere fact that the Magistrate had made a local inspection did not debar him from trying the charge, provided he acted on independent evidence before convicting the accused. But if the Magistrate intends to proceed on his own knowledge without taking any independent evidence, he must conform to the provisions of this section and hence the conviction and sentence were set aside as illegal, 8 P. R. 1905 = 2 Cr. L. J. 45. See also 3 A. L. J. 694 = 1905 A. W. N. 303 = 4 Cr. L. J. 374. In 31 P. L. R. 1905 = 2 Cr. L. J. 187, the Punjab Chief Court in quashing a similar conviction observed "that the brevity permitted in a summary trial does not mean that there shall be no trial at all or that an accused can be heavily fined at a Magistrate's discretion on a personal knowledge, not withstanding that the law gives the accused the right of demanding that his case should be tried by another Court. See also 84 P. L. R. 1905 = 2 Cr. L. J. 365, 10 C. W. N. 775, 21 A. L. J. 89, 41 A. 164; 22 Cr. L. J. 319.

4. 'Trial' of a case does not include preliminary inquiry and Magistrate may commit to Sessions on objection.—When a Magistrate is empowered to make a commitment of a case within his cognizance he cannot do so without holding a preliminary inquiry, a fortiori, when the case is triable by the Court of Session exclusively, 21 A. 109. The right view appears to be that the accused are only entitled to object to a trial by the Magistrate taking cognizance under cl. (c) of s. 190, but the Magistrate is not bound to transfer the case. He may elect to commit it to the Court of Session, 22 M. 148; 26 C. 786.

5. Accused not entitled to choose his own Court.—All that the accused is entitled to under this section is to have the case tried by another Court. The section gives the accused no right to select or determine for himself by what other Court the case is to be tried. 7 Bom. L. R. 637 = 2 Cr. L. J. 582. See 22 M. 148. Note above.

6. Applicability of the section to proceedings under Chapters VII and XIII.—If a Magistrate proceeding under s. 110 has received information other than under cl. (a) and (b) of s. 190, he is not bound to inform the accused that he is entitled to have the matter heard by another Court, 27 A. 172. But the principle that no man ought to be a judge in his own case would apply, if a Magistrate instituting proceedings acts or relies on his knowledge of the character of the party proceeded against. 29 C. 392. See Note 15 at p. 182 and also 24 A. 151 and 1904 A. W. N. 206.

7. Appellate Magistrate taking cognizance of case and re-trying need not transfer.—See 30 M. 278. Note 23 at p. 478.

8. Magistrate taking cognizance cannot hear appeal.—A Subordinate Magistrate who took cognizance of a case under sub-sec. (1), (c) of s. 190 could not after becoming District Magistrate hear an appeal from a conviction in the case which was tried by another Subordinate Magistrate without following the procedure laid down by this section, an appeal being part of the trial for an offence, 12 C. W. N. 433 = 7 Cr. L. J. 224. But a Magistrate who did not take cognizance or directed a local investigation but merely directed the issue or summons holding that the investigating Magistrate had not given satisfactory reasons for recommending the dismissal of the complaint is not incompetent to hear the appeal on conviction, 36 C. 869. See also 1899 A. W. N. 74, and compare 18 C. 121; 12 M. 451; 23 C. 44; 1895 A. W. N. 226; 23 C. 975.

Transfer of cases by Magistrates

192. (1) Any Chief Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate may transfer any case, of which he has taken cognizance, for inquiry or trial, to any Magistrate subordinate to him

(2) Any District Magistrate may empower any Magistrate of the first class who has taken cognizance of any case to transfer it for inquiry or trial to any other specified Magistrate in his district who is competent under this Code to try the accused or commit him for trial, and such Magistrate may dispose of the case accordingly

Notes.—1. Scope of section.—(i) Note the difference between sub-secs (1) and (2).—(a) Under sub-sec (1) the transfer may be made to any Magistrate subordinate to the transferring Magistrate while under sub sec. (2) the transfer must be made to a specified Magistrate competent to try the accused or commit him for trial (b) Under sub-sec. (2) any case may be transferred while sub-sec (2) seems to contemplate such cases only where there is an accused and he is to be tried or committed excluding cases under ss 144, 145, etc. See 4 C. W. N. 821 and 38 C. 370.

(ii) District and Sub-divisional Magistrates have co-ordinate jurisdiction as regards cases pending before Magistrates subordinate to latter.—Under this section the District Magistrate and the Sub-divisional Magistrate have co-ordinate jurisdiction as regards cases pending before Magistrates subordinate to the latter, and whatever the Magistrate of the district might do with regard to offences committed in the district, the Divisional Magistrate is competent to do with regard to offences within his local jurisdiction, 4 A. 386. See also 12 A. 86.

(iii) Orders not within the scope of the section.—It is not competent to a District Magistrate to direct a Subordinate Magistrate to dispose of a case, pending in the Court of the latter in a particular manner, e.g., by commitment, Weir II, 152 and Weir I, 289.

2 What 'cases' may be transferred.—Though the words 'any case' are very wide, it is doubtful having regard to the position of this section in the Code, whether they do not apply exclusively to criminal cases or cases relating to offences, 28 C. 709 at pp 716, 717. But in 35 C. 243, it was held that under this section a District Magistrate is competent to transfer any case cognizable by a Criminal Court and his power of transfer is not restricted to criminal cases only

(a) Cases under s 107.—A District Magistrate may under the provisions of this section transfer to the file of a first class Magistrate subordinate to himself, proceedings which he had himself initiated under s 107 though such Magistrate of the first class by want of local jurisdiction would be incompetent to initiate such proceedings 24 A. 181; see also 31 C. 350, 29 C. 389; 28 C. 709; 22 C. 898 and Notes under s 107

(b) Cases under s 110.—A District Magistrate is competent under this section to transfer a case under s. 110, 35 C. 243. But not where the Magistrate to whom the case has been transferred is not empowered to try cases under s. 110, Ratanlal 833, 1 S. L. R. 2 = 9 Cr. L. J. 246, and Notes under Heading XVI at p 212

(c) Cases under s 145.—The words of sub-sec. (1) of this section are wide enough to include cases under Chapter XII. The general power conferred by this section and s. 529 upon District and Sub-divisional Magistrates is not taken away or cut down by anything in s. 145 22 C. 898; 26 M. 183, 10 C. W. N. 1095 and 2 C. L. J. 614 = 3 Cr. L. J. 83. But a Magistrate of the first class empowered to transfer cases under sub-sec. 2 is so empowered only to transfer an inquiry or trial relating to an accusation or charge of an offence. He is not competent to transfer cases under s. 145 4 C. W. N. 821, followed in 36 C. 370, see, however, s. 529 (f) and 5 C. W. N. 686, where a District Magistrate transferred a case under s. 145 to a senior Deputy Magistrate to be disposed of by him or by any other Magistrate whom the latter may direct and subsequently the Deputy Magistrate transferred the case to another Magistrate who finally disposed of it. Held, that the transfer under this section was irregular, not being to a specified Magistrate, but by reason of s. 529 (f), the irregularity did not vitiate the proceedings. See Note 163 at p 306, 20 A. L. J. 215.

(d) Cases under ss 487 and 556—e.g., cases falling under s 487 or s. 556, or cases initiated by the Magistrate himself or in which he is a material witness, see 4 B. L. R. A. Cr. 15; 8 B. L. R. 422 (F.B.), 2 C. 23 = 25 W. R. 87; 29 C. 392; 19 M. 263; 26 C. 439, and 25 C. 727.

3. When cases may be transferred.—The section empowers the transfer of cases of which cognizance has been taken for inquiry or trial

(a) Complaint may be transferred even before issue of process—The term 'case' has not been defined in the Code, but reading together s. 192 (1), cl. (a) of s. 190 (1) and proviso (g) to s. 200, it is clear that it includes a proceeding upon a complaint as soon as the complaint has been received by the Magistrate who takes cognizance of the offence complained of. Therefore a District Magistrate may, under s. 528 on the application of an accused person, withdraw a complaint from one Subordinate Magistrate and refer it to another Magistrate even before the first Magistrate has decided to issue any process against the accused, 7 N. L. R. 97—12 Cr. L. J. 437. See, however, 27 C. 798.

(b) Part heard case cannot be transferred—Where a Magistrate who has taken cognizance of a case and partly tried it finds that only an offence which a Subordinate Magistrate is competent to try has been committed, he has no power to transfer the case to the Subordinate Magistrate but must dispose of it himself, Weir II, 152. See also 12 A. 86.

(c) Transferred cases cannot be transferred—This section has reference only to cases of which the transferring Magistrate has taken cognizance, i.e., acted under s. 190. It has no reference to cases which have been transferred, 12 A. L. J. 277 = 15 Cr. L. J. 357; 38 A. 166. This section confers no authority on one Subordinate Magistrate to refer to another Subordinate Magistrate a case referred to him for disposal, 7 M. H. C. R. Appx. XXXIII = Weir II, 151. But having regard to s. 529 (f), proceedings would not be void, if the Magistrate acts in good faith, Weir II, 152; 4 C. W. N. 821.

(d) S. 192 (1) of the Code empowers a Magistrate to transfer a case or inquiry or trial but it does not empower him to transfer a case simply for the purpose of considering a report of an investigation under s. 202 of the Code which he has himself ordered. The provisions of s. 193 or 202 do not entitle a Magistrate, after he has proceeded under the latter section to make an order under the provisions of s. 192, transferring the case for being dealt with under s. 203 or 204 without a fresh investigation as contemplated by s. 202. 29 C. W. N. 508.

4. Power to transfer cases which the Subordinate Magistrate is not competent to try.—Though a complaint under s. 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act must be entertained either by a District Magistrate or a Magistrate specially authorized, such Magistrate has now power under sub-sec. (1) of this section to transfer the case after taking cognizance of it, to any Subordinate Magistrate, 34 C. 926 overruling 23 C. 300; 23 C. 442, where it was held that the section does not authorize a District Magistrate to transfer for trial to a Subordinate Magistrate cases which are not in the power of that Magistrate to try.

5. Notice of transfer should be given to parties.—Before transferring a case under s. 528 from one Subordinate Magistrate to another, a notice of such intended transfer should be served upon the parties to come forward and show cause why such transfer should not be made, 2 Bom. L. R. 342; 5 C. 293 = 10 C. L. R. 239. See also 3 A. 749; Ratanlal 460; 22 B. 519. But where a case is transferred under this section as soon as complaint is received, no notice would seem to be necessary. So also notice is not necessary where a District Magistrate suo motu withdraws the case to his own file or transfers or re transfers it from one Court to another under his control 3 P. R. 1910 = 35 P. W. R. 1909 = 11 Cr. L. J. 150, where 24 M. 317 is referred to.

(a) Transfer how made in the Punjab—"Complaints referred to Subordinate Magistrates under this section must always be sent by post or by a messenger of the Court, after being endorsed with the date of presentation and an order of reference, specifying the number of days within which the complainant must appear to prosecute, and, at the same time a memorandum must be given to the person presenting the complaint, informing him what Magistrate the complaint has been referred to, and of the time within which he must appear before such Magistrate to prosecute"—Punjab Gazette, 1879, Pt. III, p. 571.

6. Effect of transfer.—(a) When no reservation is made, the whole case is transferred.—Where a complaint or Police report deals with several persons, it is not necessary that the entire case, i.e., the case regarding the offences committed according to the complaint or report should be transferred. Whether such a transfer has been made is a question of fact depending on the intention of the officer marking the order, which intention must be gathered from the order itself. Where no reservation is made, it may be concluded that the entire case has been transferred.—PER HENDERSON, J., 32 C. 783 at p. 789.

(b) After transfer no other Magistrate can deal with that case—Where a case has been transferred to a Deputy Magistrate, it is that officer alone who has jurisdiction to deal with any application or summons until the case is withdrawn from his cognizance. The case is entirely out of the hands of the transferring Magistrate, so long as it is not withdrawn from the file of the Deputy Magistrate. Until such withdrawal, the District Magistrate has no power to make any order, save an order, for further inquiry under s. 437, 32 C. 783. See also 3 B. L. R. Appx. 151 = 12 W. R. 53; 27 C. 979; 27 C. 798; 5 C. W. N. 493; 4 C. W. N. 242 and 30 C. 449. It is the case that is transferred, ie., offence, not the offenders, of which cognizance has been taken under s 190 and he can proceed even against parties not mentioned in original the complaint 4 C. W. N. 550; 27 C. 979, 41 C. 1013. He may while discharging the accused sent to him institute proceedings against persons concerned in the case whom the transferring Magistrate had not summoned even on complaint, 7 C. L. J. 249 = 7 Cr. L. J. 318

7. After transfer prosecution witnesses must be examined afresh.—When a case is transferred after the evidence for the prosecution has been recorded the procedure to be followed is that the prosecution witnesses must be examined afresh. The Magistrate cannot act upon the evidence recorded already by another Magistrate 14 A. 346, Weir II, 152. But see 35 C. 457 and Notes to s 350

8. Sworn statement need not be taken afresh if already taken before transfer.—The power conferred by this section to transfer cases to Subordinate Magistrates after taking cognizance thereof may be exercised before the examination of the complainant [s. 200 (a)] but where the transferring Magistrate has already examined the complainant, the Magistrate to whom the case is transferred, is not bound to re-examine the complainant. See also 200 (c) and 4 N.-W. P. H. C. R. 88, contra 18 W. R. 18

9. Chief Presidency Magistrate.—The subordination of the Presidency Magistrates (suspensary as well as honorary) to the Chief Presidency Magistrate, is of the same kind and extent, as the subordination of Magistrates and Benches to the District Magistrate under s 17 (1). The Chief Presidency Magistrate can therefore act under s 528, 1 Bom. L. R. 347.

10. Powers of first-class Magistrates in Madras and Punjab.—In Madras and in the Punjab, all Magistrates of the first class have been invested with powers to transfer cases to their Subordinate Magistrates under sub-sec. (2).—Fort St. George Gazette, 1873 p 717, Punjab Gazette 1879, Pt. I p 680

11. Transfer by Magistrate not authorized.—If a Magistrate not empowered under this section transfers a case, the irregularities cured by s 529 (f) 36 C. 869.

12. Rules as to proper construction of transfer orders of the High Court directed to the District Magistrate.—When a criminal case is transferred by an District Magistrate to the Court of a District Magistrate, power to transfer the case to a subordinate Court, that Court. If no such intention is expressed it will be understood that in the case of a transfer from a Court subordinate to a District Magistrate to a District Magistrate's Court that District Magistrate's Court is expected to try the case itself but, when the transfer is from the Court of one District Magistrate to that of another it will be understood that unless the contrary is directly expressed the Magistrate of the Court to which the transfer is made has power and jurisdiction to apply this section and to transfer the case to the Court of any Magistrate subordinate to him who may be competent to try it 19 A. 249

193. (1) Except as otherwise expressly provided by this Code or by any other law for the time being in force, no Court of Session shall take cognizance of any offence as a Court of original jurisdiction unless the accused has been committed to it by a Magistrate duly empowered in that behalf

(2) Additional Sessions Judges and Assistant Sessions Judges shall try such cases only as the Local Government by general or special order may direct them to try, or, as the Sessions Judge of the division by general or special order, may make over to them for trial.

Notes.—1. Generally Sessions Court has no authority to take cognizance of any offence or hold a trial without commitment.—Except in cases in which a Court of Session is expressly empowered to take cognizance of an offence as a Court of original jurisdiction it has no power to do so, unless a commitment has been made by a Magistrate duly empowered in that behalf 1807 A. W. N. 178 = 5 Cr. L. J. 7. See Notes to ss 226 and 227 as to the powers of a Sessions Court to add new charges

The trial of persons who are not committed to the Sessions is invalid 15 M. 332; 22 C. 80. The absence of any commitment is a defect in substance not in form and therefore not covered by s 517 42 P. R. 1884 at p 92. See also 25 M. 61 (P.C.) and Note 9

The procedure however does not affect the Code in its application to European British subjects in both these provinces see the Regulations referred to Sch. a 14 and 11 respectively

† The words "in the case of Assistant Sessions Judges" have been omitted by Act XXIII of 1923.

Exceptions to this general provision.—In the following cases a Court of Session can take cognizance of cases without commitment by Magistrates. S. 438.—Power to order commitment on examining records' S. 477.—Power of a Court of Session to take cognizance of offences committed before itself and triable by the Court of Session exclusively S. 478.—Power of Civil or Revenue Courts to complete investigation and commit to High Court or Court of Session S. 480.—Procedure in certain cases of contempt S. 493.—Proceedings against a person refusing to answer or produce documents S. 351.—Would seem to empower a Court of Session to proceed against any person attending the Court and appearing to be an offender. See ss 195 and 476 for power to sanction and for sending for inquiry cases mentioned in s 195.

2. Object of the restriction is to secure to the accused a preliminary inquiry.—The object of restricting a Sessions Court from taking cognizance of any offence unless the accused person has been committed by a Magistrate, is to secure to the prisoner a preliminary inquiry which affords him an opportunity of becoming acquainted with the circumstances of the offence imputed to him and enables him to make his defence, S. 351 and see Notes to s 208. In another case the same High Court remarked "the law contemplates that in serious cases of which a Court of Session may take cognizance, the accused should have some information of the case he has to answer," S. 277.

3. Effect of informal commitment.—A Court of Session cannot treat as a nullity a commitment by a Magistrate of the first class on the ground that he investigated the case, and committed the prisoner without a formal complaint being made to him, but should proceed with the case in the usual way, 1 B. H. C. R. Cr. CA. 33. The onus is on the party impugning the correctness of the proceedings to show that there was no jurisdiction, 13 W. R. 17. See Evidence Act, s 114, cl (c). See s 532 and Notes thereunder as to when irregular commitments may be validated. See S. R. 83.

4. Amended charge to be in the name of committing Magistrate.—The charge though amended or altered by the Sessions Court, under s 226, must still be drawn in the name of the committing Magistrate—M H C Pro, 30th August, 1882.

5. Assistant Judge in charge of the duties of the Sessions Judge may try only the cases made over to him.—An Assistant Sessions Judge, who had been directed by Government to take over charge of the duties of the District and Sessions Judge, during a temporary vacancy in the office, is not an officer appointed to act as Sessions Judge, and has no jurisdiction to try any case even as an Assistant Sessions Judge, unless it was made over to him by general or special order under the last paragraph of this section, Ratanlal 500. See also s 17 (3) and (4) and s 7.

6. Additional Sessions Judge—His powers.—(a) Applications for revision can be referred to him—S. B 352 is now superseded by sub-sec. (2), s. 438. See also s. 17 (4) and (9).

(b) To direct commitment—S. B. 164 is now superseded by s 438 (2).

(c) Reference under s. 123—Such a reference is not a case committed for trial, and the Court of Session disposing of such reference does not "try a case" within the meaning of this section. Therefore an Additional Sessions Judge empowered to try all cases which may be committed for trial by the Magistrates of the District has no jurisdiction to pass orders under s. 123, Ratanlal 830. See Notes 10 at p. 175.

The word "cases" in sub-sec. (2) does not include appeals, 37 A. 286, and see Note to s. 409.

Where under s. 123 a Magistrate referred the case to the Sessions Judge and the latter transferred the reference to the first Additional Sessions Judge for disposal held that the Sessions Judge had jurisdiction to transfer such a case to the Additional Sessions Judge for disposal, 27 C. W. N. 896 (Bengal Government Notification, dated 19th June, 1916 referred to).

7. Power of Government to make over a particular case to an Additional Sessions Judge.—In Kunjan Menon's case (Weir II, 319) the Government directed that the trial of a person governed by s. 197 and or another not governed by that section, shall be by a particular Court. On objection being taken, that under s. 197 the Local Government had no power to specify the Court that should try the second accused, held that this section justified the order of the Government as the trial was held by an Additional Sessions Judge and the Local Government could direct the case of a particular accused person to be tried by such Judge.

8. Jurisdiction of Sessions Courts in cases of offences committed before it.—See Notes under s. 477.

9. Power of Sessions Judge to try approver forfeiting conditional pardon.—A Sessions Judge who has held that a witness giving evidence under conditional pardon has not complied with the conditions, is not competent at once to try him. He can hold a trial only after commitment by a competent Court. He should, therefore in such a case order it to be laid before a competent Magistrate with his own opinion or that the Magistrate may act in accordance with law 19 W R 43; 19 W 352, 22 G. 80, 23 E. 493. See also 1907 A W N 178 in Note 1 and see Note under s. 339

Cognizance of offences by High Court Act X of 1875 s. 145

(2) (a) Notwithstanding anything in this Code contained the Advocate General may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council or the Local Government exhibit to the High Court against persons subject to the jurisdiction of the High Court informations for all purposes for which Her Majesty's Attorney General may exhibit informations on behalf of the Crown in the High Court of Justice in England

(b) Such proceedings may be taken upon every such information as may lawfully be taken in the case of similar informations filed by Her Majesty's Attorney General so far as the circumstances of the case and the practice and procedure of the said High Court will admit

(c) All fines penalties forfeitures debts and sums of money recovered or levied under or by virtue of any such information shall belong to the Government of India

(d) The High Court may make rules for carrying into effect the provision of this section

2 See ss 22 to 29 both inclusive of the Letters Patent of the High Courts to Bengal Madras & Bombay and ss 15 to 22 both inclusive of V W P High Court as to ordinary and extraordinary criminal jurisdiction of the several High Courts Appx I

3. Sub-sec. (2) clauses (a) (b) (c) correspond with s. 144 of Act X of 1875 which is now repealed S. 146 is now to some extent covered by s. 338

195. (1) No Court shall take cognizance—

Prosecution for contempt of law authority of public servants. (a) of any offence punishable under sections 172 to 188 of the Indian Penal Code except on the complaint in writing of the public servant concerned or of some other public servant to whom he is subordinate

Prosecution for certain offences against public justice. (b) of any offence punishable under any of the following sections of the same Code namely sections 193 194 195 196 199 200 205 206 207 208 209 210 211 and 228 when such offence is alleged to have been committed in or in relation to any proceeding in any Court except on the complaint in writing of such Court or of some other Court to which such Court is subordinate

Prosecution for certain offences relating to documents given in evidence. (c) of any offence described in section 463 or punishable under section 471 section 475 or section 476 of the same Code when such offence is alleged to have been committed by a party to any proceeding in any Court in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in such proceeding except on the complaint in writing of such Court or of some other Court to which such Court is subordinate

(2) in clauses (b) and (c) of sub-section (1) the term Court includes a Civil Revenue or Criminal Court but does not include a Registrar or Sub-Registrar under the Indian Registration Act 1877

Sub-sec. (1) has been substituted in the place of the old sub-sec. (1), by Act I V III of 1923
 † The word in Act has been substituted in the place of means by Act I V III of 1923

*“(3) For the purposes of this section, a Court shall be deemed to be subordinate to the Court to which appeals ordinarily lie from the appealable decrees or sentences of such former Court, or in the case of a Civil Court from whose decrees no appeal ordinarily lies, to the principal Court having ordinary original civil jurisdiction within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such Civil Court is situate

Provided that—

(a) where appeals lie to more than one Court, the Appellate Court of inferior jurisdiction shall be the Court to which such Court shall be deemed to be subordinate, and

(b) where appeals lie to a Civil and also to a Revenue Court such Court shall be deemed to be subordinate to the Civil or Revenue Court according to the nature of the case or proceeding in connection with which the offence is alleged to have been committed”

(4) The provisions of sub-section (1) with reference to the offences named therein apply also to “criminal conspiracies to commit such offences and to” the abetment of such offences, and attempts to commit them

† (5) Where a complaint has been made under sub-section (1), clause (a) by a public servant, any authority to which such public servant is subordinate may order the withdrawal of the complaint and, if it does so, it shall forward a copy of such order to the Court and upon receipt thereof by the Court, no further proceedings shall be taken on the complaint”

Preliminary Note.—The principal amendments made in this section by Act XVIII of 1923 are—

(a) The words ‘with the previous sanction’ have been omitted from clauses (a), (b) and (c) of sub-section (1).

(b) Sub-sections (4) (5) and (6) which dealt with sanction have also been omitted.

(c) The words “in writing” are added after the word “complaint” in clauses (a) (b) and (c).

(d) In sub-section (2) the word “includes” has been substituted for the word “means.”

(e) Sub-section (5) is entirely new

* The provisions of s 195 cause constant and great difficulty, and various amendments have been suggested which we have considered at length. We have no doubt that it will not be possible to remedy the evils which are connected with this section so long as private individuals are allowed to prosecute for offences connected with the administration of justice. In our opinion the only effective way of dealing with this section is to allow prosecutions to be launched only by the public servant or by the Court.

We see no reason why the public servant or the Court should not file a complaint exactly in the same way as a private individual would do in other cases and our proposals in this connection with this section and the enlargement of s 476 involve the adoption of this principle. In our view s 476 should bar the cognizance by any Court of offences of this nature except upon such complaint while the procedure to be followed when the Court desires to prosecute should be prescribed by s 476

“The adoption of this principle will at all events get rid of the objectionable practice of keeping a sanction which has been granted to a private individual, hanging over the head of the accused person for a period of six months which is frequently utilized for the various purposes of blackmail. In the case of a complaint by a Court or the public servant we do not think that it will be necessary to prescribe any length of time

It will also, in our opinion, be a distinct advantage to get rid altogether of the term ‘sanction’ in connection with these prosecutions, a result which will be effected by the amendments we propose

* We recognize that clause (a) of sub-section (1) stands on a somewhat different footing from clauses (b) and (c), but we think there is no reason to retain even in it any reference to a sanction, as prosecutions under clause (a) can reasonably be launched in all cases on the direct complaint of a public servant.” Report of the Select Committee of 1916

* Cl (3) was inserted by Act XVIII of 1923

† The words “criminal conspiracies” and “to” were inserted by s. 4 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act 1921 (XIII of 1921) inserted by Act XVIII of 1923.

The principal changes effected by the amendment—Under the new amendment under s 195 the necessity of a sanction for the cognizance of certain offences enumerated in s 195 is done away with. It is now obligatory upon a Court taking cognizance of offences mentioned in s. 195 to do so only upon a complaint in writing of either the Court before whom the offence was committed or the public servant concerned.

In short s 195 now deals with the limitations that exist to the cognizance of offences by a Court. While if a Court before whom an offence mentioned in s 195 is committed wants to take action against the delinquent it can only proceed under s 476 by lodging a complaint in writing. Of course a public servant concerned in the prosecution of offences mentioned in clause (a) is reasonably expected to file a direct complaint against the accused. (See Report of the Select Committee of 1916 quoted above.)

The object of requiring a complaint in writing of the public officer or Court instead of a sanction as previously is to protect private persons from being prosecuted by baseless prosecutions at the instance of private individuals for the offences mentioned above. Under the old law any sanction given or refused could be revoked or granted by any authority to which the authority giving or refusing it was subordinate. Now under sub-clause (a) which is newly added power to withdraw a complaint made by a subordinate public servant is given to the authority which is superior to it. For revocation or grant of complaint by Appellate Court see sections 476 A and 476 B.

It will also be seen that under the old law an application for sanction to prosecute was made to a Court under s 195 as it was generally supposed that a Court had no business of its own motion to grant sanction to a private individual without an application from him (see for instance 19 A 218; 27 C 820). Of course there were contrary decisions which held that it was open to a Court to grant a sanction without an applicant (see for instance 16 Bom L R 947). But now under the present amendment sanction to prosecute is absolutely done away with and therefore there is no possibility of an application under s 195. Now s 195 only lays down the conditions necessary for the cognizance of certain offences by a Court. And the complaint which is a condition precedent to cognizance of an offence under s 195 can only be lodged by a Court under the circumstances mentioned in s 476 which requires that a Court may proceed by lodging a complaint for offences mentioned in clauses (b) and (c) of sub-section (1) of s 195 either on its own motion or on the application of a private person. So under the present law a private person can prefer an application only under s 476 requesting a Court to file a complaint and consequently there is no room for any application under s. 195.

Effect of amendments on the rights of parties to criminal proceedings—(1) Where the petition was under s 195 cl. (6) of the old Code, to set aside an order of a District Magistrate revoking the sanction granted by a Subordinate Magistrate held by the High Court that the right conferred by s 195 cl. (6) of the old Code was not a right in the nature of a right of appeal but the amendments made by the new Code did not take away any substantive right and merely affected procedure and that the petition was therefore unsustainable 46 M L J 274.

(2) A sanction to prosecute granted after September 1st 1923 when the new amendments were introduced by Act XVIII of 1923 is illegal. 26 Bom L R 2235. See also 81 C 652.

(3) Whether power under old s. 195 (6) to the superior Court to revoke or grant sanction was in the nature of a right of appeal.—The right conferred by s 195 (6) of the old Code was not a right in the nature of a right of appeal but the amendments made by the new Code did not take away any substantive right and merely affected procedure and so the petition of the petitioner who contended that the right for sanction under s 195 (6) was in the nature of a substantive right, is not sustainable. 46 M L J 274 = 47 M 334.

(4) Whether prosecution for perjury by a private person is valid after the 1st of September, 1923, on which the Amending Act XVIII of 1923 came into force, after having obtained sanction under the old section 195 before the introduction of the new amendment.—It is now held that such a prosecution would be illegal as no Court under the amended s 195 can take cognizance of an offence of perjury except on the complaint of a public servant to be produced in writing on the date of the prosecution. 23 A L J 35, because nobody has a vested right to a matter of procedure. See also 8 Lah, 41.

Whether the right to apply to higher authorities to revoke a sanction against a person is a mere matter of procedure or of a substantive right—Where a Sub-Magistrate granted sanction under s 195 of the Code under s. 211 I P C. and in pursuance of the sanction the prosecution was instituted before the amendment of the Code repealing s. 195 came into force the District Magistrate had jurisdiction under s. 195 (6) of the Code to revoke the sanction notwithstanding that the amendment had come into force before the date of the petition before him to revoke the sanction. Held the right of a person to apply to higher authorities to revoke a sanction against him is not a matter of mere procedure but is a substantive right vested in the party to invoke the aid of a higher tribunal and it is not affected by later amending statute in the absence of express words to that effect. 43 M 620 (47 M 334 considered and referred to).

(5) Where sanction to prosecute and complaint filed before the Amending Act XVIII of 1923.—Held where sanction for the prosecution was obtained and complaint was also instituted prior to the 1st September, 1923 and though the case for hearing did not come on till after the coming into force of the Amending Act the restriction as to the jurisdiction of the Court did not apply and the old Code governed the case 7 Lah 99 See, also 49 M L J 276 where in a similar case it was held that an alteration in the law of procedure relating to the grant of sanction cannot invalidate proceedings validly begun under the old procedure.

Notes.—1 Offences.—[Ss 172 to 183 I P C. relate to contempts of the lawful authority of public servants § 193.—Giving or fabricating false evidence in a judicial proceeding or in any other case § 194.—Giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to cause any person to be convicted of a capital offence if an innocent person be thereby convicted and executed § 195.—Giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction of an offence punishable with transportation or imprisonment for more than seven years § 196.—Using in a judicial proceeding evidence known to be false or fabricated § 199.—False statement made in any declaration which is by law received as evidence, § 200.—Using as true any such declaration known to be false § 203.—False personation for the purpose of any act or proceeding in a suit or criminal prosecution or for becoming bail or security § 206.—Fraudulent removal or concealment etc. of property to prevent its seizure as a forfeiture or in satisfaction of a fine under sentence or in execution of a decree § 207.—Claiming property without right or practising or deception touching any right to it to prevent its being taken as a forfeiture or in satisfaction of a fine under sentence or in the execution of a decree § 208.—Fraudulently suffering a decree to be passed for a sum not due § 209.—False claim in a Court of Justice § 210.—Fraudulently obtaining a decree for a sum not due or causing a decree to be executed after it has been satisfied § 211.—False charge of offence made with intent to injure § 223.—Intentional insult or interruption to a public servant sitting in any stage of a judicial proceeding § 483.—Forgery § 471.—Using as genuine a forged document, § 475.—Counterfeiting a device or mark used for authenticating documents § 476.—Counterfeiting a device or mark used for authenticating documents other than those described in s. 476 I P C.]

1 A—The word "Court" in s 195 subsec. (1) (c) of the Code does not include a Court in the Native States of India. Therefore no complaint is necessary for the prosecution of a person for producing a fabricated receipt in the Savli Court (Baroda State) when the prosecution is launched in the Court of the Resident First-class Magistrate at Vadod in British Indian territories. 27 Bom L R 1053.

ANALYSIS OF NOTES

2 Although a sanction for prosecution is done away with under the new amendments all those considerations that weighed with Courts in granting a sanction would still be submitted now weigh with Courts granting an application under s. 476 for lodging a complaint. So it is thought desirable to retain all those cases laying down rules of prudence which a Court should follow in granting or refusing a sanction as similar principles would apply in granting or refusing an application under s. 476 for lodging a complaint. See 20 M L T 557

XII Sanction in respect of perjury

it extends to cases of fabrication of false evidence in advance. In this case the accused fabricated false evidence with the intention of using it in a subsequent civil suit. After the suit was disposed of and an appeal was pending therefrom, a complaint was preferred to a Magistrate against the accused for offence under s 193, I P C, without sanction, held, the sanction of the Civil Court was necessary and the Magistrate could not take cognizance of the offence without such sanction, 18 M. L. T. 322 = 16 Cr. L. J. 721. Where the applicant was the pleader of an accused against whom a case of dacoity was sent up to a Magistrate on 10th April, 1922, and it was alleged that the applicant suborned three of the witnesses for the prosecution on 10th April, 1922, and proceedings were immediately started against the applicant under s 193, I P C, without obtaining sanction under s 195 and before even the dacoity case was decided, held that the want of sanction was fatal to the proceedings against the applicant, per CRUMP, J., the words, "in relation to in s 195 (b) are very general and are wide enough to cover a proceeding in contemplation before a Criminal Court, though it may not have begun at the date when the offence was committed, 25 Bom. L. R. 1152. See Note 7 above and 23 A. L. J. 956

(ii) False charge—There is a difference of opinion as to whether sanction is necessary or not when in pursuance of a charge made to the Police, proceedings have subsequently taken place in Court. See Notes 144 and 145, but the better opinion is that when once proceedings are taken to a Court, sanction is necessary. See 18 M. L. T. 322 = 16 Cr. L. J. 721. H made a report to the Police against several persons including one S, accusing them of the offences of robbing and voluntarily causing hurt. The Police made inquiry and sent up all the persons excepting S for trial. The Magistrate convicted some of them, but the Sessions Judge acquitted them on appeal. Thereupon S made a complaint to the Magistrate charging H under s 211, I P C, with having made a false report in respect of himself to the Police. The Magistrate took cognizance of the complaint without sanction, holding that no sanction was necessary, held that the offence committed in respect of S if it was one under s 211, I P C, was committed in relation to the proceeding in Court, as it was the report which led to the proceedings in Court and that the sanction of that Court was therefore necessary, 34 A. 522. See Notes 5 and 6 to s 534. The test for the necessity of the grant of sanction is not the character of the offender but the character of the offence. Sanction is necessary when an offence punishable under s. 211 is committed in or in relation to any proceeding in Court. Where therefore K a policeman took part in preparing a panchnama in regard to an offence said to have been committed by a talukdar but took no further part in the subsequent proceedings, and the case started by K was then investigated by others in the usual way and then sent up and the accused was acquitted, K was directed to be prosecuted for an offence under s 211, I P C, it was contended that no sanction was necessary as he had not given evidence at the trial and the offence was committed before any judicial proceedings were begun, held that sanction was necessary. The offence imputed to K was the instigation of the false charge against the talukdar the charge which, in the ordinary course of criminal procedure, took the form of a trial. It may be that the instigation was committed before the proceeding in Court was begun, but none the less the investigation was an act committed in relation to the proceeding held by the Magistrate against the talukdar, 15 Bom. L. R. 362 = 13 Cr. L. J. 527. But in 36 A. 219 it was held that where a District Judge forwarded a petition presented to him in certain proceedings to a Magistrate who instituted proceedings thereon and discharged the person proceeded against, the District Judge was competent to petition before him to revoke the sanction. Held the right of a person to apply to higher authorities to revoke a sanction against him is not a matter of mere procedure but is a substantive right vested in the party to invoke the aid of a higher tribunal and it is not affected by later amending statute in the absence of express words to that effect. 48 M 620 (47 M 384 considered and referred to).

L. R. 268; 16 Cr. L. J. 617 (G), 15 P. R. 1915; 26 B. 785; but see 14 C. W. N. 479 = 11 Cr. L. J. 280; 11 M. L. T. 391 = 1912 M. W. N. 538 = 13 Cr. L. J. 241. Where the accused made an application to the Excise Collector saying that two persons who held licenses for selling ganja, etc. had executed a sub-lease in his favour of certain ganja and opium shops and long before that application had executed a Zaminama, in which he made certain false statements implying that the said two persons had executed a sub-lease in his favour which, if they had done, would render their licences liable to be cancelled, held (i) that no sanction under this section was necessary for prosecuting the accused for fabricating the Zaminama as the offence was completed when the document was executed which was long before the application to the Excise Collector, and (ii) that the Zaminama was intended to be used before the

(5) Where sanction to prosecute and complaint filed before the Amending Act XVIII of 1923 — Held, where sanction for the prosecution was obtained and complaint was also instituted prior to the 1st September, 1923 and though the case for hearing did not come on till after the coming into force of the Amending Act the restriction as to the jurisdiction of the Court did not apply and the old Code governed the case. 7 Lah 99. See, also 49 M L J 278 where in a similar case it was held that an alteration in the law of procedure relating to the grant of sanction cannot invalidate proceedings validly begun under the old procedure.

1 A.—The word 'Court' in s 195 subsec. (1) (c) of the Code does not include a Court in the Native States of India. Therefore no complaint is necessary for the prosecution of a person for producing a fabricated receipt in the Savli Court (Baroda State) when the prosecution is launched in the Court of the Resident First-class Magistrate at Vadod in British Indian territories. 27 Bom L R 1063.

ANALYSIS OF NOTES

2. Although a sanction for prosecution is done away with under the new amendments all those considerations that weighed with Courts in granting a sanction would it is submitted now weigh with Courts granting an application under s. 476 for lodging a complaint. So it is thought desirable to retain all those cases laying down rules of prudence which a Court should follow in granting or refusing a sanction as similar principles would apply in granting or refusing an application under s. 476 for lodging a complaint. See 30 M L T 557.

I.—COMPLAINT.

3. The word "complaint" to be interpreted according to the definition in the Code.—See s 4 (A).—The present amendment necessitates a complaint under s. 476 of the Code by a Court for offences mentioned in clauses (b) and (c) of s. 195. But for offences mentioned in clause (a) of sub-section (1) of s. 195, it is submitted, the complaint will have to be filed by the public servant concerned or some other public servant to whom he is subordinate.

Information to Police not a complaint—Under the Bengal Tenancy Act, a Civil Court directed a peon to cut crops distrained. On being obstructed he lodged information of the occurrence at the Police thana and the accused were eventually convicted under s. 186, 1 P. C., held, that under this section, there should be a complaint by the public servant concerned and there being no such complaint within the meaning of s 4 (b) the conviction was bad in law, 30 G. 235.

4. Complaint must be by the public servant concerned—A complaint regarding any of the offences mentioned in cl. (a) must be made by the public servant concerned or by his superior. It cannot be made by the person who may have been injured by the act complained of, e.g., in a case of unlawful resistance to execution 2 B. 633. See, also, 41 G. L. J. 111 = 11 Cr. L. J. 212; 48 C. 1036; 17 A. L. J. 1034

The power to make a complaint cannot be delegated.—See the referring judgments in 38 B. 642 (F.B.). 8 Bom. L. R. 477 = 4 Cr. L. J. 34 must be considered to be overruled, 16 Cr. L. J. 251 (Pas)

5. Responsibility for prosecution rests with complaining Judge in a case started on complaint.—Where a Court makes a complaint or proceeds under s. 476 or s. 478, the responsibility for the prosecution rests upon the Judge entirely, such a prosecution being a very different thing from a prosecution instituted on the complaint of a private party and merely sanctioned by the Court, 1 G. 430; 13 B. 334; 7 C. 208.

6. Orders that were considered as 'complaints'—Where a Magistrate sanctions a prosecution when there is no application for the same before him, his order must be considered as a complaint made of his own motion, 7 M. 189. Where a Revenue Court being satisfied from the perusal of certain documents tendered in evidence that they were forgeries, sent the case to the District Magistrate for action, held that such a communication was a complaint within the meaning of this section, but did not constitute a proceeding under s. 476, 30 P. R. 1905 = 105 P. L. R. 1905; 23 A. 249. Where an Assistant Collector trying a rent suit, being of opinion that the plaintiff had committed perjury, sent the record to the Collector of the district for "starting a case under s. 193, 1 P. C., and that officer "ordered" that a case under that section should be instituted and made it over to a Magistrate of the first class, held, that although the order of the Assistant Collector was not one under s. 476 it was a sufficient complaint within this section and the Collector who was also the District Magistrate had jurisdiction to take cognizance of it, 26 A. 514. Where a Munsiff being of opinion that a document, filed in a case before him had been tampered with communicated his suspicions to the District Judge who thereupon wrote to the District Magistrate requesting him to take action in the matter, held the letter of the District Judge amounted to a complaint, 35 A. 6. See 11 M. 443. Where a District Judge passed an order to the following effect, I hereby complain against R that he filed two false and forged bonds in the Court of Small Causes A and thereby committed an offence under ss 471 and 467, 1 P. C. The papers will be sent to the District Magistrate with the request that they be made over to a competent Court for disposal' it was held that the order amounted to a complaint within the meaning of s 4 (A) as the Judge was a Court to whom the Court of Small Causes was subordinate and had jurisdiction to make a complaint, 12 A. L. J. 881 = 15 Cr. L. J. 700.

II.—WHEN SANCTION NOT NECESSARY.

NB—Though "sanction" is done away with under the recent amendment and complaint is required in all cases under the new s 105 Still it is thought desirable to retain the rulings dealing with sanction as the same considerations will apply in the case of complaint as did previously apply in the case of sanction and we may generally say that under the new amendments a complaint will not be necessary where previously sanction was not necessary.

7. It is submitted that the alleged conflict of decisions noted below has been set at rest by the Legislature by altering the wording of s 195 sub-sec. (1) (c). The Legislature have thought fit to adopt the very words of PIGGOTT J., in 38 A. 169 so now it is no matter whether an offence has been committed prior to the Court proceedings, if the disputed document was produced in that Court, then after its production no criminal case could be started without the sanction of the Court in which it was produced, 23 A. L. J. 956. So the effect of the amendment of s. 195, sub-sec. (1) (c) is to uphold the decision in 38 A. 169, and the cases in 4 Bom. L. R. 269; 34 A. 654 have become of mere academic interest and are no longer good law. See, also, 48 A. 60.

7-A. Is sanction necessary for offences committed prior to proceedings in Court?—TAYLOR J., in distinguishing 4 Bom. L. R. 268 and 34 A. 654 points out the difference between cl. (b) and cl. (c) of sub-sec. (1). Clauses (b) and (c) agree in some respects, but differ in this that the offence is identified in cl. (b) by reference to the fact that it has a direct connection with some proceeding in Court, viz., having been (i) committed in, or (ii) in relation to the proceeding whereas in cl. (c) the offence has to be connected not with the proceeding, but (i) with the document produced or given in evidence in the proceeding, and (ii) by the fact that the document has been given or produced in evidence by a party to the proceeding. Cl. (b) runs when the offence is committed cl. (c) 'when the offence has been committed'. Having regard to the object of the section, when the offence is of such a nature that at the time of committing it, the accused must have legal proceedings in mind, and prior to his being charged with the commission of the offence, legal proceedings of the same nature have already commenced in any Court, it seems to be most in consonance with the intention of the Legislature to require that sanction of the Court should be obtained 18 M. L. T. 322 = 16 Cr. L. J. 721; 18 M. L. T. 322 = 39 M. 677.

(i) Fabricating false evidence prior to magisterial proceedings, s 193 I P C—Where offences under s. 193 and 211 I P C, were alleged to have been committed at a time when the proceedings were pending before the Police and anterior to the commencement of any inquiry by the Magistrate it was held the offences were not committed in relation to any proceeding in a Court within the meaning of sub-sec. (1) (b) and therefore no sanction of Court was necessary for the prosecution of the offender Weir II, 162. No sanction is required under cl. (b) of this section to prosecute a person for having fabricated false evidence during a Police investigation and when there was no proceeding pending in any Court in relation to which the alleged false evidence was said to have been fabricated, 26 C. 786 where 26 C. 339 is distinguished in. See also 24 W. R. 41; 25 W. R. 33. But see below 24 Bom. L. R. 1153.

Contra—M and others were charged with having made false statements and abetted the making of them during the Police investigation in a theft case. The theft case was subsequently tried by the Magistrate and the evidence collected during the Police investigation was again laid out before the Magistrate after the close of that trial. M was charged with an offence under s. 193, in respect of the statements before the Police without any sanction having been obtained, held, that he could not be tried in the absence of a sanction from the Court which tried the theft case and before which the evidence alleged to be fabricated was used, 14 Bom. L. R. 715 = 13 Cr. L. J. 751. So also when after fabricating a document, the accused got it registered and subsequently instituted a suit and filed along with the plaintiff a certified copy of the forged document. Subsequently the accused was charged with an offence under s. 193 I P C, without any sanction and it was considered that no sanction was necessary as the offence was completed prior to the institution of the suit held that sanction was necessary the offence having been committed in relation to a proceeding in Court, 17 C. W. N. 237 = 14 Cr. L. J. 259. The object of s. 193 (1) (b) is to save the time of Criminal Courts being wasted, and accused persons being needlessly harassed by erecting a safeguard against rash, baseless or vexatious prosecutions for the offences specified. This safeguard is not limited to cases where the offence is committed pendente lite, but it extends to cases of fabrication of false evidence in advance. In this case the accused fabricated false evidence with the intention of using it in a subsequent civil suit. After the suit was disposed of, and an appeal was pending therefrom, a complaint was preferred to a Magistrate against the accused for offence under s. 193, I P C., without sanction, held, the sanction of the Civil Court was necessary and the Magistrate could not take cognizance of the offence without such sanction, 18 M. L. T. 322 = 16 Cr. L. J. 721. Where the applicant was the pleader of an accused against whom a case of dacoity was sent up to a Magistrate on 10th April, 1922, and it was alleged that the applicant suborned three of the witnesses for the prosecution on 10th April, 1922, and proceedings were immediately started against the applicant under s. 193 I P C., without obtaining sanction under s. 195 and before even the dacoity case was decided, held that the want of sanction was fatal to the proceedings against the applicant; per CRUMP, J., the words, "in relation to in s. 195 (b) are very general and are wide enough to cover a proceeding in contemplation before a Criminal Court, though it may not have begun at the date when the offence was committed," 24 Bom. L. R. 1153. See Note 7 above and 23 A. L. J. 934.

(ii) False charge—There is a difference of opinion as to whether sanction is necessary or not when in pursuance of a charge made to the Police, proceedings have subsequently taken place in Court. See Notes 144 and 145, but the better opinion is that when once proceedings are taken to a Court, sanction is necessary. See 18 M. L. T. 322 = 16 Cr. L. J. 721. H made a report to the Police against several persons including one S accusing them of the offences of rioting and voluntarily causing hurt. The Police made inquiry and sent up all the persons excepting S for trial. The Magistrate convicted some of them, but the Sessions Judge acquitted them on appeal. Thereupon S made a complaint to the Magistrate charging H under s. 211, I P C., with having made a false report in respect of himself to the Police. The Magistrate took cognizance of the complaint without sanction, holding that no sanction was necessary, held that the offence committed in respect of S if it was one under s. 211, I P C., was committed in relation to the proceeding in Court, as it was the report which led to the proceedings in Court, and that the sanction of that Court was therefore necessary, 34 A. 822. See Notes 5 and 6 to s. 524. The test for the necessity of the grant of sanction is not the character of the offender, but the character of the offence. Sanction is necessary when an offence punishable under s. 211 is committed in or in relation to any proceeding in Court. Where therefore K, a policeman took part in preparing a panchnama in regard to an offence said to have been committed by a talukdar but took no further part in the subsequent proceedings, and the case started by K was then investigated by others in the usual way and then sent up and the accused was acquitted, K was directed to be prosecuted for an offence under s. 211, I P C., it was contended that no sanction was necessary as he had not given evidence at the trial and the offence was committed before any judicial proceedings were begun, held that sanction was necessary. The offence imputed to K was the instigation of the false charge against the talukdar the charge which, in the ordinary course of criminal procedure, took the form of a trial. It may be that the instigation was committed before the proceeding in Court was begun, but none the less the investigation was an act committed in relation to the proceeding held by the Magistrate against the talukdar, 14 Bom. L. R. 362 = 13 Cr. L. J. 827. But in 36 A. 212 it was held that where a District Judge forwarded a petition presented to him in certain proceedings to a Magistrate who instituted proceedings thereon and discharged the person proceeded against, the District Judge was competent to sanction the prosecution of the petitioner for an offence under s. 182, I P C., being the public servant to whom the false information was given but it was doubtful if he could sanction the prosecution for an offence under s. 211, I P C., as the District Court was not the Court in which the criminal proceedings were instituted. See also 20 C. W. N. 1347 = 25 C. L. J. 89. See Also 46 A. 906, 4 P. 323.

(iii) Forgery, etc., s. 463, etc., I P C.—Where in respect of a document produced in Court, an offence under s. 471, I P C. has been committed outside the Court no sanction is necessary, the use complained of being prior in date to the production of the document in Court, 4 Bom. L. R. 288; 16 Cr. L. J. 617 (C), 18 P. R. 1915; 26 B. 785; but see 14 C. W. N. 479 = 11 Cr. L. J. 230; 11 M. L. T. 391 = 1912 M. W. N. 535 = 13 Cr. L. J. 241. Where the accused made an application to the Excise Collector saying that two persons who held licenses for selling ganja, etc. had executed a sub-lease in his favour of certain ganja and opium shops and long before that application had executed a Zamnam, in which he made certain false statements implying that the said two persons had executed a sublease in his favour which if they had done, would render their licences liable to be cancelled, held (i) that no sanction under this section was necessary for prosecuting the accused for fabricating the Zamnam as the offence was completed when the document was executed which was done before the application to the Excise Collector, and (ii) that the Zamnam was intended to be used before the require sanction, the Court may be induced to exercise its powers of supervision by directing the stay of proceedings, till the whole case is complete, 12 C. W. N. 822 = 8 Cr. L. J. 51, explained in 15 C. W. N. 565 = 12 Cr. L. J. 101. See, however 12 Bom. L. R. 333 = 11 Cr. L. J. 368; see also 5 Pat. L. J. 135; 49 B. 603 = 27 Bom. C. R. 607.

10-A.—But distinction should be observed with regard to cl (b) of sub-sec 1 of 195 and cl (c) of the same, cl (b) mentions offences committed in or in relation to any proceeding in any Court and makes no mention of any parties, while cl (c) specifically mentions offences committed by parties to any proceedings. So far as cl (c) is concerned the Court's power to lodge a complaint under s 476 is restricted to parties in the proceeding, but as far as cl (b) is concerned the Court's power to complain under s 476 is not limited to parties to the suit or proceeding. So it is held in 3 Rang. 303 that in respect of offences enumerated in s 195 (1) (b) of the Code the powers of the Court to complain are not confined only to the parties before it.

10-B. Whether ss 476 and 476-A apply to a forged document produced in Court, the person forging the document neither being a party to the proceeding nor producing the document in Court.—A person who possibly forged the document which was produced in Court cannot be proceeded against under s 476-A of the Code if there be no ground for supposing that he did so for the purpose of using it in Court and there is nothing to show that it was he who used the document in Court. 28 C. W. N. 880.

11 Whether sanction necessary for abetment.—See now sub-section (4) of 195, 20 M. 8 which lays down that no sanction is required previous to the prosecution of a person charged with the abetment of offences mentioned in the section is now overruled by sub-section (4). But where the person charged with abetment is not a party to the proceedings before the Court, no sanction is necessary, 32 A. 74, but see 12 Bom. L. R. 383 = 11 Cr. L. 388. See also 32 M. 8.

12. For disobeying order promulgated by the Local Government.—No sanction is required for prosecution for disobedience to an order of Government issued under the Epidemic Diseases Act III of 1897. Where the Chairman of a Municipality re-published the Plague Rules in his Municipality, it was held his sanction was not necessary, 25 M. 70.

13 Where forged document has not been produced in Court.—Clause (c) of this section refers only to cases where a forged document has been put in evidence in a Civil or Criminal Court, in other cases, a Magistrate is competent proprio motu to inquire into allegations of forgery without sanction under this section. 10 W. R. 5.

14 False statement in a departmental inquiry.—No sanction is necessary for prosecution on account of a false statement made in a departmental inquiry, 22 B. 938 or in a preliminary inquiry made on a Police report 23 M. 223.

15 Forged documents presented to a Registration Officer.—No sanction is necessary, 11 M. 500 and see sub-sec (2) and Note 44.

16 No sanction required against a Police-officer for making a false report.—A Police-officer making a false or coloured report cannot properly be said to institute or cause to be instituted any criminal proceeding against any person. Therefore sanction for his prosecution under s 211, I P C., is bad in law, 4 C. W. N. 347.

17. Sanction not necessary when proceedings initiated as if under s 476.—Where a Munsiff, on the report of a peon that he had been unlawfully resisted by judgment-debtors and assaulted by them, took action and sent the case to the District Magistrate, held that the District Magistrate was not justified in refusing to take cognizance for want of sanction, but should have proceeded under s 476 (2) 8 C. W. N. 535. Where an Assistant Judge before whom a witness gave false evidence took cognizance of the case as a District Magistrate under s. 190 (c) and it was held that a District Magistrate was not bound by the officer was in effect under s 476.

18 Procedure where in the same transaction offences are committed, some requiring sanction and others not requiring previous sanction.—The complainant alleging that he was assaulted when trying under the order of an Amin to open the door of a judgment-debtor's house, charged the accused with offences under ss. 183, 186, 356 and 323, I P C., held that the sanction of the Court was not necessary in respect of offences under ss. 355 and 323 I P C., and the sanction of the Amin would be sufficient in respect of the other offences, 31 M. 43. See also 12 C. W. N. 822; 15 C. W. N. 365; 25 B. 90.

III.—WHAT IS A COURT?

19. Meaning of the word "Court".—The word "Court" is not defined in the Code, but as used in this section has a wider meaning than the words "Courts of Justice" as defined in s 20 of the Penal Code. Having regard to the obvious purpose for which s. 195 was enacted we think the widest possible meaning should be given to the word and that it would include a tribunal empowered to deal with a particular matter, and authorized to receive evidence bearing on that matter, in order to enable it to arrive at a determination, 17 C. 872 followed in 15 Bom. L. R. 45 = 14 Cr. L. J. 72. There must be power to receive evidence and to come to a judicial determination on the evidence so recorded, 24 M. 121; 28 M. L. J. 123 = 16 Cr. L. J. 241; 36 M. 72. The mere fact that a judicial officer is specially vested with certain quasi-judicial functions does not make him a Court while exercising those functions, 39 M. 581 referring to 11 M. 26 (P.C.), 30 M. 328 and to Vol. IX, Halsbury's Laws of England, p. 9, where it is said "many bodies are not Courts, although they have to decide questions, and in so doing have to act judicially in the sense that the proceedings must be conducted with fairness and impartiality." The definition of "Court" given in the Evidence Act (1 of 1872) is framed only for the purposes of the Act itself and should not be extended beyond its legitimate scope. 12 B. 38. See Note 16 to s 43s and Notes 6 to 9 to s 476. See also 43 C. 585.

Election Commissioners are deemed to be a Court under the wider sense of the term.—Election Commissioners are not a Civil Court within the meaning of s. 476, but they must be deemed to be a Court in the wider sense of the term under s. 195 of the Code and any complaint made by them of an offence may be regarded as filed under s 195 (1), (6) of the Code, 23 A. L. J. 845 = 47 A. 934. See also 23 A. L. J. 956 (for the definition of "Court").

It was further held that an order made by Election Commissioners under s 476 of the Code could not be upheld as they are neither civil nor criminal, nor revenue Court within the meaning of that section. But as the complaint was purported to have been instituted under s. 476, the High Court entertained an appeal therefrom and set aside the order, but maintained it as a complaint under s 190, sub-sec. (1), (a) of the Code 47 A. 934. But see 46 A. 611.

20 Revenue Officers held to be Courts.—

(i) Tahsildar holding an inquiry as to mutation of names under Madras Act III of 1869—A Tahsildar holding an inquiry under Madras Act III of 1869 as to whether a transfer of names in the Land Register should be made or not is a Revenue Court and before a party to any proceeding in such a Court can be prosecuted for an offence referred to in cl. (c) of sub-sec. (1), sanction should be obtained, 24 M. 121. See also 12 Cr. L. J. 109 (A.). In 19 P. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 785, it was however held distinguishing 24 M. 121, that a Natib Tahsildar dealing under the Punjab Land Revenue Act with mutation proceedings does so in his administrative capacity as a Revenue Officer and not in his judicial capacity as a Revenue Court.

(ii) Certificate Officer acting under Bengal Act I of 1895—Sanction must be obtained before a person can be charged under s 206 I P C for having cut and carried away crops under attachment under Bengal Act I of 1895 as the Certificate Officer is a Court, 28 C. 217.

(iii) Income-tax Collector hearing objections—A Collector hearing objections under s. 25 of the Income-tax Act II of 1886 is a Revenue Court, 44 P. R. 1903. An Income-tax Collector is a Court within the meaning of cls. (b) and (c) of s 195, 38 B. 642 (F.B.), 36 M. 72.

(iv) Mamlatdar holding inquiry under Chapter XII of Bombay Land Revenue Code—A Mamlatdar holding an inquiry under Chapter XII of the Bombay Land Revenue Code is a Revenue Court within the meaning of s. 195, sub-sec. (1), cl. (c), as he has power to summon witnesses, to take evidence although he may not have power to administer an oath, to consider the evidence and make a final order, 39 B. 310. See, however, 28 M. L. J. 123 = 1915 M. W. N. 177 = 16 Cr. L. J. 241.

21. Revenue Officers held to be not Courts.

(i) Officer recording tenant's rights under Chapter XI of the Madras Estates Land Act I of 1908 is not a Court—A Revenue Officer preparing a record of rights under ss. 164 to 187 of the Madras Estates Land Act is only discharging an executive function of the Court and is not a Court within the meaning of s. 476. He is not invested with powers to record evidence nor with the powers of a Survey Officer under Madras Act IV of 1897, 23 M. L. J. 123 = 16 Cr. L. J. 241. See, however, 39 B. 310.

(ii) Settlement Officer preparing a record of rights.—See 36 A. 362.

(iii) Revenue Officer disposing of objection petition under s 103-A of the Bengal Tenancy Act—See 3 C. L. J 133, 23 C. 471

(iv) Land Acquisition Collector—A Land Acquisition Collector acts merely as the agent of the Government for purposes of acquisition and is not a Court. See 7 C. W. N 249, 27 C. 820

(v) Assistant Collector in the United Provinces to whom the execution of a decree by sale of immovable property is transferred under ss 68 and 70 Civil Procedure Code—Under the rules framed by the Local Government by virtue of s. 70 of the Civil Procedure Code 1908 certain functions may be delegated to an Assistant Collector in order to effect a sale of immovable property in execution of the decree of a Civil Court but such an Assistant Collector is not a Court within the meaning of this section as he has not the power either to sell the property as a Court or to confirm the sale or to set it aside and he cannot give a sanction in respect of an application to set aside a sale on application which he could not deal with 37 A 334

(vi) Assistant Collector holding a departmental inquiry under the Bombay Land Revenue Code is not a Court—(i) An Assistant Collector holding a departmental inquiry under the Bombay Land Revenue Code s 197 into the alleged misconduct of a subordinate is not a Court within the meaning of this section and no sanction is required for prosecution of the complainant under s 195 cl (b), 23 B 936 (ii) Quare whether a Sub-Deputy Collector holding proceedings under ss 52 and 84 of the Land Registration Act VII of 1878 (BC) is a Court within the meaning of this section so as to require his sanction to prosecute a person giving false evidence in such proceedings and whether such proceedings are judicial proceedings? 9 C. W. N 127 (iii) Similarly a Collector whom to an application is made to replace a damaged stamp is not a Court 3 B L R Cr 6 = 11 W R 45 See also 1891 A W N 82

(vii) Excise Collector not a Court—No sanction is necessary for prosecuting for the offence of fabricating false evidence (s 193 I P C) by means of a document intended to be used before an Excise Collector who is not a Court 10 C. W. N 220 = 3 Cr L J 196

22 Persons exercising quasi judicial functions are not Courts within the meaning of s 195—

(i) Commissioner to take evidence not a Court—A Commissioner appointed to take evidence is not a Court. The word Court in s 195 must mean the Court whose duty it is to consider the evidence and decide whether it is true or false 11 C. W. N 909 = 6 Cr L J 160

(ii) Official Assignee is not a Court—An Official Assignee is not a Court even though he has a wide discretion in deciding on the claims of persons alleging themselves to be creditors of the insolvent or because at persons aggrieved by decisions of his case appeal to the Insolvency Court from those decisions 37 M 107

(iii) Arbitrator appointed by Court not a Court—In respect of an offence before an arbitrator appointed by the Court it is the Court that can grant sanction 17 M L J 420 = 6 Cr L J 331; 6 A 101 A complaint cannot be entertained for offences under ss 193 and 471 I P C alleged to have been committed before the arbitrator without the sanction of the Court 3 P R 1914 = 15 Cr L J 338

23. Judicial Officers vested with quasi judicial functions—(1) Under Rule 5 of the rules framed by the Madras Government under s 413 of Madras City Municipal Act III of 1904 a Presidency Magistrate is authorized to hold an inquiry and decide whether a particular candidate is fit or not to stand for election to a Municipal Council held he was not a Court 33 M 881 (2) See 21 B 279 and 30 M 325 The question in 33 M 881 was whether the Presidency Magistrate when exercising the special function was subject to the superintendence of the High Court under s. 15 of the Charter Act It may be that the Magistrate may be considered to be a Court for the purposes of s 195 See 37 B 363, where the case in (1893) P J 844 was distinguished

24. District Judge acting under Bombay District Municipalities Act is a Court—A District Judge when acting under s. 22 of the Bombay District Municipalities Act III of 1901 is a Court within the meaning of cl (b), 37 B 365

25. Registrar of Presidency Small Cause Court—Under the Calcutta rules of the Presidency Small Cause Court

26. Village Munsiff is a Court.—A Village Munsiff trying a suit is a Court, and as such can give sanction under this section where false evidence is given before him, 11 M. 378. But in 15 M. 131, the accused intentionally insulted a Village Munsiff in the discharge of his magisterial duties. The Village Munsiff did not prefer complaint or sanction prosecution, but a second-class Magistrate charged the accused under s. 228, I P C, on Police report and convicted him, held, that the second-class Magistrate was competent to try the complaint and the conviction was right, want of complaint being cured by s. 537.

27. Police-officer not a Court.—A Police constable taking down a statement under s. 161 is not a Judge, nor is the place where he officiates a Court. His sanction is therefore not necessary, under this section to a prosecution for a false statement made to him whether the charge be framed singly or alternatively 11 B. 459. The prosecution of a person for giving false evidence before a Police pauel requires no sanction as a Police pauel is not a Criminal Court within the meaning of the Code (Act X of 1872), and s. 468 of that Code renders sanction necessary only when one of the offences specified therein is committed before or against a Civil or Criminal Court 4 B. 479.

28. Registration Officer not a Court.—See cl. (2). A Registrar or a Sub-Registrar is not a Court within the meaning of this section but offences committed before such officers are specially made punishable under ss. 81, 82 and 33 of the Registration Act III of 1877. Hence no sanction is required for prosecution in respect of an offence committed before such an officer and falling within clauses (b) and (c) of sub-sec. (1) though previous sanction or complaint is necessary in respect of offences within cl. (a) of sub-sec. (1), 11 C. 568. A District Registrar dealing with a complaint against a Sub-Registrar is not a Court 10 C. W. N. 223 = 2 C. L. J. 619 = 3 Cr. L. J. 112. See 10 C. 604; 12 B. 36 and 12 M. 201, where 10 M. 134 and 11 M. 3 are explained and also 13 M. 133, 2 C. W. N. 244; 11 O. C. 358; 11 C. L. J. 111 = 11 Cr. L. J. 212; 16 Bom. L. R. 946 = 16 Cr. L. J. 106.

IV.—SUBORDINATION OF PUBLIC SERVANTS.

29. Subordination of Police to District Magistrate.—A person gave false information to the Police and his prosecution was sanctioned by the District Magistrate, and he was convicted and sentenced to pay a fine. On appeal the conviction was affirmed by the District Magistrate. Held, that although Police-officers are generally subordinate to the District Magistrate, the subordination contemplated by this section is not such subordination, but subordination of some superior officer of Police, 27 C. 452. But if the District Magistrate gives the sanction at the request of the Police who it was contended ought to have given it, the sanction is proper, 32 C. 180. Contra in 27 A. 292; 6 P. R. 1910 = 10 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 252, it was held that the District Magistrate is the head of the Police (see s. 4 of Act V of 1861) and is a public servant to whom the Police is subordinate within the meaning of sub-sec. (1), (a) and is competent to grant sanction for prosecution under s. 182, I P C, in respect of a false report to the Police. See also 47 P. R. 1867; 9 P. R. 1868, & Lah. 130.

30. Sessions Judge cannot grant sanction in relation to a proceeding before the Police.—A Sessions Judge cannot grant sanction to prosecute a person for an offence under s. 182 I P C, committed in relation to a proceeding before a Police-officer or a Sub-Magistrate to whom the reports were sent by the former, as neither of them was a subordinate of the Sessions Judge within the meaning of cl. (7), 27 M. L. J. 535 = 1914 M. W. N. 793 = 15 Cr. L. J. 612.

31. Taluk second-class Magistrate not official superior of Police Station-house Officer.—A second-class Magistrate of a taluk not being the official superior of a Police Station-house Officer, cannot sanction a prosecution under s. 182, I P C, for giving false information to the Station-house Officer, 6 M. 146. See also 2 N.-W. P. H. C. R. 237; 7 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 64; 11 W. R. 22.

32. Honorary Magistrate not official superior of Police-officer.—A sanction given by a Bench of Honorary Magistrates for the prosecution under s. 182, I P C, of a person alleged to have made a false report to the Police was an illegal sanction inasmuch as the Police-officer to whom the report was made was not subordinate to the Bench of Honorary Magistrates within the meaning of this section, 1893 A. W. N. 152; 19 W. R. 53.

33. Village Munsiff is not subordinate to a Sub-Magistrate.—Under s. 195, the subordination of one public servant to another may arise either from express enactment or from the fact that both the public servants belong to the same department, one being superior in rank to another. There is no enactment which makes Village Munsiffs subordinate to Sub-Magistrates, nor do they belong to the same department 18 M. L. J. 534 = 4 M. L. T. 214 dissenting from 4 M. 241. See Note 26.

34. Registrar of the Small Cause Court subordinate only to the Chief Judge.—Where the Registrar of a Presidency Small Cause Court grants sanction under cl. (a) of sub-sec. (1) it was only the Chief Judge of the Court to whom the Registrar acting as a public servant is subordinate, who can revoke the sanction, 27 B. 130. Had he been acting judicially, only the High Court as the principal Court of original jurisdiction could have interfered. In no event can a Bench of one or more Judges of the Small Cause Court interfere with the sanction accorded by the Registrar of the Court

35. Secretary of Municipal Board subordinate to Chairman.—The Chairman of a Municipal Board has power, apart from and independently of the Board to grant sanction for prosecution of an offence under s. 182, I P C., committed in respect of the Secretary of the Board, 1892 A. W. N. 31

Y.—APPLICATION FOR SANCTION, WHAT IT SHOULD CONTAIN.

36. Generally an application is indispensable for granting sanction.—A sanction to prosecute presupposes an application for sanction and where no such application is made, a Court ought not to take upon itself to grant sanction, but should take action under s. 476, 18 A. 213; 3 A. 62. In 1915 N. L. R. 111; 81 = 17 Cr. L. J. 59 = 32 In. Ca. 651, the case in 18 A. 213, was followed. The Code does not contemplate a Court or public servant giving sanction where no application has been made, 1907 U. B. R. Cr. P. C. 1 = 6 Cr. L. J. 25. Sanction should not be accorded without an application made for it by some person who may desire to complain of the offence 27 C. 820; 20 C. 474; 6 C. W. N. 37; 10 C. W. N. 222 = 2 C. L. J. 619 = 3 Cr. L. J. 112; 11 C. L. J. 111 = 11 Cr. L. J. 212, 23 P. R. 1801; 30 P. R. 1905 = 2 Cr. L. J. 687; 16 Cr. L. J. 251 (Pan), M. 189; 20 C. 349; 6 A. L. J. 796 = 10 Cr. L. J. 437, 8 S. L. R. 21 = 15 Cr. L. J. 652. Where a Sub-divisional Magistrate, after merely perusing the calendar of a case tried by a Magistrate subordinate to him sent for the record and without any application for sanction passed an order under this section sanctioning the prosecution of a witness in the case for perjury, held that the order was illegal, as the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to take cognizance of the offence, though he be a Court superior to the Court in which the offence was committed, 7 M. 560. Where a Magistrate directed a Police investigation in a case pending before him and as the result thereof passed an order against the complainant purporting to be under this section, held that the order was irregular inasmuch as this section presupposes an application by some person for sanction to prosecute, 1902 A. W. N. 193 following 1896 A. W. N. 32. A Police report setting forth the facts and containing a request that the petitioner should be prosecuted under s. 183, I P C., is a sufficient application to justify the Magistrate in giving sanction, 17 C. W. N. 976 = 14 Cr. L. J. 292.

Contra—There is nothing in law which requires that sanction to prosecute shall only be granted upon application by a private prosecutor, 10 C. L. R. 4. Where it was contended that the proceedings for grant of sanction were irregular because no application had been made for that purpose by the party to whom sanction had been granted, held, that s. 195 does not expressly provide that an application has to be made for the grant of the sanction. No doubt the cases in 27 C. 820; 18 A. 213; 20 C. 474; 10 C. W. N. 222 = 2 C. L. J. 619 = 3 Cr. L. J. 112, recognize the proposition that ordinarily a sanction should be given only on an application made for it by some person who may desire to complain of the particular offence, but whose complaint cannot be entertained without such sanction. The rule recognised in the cases mentioned may be justified to this extent that before a sanction is granted the Court must be satisfied that there is some person who is willing to avail himself of the sanction and to carry on the prosecution for the purpose whereof the sanction is granted, 13 Cr. L. J. 4 (C). In 17 C. W. N. 976 = 14 Cr. L. J. 292. CHAPMAN, J. was of opinion that there was no necessity for any application in cases which come under sub-sec. (1) (a), see also 7 Mad. H. C. R. 58. In 16 Bom. L. R. 947 = 16 Cr. L. J. 107, it was held that to require an application in all cases was to depart outside the terms of s. 195 and it is open to a Court to grant a sanction without an applicant. The sanction contemplated by this section is not a sanction to any particular person to prosecute, but a sanction to the Criminal Courts concerned to take cognizance of certain offences specified in this section of which the Criminal Courts cannot take cognizance except with the previous sanction or on the complaint of the authority described in this section. The sanction whilst it is in force restores to the Criminal Courts a jurisdiction of which the same section deprives them in respect of specified offences and need not even name the accused person 8 Bom. L. R. 32 = 3 Cr. L. J. 227, where 27 C. 820 is not followed. In 16 Cr. L. J. 740 (M) the High Court granted sanction in respect of an offence before a District Munsiff without an application and ordered the District Munsiff to direct the process-server to act upon the said sanction. See also 17 Cr. L. J. 305 (B). See also Notes 57 and 90

37. Is a written application necessary?—It is the established practice on the Original Side of the Calcutta High Court to grant a sanction only on a formal petition being put in upon which an order could be passed. Where, therefore, on an oral application, the Judge then sitting on the Original Side said 'very well' but the officer refused to draw up the order as there was no application in writing, and subsequently a written application was made to another Judge sitting on the Original Side, held the latter had jurisdiction to make the order since the previous order was not in form and infructuous, 40 C. 423.

33. No particular form necessary.—This section does not make any particular form of application or sanction necessary, 18 M. 457. No particular form of application is necessary, 3 G. W. N. 2.

39. What should application generally contain.—

(i) The application must ask for sanction.—A mere complaint by a stranger to the proceedings that a party has made a false statement without asking for sanction is not an application on which sanction should be granted, 13 P. W. R. 1913 = 68 P. L. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 107.

(ii) Application must specify the offence.—Sanction for prosecution under a section other than that under which sanction was asked for by the applicant cannot be granted, 1898 A. W. N. 205.

(iii) Application must specify time and place of offence.—An application for sanction must specify the time when and the place where the offence was committed and sanction should not be granted except upon evidence before it of such matters, 5 A. L. J. 257.

(iv) Application for sanction for perjury must contain the assignment of perjury.—An application to prosecute for perjury must indicate precisely the statements alleged to be false showing the place where and the occasion on which such alleged false statements were made, 18 A. 203; 36 C. 805; U. B. R. (1913) (1st quarter) 155 = 14 Cr. L. J. 422. Mere omission to specify the statements in the application is not a ground for revoking the sanction, s. 537, 3 Bar. L. T. 151 = 11 Cr. L. J. 749; 36 C. 805.

(v) Application for sanction for forgery must specify the document.—Application to prosecute for perjury or forgery must indicate precisely the document in respect of which forgery is said to have been committed or must set forth in detail the statements alleged to be false, showing the place where and the occasion on which such alleged false statements were made. It should not be left to the Court which is asked to grant the sanction or to the Court which is to act on that sanction, to find out by reference to another record what the document is in respect of which sanction is sought or given, 18 A. 203; 7 M. 860; 8 P. R. 1895. It is not competent to a Magistrate to sanction the prosecution of a person in respect of a document in regard to which the application for sanction is silent and does not complain, 2 G. L. J. 612 = 3 Cr. L. J. 81.

VI.—WHO CAN APPLY FOR SANCTION AND TO WHOM SANCTION MAY BE GRANTED

40. Anyone may apply for sanction.—This section does not enact that application shall be made by any particular person. It merely provides that no Court shall take cognizance of certain offences without a sanction, 18 M. 457. See Note 90

(i) Agent.—In 39 C. 463 it was held that a landlord is entitled to authorize his agent to obtain sanction to prosecute an accused in respect of an offence committed against him.

(ii) Minor cannot apply for sanction.—A Civil Court ought not to entertain an application for sanction under s. 195, presented by a minor unless it is presented on his behalf by some responsible person acting as the next friend 14 Cr. J. 327 (C).

Whether sanction can be granted to legal representative of a deceased applicant.—Criminal proceedings started by a private person abate on his death, and so a petition for sanction for perjury filed by a party cannot on his death be allowed to be continued by his legal representative, though the latter may himself present new application for the same purpose. 47 M. 88.

41. Court may grant sanction to any person private or official.—“There is nothing to prevent a Police-officer from obtaining sanction under this section, and then filing a complaint or submitting a report to the Magistrate for him to take cognizance of the offence under section 190. Similarly if a Magistrate wishes to act in a fit case upon any other information or upon his own knowledge or suspicion, he has only to apply for a sanction. Nor is there anything to preclude a Public Prosecutor from obtaining the necessary sanction for any person to file a complaint.” Per SANKARAN NAIR, J., 32 M. 49 at p. 56 and see also Weir II, 596. A Court may grant sanction at any time and to any person it considers fit to carry on the prosecution. The section affords a remedy without the necessity of granting sanction to a private party. A sanction may as easily be granted to the Public Prosecutor or any other official deputed by the District Magistrate to obtain it and the District Magistrate can be moved in a variety of ways if the case is one deserving of his attention. Per PINNEY, J. 32 M. 49 at p. 60. See Notes 90 and 52.

(i) Government Pleader.—The Government Pleader on instructions from the District Magistrate may apply for sanction to prosecute in respect of an offence alleged to have been committed in connection with a Civil Suit (1908) A. W. N. 209 = 8 Cr. L. J. 157. When the Court is unwilling to grant sanction to a private prosecutor and has refused, his application the Court is at liberty to give sanction to a Public Prosecutor, 13 Cr. L. J. 4 (C). So also a District Magistrate may instruct the Government Pleader to apply for the extension of the prescribed period of six months where the grantee of the sanction has allowed the time to expire, 15 O. C. 177 = 13 Cr. L. J. 331. In 41 C. 446, a Special Bench of the High Court holding an inquiry under s. 10 of the Letters Patent into the conduct of an attorney, thought that there were matters in the case which called for further inquiry with a view to possible criminal proceedings and the papers were placed before the Public Prosecutor, who applied through the Standing Counsel for sanction under s. 195 for offences under ss. 193 and 196, I P. C., and sanction was granted. See also 32 M. 49.

(ii) Sheristadar—In 12 Cr. L. J. 320 (Sindh) sanction was given to the Sheristadar of the Court without any application by him and it was held that it virtually amounted to a complaint.

(iii) District Magistrate—See also 37 C. 13, where it was held distinguishing 3 C. W. N. 3 that there is nothing in the Code to limit the grant to a party to the proceeding in which the offence was committed and sanction was granted to a District Magistrate. See 10 C. L. R. 41; 39 C. 463.

(iv) Strangers, but not if application is not bona fide and made out of spite—In 3 C. W. N. 3, it was held that no Court should entertain an application for sanction by a person not a party to the suit out of which proceedings for sanction arose. In this case an application for sanction unsigned and unverified was filed before a Munsiff, purporting to be on behalf of the defendant in a Civil Suit, who deposed that he was not aware of the application or its contents, and was not desirous of prosecuting, and the Munsiff found that it was filed by one R who was not a party to the suit, out of ill feeling, held, that no Court should entertain an application for sanction to prosecute, made by persons who are not parties to the suit out of which the proceeding arose. So also in 13 Cr. L. J. 1 (C) and in 13 P. W. R. 1913 = 68 P. L. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 107, it was held that a Judge acted properly in not giving a sanction to a stranger to the suit. See also 11 A. L. J. 313 = 14 Cr. L. J. 389.

VII.—WHO CAN GRANT SANCTION ?

42. Application for sanction should be made first to the Court before which the offence was committed.—As a general rule, application for sanction should be made in the first instance to the Court before which the alleged offence was committed, 6 M. H. C. R. 92; 7 M. H. C. R. Appx. 12; 22 W. R. 11; 29 P. R. 1879, and unless there are exceptional circumstances the superior Court will not interfere in the first instance, 17 W. R. 46; 1905 P. R. 55 and see 32 B. 203, where it was held that the appellate tribunal had no jurisdiction to grant a sanction when the first Court had dismissed the application for default of appearance. "Where sanction is asked for the prosecution of an offence alleged to have been committed before any Court it is in every way expedient that the application for sanction should, in the first place, be made to the Court in which, or in relation to any proceeding in which the offence was committed" 16 A. 80 at p. 62. See Notes 214 and 230.

43. Sanction may be granted by the Superior Court in the first instance.—Under clauses (b) and (c) of sub-sec (1), such superior Court is competent to accord sanction in the first instance, even though no application had been made to the Court in which the offence is alleged to have been committed, 27 M. 223. An order passed by an Appellate Court is in law the order which ought to have been passed by the Subordinate Court and will therefore have the same efficacy and operation as the order which ought to have been passed by the latter, 27 M. 223 at p. 225; Ratanlal 937; 6 C. 440 = 7 C. L. R. 330. Under cls (b) and (c), it is competent to the Appellate Court, in the first instance to sanction the prosecution of appellants for forgery of a document not produced in his Court, but given in evidence in the appeal pending in that Court, an appeal being certainly a proceeding within the meaning of this section, 11 A. L. J. 11 = 14 Cr. L. J. 47. On a petition to set aside for want of notice an ex-parte decree in a second appeal, the High Court called for a report from the District Munsiff and finding from the report that the petitioner had committed perjury before the District Munsiff gave sanction for his prosecution 16 Cr. L. J. 740 (M.). The power of an appellate tribunal in sanctioning prosecutions for perjury, etc., is not restricted to cases in which an appeal is heard, but vests in the superior Court as a Court exercising supervision and control over the subordinate Court, as for instance, it might be exercised on a perusal of the records. It is immaterial how the superior Court is put in motion, Weir II, 160. But it would be very undesirable for the High Court, except under very peculiar circumstances, to entertain in the first instance an application for sanction to prosecute for perjury, 17 W. R. 48. See also 11 N. L. R. 38 = 16 Cr. L. J. 239; 67 P. L. R. 1916 = 17 Cr. L. J. 233.

(i) High Court acting in revision under s. 439 may grant sanction—The High Court while exercising its powers of revision has power to grant sanction 25 M. L. J. 893 = 16 M. L. J. 512 = 14 Cr. L. J. 824.

(ii) Sessions Judge not competent to grant sanction—A Sessions Judge is not competent to grant sanction for an offence under s. 193 committed before a Subordinate Magistrate, 27 M. L. J. 586 = 15 Cr. L. J. 612. But a Sessions Judge is competent to grant a sanction for the prosecution of a witness for statements made by him before the committing Magistrate and brought to the notice of the Sessions Judge (1917) M. W. N. 151.

(iii) Superior Court not competent to grant sanction with regard to case pending on the file of a Subordinate Court.—When a case is pending on the file of a Subordinate Magistrate and no final order has been passed by him, a District Magistrate has no power to grant sanction unless he withdraws the case to his own Court, 3 C. W. N. 490.

44. Where practicable, Judge who tried the case to be resorted to.—No doubt, ordinarily as a matter of convenience and expediency, an application for sanction should be made to the Judge who tried the case if he be present in Court. If he is not present, either by death or absence on leave or transfer, it is open to the Court, i.e., any other Judge of the Court to grant sanction. The words such Court does not mean such Judge, 33 C. 193; 7 A. L. J. 50 = 11 Cr. L. J. 140.

45. Change of incumbent is no change of Court.—The Court before which the perjury is alleged to have been committed is to give the sanction. The change of incumbent leaves it still the same Court, 7 M. H. C. R. Ap 12; 5 C. L. J. 176, where 33 C. 193 is followed 34 C. 551 (F.B.), 29 P. R. 1879. Thus in 11 C. W. N. 119 it was held that a Munsiff has jurisdiction to grant sanction in respect of an offence committed before his predecessor in office, 9 C. W. N. 859 distinguished and doubted. The term Court in cl. 1 (b) is not confined to the Judge who tried the case on the appeal, but also means and includes the successor in office of such Judge who can therefore grant sanction, 5 C. L. J. 176 = 5 Cr. L. J. 186. But it is always desirable that sanction should be granted by the Judge who tried the case, 7 A. L. J. 50 = 11 Cr. L. J. 40. A succeeding third class Magistrate may dispose of a sanction petition, even though he is incompetent to conduct the trial conducted by his predecessor, in which the offence for which sanction is applied for was committed, 19 M. L. J. 58. Note 85, but see next Note and also 39 C. 663.

46. But when change of presiding officer make a change in the Court, sanction cannot be granted.—Court trying the case and granting sanction must be the same.

(i) Succession of Deputy Magistrates.—Where there are many Deputy Magistrates and one of them is transferred, the Deputy Magistrate who comes to fill the gap is not the successor in office of the Deputy Magistrate who has been transferred 35 C. 457 at p. 460. The incoming Magistrate is not, therefore, competent to grant sanction in respect of an offence committed before the outgoing Magistrate, 42 C. 687.

(ii) Can District Magistrate grant sanction for offences before Subordinate Magistrate who is transferred?—After acquittal by a first-class Magistrate who was transferred outside the district an application for sanction to prosecute the complainant under s. 211 was made to the District Magistrate and granted. It was contended that inasmuch as on the departure of the Deputy Magistrate all cases then pending in his Court were placed before the District Magistrate, the District Magistrate for the time being became the presiding Judge in the Deputy Magistrate's Court and the sanction was good. The sanction was set aside, held it may well be that in so far as he proceeded to dispose of such part heard cases the District Magistrate within the meaning of s. 350 succeeded to and exercised the jurisdiction which the Deputy Magistrate had ceased to exercise, but in the present instance neither the original case nor the application for sanction were among the cases so left part heard 16 Cr. L. J. 840 (C). See, however, 20 Bom. L. R. 117 = 42 Bom. 190.

(iii) Court trying case and granting sanction must be the same.—A case was heard and decided by an Assistant Magistrate with second-class powers. On his transfer from the district, all his work was transferred to the Joint Magistrate who granted sanction in respect of a case disposed of by the Assistant Magistrate and the sanction was upheld on appeal by the Sessions Judge, held, that the Joint Magistrate had no jurisdiction to accord sanction, and though the Sessions Judge had power on a proper original application made to him to accord sanction, his appellate order cannot cure the defect, inasmuch as the Sessions Judge was not dealing with the matter as an Original Court, but as a Court of Appeal 1902 A. W. N. 9.

(iv) Court of Subordinate Judge not a permanent Court.—In 7 P. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 178 it was held following 25 P. R. 1889 that though there is a class of Courts called Courts of Subordinate Judges, there is no Court of a Subordinate Judge as a permanent Court with a perpetual succession of Judges, and on transfer of a Subordinate Judge from a district, the Court of the Subordinate Judge, who takes over the pending work is not identical with the Court or the Subordinate Judge who has been transferred. See Note 190.

47. Court trying the case must be resorted to and not Court taking cognizance merely or transferring.—It is the Court which tries the case on the merits, that is the proper authority to grant sanction, and not the Court before which proceedings are instituted and by which process is issued, 6 C. W. N. 35; 3 C. W. N. 33. A complaint was made before a District Magistrate against a Police-officer. He allowed the complainant to make his complaint before a Deputy Magistrate at the headquarters. That Deputy Magistrate improperly transferred the investigation to the Sub-divisional Officer at B, who after investigation found the case to be false. Then the Deputy Magistrate recalled the case and passed an order deciding the trial of the complainant under s. 211, I P C., held the order for prosecution was without jurisdiction, as the Deputy Magistrate had after transfer no jurisdiction to recall the case or pass any orders under s. 476, 16 C. W. N. 885 = 13 Cr. L. J. 484. An order for prosecution for bringing a false case should be given by the officer investigating and not by the officer who transfers the case 40 C. 41.

48. Magistrate making an investigation under s. 202 has no power to grant sanction.—A Deputy Commissioner upon receiving a petition of complaint against a public servant referred it for inquiry and report to a Sub-divisional Magistrate, who in consequence of an opinion formed by him during the inquiry proceeded to try the petitioner who was one of the complainants to the Deputy Commissioner, and convicted him under s. 182, I P C. held, that the Sub-divisional Magistrate has no jurisdiction to institute proceedings or to grant sanction, inasmuch as the complaint which led to the trial of the petitioner was not made to him but to the Deputy Commissioner 4 C. W. N. 366; 22 M. L. J. 419 = (1912) 1 M. W. N. 499 = 13 Cr. L. J. 209.

49. Second-class Magistrate cannot grant sanction in respect of an offence before a Village Magistrate.—See 18 M. L. J. 284 (Notes 49 and 42), where 4 M. 241 was not followed. A sanction to a prosecution for an offence under s. 182, I P C., accorded by a second-class Magistrate, when the false information was supplied to a Village Magistrate is a sufficient sanction if the Village Magistrate is subordinate for the purpose at all events of transmitting information to the Magistrate granting sanction, 4 M. 241. Query whether a Village Magistrate in Madras is a Magistrate within the meaning of this section and of s. 197 having regard to the definition in s. 3 (31) of the General Clauses Act, X of 1897?

50. False evidence before Village Munsiff's Court.—A Village Munsiff trying a suit is a Court, and as such can give sanction under this section when false evidence is given before him, 11 M. 878.

51. Sanction for perjury by an offender under conditional pardon.—Under s. 339 (3), the High Court alone is competent to accord sanction for the prosecution for perjury by an offender to whom a conditional pardon had been tendered.

52. Officer of Court may grant sanction for offences against him.—Where the complainant alleging that he was assaulted when trying under the orders of the Amin to open the doors of the judgment-debtor's house, charged the accused with offences under ss. 183, 186, 355 and 323 I P C., it was held that sanction of the Court was not necessary in respect of ss. 355 and 323, I P C., and the sanction of the Amin would be sufficient in respect of the other offences, 31 M. 43. See also 8 A. 382.

53. Persons not acting as a Court cannot grant sanction—

(i) Commissioner examining witnesses cannot grant sanction.—Where perjury is alleged to have been committed before a Commissioner appointed under s. 503, the proper authority to accord sanction is not the Commissioner, but the Court that tries the case, 11 C. W. N. 809 = 6 Cr. L. J. 160.

(ii) Arbitrator appointed by Court cannot sanction.—Where it was alleged that a party to the suit had committed before an arbitrator appointed by the Court, the offences of fabricating evidence, etc. held the sanction of the Court was necessary for prosecuting the party, 17 M. L. J. 420 = 6 Cr. L. J. 33.

(iii) Official Assignee cannot grant sanction.—See Note 38.

(iv) Collectors and Assistant Collectors acting departmentally.—See Notes 36 and 37.

(v) Registration Officers.—See Note 44.

54. Dual capacity of grantor.—When an order which would have been a valid sanction if made by the Sessions Judge was in fact passed by the same person as District Judge, the High Court set aside the sanction, as in the absence of notice to the accused in that case it could not be said he had not been prejudiced. In 26 A. 514; 26 M. 139, the misdescription was held to be immaterial. See also 13 C. W. N. 1062; 17 W. R. 54 and Note 124.

55. Contradictory statements in two Courts.—See Notes 132 and 133.

IX.—POINTS TO BE CONSIDERED IN DEALING WITH SANCTION APPLICATIONS.

56. Only upon an application.—See Note 36 at p 449

57. Application should not be dismissed for default of appearance of applicant.—Where a Public the Court warranted appear at was bound the Court, cannot be dismissed on the non-appearance of the complainant, Ratanlal 137. See Ratanlal 45, where the complainant was allowed to withdraw

58. Notice must be given to the accused.—See Note 78 under Heading XI

59. Where necessary preliminary inquiry must be held.—See Note 99 under Heading XIII

60. Sanction must be based on legal evidence.—In cases falling under cls (b) and (c) of sub-sec. (1), sanction can be granted only on materials which can be regarded as legal evidence according to the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act. It is therefore illegal to grant sanction based solely on an investigation conducted under s. 202 whether by a Police-officer or by the Magistrate himself. SUNDRA IYER, J., in 22 M. L. J. 419 = (1912) 1 M. W. N. 499 (contra SPENCER, J.). When a Magistrate dismisses a complaint upon a report from the Police there is no legal evidence before him on which he could grant a sanction. It is irregular to substitute the opinion of the Police-officer who made the report for that of the Magistrate, 10 M. 232 (F.B.). A sanction ought not to be granted in respect of false statements contained in an affidavit sworn by him in a case in which he was an accused person 28 A. 331, 19 A. 200; 7 S. L. R. 75. A declaration before it can be made the foundation of a prosecution under s. 199, I P C., must be one which is admissible in evidence and which the Court before which it is filed is bound or authorized by law to receive in evidence, 35 A. 58. No sanction ought to be granted in respect of a statement in an affidavit which is sworn to before a Magistrate who had no power to administer oath, 5 S. L. R. 102 = 12 Cr. L. J. 563. A Magistrate cannot grant a sanction or make an order under s. 476 in a matter which did not come within his cognizance in the course of a judicial proceeding, 2 C. L. J. 612 = 3 Cr. L. J. 81. Thus sanction to prosecute a person for making a false statement at an investigation held by a Magistrate under s. 202 to which the public were not allowed access, was held illegal on the ground that such an investigation was not a judicial proceeding and that no oath could legally be administered in such a proceeding, Weir II, 167. Similarly, inquiry held by a Divisional Magistrate at the instance of the District Magistrate into the circumstances of a complaint against the Police was held to be not a judicial inquiry, 23 M. 223; 4 C. W. N. 366; 20 C. 724; 22 B. 938. Where the person against whom sanction is sought was examined on oath, held the sanction based on such evidence was unsustainable, 26 M. 116. It has never been doubted that under s. 195 sanction can be accorded only on legal evidence, 21 M. L. J. 795 = 10 M. L. T. 87 = 1911 2 M. W. N. 9 = 2 Cr. L. J. 323. The evidence must be of a substantial nature and the evidence of an accomplice, unless corroborated is not sufficient to sustain a sanction for prosecution, 1900 A. W. M. 150. Again a Court will not be justified in according sanction against a person merely because someone makes a statement behind his back that he had committed a certain offence and the Court believed such statement. An order granting sanction must be based on legal evidence. See Weir II, 188; 23 B. 50; 27 M. 54; 23 M. 223. The observations in 10 M. 232 (F.B.) that the order giving sanction should be made on judicial evidence, or legal evidence, do not mean as contended for before us that such evidence must have been given on the application for sanction or even on the hearing of the complaint itself. In that case their Lordships held that the sanction granted merely on the strength of the Police report and of the result of the investigation was illegal. PER WALLIS, J., in 26 M. L. J. 486 = 15 Cr. L. J. 271. In that case it was held as I understand the points on which all the learned Judges were agreed, that the Magistrate should not substitute the judgment of the Police for his own judgment and cannot accord sanction merely upon Police report. It does not state that the authority giving sanction should act only upon legal evidence. It says that the authority giving sanction should act on the materials on which a Court can be satisfied. AYYAR, J. ibid. Where, therefore, a Subordinate Magistrate has granted sanction to prosecute the accused, for preferring a false charge, after having sent for the records of a previous case in which the fact which formed the subject matter of the present complaint by the accused were set up and found against him after his evidence as a complainant had been recorded and the complaint dismissed held, the sanction was legal following 22 M. L. J. 419 = 11 M. L. T. 367 = 13 Cr. L. J. 209. Ibid See also the observations of WHITE, C.J., in 39 M. 788.

Contra.—SPENCER, J.—A Magistrate proceeding under s 195 would not be wrong, if he took into consideration statements made before himself, not on oath, in the course of an investigation made by himself under s. 202. Opinion of AVING, J., in 21 M. L. J. 795 = 10 M. L. T. 47 = (1911) 2 M. W. N. 9 = 12 Cr. L. J. 323 approved in 22 M. L. J. 419 = 11 M. L. T. 367 = 13 Cr. L. J. 209. See also 32 M. 49 at p. 57 where it is stated by SANKARAN NAIR, J.—“There are many cases falling within s 195 which do not fall within s. 476 as the latter is confined to judicial proceedings which the former is not”

61. Sanction ought not to be given unless there is a clear “prima facie” case against the accused.—No sanction ought to be given unless there is a clear case against the accused. That question ought not to be left over for consideration at the trial, 11 C. W. N. 195 = 5 C. L. J. 219 = 5 Cr. L. J. 29; 11 C. W. N. 35; 12 M. L. J. 392 and 408; 6 M. L. T. 91. A sanction given under this section is not a mere formal matter, and before sanction can be granted it is necessary for the Court granting sanction to consider the evidence and decide as to whether there is a prima facie case and any reasonable chance of a conviction being obtained, Weir II, 188. The reason that the Magistrate considers it essential that the truth of the matter should be thrashed out and that for that reason he sanctions the prosecution of the petitioner “as this appears to be the only course by which it can be decided whether or no this very serious offence was committed” is no ground for sanctioning prosecution, 26 M. 193. The evidence should show a prima facie case and a strong probability of conviction, in order to ensure the safeguard provided by law against vexatious and frivolous prosecution of parties before a Court and of witnesses attending and giving evidence in Courts of Justice in discharge of a public duty imposed upon them by law. Where a Magistrate granted sanction for prosecution of the complainant for the offence of forgery provided that an alibi of S is found on investigation to be true, held, that such an order was absolutely illegal. No sanction can be granted of a provisional character in case certain conditions are satisfied in the future. It is the duty of the Magistrate before granting sanction to satisfy himself that there was at the time of the order, a prima facie case against the party, 36 M. 471. See also 6 A. 114; 1889 P. R. 197; 1 C. W. N. 400; 23 M. 210; 10 M. 232; (F. B.) 15 C. 730; 20 C. 349; 23 C. 532; 7 M. 560 at p. 562; 11 C. W. N. 712; 12 C. W. N. 3 = 6 Cr. L. J. 855; 15 C. L. J. 337 = 13 Cr. L. J. 291; 10 M. L. T. 117 = (1911) 2 M. W. N. 172 = 12 Cr. L. J. 444, 3 Bar. L. T. 151 = 11 Cr. L. J. 749; 9 N. L. R. 184 = 15 Cr. L. J. 33; 13 A. L. J. 1111. See, however, 41 C. 446 and the remarks of NAPIER, J., 17 M. L. T. 15 = 1915 M. W. N. 140 = 16 Cr. L. J. 115. An application for sanction must be carefully considered before the sanction is given, 17 Cr. L. J. 93 (A). An opportunity should always be given to the person supposed to have made contradictory statements to give on oath an explanation of the statement he has made. See 43 M. 1 where 17 M. L. T. 15 is followed and the dictum of Sheshagiri Ayyar in 32 M. L. J. 84 dissented from.

62. Before granting sanction Judge must be satisfied that in all probability conviction will result.—When a Court is invited to sanction a prosecution because in offence against public justice has been committed, the ends of justice should not be allowed to be defeated on technical grounds. At the same time a sanction should not be lightly granted on mere suspicion, but the Court must satisfy itself that there is a prima facie case and that there is a reasonable prospect of a successful termination of the prosecution to be instituted, 15 C. L. J. 387 = 13 Cr. L. J. 291. The object of law in allowing sanction to prosecute is to restrain the exercise of private spite and to insist on there being prosecutions only when the interests of public justice render it necessary. It is not intended by the law to allow any person as of right to attack his civil adversary in a Criminal Court. * * Another reason for not granting sanction to prosecute in every case is that there may not be a number of prosecutions without convictions. It would be disastrous if there were a number of prosecutions ending not in convictions, but in acquittals. The result would be that, instead of putting down perjury, it would rather tend to encourage it. Therefore, a Judge, before sanctioning a prosecution, should be satisfied not only that in his judgment the document is not genuine but that in all probability conviction will be the result, 1 C. W. N. 400; 11 C. W. N. 712; 12 C. W. N. 3; 13 Cr. L. J. 4 (C). No sanction under this section or s. 476 should be granted unless there is a reasonable probability of conviction. It would be an abuse of the powers vested in a Court of Justice if sanction were given or upheld on the principle that though the conviction of the party complained against is a mere possibility, it is desirable that the matter should be thrashed out, so that it may be decided whether or not offence has been committed, 37 C. 250 where 7 A. 871; 12 C. W. N. 3 and 1 C. 450 referred to, 10 N. L. R. 117 = 18 Cr. L. J. 161. The authority giving the sanction or upholding the sanction must go into the merits of the sanction application and unless there is a prima facie case and reasonable probability of conviction, sanction ought not to be given. It would be an abuse of the powers vested in Courts if sanction should be given or upheld on the principle that though the conviction of the party complained against is a mere possibility and is by no means probable, yet the giving of sanction would in itself operate as a punishment which in the opinion of the person giving or upholding the sanction is deserved by the person

63. Court should consider whether prosecution necessary in the interests of justice.—Courts should not merely see that there is good prospect of conviction but should also consider whether the circumstances are such as to render a prosecution desirable in the public interests, 37 M. 564. Apart from the existence of a prima facie case, in cases where sanction to prosecute is applied for, the Court should see if there are good grounds for thinking that a prosecution is necessary in the interests of justice. See 20 M. L. T. 557 = 32 M. L. J. 56. Where the view of NATHAN, J., in 17 M. L. T. 13 is dissented from. A case where the character of a public officer has been attacked by accusing him of having committed a cruel and barbarous offence apparently with the object of making it appear that he was not a fit person to proceed with a trial of a case pending before him at that time, is eminently one which ought to be heard and determined (1911) 2 M. W. N. 172 = 10 M. L. T. 117 = 12 Cr. L. J. 446. In 40 C. 446 the High Court declined to grant a sanction as the accused had been illegally and unnecessarily harassed by previous illegal proceedings. See also 33 M. L. J. 545.

64. Application for sanction should not be dealt with as though it were a trial.—Nature of discretion exercised in according sanction.—In dealing with applications, for sanction, the Court is not trying the guilt or innocence of the accused, but is merely considering whether the statutory bar imposed by this section should be removed and the law allowed to take its ordinary course. The section is expressed in the widest terms and vests in the Court an absolute and unqualified discretion. Not one jot or tittle can be taken away from or added to the plain and express provisions of the Legislature by any decision of the Court, nor can this discretion vested by the section be crystallized or restricted by any series of cases, it remains free and untrammelled to be fairly exercised according to the exigencies of each case. When a tribunal is invested by Act of Parliament or by rules with a discretion without any indication in the Act or rules of the grounds upon which the discretion is to be exercised, it is a mistake to lay down any rules with a view to indicate the particular grooves in which the discretion should run for if the Act or rules did not filter the discretion of the Judge, why should the Court do so. There are, however, certain rules of procedure to which any Court exercising its discretion would pay regard, and pre-eminent among them, possibly a compendious statement of all would be the rule that the Court will be astute to see that there should be no abuse of administration of criminal justice. No one therefore, would be permitted to use a penal law merely to satisfy his own private ends or personal spite, 41 C. 446. See also 13 A. L. J. 1111.

65. Question of guilt or innocence need not be decided.—The question whether the person, sanction for whose prosecution is sought is guilty or not cannot be decided in sanction proceedings. The sole question is whether there are prima facie grounds for removing the bar to the institution of criminal proceedings by which alone the question of guilt or innocence can be determined, 7 Bom. L. R. 732 = 2 Cr. L. J. 611; 11 Bom. L. R. 1164 = 10 Cr. L. J. 539; 10 C. L. J. 564 = 11 Cr. L. J. 37; 14 Bom. L. R. 381 = 13 Cr. L. J. 639; 41 C. 446. It is not the function of the Court giving the sanction for a prosecution to require the same strictness of proof that Courts are wont to demand before they pronounce an accused person to be guilty. It is too much to expect the prosecution to prove at the time the sanction is applied for that there was no particle of truth in the complaint, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 172 = 10 M. L. T. 117 = 12 Cr. L. J. 446.

66. Sanction not to be given before termination of the original proceedings in respect of which the offence was committed.—The proceedings in respect of which the alleged offence has been committed must have judicially terminated before the Court to which an application for sanction has been made can grant it, 16 B. 729. By judicial determination it is not meant a trial of the persons against whom the original complaint is made, but the officer holding the inquiry must have finally disposed of it. 5 C. W. N. 234, 5 C. W. N. 105, 3 C. W. N. 490, 758 and 3, 16 W. R. 37, 5 A. 387, 4 C. L. J. 88; 1 M. H. G. R. 30, 1832 P. R. 50, 1 A. 497; 14 C. 707 (F.B.), 4 C. W. N. 305; 13 C. W. N. 398 = 11 Cr. L. J. 4. Proceeding with a view to the prosecution of a witness for giving false evidence should not be taken until a conclusion has been come to by the Magistrate or Judge conducting the trial in which the false evidence is supposed to be given upon the evidence given therein, 1913 U. B. R. (1st quarter) 166 = 14 Cr. L. J. 422; 21 C. W. N. 753. See Note 95.

67. Duty of Court when there are a number of accused.—Before granting a sanction to prosecute, a

W = 11 ..

68. Point to be noted in granting sanction for disobedience of order under s. 144.—A Magistrate should not sanction a prosecution under s. 188 I P C., for disobedience of an order under s. 144 unless there is some evidence that the disobedience of the order tends to cause annoyance, etc., 16 C. W. N. 234 = 11 Cr. L. J. 49.

69. Reasons for the order should be clearly set forth and proceedings must be so conducted as to satisfy the Superior Court.—A Court should give reasons for granting or refusing sanction, 14 Cr. L. J. 195 (C). A Court sanctioning a prosecution under this section should state the reasons for doing so, and not confine itself merely to saying that it sanctions the prosecution. Otherwise a Superior Court is not in a position to decide whether it should exercise the powers conferred on it under sub-sec. (6), 1904 A. W. N. 171. But it must at the same time be remembered that s. 367 does not apply to orders under this section as it refers only to judgments on trials, 6 Rom. L. R. 897. When Subordinate Courts grant sanction to prosecute under this section, it is incumbent on them so to frame the proceedings before them as to enable the High Court to satisfy itself from the record, whether the application for sanction has been properly granted or not. A Magistrate, in disposing of a charge of theft, delivered the following judgment:—“The charge of theft of doors and windows is not proved at all against the accused. They are acquitted.” There was no further record of the proceedings held, that the mere fact of the charge laid by the complainant not having been proved, was not in itself sufficient ground for granting sanction to prosecute him under ss. 182 and 211 of the Penal Code and as beyond the judgment of the Magistrate, there was nothing on the record, to show that there were sufficient grounds for granting the sanction, it should be revoked, 16 C. 661, concurrent in 23 M. 210, where it was further held that the Lower Court did not exercise a proper discretion in not giving the party against whom sanction was sought, notice of the application especially where the predecessor of the Judge granting sanction had refused it. Sanction should not be indefinite, 6 C. W. N. 37.

(i) That there would be numerous similar applications is no ground for rejection—A Judge ought not to dismiss the application for sanction on the ground that there would be numerous similar applications every day, 14 C. W. N. 808 = 11 Cr. L. J. 357; nor for the reason that there is nothing in the record to show that the case is false.

(ii) Sanction by trying Judge's successor good, though based on predecessor's opinion—A Sub-Judge, after duly hearing both parties and examining a witness on behalf of opponents and relying on the opinion recorded by his predecessor in office who heard and decided the suit and by the Joint Judge who confirmed it on appeal gave sanction for the prosecution of some of the plaintiffs, the opponents, for the forgery of a document produced by them in a civil suit in his Court, in which his predecessor, holding the document relied upon by the plaintiffs not to be genuine dismissed their claim and in which on appeal to the Joint Judge, declaring the document to be a forgery, confirmed the Sub-Judge's decision. The District Judge set aside the sanction, stating that the Sub-Judge ought to have held independent inquiry, instead of relying on the opinion expressed by the trying Sub-Judge, held, that the Sub-Judge adopted the proper procedure, and had material whereon to base his order, Ratanlal 708. See also 50 C. 823.

(iii) Giving sanction on mere assurance of pleader is illegal—Where the evidence on record being insufficient in the opinion of the Judge to sustain a charge under s. 211, I P C., the pleader of the petitioner obtained sanction to prosecute under s. 211, on the assurance that further evidence would be adduced at the hearing held the sanction was bad 14 C. W. N. 122. But it was open to the Judge to proceed in the matter of the sanction should he see it fit on further evidence which may be produced before him.

70. Can a second sanction be granted when the first was infructuous.—See Notes 167 and 228

71. Costs should not be awarded.—In proceedings under this section costs cannot be awarded, Wheeler 11, 196. The powers of the Civil Procedure Code as to costs cannot be imported into a criminal proceeding, even though the Court called on to exercise the powers under this section be a Civil Court. A proceeding under this section ought not to be treated as a proceeding between private parties and costs ought not to be awarded. The person who applies for sanction presumably does so in the interests of the administration of public justice and if that was his real point of view he cannot very well claim costs, 13 Cr. L. J. 6 (C.), 5 P. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 281. See also (1913) U. B. R. (1st quarter) 166 = 14 Cr. L. J. 422; 18 C. W. N. 1323 = 18 Cr. L. J. 151. The practice in the Madras High Court is to award costs, 17 Cr. L. J. 184 = 33 Ind. Cas. 824 (M). It was held, however, that proceedings of a Civil Court under s. 195 must be treated as of a criminal nature and costs should not be awarded 25 C. W. N. 661.

X—COURT'S POWER TO HOLD PRELIMINARY INQUIRY AND GO BEYOND THE RECORD IN GRANTING SANCTION.

73. Court competent to hold preliminary inquiry and let in fresh evidence.—On an application for sanction to prosecute, it was originally held that it is not competent to the Court to go beyond the record in determining whether or not sanction should be granted when the record itself discloses no foundation for the charges, 6 M. 29; 13 M. 224; 8 C. 440. But this was considered as obiter dictum and dissented from by NORRIS, J. (BEVERLY E., J., concurring), in 19 C. 343. There it was held that it is competent for a Civil Court before which a case may have been settled without any evidence being gone into, and which has grounds for supposing an offence of the nature referred to in this section has been committed before it during the pendency of such a case, to make a preliminary inquiry, and thus satisfy itself whether a prima facie case has been made out for granting sanction, and if satisfied, to grant sanction for the prosecution of the person alleged to have committed such offence. A sanction granted after such preliminary inquiry and based thereon is not illegal. The case in 6 M. 29 and 13 M. 224, were also dissented from by the Madras High Court in a later case. The Court remarked that reading s. 195 with s. 476, it is open to a Court, when a person is accused of giving false evidence before it, to hold inquiry into the truth of the accusation and take other evidence besides that contained in the record of the case. The words of the sections contain no limitation to an offence appearing on the face of the record, though nothing would have been easier than to have expressed such limitation, if it was intended to have effect. To admit the contention that the Court cannot go beyond the record in determining whether sanction for prosecution should be granted or not would be, by an artificial rule, to screen from prosecution men who might have committed the grossest offence against public justice, and offences perfectly capable of being proved merely because, owing to surprise, accident, oversight, etc., evidence of the offence was not, or could not be produced before the Court at the same time that the offence was committed. In deciding the case in 6 M. 29 and 6 C. 440 = 7 C. L. R. 330, the learned Judges did not refer to the effect of s. 471 (now s. 476) of the then Criminal Procedure Code, and it is difficult to reconcile these decisions with the provisions of that section, 20 M. 339; Weir II, 477. See also 7 Bom. L. R. 732 = 2 Cr. L. J. 614; 4 L. B. R. 334 = 16 Bur. L. R. 207 = 7 Cr. L. J. 495; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 526 = 13 Cr. L. J. 19.

74. Preliminary investigation may be dispensed with if sufficient evidence on record.—Though a Court acting under s. 195 (b) is competent to and in a proper case should give notice and make inquiry before granting sanction, the law does not compel the giving of notice or the holding of an inquiry before granting sanction, 11 N. L. R. 36 = 16 Cr. L. J. 229. See also 12 C. 58; 18 A. 358; 10 M. 232, 26 M. 292. If in the course of a criminal trial, the evidence recorded by the trying Magistrate discloses a prima facie case or an offence under s. 193, I P C, sanction may be given by that Magistrate without independent preliminary investigation, Ratanlal 132. When the facts have been already fully set forth, a separate preliminary inquiry is not necessary, 2 P. R. 1888; 6 C. 308; 20 C. 474; 5 A. 62. When a proper inquiry has already been made by some authority subordinate to the Court to which application for sanction is made, such Court would be justified in according sanction without any further inquiry, 3 B. L. R. A Cr. 9.

75. Preliminary inquiry must be held when the evidence on record does not disclose prima facie case for prosecution.—Sanction application cannot be summarily dismissed—It may be necessary to hold some inquiry before sanction is given though there is no rigid rule of law making it imperative 20 C. 349 and 474, 8 C. W. N. 295 23 C. 532, 6 C. 308; 26 B. 785, 30 C. 415. Sanction should not be granted without a preliminary inquiry where such inquiry is necessary within the meaning of s. 476, 8 A. 98 and 101; 5 A. 62 and 7 M. 189. Where a Judge dismissed an application for sanction to prosecute a plaintiff for bringing a false suit on the ground that he was not bound to go beyond the record, held that the records had nothing to do with the application. The plaint is before the Court and the Court will have to ascertain whether the case made out on the plaint was a true or a false case, and if a false case whether the sanction should be granted or not. If the Judge finds that to decide whether the case is false will involve an inquiry equivalent to trying the case de novo, he must discharge the duty the law imposes on him 37 C. 714. A Magistrate has no power upon an application for sanction at once to grant sanction and issue warrants against the accused even without examining the complainant on oath, 2 C. L. J. 612 = 3 Cr. L. J. 81. But an Appellate Court which did not hear

W. N. 1091. When an arbitrator found a document to be forged, the Court that referred the matter to the arbitrator can grant sanction in respect of the forged document, only after holding a preliminary inquiry to satisfy itself that there were materials to justify a prosecution, 6 A. 101. A plaintiff filed a suit on a promissory note but withdrew the suit before any summons or notice was taken out for the defendant. The defendant alleging the document to be forged applied for sanction to prosecute the plaintiff under ss. 463, 471 and 475, I P C. The Munsif in whose Court the suit was filed refused sanction relying on 35 C. 820, but the District Judge set aside the order and granted sanction. There was no inquiry into the question whether the promissory note was

69. Reasons for the order should be clearly set forth and proceedings must be so conducted as to satisfy the Superior Court.—A Court should give reasons for granting or refusing sanction, 14 Cr. L. J. 193 (C). A Court sanctioning a prosecution under this section should state the reasons for doing so, and not confine itself merely to saying that it sanctions the prosecution. Otherwise a Superior Court is not in a position to decide whether it should exercise the powers conferred on it under sub-sec. (6), 1904 A. W. N. 171. But it must at the same time be remembered that s. 367 does not apply to orders under this section as it refers only to judgments on trials, 6 Rom. L. R. 897. When Subordinate Courts grant sanction to prosecute under this section, it is incumbent on them so to frame the proceedings before them as to enable the High Court to satisfy itself from the record, whether the application for sanction has been properly granted or not. A Magistrate, in disposing of a charge of theft, delivered the following judgment:—"The charge of theft of doors and windows is not proved at all against the accused. They are acquitted." There was no further record of the proceedings, held, that the mere fact of the charge laid by the complainant not having been proved, was not in itself sufficient ground for granting sanction to prosecute him under ss. 182 and 211 of the Penal Code and as beyond the judgment of the Magistrate, there was nothing on the record, to show that there were sufficient grounds for granting the sanction, it should be revoked, 16 G. W. N. 661, concurring in 23 M. 210, where it was further held that the Lower Court did not exercise a proper discretion in not giving the party against whom sanction was sought, notice of the application especially where the predecessor of the Judge granting sanction had refused it. Sanction should not be indefinite, 6 C. W. N. 37.

(i) That there would be numerous similar applications is no ground for rejection—A Judge ought not to dismiss the application for sanction on the ground that there would be numerous similar applications every day, 16 G. W. N. 806 = 11 Cr. L. J. 357, nor for the reason that there is nothing in the record to show that the case is false.

(ii) Sanction by trying Judge's successor good, though based on predecessor's opinion—A Sub Judge, after duly hearing both parties and examining a witness on behalf of opponents and relying on the opinions recorded by his predecessor in office, who heard and decided the suit, and by the joint Judge who confirmed it on appeal gave sanction for the prosecution of some of the plaintiffs, the opponents, for the forgery of a document produced by them in a civil suit in his Court, in which his predecessor, holding the document relied upon by the plaintiffs not to be genuine dismissed their claim and in which on appeal to the joint Judge, declaring the document to be a forgery, confirmed the Sub-Judge's decision. The District Judge set aside the sanction, stating that the Sub-Judge ought to have held independent inquiry, instead of relying on the opinion expressed by the trying Sub-Judge, held, that the Sub-Judge adopted the proper procedure and had material whereon to base his order, Ratanlal 705. See also 40 C. 423.

(iii) Giving sanction on mere assurance of pleader is illegal—Where the evidence on record being insufficient in the opinion of the Judge to sustain a charge under s. 211, I P C., the pleader of the petitioner obtained sanction to prosecute under s. 211, on the assurance that further evidence would be adduced at the hearing held the sanction was bad 14 G. W. N. 122. But it was open to the Judge to proceed in the matter if the sanction should he see it fit on further evidence which may be produced before him.

70. Can a second sanction be granted when the first was infructuous.—See Notes 167 and 228

71. Costs should not be awarded.—In proceedings under this section costs cannot be awarded, Weir 31, 196. The powers of the Civil Procedure Code as to costs cannot be imported into a criminal proceeding, even though the Court called on to exercise the powers under this section be a Civil Court. A proceeding under this section ought not to be treated as a proceeding between private parties and costs ought not to be awarded. The practice in the Madras High Court is to award costs, 17 Cr. L. J. 184 = 33 In. Ca. 824 (M). It was held, however, that proceedings of a Civil Court under s. 195 must be treated as of a criminal nature and costs should not be awarded 25 C. W. N. 661.

X—COURT'S POWER TO HOLD PRELIMINARY INQUIRY AND GO BEYOND THE RECORD IN GRANTING SANCTION.

73. Court competent to hold preliminary inquiry and let in fresh evidence.—On an application for sanction to prosecute it was originally held that it is not competent to the Court to go beyond the record in determining whether or not sanction should be granted when the record itself discloses no foundation for the charges, 6 M. 29; 15 M. 224; 6 C. 440. But this was considered as obiter dictum and dissented from by NORRIS, J. (HEVERLEY, J., concurring), in 19 C. 343. There it was held that it is competent for a Civil Court before which a case may have been settled without any evidence being gone into, and which has grounds for supposing an offence of the nature referred to in this section has been committed before it during the pendency of such a case, to make a preliminary inquiry, and thus satisfy itself whether a prima facie case has been made out for granting sanction, and if satisfied to grant sanction for the prosecution of the person alleged to have committed such offence. A sanction granted after such preliminary inquiry and based thereon is not illegal. The case in 6 M. 29 and 15 M. 224, were also dissented from by the Madras High Court in a later case. The Court remarked that readings of s. 195 with s. 476, it is open to a Court, when a person is accused of giving false evidence before it, to hold inquiry into the truth of the accusation and take other evidence besides that contained in the record of the case. See also 7 Bom. L. R. 732 = 2 Cr. L. J. 611; 4 L. B. R. 234 = 14 Bur. L. R. 207 = 7 Cr. L. J. 495; (1911) 3 M. W. N. 526 = 13 Cr. L. J. 19.

74. Preliminary investigation may be dispensed with if sufficient evidence on record.—Though a Court acting under s. 195 (b) is competent to and in a proper case should give notice and make inquiry before granting sanction the law does not compel the giving of notice or the holding of an inquiry before granting sanction, 11 N. L. R. 36 = 16 Cr. L. J. 389. See also 12 C. 55; 16 A. 358; 10 M. 332; 26 M. 592. If in the course of a criminal trial, the evidence recorded by the trying Magistrate discloses a prima facie case of an offence under s. 193, I P C, sanction may be given by that Magistrate without independent preliminary investigation, Ratanlal 132. When the facts have been already fully set forth, a separate preliminary inquiry is not necessary, 2 P. R. 1888; 6 C. 308; 20 C. 474; 5 A. 62. When a proper inquiry has already been made by some authority subordinate to the Court to which application for sanction is made such Court would be justified in according sanction without any further inquiry, 3 B. L. R. A. Gr. 9.

75. Preliminary inquiry must be held when the evidence on record does not disclose prima facie case for prosecution.—Sanction application cannot be summarily dismissed—it may be necessary to hold some inquiry before sanction is given though there is no rigid rule of law making it imperative, 20 C. 349 and 674; 6 C. W. N. 295; 23 C. 532; 6 C. 308; 26 B. 785; 30 C. 415. Sanction should not be granted without a preliminary inquiry where such inquiry is necessary within the meaning of s. 476 6 A. 98 and 101, 6 A. 62 and 7 M. 189. Where a Judge dismissed an application for sanction to prosecute a plaintiff for bringing a false suit on the ground that he was not bound to go beyond the record, held that the records had nothing to do with the application. The plaintiff before the Court and the Court will have to ascertain whether the case made on the plaintiff was a true or a false case, and if a false case whether the sanction should be granted or not. If the Judge finds that to decide whether the case is false will involve an inquiry equivalent to trying the case de novo, he must discharge the duty the law imposes on him, 37 C. 714. A Magistrate has no power upon an application for sanction, at once to grant sanction and issue warrants against the accused even without examining the complainant on oath, 2 C. L. J. 612 = 3 Cr. L. J. 81. But an Appellate Court which did not hear the evidence is not competent to give sanction to prosecute for perjury on materials not in evidence at the trial and which the witness has had no opportunity of explaining while under examination. The Court under such circumstances should hold a preliminary inquiry into the matter and proceed, if necessary, under s. 476, 10 C. W. N. 1091. When an arbitrator found a document to be forged, the Court that referred the matter to the arbitrator can grant sanction in respect of the forged document, only after holding a preliminary inquiry to satisfy itself that there were materials to justify a prosecution, 6 A. 101. A plaintiff filed a suit on a promissory note but withdrew the suit before any summons or notice was taken out for the defendant. The defendant alleging the document to be forged applied for sanction to prosecute the plaintiff under ss. 463, 471 and 475, I P C. The Munsif in whose Court the suit was filed, refused sanction relying on 35 C. 820, but the District Judge set aside the order and granted sanction. There was no inquiry into the question whether the promissory note was forged as no evidence was taken, held, per ABDUR RAHIM, J.—A Court before granting sanction ought to be satisfied that there is at least a prima facie case for prosecution, and the person to be prosecuted must have had an opportunity of showing that the document on which he based his suit is genuine. There must be some inquiry and the Court granting sanction must be satisfied on evidence that the document used in Court is false. Though where a suit has been properly tried there need not be a fresh inquiry into the character of the document, yet when a suit has not been tried at all, sanction ought not to be granted without its being found on proper inquiry held for the purpose that there are sufficient grounds for holding the document to be a forgery. Contra—Per SPENCER, J. S 195 does not unlike s 476, require any inquiry as a necessary antecedent to the grant of sanction, 20 C. 474, referred to. The District Judge had only to see if a prima facie case had been established. Actual proof might be left to the trial. The sanction should not be interfered with, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 526 = 13 Cr. L. J. 19. See also 22 C. 1004 and Notes 152 and 153.

76. Nature of the inquiry.—Any inquiry that may be held under this section need not even be a judicial inquiry. Per SPENCER, J., in (1911) 2 M. W. N. 526 = 13 Cr. L. J. 19 referring to 6 W. R. 41. Per ABDUR RAHIM, J. "I do not wish to lay down that the inquiry must be in any particular form. The Code does not say that in granting sanction under the section the Court must take evidence. The section does not say upon what materials and what evidence the Court should act before either granting or refusing sanction." See also 14 Bom. L. R. 587 = 13 Cr. L. J. 689; 26 M. L. J. 486 = 15 Cr. L. J. 271. If the Court were to take evidence then it would turn itself into a Court trying the criminal case, whereas the question under s 195 is whether there is prima facie ground for sanctioning prosecution. In Ratanlal 629 it was held competent to a Magistrate to take supplementary evidence after an application has been made to him for sanctioning the prosecution of a person for making a false complaint, but in such cases such evidence must be duly recorded. Court executing a decree has jurisdiction to sanction the prosecution of persons resisting execution by attachment of movables solely on the evidence of the peon carrying out the execution order, 47 C. 744.

77. Respondent not to be put on oath or cross-examined.—Although the respondent is not upon his trial upon a criminal charge, in being required to show cause why he should not be criminally prosecuted, he is in the position of a person accused of committing an offence and his examination therefore should not be on oath, nor should he be cross-examined, but any questions put to him should be put with the object of enabling him to explain the circumstances which required explanation, (1913) U. B. R. (1st quarter) 166 = 14 Cr. L. J. 422. See 6 Cr. L. J. 23 (U.B.R.) 11 Bom. L. R. 1164 = 10 Cr. L. J. 339. There is no section in the Code which warrants the admission of affidavits in the preliminary inquiry, but when the affidavits have been admitted by consent of parties, the admission is a mere irregularity within s 537 and the sanction is not bad. 14 Bom. L. R. 587 = 13 Cr. L. J. 689.

XI.—NOTICE TO THE ACCUSED.

78. Notice to accused generally necessary.—A conviction for preferring a false complaint is not illegal only by reason of the prosecution having been sanctioned without notice previously given to the accused. Sanctioning a prosecution for an offence is a judicial act, and the party to whose prejudice it is done must be previously heard and a judgment formed upon legal evidence. In cases in which the Magistrate dismisses the original complaint upon a report from the Police, there is no legal evidence before him on which to form his judgment. In cases however, in which the Magistrate examines the complainant and hears the evidence and acquits or discharges the accused, and then, without notice to the complainant, sanctions his prosecution for preferring a false charge, sanction cannot be said to be improperly given, 10 M. 232 (F.B.). There is no hard and fast rule that notice must be given in all cases to an accused person before sanction is granted, 26 M. 592. The Allahabad High Court has held that though sanction is not bad for want of notice, notice is desirable. 18 A. 338; 29 A. 142, where 23 M. 210; 4 Bom. L. R. 780 and (1904) A. W. N. 171 are referred to. See also 30 A. 52. Though notice may not be legally necessary in all cases, it is certainly necessary, that the authority competent to grant sanction should judicially consider and determine as a Court responsible for the granting of sanction whether any special reason appears to warrant a departure from the ordinary practice that the party to whose prejudice any order is to be made must be previously heard, 4 Bom. L. R. 750.—An application for sanction must be carefully considered before the sanction is given, 17 Cr. L. J. 93 (A). An opportunity should always be given to the person supposed to have made contradictory statements to give on oath an explanation of the statement he has made. See 20 Cr. L. J. 616; 18 Cr. L. J. 759; 18 A. L. J. 331.

Sanction not to be granted before service of notice.—When a notice has been issued to the accused to show cause why his prosecution (under s 193 I. P. C.) should not be sanctioned, sufficient time should be allowed for its service. Sanction cannot then be granted before its service. Ratanlal 404. See also 23 M. 210.

79. When notice may be dispensed with.—No notice is necessary to the person against whom it is intended to proceed before the Court in which the alleged offence has been committed can grant sanction a complaint being made to a Magistrate regarding one of the offences specified in this section, when the offence is committed before the Court whose sanction is applied for, 12 C. 58 (F.B.) overruling 10 C. 1100. See 18 A 358; 7 M. 224; 10 M. 332 (F.B.), 26 M. 592; 41 C. 446; 11 N. L. R. 36 = 16 Cr. L. J. 289.—But where a party hearing that sanction has been applied for against him requests to be heard before sanction was given, held that this opportunity should have been given him, 16 C. 661.

80. Notice necessary on appeal.—Where the Magistrate who tried the case refused sanction the

Magistrate refused an application for sanction made four months after the decision of the case on the ground that "the case was at best a mere suspicious one," but the Sessions Judge granted it, without giving notice to the accused and without calling for and examining the record of the case the High Court set aside the Judge's order, 1 C. W. N. 529.

81. Before granting sanction for offences committed before the Police, notice should be given.—It is very desirable that in offences under s. 182, I P. C., especially when they are said to have been committed before a Police-officer, notice should be given to the accused in order that he may have an opportunity to clear himself before sanction for his prosecution is given, but the absence of notice does not vitiate the whole proceedings, so that the sanction awarded ought not on that ground alone be summarily reversed, 1890 A. W. N. 188; 10 M. 232 (F.B.), 7 M. 292. But see 18 A. 336.

XII.—SANCTION IN RESPECT OF PERJURY AND FABRICATING FALSE EVIDENCE.

82. Facts to be taken into account in according sanction for perjury.—In sanctioning a prosecution for perjury against a witness, the Magistrate should remember that the statement must be intentionally false in order to justify a prosecution. When the question is neither material to the issue in the case nor goes to the credit of the witness sanction ought not to be accorded. Some allowance ought to be made to a witness seeking to evade some matter relating to for instance, his past history, 2 A. L. J. 836 = 3 Cr. L. J. 45, where 28 A. 509 is distinguished. The materiality of the evidence to the matter in issue is not the only point to be considered, Weir II, 165 and 652, see also 15 C. W. N. 169 = 12 Cr. L. J. 11. When a witness on cross-examination stated he had not applied for insolvency while, as a matter of fact, he had applied and the application had been dismissed, held, that without knowing the form in which the question was put, it is unreasonable to assume that the reply was intentionally false and give sanction for his prosecution under s. 193, I P. C., 12 P. R. 1908 = 8 Cr. L. J. 243. Sanction for perjury ought not to be granted against a witness based on records which were not produced before or at the time of the deposition and in respect of which the witness was not given any opportunity for an explanation 17 M. L. T. 15 = 1915 M. W. N. 140 = 16 Cr. L. J. 115. See also 72 P. L. R. 4911 = 14 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 263.

83. Before granting sanction, a locus penitentium ought to be given to the witness.—Where the
he had not applied for insolvency while, as a matter of fact, he had applied and the application had been dismissed, held, that without knowing the form in which the question was put, it is unreasonable to assume that the reply was intentionally false and give sanction for his prosecution under s. 193, I P. C., 12 P. R. 1908 = 8 Cr. L. J. 243.
himself thereof, a prosecution for perjury is inexpedient for sanction to prosecute for perjury, Courts are entitled in doubtful cases to consider the grounds on which the Government may suggest that a prosecution is inexpedient. Although the scheme of procedure adopted in this country recognizes the right of a private person to institute criminal proceedings it also recognizes the right of the Crown which is a party to all criminal trials as representing the public to intervene and procure a stay of proceedings, Weir II, 193. See Note 17 under s. 236.

84. Contradictory statements in the course of the same deposition.—Prosecution for perjury for contradictory statements in one and the same deposition ought not to be sanctioned without considering the deposition as a whole and without having regard to the circumstances in which the contradictory answers were made, Weir II, 168; 3 C. W. N. 81. Nor should sanction be accorded upon a charge in the alternative of having made two contradictory statements when one of the statements has been made in the circumstances in which the person making it is not bound by law to speak the truth. Sanction cannot be accorded merely because a statement made on oath is opposed to the other statement made not under an obligation to state the truth Weir II, 169; 23 M. 223. Sanction should not be granted merely on a discrepancy between the statement made before a Court on oath and that recorded on mutation proceedings which was not on oath and forged as no evidence was taken, held per ABDUL RAHIM, J.—A Court before granting sanction ought to be satisfied that there is at least a prima facie case for prosecution, and the person to be prosecuted must have had an opportunity of showing that the document on which he based his suit is genuine. There must be some inquiry and the Court granting sanction must be satisfied on evidence that the document used in Court is false. Though where a suit has been properly tried there need not be a fresh inquiry into the character of the document, yet when a suit has not been tried at all sanction ought not to be granted without its being found on proper inquiry held for the purpose that there are sufficient grounds for holding the document to be a forgery. Contra—Per SPENCER, J. S. 195 does not unlike s. 476, require any inquiry as a necessary antecedent to the grant of sanction. 20 G. 474, referred to. The District Judge had only to see if a prima facie case had been established. Actual proof might be left to the trial. The sanction should not be interfered with, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 526 = 13 Cr. L. J. 19. See also 22 G. 1004 and Notes 152 and 153.

76. Nature of the inquiry.—Any inquiry that may be held under this section need not even be a judicial inquiry. Per SPENCER, J., in (1911) 2 M. W. N. 526 = 13 Cr. L. J. 19 referring to 6 W. R. 41. Per ABDUL RAHIM, J. "I do not wish to lay down that the inquiry must be in any particular form. The Code does not say that in granting sanction under the section the Court must take evidence. The section does not say upon what materials and what evidence the Court should act before either granting or refusing sanction." See also 14 Bom. L. R. 587 = 13 Cr. L. J. 689; 26 M. L. J. 456 = 15 Cr. L. J. 271. If the Court were to take evidence then it would turn itself into a Court trying the criminal case, whereas the question under s. 195 is whether there is prima facie ground for sanctioning prosecution. In Ratanlal 629 it was held competent to a Magistrate to take supplementary evidence after an application has been made to him for sanctioning the prosecution of a person for making a false complaint, but in such cases such evidence must be duly recorded. Court executing a decree has jurisdiction to sanction the prosecution of persons resisting execution by attachment of movables solely on the evidence of the peon carrying out the execution order, 47 G. 741.

77. Respondent not to be put on oath or cross-examined.—Although the respondent is not upon his trial upon a criminal charge, in being required to show cause why he should not be criminally prosecuted, he is in the position of a person accused of committing an offence and his examination therefore should not be on oath, nor should he be cross-examined, but any questions put to him should be put with the object of enabling him to explain the circumstances which required explanation (1913) U. B. R. (1st quarter) 166 = 14 Cr. L. J. 422. See 6 Cr. L. J. 25 (U.B.R.) 11 Bom. L. R. 1164 = 10 Cr. L. J. 339. There is no section in the Code which warrants the admission of affidavits in the preliminary inquiry, but when the affidavits have been admitted by consent of parties, the admission is a mere irregularity within s. 537 and the sanction is not bad, 14 Bom. L. R. 587 = 13 Cr. L. J. 689.

XL.—NOTICE TO THE ACCUSED.

78. Notice to accused generally necessary.—A conviction for preferring a false complaint is not illegal only by reason of the prosecution having been sanctioned without notice previously given to the accused. Sanctioning a prosecution for an offence is a judicial act, and the party to whose prejudice it is done must be previously heard and a judgment formed upon legal evidence. In cases in which the Magistrate dismisses the original complaint upon a report from the Police there is no legal evidence before him on which to form his judgment. In cases however, in which the Magistrate examines the complainant and hears the evidence and acquits or discharges the accused and then, without notice to the complainant, sanctions his prosecution for preferring a false charge, sanction cannot be said to be improperly given, 10 M. 232 (F.B.). There is no hard and fast rule that notice must be given in all cases to an accused person before sanction is granted, 26 M. 592. The Allahabad High Court has held that though sanction is not bad for want of notice, notice is desirable, 18 A. 358; 23 A. 142, where 23 M. 210; 4 Bom. L. R. 750 and (1904) A. W. N. 171 are referred to. See also 30 A. 57. Though notice may not be legally necessary in all cases, it is certainly necessary, that the authority competent to grant sanction should judicially consider and determine as a Court responsible for the granting of sanction whether any special reason appears to warrant a departure from the ordinary practice that the party to whose prejudice any order is to be made must be previously heard. 4 Bom. L. R. 750.—An application for sanction must be carefully considered before the sanction is given, 17 Cr. L. J. 93 (A). An opportunity should always be given to the person supposed to have made contradictory statements to give on oath an explanation of the statement he has made. See 20 Cr. L. J. 616, 18 Cr. L. J. 759; 18 A. L. J. 351.

Sanction not to be granted before service of notice.—When a notice has been issued to the accused to show cause why his prosecution (under s. 193 I. P. C.) should not be sanctioned, sufficient time should be allowed for its service. Sanction cannot then be granted before its service. Ratanlal 404. See also 23 M. 210.

79. When notice may be dispensed with.—No notice is necessary to the person against whom it is intended to proceed before the Court in which the alleged offence has been committed can grant sanction a complaint being made to a Magistrate regarding one of the offences specified in this section, when the offence is committed before the Court whose sanction is applied for, 12 C. 68 (F.B.) overruled 10 C. 1100, See 18 A. 358; 7 M. 224; 10 M. 232 (F.B.), 26 M. 592; 41 C. 446; 11 N. L. R. 36 = 16 Cr. L. J. 259.—But where a party hearing that sanction has been applied for against him requests to be heard before sanction is given, held that this opportunity should have been given him, 16 C. 661.

80. Notice necessary on appeal.—Where the Magistrate who tried the case refused sanction, the how cause A sanction exercise of a sound Again, where a trying Magistrate refused an application for sanction made four months after the decision of the case on the ground that "the case was at best a mere suspicious one," but the Sessions Judge granted it, without giving notice to the accused and without calling for and examining the record of the case, the High Court set aside the Judge's order, 1 C. W. N. 229.

81. Before granting sanction for offences committed before the Police, notice should be given.—It is very desirable that in offences under s. 182, I P. C., especially when they are said to have been committed before a Police-officer, notice should be given to the accused in order that he may have an opportunity to clear himself before sanction for his prosecution is given, but the absence of notice does not vitiate the whole proceedings, so that the sanction awarded ought not on that ground alone be summarily reversed, 1890 A. W. N. 168; 10 M. 232 (F.B.), 7 M. 292. But see 19 A. 336.

XII.—SANCTION IN RESPECT OF PERJURY AND FABRICATING FALSE EVIDENCE.

82. Facts to be taken into account in according sanction for perjury.—In sanctioning a prosecution for perjury against a witness, the Magistrate should remember that the statement must be intentionally false in order to justify a prosecution. When the question is neither material to the issue in the case nor goes to the credit of the witness sanction ought not to be accorded. Some allowance ought to be made to a witness seeking to evade some matter relating to for instance, his past history 2 A. L. J. 838 = 3 Cr. L. J. 45, where 24 A. 509 is distinguished. The materiality of the evidence to the matter in issue is not the only point to be considered, Weir II, 166 and 652, see also 15 C. W. N. 169 = 12 Cr. L. J. 11. When a witness on cross-examination stated he had not applied for insolvency while, as a matter of fact, he had applied and the application had been dismissed, held, that without knowing the form in which the question was put it is unreasonable to assume that the reply was intentionally false and give sanction for his prosecution under s. 193, I P. C., 12 P. R. 1908 = 8 Cr. L. J. 243. Sanction for perjury ought not to be granted against a witness based on records which were not produced before or at the time of the deposition and in respect of which the witness was not given any opportunity for an explanation 17 M. L. T. 15 = 1915 M. W. N. 140 = 16 Cr. L. J. 115. See also 72 P. L. R. 1911 = 14 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 265.

83. Before granting sanction, a locus penitentis ought to be given to the witness.—Where the question is whether sanction for perjury shall or shall not be granted, the safest rule is to give the witness as far as possible a locus penitentis and if the witness avails himself thereof, a prosecution for perjury is inexpedient, 1903 A. W. N. 68. In dealing with an application for sanction to prosecute for perjury, Courts are entitled in doubtful cases to consider the grounds on which the Government may suggest that a prosecution is inexpedient. Although the scheme of procedure adopted in this country recognizes the right of a private person to institute criminal proceedings it also recognizes the right of the Crown which is a party to all criminal trials as representing the public, to intervene and procure a stay of proceedings, Weir II, 123. See Note 17 under s. 236.

84. Contradictory statements in the course of the same deposition.—Prosecution for perjury for contradictory statements in one and the same deposition ought not to be sanctioned without considering the deposition as a whole and without having regard to the circumstances in which the contradictory answers were made, Weir II, 168; 3 C. W. N. 81. Nor should sanction be accorded upon a charge in the alternative of having made two contradictory statements when one of the statements has been made in the circumstances in which the person making it is not bound by law to speak the truth. Sanction cannot be accorded merely because a statement made on oath is opposed to the other statement made not under an obligation to state the truth, Weir II, 169; 23 M. 223. Sanction should not be granted merely on a discrepancy between the statement made before a Court on oath and that recorded on mutation proceedings which was not on oath and to which the attention of the witness was not called in the course of his examination in Court, 7 A. L. J. 647 = 11 Cr. L. J. 445. It is not proper to hold a contradiction in the statements made in the course of a single deposition and at one and the same time to be an offence, simply by reason of the fact that there is a contradiction, Weir II, 169; 4 C. W. N. 249. When one of the two contradictory statements is made by a person examined as a complainant under s. 200, but does not bear his signature as required by that section, the record, not being made as directed by law, cannot be used as evidence of the statement made, 6 C. W. N. 840. It would be most undesirable that a witness should be afraid to correct a mistake made in his deposition for fear of rendering himself liable to prosecution for perjury. Prosecution for contradiction in the same deposition is maintainable if the contradiction was made not to correct a bona fide error, but with a dishonest intention (10 C. 937 and 26 M. 55 referred to), 9 S. L. R. 202 = 17 Cr. L. J. 240.

85. Sanction must not be given as a matter of course where witness has made contradictory statements.—It would be a dangerous doctrine to hold that the fact of a witness having made contradictory statements before the committing Magistrate and in Court at the trial would alone justify the granting of sanction to prosecute him for perjury. The Court should consider how it has come about that there are contradictions and why the witness has resiled from his statements before the Magistrate. The High Court refused to grant a sanction though it found that the witness had made false statements before the committing Magistrate, but had deposed truly in Court, 37 C. 618. When a witness made two contradictory statements, one before the committing Magistrate and the other in the Sessions Court and the Sessions Judge believed the latter statement to be true, held, that he was right in not sanctioning the prosecution for having made statements, one or the other of which must necessarily be false. Held also that the Sessions Judge might sanction the prosecution of the witness if he believed that the evidence given before the Magistrate was false, provided there was such proof forthcoming as to justify a reasonable expectation that the prosecution would be successful, Weir II, 186; see 6 W. R. 11. Whether sanction should be granted for giving false evidence on the mere fact that the witness made contradictory statements depends on circumstances, 37 C. 618 approved, 4 Bar. L. T. 282 = 13 Cr. L. J. 56; see also 7 A. 44; 1910 M. W. N. 397 = 8 M. L. T. 86 = 11 Cr. L. J. 353. The practice of charging a man with making two mutually contradictory statements should be adopted only where the two statements are necessarily and irreconcilably contradictory, 1915 M. W. N. 84 = 16 Cr. L. J. 14. Every possible presumption must be made in favour of the reconciliation of the two statements, 7 A. 44, 7 S. L. R. 96 = 15 Cr. L. J. 379; 10 B. 124; 7 S. L. R. 108 = 16 Cr. L. J. 488.

86. Contradictory statements in different depositions—sanction should be on each branch of the alternative by the proper Court.—Where it is intended to charge a person with having made a false statement in the Court of a Magistrate or alternatively a false statement in a Subordinate Judge's Court, it is necessary that there should be a proper sanction for prosecution on each branch of the alternative, i.e., one sanction from the Magistrate or his superior and another from the Sub-Judge or his superior. Sub-sec. (5) will not cure the want of sanction on each separate head. The Court to which both Courts are subordinate might properly grant the sanction where one of the Courts is not subordinate to the other, 36 P. R. 1890. In the course of two departmental inquiries the petitioner made two contradictory statements before two different officers. He was charged under s. 182, I. P. C., with giving false information to a public servant in that he made contradictory statements one of which he must have known to be false. The sanction of both of the officers had not been obtained but of only one. Held, that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to entertain the charge as laid, in the absence of sanction of both of the officers before whom the statements were made, Weir II, 157. Where the accused makes contradictory statements in two Courts of which one is not subordinate to the other, then neither Court can give sanction in the alternative, but the application for sanction must be made to that Court to which the said Courts are subordinate, 30 P. R. 1901. See also 17 W. R. 54; 11 B. H. C. R. 34; Ratanlal 224; 10 B. 190; 27 M. L. J. 586 = 16 M. L. J. 612. But where the statement made to the Police in an investigation under s. 174 contradicts the statement in the inquiry before a Magistrate, a sanction by the Magistrate is valid, 5 M. L. T. 355. But perhaps these rulings will not apply when proceedings are instituted under s. 476. But in 45 B. 834, it is held, that where an alternative charge of giving false evidence is based on contradictory statements made before different Courts, it is necessary that the sanction of each of these Courts must be obtained under s. 195. If, however, want of sanction has not occasioned a failure of justice it cannot be made the basis of interference in revision.

87. Pleadings must be considered as a whole.—When sanction is applied for in respect of a false statement in a written statement, the whole of the defendant's written statement must be taken into consideration as well as the fact that the proceedings in the Mofussil where no great exactitude of expression is found should not be taken too literally, 5 M. L. T. 346 = 10 Cr. L. J. 364.

88 Sanction necessary for a charge of fabricating false evidence, s. 193 I P C.—The petitioner instituted a suit and along with his plaint filed a certificate copy of a document which was said to have been fabricated by him and asked the original to be produced. Held that sanction of the Court was necessary before he could be prosecuted for an offence under s. 193 I P C. 17 C. W. N. 937

89 False statement in declaration inadmissible in evidence cannot be made the subject of charge under s. 193 I P C.—A declaration before it can be made the foundation of a prosecution under s. 199 I P C must be one which is admissible in evidence and which the Court before which it is filed is bound or authorized by law to receive in evidence. 35 A. 58. See also 14 C. 653, 20 C. 729 and 22 C. 131. The Criminal Procedure Code except in the special circumstance of section 74 makes no provision for any matter being proved before a Magistrate by affidavit and the Magistrate before whom the affidavit is sworn is not competent to administer the oath no sanction ought therefore to have been granted in respect of statements made in the affidavit as they were coram non iudice and cannot form the subject of a charge under s. 193 I P C. 5 B. L. R. 102 = 12 Cr. L. J. 583. See also 7 B. L. R. 75 = 14 Cr. L. J. 600

90 False affidavit by an accused person not perjury.—No one can be prosecuted in respect of false statements continued in an affidavit sworn by him in a case in which he was an accused person. 28 A. 331 which follows 19 A. 200. But see Notes to s. 342 but see 8 Lah. 34 where 28 A. 331 is disapproved.

91 Prosecution not to be held forth in terrorum over a witness while giving evidence.—Where G was discharged on a charge of murder and after G's evidence was recorded in the trial of certain persons for perjury the Sessions Judge asked him certain questions as to his liability to be committed to the Sessions Court on a charge of murder and under s. 436 infra committed him. Held (1) that the consequence to public justice would be very serious, if a witness during the course of his deposition and before being absolved from his oath were liable to be suddenly called upon to show cause why he should not be committed for some other distinct and serious crime of which he had been discharged and (2) that the questions put to him could not be considered to be the beginning of the special proceedings authorized by s. 436. Ratanlal 588. Proceedings with a view to the prosecution of a witness for giving false evidence should not be taken until a conclusion has been come to by the Magistrate or Judge conducting the trial in which the false evidence is supposed to be given upon the evidence given therein. Any other course would be open to very serious objections. 1913 U. B. R. (1st quarter) 166 = 14 Cr. L. J. 422, see also 3 C. L. J. 302. A committing Magistrate ordered the prosecution of a witness under s. 193 I P C. while the case in which the witness made the false statement was still pending in the Sessions Court the High Court set aside the order with the remark that in any case the impropriety of taking proceedings against a witness while the case is still pending cannot be too strongly insisted upon. 16 Cr. L. J. 147 (C).

92 Where there is a conflict of findings not expedient to grant sanction.—In a case in which the Court of first instance finds a document to be genuine and the Judge in appeal takes a different view of the matter it is not desirable to grant sanction. 1 C. W. N. 400

XIII—SANCTION IN RESPECT OF INSTITUTING FALSE CHARGES, Etc

93 Before granting sanction, opportunity should be given to accused to prove his case.—A sanction for prosecution for making a false charge under s. 211 of the Penal Code without hearing all the witnesses whom the person accused of making a false charge wished to call is illegal. 6 C. 584 = 8 C. L. R. 265, 5 C. 496 = 7 C. L. R. 467, 7 C. 87 = 8 C. L. R. 387, 7 C. 205 = 8 C. L. R. 267, 13 C. 270, 18 C. 661, 2 C. L. R. 315 and 389, 4 C. L. R. 134, 7 C. L. R. 392, 8 C. L. R. 289. 3 C. W. N. 759, 5 A. 36, 8 A. 39, Weir II, 157, 27 C. 921, 16 W. R. 44, 8 C. 433, 14 C. 707 (F B), 8 A. 392, 25 W. R. 10, 5 C. W. N. 106. 1 C. W. N. 432. 4 Oudh. C. 127, 2 P. W. R. 1909. 30 C. 544. But see contra 6 C. 532, 4 A. 182, 7 M. 292. 16 Cr. L. J. 423 (M).

94 Sanction may be given after examination of complainant and dismissal of complaint.—A Magistrate dismissing a complaint under s. 203 after examining the complainant and considering the result of the investigation under s. 202 on the ground that the allegations contained therein were false is competent to sanction prosecution under s. 211 I P C. 2 P. R. 1907, where 5 C. W. N. 293 is followed and 8 A. 38 disapproved. In 12 Bom. L. R. 229 CHANDAVARKAR J. doubted the correctness of the decisions which lay down that when a Magistrate grants sanction without taking all the evidence which the complainant is willing to adduce the sanction under s. 201 I P C. the Magistrate should matter to the Police and when the Police report is received by him then he may determine whether the complaint is true or false. There is nothing in the Code which compels a Magistrate in express terms to examine any or all the witnesses whom the complainant wishes to adduce before dismissing a complaint and granting sanction. See 22 B. 596, where it was held that the inquiry before the committing Magistrate and the trial before the Sessions Court, gave ample opportunity to the accused to substantiate his complaint, see also 20 C. 474 and 6 C. 308; 15 A. 336; 4 A. 182.

95. Before granting sanction case must be judicially determined.—So long as a complaint is not dismissed under s 203 or otherwise judicially determined, no proceedings can be instituted under s 211, I P C, against the person lodging that complaint. The original complaint must be disposed of according to law before such proceedings can be taken, 3 C. W. N. 788. So where a complaint was dismissed without any reasons, prosecute the complainant, held that the order must be a further enquiry and there cannot have been made, 13 Cr. L. J. 432 (C). Unless a complainant is duly examined, inquiry and report under s 202 cannot be called for, and if made are made without jurisdiction and cannot form the basis of any further action. A Magistrate is incompetent to sanction the prosecution of the complainant for a false charge under s 195 or take action under s 476, 11 P. L. R. 1912 = 2 P. R. 1912 = 12 Cr. L. J. 539, 27 C. 921 and 4 C. W. N. 305, relied on. Sanction for prosecution must not be given merely on a Police report that the complaint is false. The complainant should be afforded an opportunity to prove his case, 5 C. W. N. 106. An application for an inquiry into his complaint before according sanction is in effect in the nature of a complaint and sanction cannot be given until and unless that complaint is judicially determined on evidence. 5 C. W. N. 254, where 14 C. 707 and 3 C. W. N. 490 are followed. A person who lays an information is entitled to have his case determined before he is called upon to answer the charge of laying false information. 14 C. W. N. 785 = 11 Cr. L. J. 354. In according sanction for a prosecution under s 211, I P C it is not necessary that the applicant for sanction should have been summoned to answer the false complaint. But no sanction should be granted until final orders have been passed, viz, under s 203, terminating the trial or by the discharge under s 253 of persons jointly accused with the applicant, 26 A. 244; 3 C. W. N. 490 and 788; 4 C. W. N. 305, notice calling upon a complainant to show cause why he should not be prosecuted for preferring a false charge ought not to issue until it has been finally decided that the complaint must be dismissed as false, 11 P. L. R. 1912 = 2 P. R. 1912 = 12 Cr. L. J. 539. If, however, the complaint has been legally disposed of under s 203 the fact that the complainant had no opportunity to substantiate his case, will not make the sanction bad, 2 P. R. 1907 = 6 Cr. L. J. 258. The Allahabad High Court seems to hold otherwise. See 29 A. 587, where it was held following 8 A. 38 and 15 A. 336 that such a complainant ought to be given an opportunity of substantiating if he can the charge which he has brought, before he is prosecuted.

96. Sanction ought not to be given without a judicial investigation of the complaint.—A Magistrate, would not be justified in granting sanction on a mere Police report. It is the duty of the Police to collect evidence, but it is the function of the Magistrate alone to decide on the sufficiency of the evidence when so collected, 10 M. 232 (F.B.), 27 C. 921, 10 C. W. N. 30. Per SUNDARA, IYER, J., in 22 M. L. J. 419 = 11 M. L. T. 367 = 13 Cr. L. J. 209. A sanction is bad in law if it is given without a judicial investigation of the complaint. 1 C. W. N. 452; 5 C. W. N. 106; 30 C. 416; see also 8 A. 38; 6 C. 498; 5 C. W. N. 254; 3 C. W. N. 490; 7 M. 189, 33 P. R. 1890. But in 3 B. L. R. 132 = 11 Cr. L. 3 it was held distinguishing 1 C. W. N. 452 that where a petition was presented to a District Magistrate praying that he would proceed under s 110 against a certain person and giving certain information, it is open to the District Magistrate to grant sanction for an offence under s 182, I P C, without holding a judicial investigation, as it is entirely within his discretion to take action or not on such petition. When apart from the Police report there is other material which the Magistrate considers, the sanction is not invalid. It is not necessary that such evidence must have been given on the application or even on the hearing of the complaint itself, 25 M. L. J. 405 = 15 Cr. L. J. 271.

97. No sanction necessary when charge laid before the Police only.—The words "in or in relation to any proceeding in any Court" are applicable only to offences mentioned in cl. (b) and this clause does not refer to a false charge made to the Police, 12 P. R. 1905 = 74 P. L. R. 1905 = 2 Cr. L. J. 66; 10 M. 232; (F.B.); 8 Bar. L. T. 129 = 13 Cr. L. J. 578 (F.B.), 13 Cr. L. J. 430 (Mad). Where, therefore, a false complaint has been made to the Police, but no further steps are taken, sanction of the Magistrate is not necessary for a prosecution, under s 211 I P C, 3 C. W. N. 33; 24 W. R. 41; 25 W. R. 33; 16 W. R. 44; 4 C. 869 = 4 C. L. R. 413; 1 A. 497; 6 C. 332 = 8 C. L. R. 255; 8 C. 231; 6 C. W. N. 295; 14 C. 707; 3 A. 322; 25 C. 786; 7 M. 292; 20 C. W. N. 1347 = 25 C. L. J. 52 nor is it necessary when the Magistrate has merely ordered the Police to remove the case from their file, 13 Cr. L. J. 430 (M.), 14 Bom. L. R. 1160 = 15 Cr. L. J. 904. In 34 A. 522 the correctness of this view is doubted as this leads to the absurdity while sanction is necessary for the lesser offence under s 182, I P C, it is not necessary in the case of the more serious offence under s 211, I P C. But a sanction is necessary if the false complaint is made to the Inspector-General of Police who is a Magistrate under s. 5 of Act V of 1861, 26

P. R. 1908 = 7 Cr. L. J. 291; and a Sessions Judge has no jurisdiction to sanction the prosecution under s. 211, I P C., of two persons on the allegation that they instigated a chowkidar to lodge false information at a thana, and the sanction was revoked as one made without jurisdiction, 7 Cr. L. J. 373 = 12 C. W. N. 575 = 7 Cr. L. J. 340. Before a Court can grant sanction, the record must show that it has exercised its own judgment on the facts proved before it. See also 24 Cr. L. J. 134 = 20 C. W. N. 1285 and 20 C. W. N. 1347.

98. Sanction is necessary if the charge before the Police is judicially dealt with.—Though no sanction is necessary when charge is laid only before the Police, yet if the complainant should, when the Police report the complaint to be false, insist upon a judicial investigation, he must be taken to have preferred a complaint to the Magistrate and the Magistrate has seizure of the case, 14 C. 707; 10 M. 232; 33 C. 1; 10 C. L. J. 565 = 11 Cr. L. J. 57; so a sanction would be necessary when after the rejection of the complaint by the Police as false, the complainant makes a complaint to a Magistrate who after full inquiry discharges the accused, 6 L. B. R. 50 = 5 Bur. L. T. 111 = 13 Cr. L. J. 565. Where a matter does fairly come under s. 211 and where a sanction is needed in order that the prosecution may proceed under that section to proceed without any magisterial sanction under s. 182 is to evade the salutary provisions of the law, per HESTON, J., in 15 Bom. L. R. 574 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 86 = 14 Cr. L. J. 491. See Note 24, 4 P. 323; 5 P. 33.

Exceptions—(i) If a prosecution has been instituted in respect of a false charge under s. 211 laid before the Police before any complaint is made to a Magistrate, no sanction of the Magistrate in respect of the subsequent complaint would be necessary to enable the Magistrate who has already taken cognizance of the offence under s. 211 to finish trying the offence, 6 L. B. R. 50 = 5 Bur. L. T. 111 = 13 Cr. L. J. 565.

(ii) A complaint made to Police by G, accusing some persons of robbery, was reported to the Magistrate to be false on investigation. G, was thereupon charged by the Police under s. 211, I P C., with having made a false charge to the Police, on which the Magistrate issued process. On the application of G, who appeared before the Magistrate in consequence of the process, the Magistrate inquired judicially into his complaint of robbery and discharged the accused, held that no sanction was necessary for the prosecution of G, under s. 211, I P C., as at the time the Police made the complaint against G there was not in existence any proceeding in any Court, Ratanlal 704.

(iii) Similarly, in 30 A. 52 it was held that cl. (b) of this section does not apply to a case where a person makes a report to a thana, but does not follow it up by a complaint to any Court. By making a report no offence is committed in or in relation to any proceeding.

Contra—In U. B. R. (1912) I. 134 = 13 Cr. L. J. 576 it has, however, been held that when a complaint to the Police was held to be false and subsequently the same complaint is made to a Magistrate and held to be false no sanction is necessary to prosecute the complainant under s. 211, I P C. in respect of the false charge to the Police. A man may make a false charge on more than one occasion and if he does so, he is responsible for what he did on each occasion. See also 36 A. 212 In 1915 U. B. R. IV 95 = 17 Cr. L. J. 177, however, 5 Bur. L. T. 111 = 6 L. B. R. 50 was followed. See also Note 24 supra.

99. When sanction should be for offence under s. 182, I P C., and when for offence under s. 211, I P C.—There is a difference of opinion between the High Courts. The Bombay High Court holds that false information to the Police comes under s. 182, I P C., and a false charge in a Court under s. 211, 19 B. 717; 9 Bom. L. R. 83; Ratanlal 72; 7 B. 184; section 182, I P C., is to be interpreted not in isolation but in association with s. 211, I P C. Where the information conveyed to the Police amounts to the institution of criminal proceedings against a defined person or amounts to the falsely charging of a defined person with an offence, then the person giving such information has committed an offence under s. 211. In such a case, s. 211 is not and s. 182 is the appropriate section under which to frame the charge, 15 Bom. L. R. 574 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 86 = 14 Cr. L. J. 491. The Calcutta High Court has held that prosecution for a false charge may be under s. 182 or s. 211, but if the charge is serious, s. 211 should be applied, 32 C. 180, 4 C. L. J. 88 and a false charge made to the Police of a cognizable offence falls under s. 211 and not under s. 182, 3 C. W. N. 727. The Madras High Court is of the same opinion, Weir I, 120. It is for the Court to determine under what section the prosecution should be held 15 A. 336. The Punjab Chief Court seems to favour the Bombay view, 14 P. R. 1892. When the false charge amounts to an offence under s. 211 I P C., also, proceedings should be taken with respect to the more serious offence s. 211, I P C., U. B. R. (1912) I. 134 = 13 Cr. L. J. 576. The main test whether a person makes 'a charge' within the meaning of s. 211 is, "does the person who makes the statement which is alleged to constitute the 'charge' do so with the intention and object of setting the criminal law in motion against the person against whom the statement is directed," 28 M. 642, 8 B. L. R. 179 = 16 Cr. L. J. 104.

100. Sanction to prosecute under s. 182, I. P. C., sufficient when false accusation not of a serious nature.—Where the offence in respect of which a false charge is preferred is not of a serious nature it is not necessary to accord sanction under s. 211, I P C, but it is sufficient if sanction is accorded to proceed under s. 182 I P C, 32 G. 160. Here a Magistrate at the request of the Police to whom a false complaint had been made, sanctioned prosecution under s. 182, I P C. Held, that the sanction of the Magistrate was sufficient and the prosecution did not require the sanction of the S H O, or of his official superior. Also the Magistrate would not be disqualified from trying the case himself merely because he had sanctioned the prosecution thereof. 12 P. R. 1905 = 74 P. L. R. 1905 = 2 Cr. L. J. 66. A prosecution under s. 182 of the Penal Code may be instituted by a private person, provided he first obtains the sanction of the public officer to whom the false information was given or of his official superior. Where a specific false charge is made, especially where the false charge is a serious one, the proper section for proceedings to be adopted is s. 211 of the Penal Code, s. 383 overruling A. A. 38. See also 37 A. 110.

101. Guiding principles in sanctioning prosecution for making false charge—A prosecution of a charge under s 211, I P C, should not be sanctioned as a matter of course under this section, but only when the complainant can satisfy the Court that the interests of justice require a prosecution and there is a strong prima facie case against the accused, 5 A. 118, Weir II, 178; Ratanlal 375; 36 P.R. 1832; 15 C. 661; 35 P.R. 1888; 1 C. W. N. 400 and 529; 4 L. B. R. 234 = 7 Cr. L.J. 495, 137 P. L. R. 1909. Where the case brought, is not false in substance but is bolstered up by false evidence, the proper section to give sanction to prosecute is under s 196, I P C, 7 Cr. L. J. 169 = 7 Cr. L. J. 196. To bring a vexatious charge against any person is not an offence under s. 211, I P C, therefore a Magistrate has no jurisdiction to summon the applicant (complainant) to show cause why sanction should not be granted for his prosecution under that section for such an act. 1 Bam L. R. 11. See also 34 C. 42. Sanction for prosecution under s 182, I P C, should not be granted where there is nothing to show that the information given by the accused was false to his knowledge or that he believed it to be false.

102. False charge must have been made with the intention of setting the criminal law in motion — The charge must be one made with the intention and object of setting the criminal law in motion 25 M. 640, 5 A. L. R. 179 = 16 Cr. L. J. 104. Where a complaint was presented to the Collector as Agent to the Court of Wards continuing allegations against one of his subordinate employees and he granted sanction to prosecute the complainant under s 211 I P C Held, that the Collector was not justified in arbitrarily turning a departmental complaint into a criminal complaint and at any rate before granting sanction he should have afforded the complainant an opportunity of calling his witnesses and proving his allegations, 30 C 415. A complaint made to an executive officer as such, which contains certain imputations against a person is not making a false charge of an offence for which sanction to prosecute under s 211, I P C, is allowable, 2 P. W. R. (1909) = 37 P. L. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 152. The false charge must be made to a Court or to an officer who has power to investigate or send it for trial 6 C. 620; 13 C. W. N. 395; 16 Cr. L. J. 252 (M) Where a District Registrar on a complaint against a Sub-Registrar made a departmental inquiry and concluding that the complaint was false, forwarded a report to himself as District Magistrate and as such sanctioned the prosecution of the complainant under ss. 192 and 211 I P C, held that it was not clear from the record whether the District Magistrate purported to act under s 195 or s 476 but in either case the order was bad. If he purported to act under s 195, then the sanction would be without authority, and if he purported to act under s 476, then he was not an officer to whom he was subordinate and so there was no offence committed in or by him. 12 A. L. R. 100 = 19 Cr. L. J. 100. A complaint to a Village Magistrate may amount to an offence under s. 211, 32 M. 258

103. On reversal of conviction, Appellate Court not to grant sanction ordinarily.—Where on an appeal from a conviction, the District Magistrate set aside the conviction and granted sanction to prosecute the complainant under s. 211, 1 P. C., held, that an Appellate Court in overruling a reasoned and strongly expressed opinion of the original Court should not order the prosecution of the complainant except under very unusual circumstances 56 P. R. 1905 = 1905 F. L. R. 180 = 3 Cr. L. J. 121.

104. Where sanction for offence under s 211, I P C, is rejected, no proceeding can be taken under s 500 I P C, on the same facts, 44 C. 970

XIV.—SANCTION IN RESPECT OF FORGED DOCUMENTS

103 Document produced or given in evidence.—Since the addition of the words 'produced or' in r.l.(c) subsec (1), action can be given in respect of documents which are only tendered in evidence but not exhibited and marked and considered by the Court. The words 'produced or' have to be read apart from the words 'given in evidence' which follow (1911) 2 M. W. N. 826. In 29 C. 687, defendants produced two bonds, alleging that the plaintiff who had sued on an alleged debt, was indebted to them. The Court dismissed the suit without considering the case put forward by the defendants. On an application by the plaintiff for sanction to prosecute the defendants in respect of the two bonds alleged to be forgeries, held, that though the Court had power to grant sanction, yet inasmuch as before sanction could be given it would be necessary for the Court to see whether there are prima facie grounds for holding the bonds to be forgeries, and as there were no grounds on the evidence already taken to believe the bonds were not genuine, sanction ought not to be given. But see 14 C. W. N. 806 = 11 Cr. L. J. 357 and Note 99. A document is given in evidence within the meaning of this section when it is handed over by the person tendering it to the Court, even though on inspection the Court may reject it as evidence for insufficiency of stamp or want of registration, Ratanlal 242; 27 Bom. L. R. 1039 = 49 B. 799.

106. The word 'produced' in sub-sec. 1 (c) is wider than the terms 'filed' or 'put in' and gives more latitude to the Court's discretion.—In 22 C. 1004 certain documents were filed annexed to a petition in a suit pending before a Munsiff, but were not given in evidence. The Munsiff, on suspicion that they had been tampered with, held an inquiry and committed the petitioners for trial by the Court of Sessions, held, it was a proper commitment under s. 478, contra see 15 M. 224; where certain documents were put into Court in a suit pending before District Munsiff, but not given in evidence. The District Munsiff made an order for the prosecution of the parties who so put them in on the ground that they were forgeries, held, that the Munsiff was not competent to go beyond the record, therefore his order was bad in law. This and the rulings in 1895 A. W. N. 145 and 7 C. W. N. 112 are no longer law, see also 12 P. R. 1897; 10 W. R. 5, 3 M. 400. In 29 C. 887 it was held that sanction cannot be refused on the ground that a document alleged to be forged, was only tendered and not judicially considered, see also 7 C. W. N. 793. In 9 Bom. L. R. 735 = 6 Cr. L. J. 78, it was also held that the production of a document is not the same thing as giving it in evidence, a document 'produced' in a Court means one which is produced for the purpose of being tendered in evidence or for some other purpose. Similarly, where a suit was decided on oath and there was no finding whether certain documents produced were genuine or not, it would be wrong to give sanction for prosecuting a party for forgery in respect of the documents, 15 M. L. J. 5. N. 37; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 526. See, however, Note 99 and 18 Cr. L. J. 1001. See also 45 M. 928 where it is held that actual production in suit is necessary for requiring a sanction under s. 195, 27 Bom. L. R. 1039 = 49 B. 799.

107. The mere filing of a document may constitute a user within the meaning of s. 471, I. P. C.—At least in certain circumstances the filing of a document may constitute a user, see 39 C. 463; 17 C. W. N. 94 = 13 Cr. L. J. 449. The mere filing of a document in Court without tendering the same in evidence may constitute user of it under s. 471, I. P. C. It cannot be laid down as an inflexible rule that such an act does not constitute an attempt to use it as evidence 13 Cr. L. J. 6 (Cal.), 35 C. 820 explained. Where a plaintiff produced and filed certain documents as, coming from the custody of certain witnesses who were summoned to produce the documents, held that such production constituted a user within the meaning of s. 471, and sanction was necessary, 19 C. W. N. 123 = 16 Cr. L. J. 309.

108. The term 'forgery' is used as a generic term.—The word 'forgery' is used as a general term in s. 463 of the I. P. C., and that section is referred to in a comprehensive sense in this section, so as to embrace all species of forgery, and thus includes a case falling under s. 467, I. P. C., 12 B. 36; 14 C. W. N. 479 = 11 Cr. L. J. 280; 16 Cr. L. J. 203 (A.). So also an offence under s. 468, I. P. C., 36 M. 387. A complaint of an offence under s. 466, I. P. C., viz., forging a register kept by a public servant, which forged document was given in evidence, cannot be entertained without sanction, as the offence falls within the wider description of offences prescribed under s. 463 to which this section applies, Ratanlal 83; 16 Cr. L. J. 617, contra (1913) U. B. R. (1st quarter) 166 = 14 Cr. L. J. 422. No sanction is necessary for the prosecution of an offence under s. 471, I. P. C., 19 C. W. N. 123 = 15 Cr. L. J. 309. Where a document was produced before a Magistrate by a party but was forged beforehand at the time of registration held that sanction of the Magistrate was necessary under s. 191(1), C. 44 C. 1002; 5 L. 550.

109. Sanction not desirable when there is a difference of opinion between two Courts.—Where a Court of first instance finds a document to be genuine and the Appellate Court, proceeding mainly upon a comparison of signatures finds the document to be false, when the matter rests upon a very doubtful consideration of the comparison of handwriting, and also upon more or less evenly balanced testimony and when there is such difference of opinion between the two trying Courts it is not desirable that the Appellate Court should grant sanction to prosecute under this section, 1 C. W. N. 400.

110. False document given in evidence—Pleader's responsibility.—A Sessions Judge granted sanction for the prosecution of a Pleader for presenting on behalf of his client, a document, merely on the ground that it bore on its face such marks of its being a fabricated document, that the Pleader's suspicions must have been aroused at the first sight of it, and that he ought to have strictly examined it, and had he done so, he would either have rejected it or advised his client to produce it in Court on his own risk or responsibility, held, that a Pleader is under no higher obligation than any other agent, and to justify his prosecution for offences under ss. 196, 471 and 109, I P C, in connection with a document presented by him on behalf of his client, it must be shown that he was a party (principal or accessory) to the concoction of the document or had the knowledge that it was concocted. The mere fact that his suspicions ought to have been aroused by the sight of the document is not prima facie evidence that he knew or had reason to believe the document to be forged, 22 B. 317.

111. No sanction necessary for prosecution of a witness or agent in respect of the offences dealt with in cl. (c), sub-sec (1).—No sanction is necessary to prosecute a witness, as the clause is limited to a party to the proceeding, 25 M. 671; 19 C. W. N. 365 = 12 Cr. L. J. 101; 26 M. L. J. 220 = 15 Cr. L. J. 242. See also 3 M. 400. A prosecution commenced on a sanction which includes both a party and a witness is not invalid, 15 B. 581 at p. 585 (but see 16 A. 80). No sanction is necessary to prosecute the agent of a party, 9 P. R. 1879; 3 Bur. L. T. 108 = 12 Cr. L. J. 87.

112. No sanction necessary for prosecution of abettor not a party.—The offences for which s. 195, cl (1) (c) read with cl (3) requires that sanction should be given by a Court with respect to documents produced in Court must be offences committed by parties to the proceeding, whether the offence, be one of the substantive offences mentioned in cl (1), (c) or only amounts to abetment of such offences, 32 A. 74; 15 C. W. N. 555 = 12 Cr. L. J. 101; 26 M. L. J. 220 = 15 Cr. L. J. 242; 10 P. R. 1917 (Cr.). See Note 27

113. No sanction necessary if the completed offence has no connection with any Court.—See Note 7 (iii).

114. Where sanction is accorded for forgery, trying Magistrate might try for any cognate offence.—Where sanction is accorded for a prosecution for forgery, the trying Magistrate might charge the accused in addition with fraudulent using (s. 471, I P C) or abetment of forgery, 6 W. R. 20; see also s. 230 and 10 Bur. L. R. 77. Under subsec. (5) when sanction is given for prosecution for a particular offence, the Magistrate may frame a charge for any other offence covered by the same facts and referred to in this section, 30 C. 905.

XV.—DELAY IN APPLYING FOR SANCTION.

115. No period of limitation for making application for sanction.—There is no fixed period of limitation for making applications for sanction under this section. Article 178, Schedule II, of the Limitation Act, 1877, does not apply to such applications. Rules of limitation are foreign to the administration of criminal justice, and it is only by express statutory provision that any rule of limitation could be made applicable to criminal cases, 10 A. 350; 20 B. 543 at p. 547. Such a rule would result in greater impunity to criminals, B. H. C. P. J. 1889 at p. 123. Therefore, where sanction to prosecute was granted by a second-class Magistrate and it was revoked by the District Magistrate on the only ground that the application for sanction was made too late, the High Court set aside the District Magistrate's order and restored the sanction, Ratanlal 805 and 859. Court may grant sanction at any time, 32 M. 49; 19 C. W. N. 447.

116. Delay in making application for sanction.—Applications for sanction to a prosecution for any of the offences mentioned in this section should be made promptly or the delay should be satisfactorily accounted for. Where there is great delay in making the application, a Court cannot help suspecting that the applicant, is acting, not in the interests of justice, but from an indirect motive, possibly to worry, annoy and to persecute his opponent. Orders but, or securing the d
was rejected owing to a

in mind namely, whether in view of the length of time which has already elapsed before the application for sanction, a prosecution commenced thereafter is likely to be brought to a successful termination, 13 Cr. L. J. 4 (C.). Where a trying Magistrate refused an application for sanction, made four months after the decision of the case on the ground that "the case was at best a mere suspicious one," but the Sessions Judge granted it without giving notice to the accused and without calling for and examining the record of the case, the High Court set aside the Judge's order, 1 C. W. N. 529. In 7 A. L. J. 60 = 11 Cr. L. J. 140, a sanction was set aside as there was no satisfactory explanation of a delay of four months in making the application. See also 21 In. Ca. 172 (C.).

Bom. Cr. A. No. 330 of 1910; 15 Cr. L. J. 577 (O), 15 Cr. L. J. 698 (A), 28 B. L. R. 49 = 15 Cr. L. J. 634. In 19 C. W. N. 447 = 21 C. L. J. 193 = 16 Cr. L. J. 236, however, the High Court set aside the order of the lower Court refusing to grant a sanction to a Public Prosecutor on account of delay, as there could be no suggestion of malafides in a prosecution undertaken by the Government.

XVI.—SUBORDINATION OF COURTS FOR PURPOSES OF SUB-SECS. (6) AND (7).

Note.—The power that was conferred under sub-section (6) of the old s. 195 upon a superior Court to revoke or grant a sanction that was given or refused by any authority subordinate to it, is now relegated to s. 476-B of the Code by the new amendment and instead of the sanction being revoked or granted by the superior Court, under the new amendment it can withdraw the complaint or make a new complaint as the case may be. (See s. 476-B)

117. Scope of sub-sec. 7.—It is suggested by CHAMIER, J., in 34 A. 197 that the whole of sub-sec. (7) seems to be confined to Courts against some or all of whose decisions appeals do lie and that the result of such a construction is that the Legislature has made no provision in s. 195 for an appeal against the order of a Small Cause Court giving or refusing sanction and it may be that the only Court which can interfere with such an order is the High Court. But all the High Courts have followed the view that sub-sec. (7) applies to all Courts CHAMIER, C.J., followed in 1 Patna L. J. 206 = 17 Cr. L. J. 320 = 34 In. Ca. 320 his opinion in 34 A. 197. But see 43 A. L. J. 721 (F.B.) where 1 Pat. L. J. 206 and 2 Pat. L. J. 1 are dissented from and not followed. And 34 A. 197 is distinguished and it is held that an appeal against an order of a Small Cause Court granting sanction to prosecute lay to the District Judge, the principal Court of original jurisdiction.

Appeals 'ordinarily' lie.—Cl. (a) of sub-sec. (7) is in accordance with the decision of the Bombay High Court in 2 B. 481; see also 11 B. 438 and 7 M. 314. The explanation is a complete exposition of the term 'ordinarily'; 23 M. L. J. 456 = 16 Cr. L. J. 439; 8 N. L. R. 57 = 13 Cr. L. J. 498; 43 M. L. J. 375.

Meaning of 'case in sub-sec. (7) (b).—The word 'case' means the actual proceedings in which the offence is said to have been committed and not the original case out of which the proceedings arose, 34 A. 197. Where, therefore, an offence is committed in an execution proceeding, the case in connection with which the offence is alleged to have been committed is the execution proceeding and not the original suit.

118. Sub-sec. (7) does not apply to subordination of officers not acting judicially.—The subordination of an authority which is a Court, to another authority is regulated by sub-sec. (7). But when the authority granting or refusing sanction does not act as a Court the appeal lies under sub-sec. (6) to the authority to which the former is subordinate under s. 17. Thus where sanction granted by a Subordinate Magistrate for prosecution under s. 182, I P C., referred to in cl. (a), sub-sec. (1), was revoked by the Sub-divisional Magistrate and the Sessions Judge in the exercise of his revisional powers set aside the order of the Sub-divisional Magistrate. Held (i) the Sessions Judge had no power to interfere under sub-sec. (6) and (7) (ii) that he had no authority under s. 435 to set aside the order of the Sub-divisional Magistrate, Weir II, 135. The Sub-divisional Magistrate having acted not as a Court, but as an executive officer he is not under s. 17(5) subordinate to the Sessions Court. See also 27 B. 130; 27 M. L. J. 586 = 15 Cr. L. J. 612. In 44 M. L. J. 323, it is held that a Magistrate passing an order under s. 144 of the Code does so only as a public servant and not as a Court and sub-sec. (7) of s. 195 is inapplicable to such a case and it was further held that the proper authority to revoke the sanction is the District Magistrate. (Weir II, 135 referred to, 42 M. 64 = 35 M. L. J. 434 dissented from = 47 M. 56, 47 B. 102.

Where a District Magistrate receives information of illicit possession of arms and issues a search warrant, he acts as a Court, though the search warrant is issued under s. 25 of the Indian Arms Act and an application lies to the Sessions Court under s. 195, sub-clause (6) to revoke a sanction given by him for prosecution of the informant under s. 162, I P C. (42 M. 96; Weir II, 135 (1903) dissented from and 39 C. 933 referred to)

119. Sub-sec. (7) contemplates two Courts.—Appellate Bench of Chief Court, Burma cannot interfere with sanction granted by Judge sitting on the original side.—Section 19a (6) and (7) contemplates that a sanction may be revoked only by a Court which is distinct from and superior to the Court that gave it. A Bench of the Chief Court, Burma, is not a superior Court but a section of the same Court, specially empowered to hear appeals from the single Judge under Lower Burma Courts Act 1900, and has no power to interfere with the order of sanction made by the Judge sitting on the Original Side, 4 Bur. L. T. 206 = 12 Cr. L. J. 469. The Original Side of a High Court is not a different Court from the Appellate Side, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 259 = 10 M. L. T. 278 = 12 Cr. L. J. 543.

(A)—APPEALS ORDINARILY LIE

120. District Magistrate subordinate to Sessions Judge.—Whether when a District Magistrate grants a sanction on the Appellate or Original Side, the Sessions Judge has jurisdiction to revoke it, 24 P. W. R. 1908 = 8 Cr. L. J. 457. See also 18 Cr. L. J. 759; 11 P. R. 1917 (Cr.)

121. First-class Magistrate not subordinate to District Magistrate.—There may be inferiority without subordination, e.g., the Court of a first-class Sub-divisional Magistrate is not subordinate to the District Magistrate within the meaning of this section, 8 A. 98, even in respect of proceedings under ss 110 and 118, 7 P. R. 1902 = 44 P. L. R. 1902, overruling 30 P. R. 1901; 2 P. R. 1912 = 11 P. L. R. 1912 = 12 Cr. L. J. 539, but there cannot be subordination without inferiority, as subordinate means inferior in rank, 9 B. 100. A District Magistrate has accordingly no jurisdiction to grant a sanction refused by a first-class Magistrate, Ratanlal 511; 1008 A. W. N. 74 = 5 A. L. J. 562 = 7 Cr. L. J. 304. Having regard to sub-secs (6) and (7), the Rulings in 2 B. 334 and 2 A. 295 are now obsolete. In Madras a Joint Magistrate is not a Court superior to the Sub-Magistrate within the meaning of s. 195 (a), 34 M. L. J. 404

First class Magistrate subordinate to the Sessions Court.—For the purposes of this section, a Magistrate of the first class is subordinate to the Sessions Judge and not to the District Magistrate, for appeals ordinarily lie to the former, except in two special cases provided for by ss. 406 and 515, 7 P. R. 1902 which overrules 30 P. R. 1901; 2 P. R. 1912 = 11 P. L. R. 1912 = 12 Cr. L. J. 539; 16 Cr. L. J. 640 (C). See also 1908 A. W. N. 74 = 5 A. L. J. 562 = 7 Cr. L. J. 304, 10 P. R. 1894. A first-class Magistrate passing an order under s. 145 is subordinate to the Sessions Judge and not to the District Magistrate. A Magistrate of the first class having passed an order under s. 145 of the Code was transferred to another place. His revenue charge was made over to another Magistrate and his judicial charge went to the City Magistrate. The order made was disobeyed. An application for sanction to prosecute under s. 195 sub-sec (1), clause (a) was made to the District Magistrate. Held, that the District Magistrate had no jurisdiction to grant the sanction and that the Sessions Courts only could entertain the application, per SHAH, Ag C J. Under clause (a), sub-sec. (1) of s. 195, if a public servant making the order is a Court, in respect of that order the Court to which that Court would be subordinate would be the Court to which appeals would ordinarily lie, 25 Bom. L. R. 610.

122. Magistrate subordinate to Additional Sessions Judges.—Where under s. 408 appeals lie from the Court of first instance to the Court of Sessions, an Additional Sessions Judge can exercise jurisdiction in that Court under s. 409 read with s. 9. The Magistrate is subordinate to the Additional Sessions Judge and the latter has jurisdiction to act under sub-sec (7), 14 Cr. L. J. 195 (C), 20 A. L. J. 603; 40 B. 877.

123. Second and third-class Magistrate subordinate to the District Magistrate and not to the Sub-divisional first-class Magistrate.—A Joint Magistrate though authorized under s. 407 (2) to entertain appeals granting a sanction, given or refused by a Subordinate Magistrate may be presented to the Joint Magistrate. The proper Court to entertain such applications is that of the District Magistrate, 26 M. 658 (F.B.), 27 M. 124; 30 C. 394; 11 B. 438, 22 C. 487; 3 N. L. R. 50 = 5 Cr. L. J. 423; 18 M. 487 is overruled on this point. In 2 Bom. L. R. 536 it was held, that where a District Magistrate had directed an Assistant Collector to perform the routine work of the Collector's office, including the criminal appellate and revisional work, the Assistant Collector so acting is competent to revoke a sanction granted by a second-class Magistrate. In 61 Mad. 787, it was held that a Joint Magistrate to whose Court appeals from convictions by a third-class Magistrate do not ordinarily lie but who hears an appeal from such Court by transfer from the District Magistrate cannot grant sanction for perjury as a Court of first instance or as an Appellate Court. 33 A. 90 not followed.

124. When a second-class Magistrate is subordinate to the Sessions Court.—A Subordinate Magistrate, who commits a case for trial to a Court of Session, is subordinate to the Court of Session in matters connected with and arising out of the trial. The Sessions Court may accordingly sanction a prosecution against a witness for giving false evidence at the preliminary inquiry, although the witness may not have been examined in the Sessions Court. Weir II, 160.

125. Acting Magistrate is not subordinate to permanent incumbent.—Where an officiating Sub-divisional Officer made an order under s. 476, and then reverted as Deputy Magistrate, his successor, the permanent Sub-divisional Magistrate has no authority to act under s. 195 on the ground that his predecessor was subordinate to him, but he has power to act independently as the offence was committed in his Court. 7 A. L. J. 991 = 11 Cr. L. J. 438. See also 22 P. R. 1918 (Cr.).

126. Munsiff's Court subordinate to District Judge.—In Punjab, for the purposes of this section, the Court of the District Judge is the Court to which a Munsiff is subordinate, and that Court alone can give sanction in respect of offences committed in the Court of the Munsiff, 16 P. R. 1898; 23 P. R. 1900, but see 16 P. R. 1887; 10 P. R. 1891, see 2 Lah. 87.

127. Subordinate Judge not competent to deal with orders of Munsiffs.—A Subordinate Judge, to whom an appeal from the order of a Munsiff refusing sanction for prosecution in respect of offence under ss. 463 and 471, I P. C., was transferred by the District Judge under s. 22 of the Bengal Civil Courts Act, has no jurisdiction to try the appeal as the only Court to which an appeal ordinarily lies from the decree or order of the Munsiff and to which he was subordinate is the District Court, 29 C. 774; 13 Cr. L. J. 296 (C). Where, however, by a notification issued under the Madras Civil Courts Act, 1873, the Government empowered Subordinate Judges to receive appeals direct from orders of District Munsiffs in all cases where the Sub-Court is situated in a place different from that of the District Court, held that all such Subordinate Courts who have been empowered by the notification are Courts to which appeals 'ordinarily lie' within the meaning of sub-sec. (7), 28 M. L. J. 438 = 17 M. L. T. 446 = 16 Cr. L. J. 439.

128. Deputy Commissioner of Sonthal Pergunnas subordinate to Commissioner.—The Court of the Deputy Commissioner of the Sonthal Pergunnas is to be deemed to be subordinate to the Court of the Commissioner of Bhagalpur and hence an application from the appellate order of the Deputy Commissioner ought to be made to the Commissioner of Bhagalpur and not to the Calcutta High Court, 30 C. 946.

(B)—WHERE APPEALS LIE TO MORE COURTS THAN ONE

129. Where appeals ordinarily lie to more Courts than one, application must be made to the inferior Appellate Court.—Clause (a) of sub-sec. (7) which in general terms furnishes a complete definition of the term 'ordinarily' and covers all cases where appeals lie to more than one higher Court. Consequently when a Civil Court in practice tries suits of values so different that appeals from some of its decisions lie to one and appeals from other decisions to another higher Court then for the purpose of sub-sec. (6), it is the Appellate Court of inferior jurisdiction that can revoke the sanction or grant the sanction refused by the Subordinate Court, 8 M. L. R. 57 = 13 Cr. L. J. 498; 11 B. 438; 22 C. 487 referred to. The Appellate Court of inferior jurisdiction is the Court to which the Court giving or refusing sanction is subordinate for the purpose of this section, 16 M. L. J. (S.N.) 42. See also 22 C. 487 as to an application against the order granting sanction of the Recorder of Rangoon in a case in which appeal lay to the Privy Council.

130. Subordinate Judge's Court subordinate to District Court.—A District Court has jurisdiction under this section to revoke or grant a sanction granted or refused by a Subordinate Judge's Court, even though the appeal in the particular case might lie to the High Court. The application to the superior Court where the first Court refuses sanction is by way of appeal and not by an original application, 2 B. 481; 7 M. 214; 11 B. 438; 1 A. 17 (F.B.) is no longer law having regard to sub-sec. (6). See also 1893 A. W. N. 104. The word appeal used in sub-sec. (6) only indicates the tribunal which can interfere with sanction given or refused. See also 20 Cr. L. J. 766, see 45 M. L. J. 320; 43 A. 469.

(C)—WHERE NO APPEAL LIES.

131. Where no appeals lie, subordination is to principal Court of original jurisdiction, sub-sec. (7), (c).—The finality of the decision of the Court with reference to the nature of the case and not with reference to the constitution or the Court is the element which determines subordination. A District Judge has therefore power to revoke a sanction granted by a Collector in a proceeding in which the Collector's order was final, 31 A. 313, but see 34 A. 197.

132. What is a principal Court of original jurisdiction?—The nature of the proceedings in which there is no justification if they were principal impossible to suppose that the Legislature intended the principal Court of original civil jurisdiction to revise the orders of Criminal and Revenue Courts with which it has no concern as a Civil Court. The principal Court of original jurisdiction under the Agra Tenancy Act 1901, is the Court of the Collector, 34 A. 197.

133. District Judge and not Collector may entertain applications under sub-sec. (8) from Mamlatdar's Court.—The Mamlatdar's Court constituted by Bombay Act III of 1876, is a Civil Court within the meaning of this section, therefore a complaint of an offence mentioned in it when such offence is committed before or against the Mamlatdar's Court shall not be entertained in the Criminal Courts, except with the sanction of the Mamlatdar's Court, or of the High Court to which it is subordinate, 5 B. 137. See 4 B. 168 (F.B.) and 9 B. H. C. R. 249. But now under sub-sec. (7), cl. (c) the District Judge has authority to grant sanction in respect of offences committed before a Muhalkari in a possessory suit under the Mamlatdar's Court's Act, 5 Bom. L. R. 206; and to hear appeals from orders granting or refusing sanction granted by the Mamlatdar. The Collector has no jurisdiction, 9 Bom. L. R. 896 = 6 Cr. L. J. 225.

134. Court of Small Causes subordinate to District Court and not to High Court.—37 C. 13. See also 31 A. 313. See 20 Cr. L. J. 577; 39 A. 657 (F.B.), 20 O. C. 223; 21 G. W. N. 945

135. Presidency Court of Small Causes subordinate to High Court.—According to cl. 7 (c), an appeal against an order of the Presidency Small Cause Court granting sanction would lie to the High Court because the High Court is the Principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction within whose jurisdiction the Small Cause Court is situate, 35 M. 133. As the High Court is one, whether it exercises original or appellate jurisdiction or by whomsoever the jurisdiction of the Court may be exercised, whether by a single Judge or by a Bench of more than one Judge there is no foundation for the argument that the appeal lies to one particular branch of the High Court.

136. Single Judge of Presidency Small Cause Court not subordinate to Full Bench.—The Full Court of the Presidency Small Cause Court has no power to grant or revoke a sanction refused or granted by a single Judge of that Court, as the power conferred on it under ss. 37 and 38 of the Presidency Small Cause Court's Act XV of 1882, is not appellate but revisional only. The Act does not make a distinction between a Judge and more than one Judge of the Presidency Small Cause Court, 35 B. 316; 43 M. 395.

137. Where the Registrar of the Small Cause Court grants sanction.—If the Registrar of the Small Cause Court grants sanction in his judicial capacity, the Small Cause Court, whether a Full Bench or presided over by one or more Judges, cannot revoke such sanction. But where the Registrar acts as a public servant (ministerial officer) merely, the Chief Judge only can revoke such sanction, 27 B. 130.

138. Village Munsiff not subordinate to Sub-Magistrate.—A Village Munsiff is not subordinate to a Sub-Magistrate under s. 195 (a). The subordination of one public servant to another may arise either from express enactment or from the fact that both belong to the same department, one being superior in rank to another. There is no enactment which makes Village Munsiffs subordinate to Sub-Magistrates. The Code does not do so, nor Regulations XI of 1816 and IV of 1821. They do not belong to same department, 18 M. L. J. 584 = 4 M. L. T. 214, 4 M. 241 not followed. See 47 M. 229.

139. Village Munsiff subordinate to District Judge.—As no appeal lies under Act III of 1892 from the decrees of a Village Munsiff, that Court is under sub-sec. (7) (c) deemed to be subordinate to the principal Court of original jurisdiction within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it is situate. The District Judge is therefore under sub-sec. (1), (b) competent to grant sanction, 6 A. L. J. 796 = 10 Cr. L. J. 437 under Act XII of 1837 (Bengal Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act) a Munsiff is subordinate to the Additional Sessions and Subordinate Judge, 40 A. 21.

140. Subordination of officers authorized to act under N-W P. Revenue Acts.—The Assistant Collector and Collector exercising jurisdiction under N W P Land Revenue Act are only ministerial officers and as such are not subordinate to the District Judge or to the High Court. 1891 A. W. N. 82; 34 A. 197, nor to the District Magistrate in a suit for profits under the N-W P Tenancy Act, 9 Cr. L. J. 180 (A). When a Tahsildar refused to grant a sanction in respect of a statement made in a mutation proceeding before him, an application to set aside the order does not lie either to the High Court or to the District Magistrate but only to the Collector, 12 Cr. L. J. 109 (A).

141. Other cases of subordination.—See Notes under heading VII above at pp. 503 and 504

XVII.—POWERS AND DUTIES OF SUPERIOR COURT IN DEALING WITH APPLICATION UNDER SUB-SEC. (6)

Note.—The power conferred under the old sub-sec. (6) of s. 195 to revoke or grant a sanction given or refused by any Lower Court is now relegated to s. 476-B which is newly added by the amending Act XVIII of 1921. S. 476-B now expressly provides for an appeal against the refusal to make a complaint or the making of a complaint under s 478 by a Lower Court. Therefore the power that is vested in the superior Court under s. 476-B is the ordinary power that is exercised by a Court of appeal and so the doubts raised whether the jurisdiction conferred by the old sub-sec. (6) of s 195 was a special appellate or revisional jurisdiction are set at rest by s. 476-B. The cases raising these doubts are now only of academic and historic interest and they are given below as such.

142. Jurisdiction conferred by sub-sec. (6) is a special jurisdiction and not the ordinary appellate or revisional jurisdiction.—The power conferred by sub-sec. (6) is not a part of the appellate or revisional jurisdiction conferred by Chaps XXXI and XXXII of the Code. It is a special power, 22 M. L. J. 419 (F.B.) = (1912) 1 M. W. N. 499 = 13 Cr. L. J. 209; 30 M. 382 (F.B.) approved. It will be noted that cl (6) applies not only to cases of application to a superior Court of Justice, but to superior Executive Officers or to Government, to whom the authority granting the sanction is subordinate, and the Legislature appears to have deliberately refrained from describing the proceeding before the superior officer as either 'appeal' or 'revision.' Provision had also to be made for cases in which the application for sanction is not made to the Court in or in relation to which the offence is alleged to have been committed, but to a Court to which such last mentioned Court is subordinate. See also 40 C. 239; 37 C. 714.

143. Application is not an appeal.—An application under sub-sec. (6) to the superior Court is not an appeal, but a substantive application, the jurisdiction of the High Court therefore under s 115 of the Civ. P. C., 1908, to revise orders of Subordinate Civil Courts is not ousted by s 195 (6), 37 C. 714. An application under sub-sec (6) is not an appeal within the meaning of s 224 of the Bengal Civil Court's Act, 1897, 39 C. 774; 40 C. 37. Cl. (7), (c) merely designates the Court to which an appeal lies under that clause and does not describe the nature of the jurisdiction which it exercises. But when one Court deals with a judgment of another Court having power to confirm or to set it aside, the jurisdiction it exercises is appellate jurisdiction. The High Court does not exercise any original jurisdiction in dealing with applications against the orders of the Presidency Small Cause Court under this section, 36 M. 138; 37 C. 714 approved. See also 30 M. 392. An application made to an Appellate Court under sub-sec. (6) may probably be regarded as an application by way of an appeal, though it is not material by what name the application is called in pursuance of which the Appellate Court, after going into the merits of the case, revokes a sanction granted or grants sanction refused by a Subordinate Court, 26 A. 244, where 15 A. 61 is discussed. The distinction between granting or revoking a sanction under cl. (6) and revoking an order on appeal may seem to be one of words only, but the distinction exists and must be recognized, 8 B. L. R. 49 = 15 Cr. L. J. 654.

144. Superior Court must consider the merits.—The Appellate Court must not direct its attention only to the point whether the Court of first instance was competent or not to grant sanction, but must go also into the merits of the case and decide whether the Magistrate has properly exercised his discretion 40 P. W. R. 1912 = 13 Cr. L. J. 831. The power of granting sanction possessed by Appellate Courts ought to be exercised carefully, specially where sanction is refused by the Court of first instance. Sanction given on a small residue of the case by the Appellate Court, after the Original Court had refused sanction, was set aside by the High Court on the ground that it would simply serve as a means of harassment, 31 C. 812. See also 4 N. L. R. 140 = 8 Cr. L. J. 351; 56 P. R. 1905. 'The right conferred by clause (6) may not be exactly a right of appeal, but it is strongly analogous to such rights. I think the Legislature intended that a Court of superior jurisdiction whose jurisdiction was invoked under cl. (6) should reconsider the entire matter on the merits and while allowing all reasonable weight to the opinion of the Court below should nevertheless reconsider the question of the propriety of the order of sanction on its merits upon a complete review of the entire facts, 37 A. 439; 10 Bar. L. T. 161. See, however, the remarks of SADASIVIER, J, in 26 M. R. J. 436 = 15 Cr. L. J. 271.

145. Superior Court in dealing with an application under sub-sec. (6) must state its reasons.—When a person for whose prosecution sanction has been granted under this section applies to a superior Court to have such sanction revoked, the superior Court in dealing with such application should give its reasons for either confirming or revoking the sanction and not simply say, "I decline to interfere on revision—Rejected." 1992 A. W. N. 60; 28 M. 116.

146. Application must not be summarily rejected.—In 12 C. W. N. 243, it was held that an application for revocation of sanction granted, made under sub-sec. (6) should not be summarily rejected under s 421 without giving the applicant a reasonable opportunity of being heard in support of the same. The provisions of s. 470 do not apply to such a case. See also 28 A. 142 and 1916 M. W. N. 8.

147. Superior Court cannot remand for further inquiry or for fresh evidence.—A superior Court cannot direct further inquiry when dealing with an appeal from the Court of first instance, 30 M. 311; followed in 33 M. 90. See Notes under heading XXI. But 44 M. 47 has now held that an Appellate Court hearing an application to revoke or grant a sanction, granted or refused by a Lower Court under s. 195 has power itself to take additional evidence before disposing of the application, 30 M. 311 and 33 M. 90 distinguished, see also 40 A. 21.

148. Notice to opposite party generally necessary.—(i) Accused.—See Note 102 at pp. 518 and 519 (ii) Applicant.—When an application is preferred against an order granting sanction, notice must go either to the District Magistrate or to the person to whom sanction was granted, 7 Bur. L. T. 205 = 15 Cr. L. J. 571. As a rule ex parte proceedings are opposed to general principles. In 31 C. 814, though it was held that notice was not necessary to the person who obtained the sanction, the District Magistrate had been served with a notice.

149. Superior Court cannot transfer applications under sub-sec. (6).—S. 407 does not entitle a District Magistrate to send applications under sub-sec. (6) to a Magistrate of the first class subordinate to him, 35 A. 244; 30 C. 394, 26 M. 656; nor can a District Judge transfer such an application to a Subordinate Judge, 39 C. 774; 40 C. 37. As to the power of the High Court, see 34 M. 186 and Note 13 to s. 526.

150. Superior Court may revoke sanction even if complaint had been lodged.—The mere fact that a complaint has been lodged in pursuance of a sanction would be no bar to a Court competent under sub-sec. (6) to deal with an application for revoking such sanction, entertaining such application and disposing of it according to law, even where the complaint in pursuance of the sanction is preferred to itself, 27 M. 124. Quare whether an Appellate Court could suo motu and without any application to it, revoke or grant sanction under sub-sec. (6)? See 32 B. 203.

151. Is the superior Court competent to proceed under s. 476?—Where a Subordinate Judge refused to grant a sanction under this section, it was held a District Judge on appeal could make an order under s. 476, but in doing so, he should proceed under cl. (1), (b) of this section read with s. 476, 32 B. 184, where 36 C. 551. (F.B.) is dissented from, not followed in 32 M. 49. In 19 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 434 it was held that it was not open to the superior Court while dealing with an application under sub-sec. (6) to take proceedings under s. 476, 6 P. R. 1909 = 12 P. W. R. 1909 = 105 P. L. R. 1909 = 10 Cr. L. J. 158 referred to. See also 34 P. R. 1886.

152. Proper course is to invoke aid of superior Court under sub-sec. (6) and not by an original application.—Where an application for sanction has been made to a proper Court and refused, the proper remedy for the party seeking sanction is to proceed by way of appeal or revision to the proper appellate tribunal and not to make an independent application to such Appellate Court for the granting of the necessary sanction, 25 A. 126; 32 B. 203; 1902 A. W. N. 197. See Note 170.

153. Superior Court cannot direct Subordinate Court to rectify mistakes in sanction.—Under cl. (6) of this section, it is open to a Superior Court either to revoke or grant a sanction when such sanction has been given or refused by a Subordinate Court, but there is no provision of law which authorizes the Superior Court to send the case back to the Subordinate Court with directions to draw up an order in accordance with the observations made in the judgment. In this case, the High Court intervened and directed the Subordinate Court to pass a proper and comprehensive order on the application fulfilling the requirements of law by specifying the offences alleged to have been committed and other materials necessary for the trial of the case. 14 Cr. L. J. 653 (C).

154. Superior Court cannot grant sanction when the Original Court has not dealt with application.—When a Subordinate Judge erroneously dismissed for default an application for sanction and the District Judge on appeal accorded the sanction, it was held that, as there was no sanction given or refused by the Subordinate Judge, the District Judge had no jurisdiction to accord the sanction under this section. The only jurisdiction he had under the circumstances was to revise the order of the Subordinate Judge dismissing the application as for default, 32 B. 203.

155. Does sub-sec. (6) contemplate only one application by way of appeal or a series of applications?—

A. The Madras and Calcutta High Courts hold that petitions by way of further appeal may be made under sub-sec. (6) and (7) against appellate orders of Civil Criminal Courts dealing with orders passed by Courts of first instance granting or refusing sanction. (a) A petition by way of appeal lies to the High Court in every case in which a Civil or Criminal Court subordinate to it within the meaning of sub-sec. (7) (a) gives or refuses a sanction whether in respect of an offence committed before it or of one committed before a Court subordinate to it, and in the latter case whether it gives a sanction refused by a Subordinate Court or revokes a sanction accorded by such Court, 37 M. 223; 29 M. 122; 30 M. 382 (F.B.) (ii) The High Court has power to interfere with the appellate order of a District Judge affirming sanction granted by a Munsiff, 5 C. L. J. 222 = 5 Cr. L. J. 188; 11 C. W. N. 193 = 5 C. L. J. 219 = 5 Cr. L. J. 29. (iii) So with the appellate order of a District Judge revoking sanction granted by a Munsiff, 30 M. 382 (F.B.), see also 11 C. W. N. 193; 6 C. L. R. 81 = 13 Cr. L. J. 768. Contra 10 C. W. N. 1026 = 4 Cr. L. J. 168, where it was held that the High Court cannot interfere with the order of a District Judge revoking sanction granted by a Munsiff, and see also 37 C. 13. See also 25 P. R. 1903; 24 P. W. R. 1903 = 8 Cr. L. J. 457; 16 C. W. N. 645 = 13 Cr. L. J. 191.

B. The Allahabad High Court holds that there is no further appeal under this sub-section from an appellate order dealing with sanction appeals, 1907 A. W. N. 283; 30 A. 243; 36 A. 403 and also 36 A. 479, where the Court refused to alter the practice. (i) The Sessions Judge has no power to interfere with the appellate order of a District Magistrate granting a sanction refused by a third-class Magistrate, 30 A. 109. (ii) Where a District Judge confirms a sanction granted by a Subordinate Judge, no appeal lies to the High Court, 31 A. 33. (iii) And so where a District Judge grants a sanction refused by a Munsiff, High Court cannot interfere 31 A. 43; 36 A. 469, 13 A. L. J. 709 = 16 Cr. L. J. 524. In 30 A. 243 it was, however, held that the High Court could under its revisional powers conferred by ss. 435 and 439 deal with an appeal against the order of a Sessions Judge affirming a sanction granted by a Subordinate Magistrate.

C. Central Provinces.—The Legislature never intended that a particular power of superior control, given under a particular section of the adjective law, shall be exercised more than once, and by different Courts in the same case. Sub-sec. (6) contemplates one proceeding only, in a single superior Court, after which the power given by it is exhausted a view supported by the language of sub-sec. (7) cl. (a) 4 N. L. R. 140 = 8 Cr. L. J. 331. See also 6 O. G. 216.

156. Though there is only one appeal from a conviction, there may be a third or even a fourth appeal from an order preliminary to a trial—Where it was argued that the sanction prescribed by clauses (b) and (c) of sub-sec. (1) is a sanction to be accorded either by the Court in which the offence was committed or by the Court to which such Court is subordinate within the meaning of sub-sec. (7), (a) and therefore a sanction accorded by the High Court in cases in which the offence was committed in a Court not subordinate to it within the meaning of sub-sec. (7), (a) would be inoperative, held that the argument was untenable and proceeded on a misapprehension of the jurisdiction exercised by an appellate tribunal. An order passed by the Court of Appeal is in law the order which ought to have been passed by the Subordinate Court and will therefore have the same efficacy and operation as the order which ought to have been passed by the latter, 27 M. 223. See also 26 M. L. J. 436 = 15 Cr. L. J. 271.

157. No period of limitation for application to superior Court—An application under sub-sec. (6) to superior Court is not an appeal and therefore Article 154 of Schedule I to Limitation Act, 1908 which provides a period of thirty days for appeals under the Criminal Procedure Code to any Court other than a High Court does not apply, 22 M. L. J. 419 = (1912) M. W. N. 499 (F.B.), 40 C. 239, 139 M. 730 and 39 M. 788. Rules of limitation are foreign to the administration of criminal justice and it is only by express statutory provision that any rule of limitation could be made applicable to a criminal case. S. 178 of the Limitation Act 1877 (corresponding to s. 18 of the 1908 Act) does not apply to an application under this section 10 A. 350. But the application should be made without unnecessary delay, 8 B. L. R. 49 = 15 Cr. L. J. 654. In this case an application under sub-sec. (6) prepared by the Government after the lapse of a year was disallowed.

158. How applications under this sub-section are to be registered.—Every application made to a Criminal Court under s. 195, presented either to a Court of first instance or directly to the Appellate Court for the grant of sanction refused by the Subordinate Court, or for revocation of sanction granted by the Subordinate Court, should be registered as a "Criminal Miscellaneous Petition" and not as a "Revision Petition" though presented to an Appellate Criminal Court which may have also revisional jurisdiction. S. 186 of the Madras Criminal Rules of Practice 1910. In 13 A. L. J. 709 = 16 Cr. L. J. 524, the somewhat curious practice of registering applications to the District Judge under cl. (6) from orders of inferior Civil Courts as 'criminal appeals' was commented upon and 23 A. 556 was referred to.

159. Sanction cannot be revoked because of the delay in drawing up the order.—A Sessions Judge set aside on 27th July, 1895 an order passed by a Sub-Judge on 10th April, 1895, granting an application for sanction to prosecute for perjury on the ground that after an interval of three-and-a-half months no formal and legal sanction had been recorded. Held, that the order of the Sessions Judge was illegal, the time allowed by the Code within which sanction shall remain in force being six months, Ratanlal 859.

160. Judges of a Chartered High Court if equally divided in hearing an application under sub-sec. (6), case governed by Letters Patent—When the Judges of a Chartered High Court constituting the Bench are equally divided in opinion in dealing with an application under sub-sec (6), the case is governed by the Letters Patent (s 36 Madras) and not by s 429 or s 439 of this Code. The opinion of the senior Judge prevails, 22 M. L. J. 419 (F B) = (1912) M. W. N. 499 = 11 M. L. T. 367. See 39 M. 768.

XVIII.—APPEAL

161 Letters Patent Appeal from order of a single Judge of the High Court.—An order in a sanction matter passed by a single Judge of the High Court is not a sentence or order in a criminal trial and therefore an appeal lies under s 15 of the Letters Patent, Weir I, 787, II, 1199 = 12 M. L. J. 408; 32 C. 379; contra 17 M. 105. The rejection by such a Judge of a revision petition, declining to revise the order passed by District Judge refusing to revoke a sanction is a judgment 30 M. 311; where 23 M. 169 and 27 M. 340 are not followed. The Madras High Court has in L. P. A. 79 and 80 of 1905 held that an appeal lies under s 15 of the Letters Patent against the order of a single Judge granting sanction in the exercise of the original criminal jurisdiction of the High Court. See also 45 M. 928; 47 B. 270.

162 Does an appeal lie to the Privy Council under cl. (39) of the Letters Patent against an order granting sanction?—In a proceeding under s 10 of the Letters Patent, sanction was granted, IMAM, J., held that an order granting a sanction is a 'final order' within the meaning of s 39 of the Letters Patent, as it materially affected the status of the party against whom the sanction was granted though CHAPMAN, J., differed from him, and leave was granted to appeal to the Privy Council. On review, however, the leave was cancelled on the ground that a proceeding under cl (10) of the Letters Patent does not fall under any of the jurisdictions specified in cl (39) 41 C. 734

XIX.—REVIEW AND FRESH SANCTION.

163. No power to review order disposing of sanction application.—A Sessions Judge has no power to review his order refusing to revoke a sanction to prosecute, such an order being final and not open to review, 23 B. 50; 10 B. 176, 13 A. 61; 30 P. R. 1903; 32 B. 203, but see 1904 A. W. N. 10. The contrary view has prevailed in 29 C. 726, in respect of an order of discharge. Where a sanction application was dismissed for default of appearance, but was subsequently restored to file and proceeded with, the High Court refused to interfere as the order of restoration was a proper order required to set right what had been done without jurisdiction, 15 Cr. L. J. 71 (M)

164 Re-consideration of ex-parte order not prohibited.—This section does not prevent an officer or Court from re-considering an order passed ex-parte granting sanction to prosecute a person, Weir II, 194.

165. Court which gave the sanction has no power to revoke it—When a Court properly grants a sanction it has no power to revoke it, 40 C. 423. Such an application must be made to the Appellate Court, 32 C. 379.

166 Where revocation on merits, no power to grant a fresh sanction—Where the sanction granted by a Magistrate under s 193, I P C was revoked by the Sessions Judge, the District Magistrate cannot grant a fresh sanction himself in respect of the same alleged perjury. The District Magistrate may, however, move the High Court to have the Judge's order of revocation set aside. There is nothing in the Code which either authorizes a District Magistrate to call upon a Sessions Judge for explanation or which justifies a Sessions Judge in furnishing him with one, 1 A. L. J. 395

167. Where original sanction revoked on technical grounds not affecting merits—Where the original sanction granted was revoked by the appellate authority on the ground that it was based solely on affidavit evidence it was held that the Court had power to re-hear the application for sanction, Weir II, 195, (1912) M. W. N. 1000.

168 After sanction had lapsed by the expiry of six months, could a fresh sanction be granted?—Where sanction is exhausted by lapse of time, fresh sanction should not be granted unless some explanation was given for the omission to commence proceedings within six months, or some special grounds shown why fresh sanction should be given. Where the explanation is not given or special grounds not shown, a Court does not exercise sound discretion in granting fresh sanction, 11 C. 577. In 18 A. 358, it was held following 6 A. 43 and 1892 A. W. N. 245 and dissenting from 22 C. 573, that a fresh sanction could be given when the first sanction has become infructuous, see also 23 C. 176. In 40 C. 584, it was, however, held that a second sanction cannot be given, and having regard to the power of the High Court to extend the time, even after the lapse of six months (25 M. 191 and 480) there will be no great hardship if the power to grant a fresh sanction were negated. See, however, Note 167.

169. Subsequent application by a different person.—Where sanction accorded to one person was allowed to lapse by the expiry of six months and then another application for sanction was made by a different person. Held, that very strong grounds would be necessary for second sanction to be granted, for the first sanction opened the door of the Criminal Courts for the institution of criminal proceedings and the High Court could be moved to extend the time for the first sanction. Quere whether a Court could grant a second sanction to a person other than the person to whom it had been originally granted? 6 Bom. L. R. 1097.

170. Fresh application to appellate tribunal on refusal by the Lower Court.—Where a Magistrate refused to sanction a prosecution under s. 211 and no appeal or revision was made against such refusal, a fresh original application to the Sessions Judge or High Court for sanction should not be encouraged, 25 A. 126; see also 32 B. 203, where it is held that the appellate tribunal had no jurisdiction to entertain such an application, when the original tribunal had dismissed the application for sanction for default of appearance of applicant. See Note 214.

XX.—REVISION.

171. High Court may interfere in revision.—The High Court is competent under s. 439 to interfere with an order of a subordinate Criminal Court made under this section. The Court has, under that section, the powers conferred on a Court of Appeal by s. 423 to alter or reverse any such order, 15 C. 730; 5 P. R. 1908 (F.B.), 30 A. 245, 36 A. 403. Contra, see 13 B. 109, where it was held, that this section distinguishes between the sanction granted by a Court to a prosecution by a private individual and a complaint made by the Court itself. A superior Court to which such Court is subordinate may revoke the sanction granted in the former case to the private prosecutor, but it has no power in the latter case to set aside a complaint duly made by a Subordinate Court. See also 13 M. 148; 7 A. 871; 1 C. 450; 23 M. 205; 7 C. 308; 1907 U. B. R. 1 = 6 Cr. L. J. 25. In a case in which both the original and the Appellate Criminal Courts refuse a sanction, the High Court as a Court of Revision may call for the record and if the refusal proceeds on an error of law, it may accord the sanction which ought to have been granted by the Appellate Criminal Court and such sanction will of course be operative for purposes of clause (b) and (c) of sub-sec. (1), 27 M. 223. This power of revision is not affected by the jurisdiction conferred by sub-sec. (6), 37 C. 714. See 20 Cr. L. J. 564.

172. Revision under ss. 435 and 439 is confined to sanction given or refused by Criminal Courts.—Where sanction is granted by a Civil or Revenue Court the High Court has no power to interfere in revision under ss. 435 and 439.

(1) Madras.—26 M. 139, 29 M. 122, 17 M. L. T. 268 = 16 Cr. L. J. 232.

(2) Calcutta.—8 C. W. N. 73; 23 C. 532; 14 C. W. N. 806 = 11 Cr. L. J. 357; 40 C. 477, 19 C. W. N. 447 = 21 Cr. L. J. 198 = 16 Cr. L. J. 236.

(3) Allahabad.—23 A. 554 (F.B.) overruling 26 A. 1 and 1903 A. W. N. 170, 1903 A. W. N. 172; 1905 A. W. N. 85; 26 A. 249 (F.B.). See also 31 A. 53 and 45.

(4) Bombay.—26 B. 785; 28 B. 533.

(5) Burma.—4 L. B. R. 138 = 7 Cr. L. J. 416.

(6) Oudh.—17 O. C. 25 = 15 Cr. L. J. 217 where 6 O. C. 216 and 13 O. C. 193 were considered and distinguished.

No petition lies to the High Court under s. 439 to revise the orders of a Small Cause Court Judge, 1903 A. W. N. 712; 14 C. W. N. 806 = 11 Cr. L. J. 357 or of a Subordinate Court or District Judge, 31 A. 33.

But in Punjab and Central Provinces it has been held after an investigation of all the authorities that it is competent for the High Court to interfere in revision under ss. 435 and 439 with orders passed by any Civil, Revenue or Criminal Courts, etc., under this section or s. 476, 5 P. R. 1908 = 103 P. L. R. 1908 = 7 P. W. R. 1908 = 7 Cr. L. J. 251; 155 P. L. R. 1911 = 33 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 216; 4 N. L. R. 140 = 5 Cr. L. J. 351; 9 N. L. R. 184 = 15 Cr. L. J. 33.

173. Where Civil Courts pass orders under this section, Civil Procedure Code applies.—Where sanction is granted by a Civil Court an application for revision should be made to the High Court under s 115 of the Civil Procedure Code, Act V of 1908 (s 622 the old Code Act XIV of 1882) 29 M. 122; 31 A. 33; 23 R. 54, 16 Cr. L. J. 285.

174. Power of High Courts under the Charter Act.—Where sanction was granted by a Subordinate Judge and confirmed by the District Judge and there were no grounds for interference under s. 622, Civ P C, held, that the High Court could in the exercise of its extraordinary power of superintendence conferred on it by s 15 of the Charter Act, set aside the sanction, 27 M. 223 at p. 228. In 40 C. 477, HENDERSON, J., in his referring judgment states that it is the settled practice in the Calcutta High Court to treat cases under the section by way of appeal and no question as to revisional powers of the Court or the powers under the Charter Act arises.

175. Revisional powers how to be exercised.—When the Courts below have refused sanction, the High Court in revision will not grant sanction unless there are strong grounds for exercising its discretion in the ends of justice, 22 W. R. 11. Revisional powers ought to be exercised only in order to prevent a gross and palpable failure of justice, 36 A. 403. When Subordinate Courts grant sanction to prosecute under this section, it is incumbent on them so to frame the proceedings before them as to enable the High Court to satisfy itself from the record whether the application for sanction has been properly granted or not, 16 C. 881, 23 M. 210.

176. High Court has no power to revise when District Magistrate acts as head of the Police.—Where a District Magistrate as head of the Police sanctions a prosecution under s. 182, I P C, the High Court has no power to interfere in revision, 27 A. 292 where 27 C. 452 is dissented from. See also 30 P. R. 1803; 6 P. R. 1910 = 10 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 252.

For the purposes of s 195 (1) (a) of the Code the Superintendent of Police is subordinate to the District Magistrate in accordance with s 4 of the Police Act, 1861 (27 A. 292, followed)

But the Lahore High Court in 4 Lah. 130 has followed 27 C. 452, and held that the Police is not subordinate to District Magistrate within the meaning of s. 195 (1) (a) of the Code. It was further held that a revision to the High Court was competent, 4 Lah. 130.

177. High Court can under cl. (6) of this section extend the time of a sanction to prosecute, even after the expiry of the period of six months from its date 18 Bom. L. R. 636 = 17 Cr. L. J. 377.

XXI.—REMAND FOR FURTHER INQUIRY.

178. Section does not contemplate remand for further inquiry or for fresh evidence or to rectify a mistake—The Appellate Court under sub-sec. (6) can only revoke sanction given or give sanction refused. It has no jurisdiction to remand the case for further inquiry, 16 M. L. J. (S.N.) 43; 33 A. 512, nor can the Appellate Court setting aside the order granting sanction on the ground that no notice had been given to the accused, direct the Magistrate to dispose of the matter afresh after giving notice to the accused, 1911 M. W. N. 100 = 9 M. L. T. 97 = 11 Cr. L. J. 699. As an order of remand is ultra vires all subsequent proceedings in consequence thereof are a nullity, 7 P. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 378. Nor can it direct the first Court to take fresh evidence 30 M. 311, where it is laid down that the power to direct fresh evidence to be taken is not inherent in the Appellate Court and is not necessarily incident to the exercise by the Appellate Court of the jurisdiction conferred on it by sub-sec. (6). The proceedings, under this section are of a criminal rather than of a civil nature and the provisions of ss. 563 and 579, Civ P C, are not made applicable to such proceedings by s 647, Civ P C, 1882, even when sanction is granted by a Civil Court. See also 20 C. 633. The power to take or call for further evidence given by s 423 is limited to appeals under Chapter XXXI and a superior Criminal Court acting under s. 195 (6) cannot do so, 33 M. 90. In 14 Cr. L. J. 655 (C.) it was held that the Court dealing with an application under cl. (6) is not competent to direct the Subordinate Court to rectify a mistake in the form of a sanction e.g., specifying the offences for which sanction is asked for. See also 17 Cr. L. J. 272 = 34 Ia. Ca. 334 (Bur.)

XXII.—PROCEEDINGS UNDER THIS SECTION ARE JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS

179. Judicial Proceedings.—See s. 4 (m) and Notes thereunder at pp. 21 22.

180. Proceedings of Courts under this section are judicial proceedings—An application under this section for grant of sanction is a judicial proceeding. An application for sanction when presented to the Court of first instance commences a judicial proceeding and the order made is a judicial act. Consequently the proceeding before the Appellate Court under sub-sec. (6) in which it is invited to review the propriety of the order of the Court of first instance is a judicial proceeding, 13 Cr. L. J. 1. (C.) 10 M. 232; 20 M. 883; 23 M. 210; 7 C. W. N. 423 must be taken to be overruled by 37 C. 642. Proceedings of the High Court under sub-sec. (6) are judicial proceedings, 34 A. 602 overruling 16 A. 80 on this point. See, however, 18 M. 487; 1903 A. W. N. 74.

181. An inquiry under this section need not be a judicial inquiry.—Per SPENCER J., in (1911) 2 M. W. N. 528 following 6 W. R. 41; 22 M. L. J. 419 = (1912) 1 M. W. N. 499 = 13 Cr. L. J. 209. See Note 76

182. Granting sanction under cl. (a), sub-sec. (1) may not be a judicial proceeding—Some cases at least within cl. (a) of sub-sec. (1) have no reference to any legal proceedings and then the provisions of ss 196 and 197 are not connected with judicial proceedings at all 22 M. L. J. 419 = (1912) 1 M. W. N. 499 = 13 Cr. L. J. 209. See also 18 M. 487. In most cases the public servant concerned or his superior officer may not be a judicial officer or an officer exercising judicial functions

XXIII.—STAY OF PROCEEDINGS.

183. Where stay of proceedings expedient.—As a matter of discretion and propriety it is right for a Court before committing a person on a charge of perjury upon his own uncontradicted statement to await the hearing of the appeal where an appeal is pending in the case in which he gave evidence alleged to be false, 6 C 308; 13 C. W. N. 398 = 11 Cr. L. J. 4. See also 2 C. W. N. 60, where JENKINS, J., postponed a sanction to prosecute for perjury until after the disposal of the appeal in the original case. But in 26 B. 785, it was held that in a complaint of perjury, making and using false documents and making of a false complaint, the High Court will not order a stay of proceedings in the Criminal Court pending the disposal of a second appeal out of which the criminal proceedings arose

184. A Sessions Judge has no jurisdiction to stay proceedings in a Criminal Court outside his Sessions division.—Where a complaint was filed in a Court in the Chingleput District on a sanction granted by a second class Magistrate in the district of South Arcot and confirmed on appeal by a Deputy Magistrate in the same district and an application was made to the Sessions Judge of South Arcot to revise the sanction order and for stay of proceedings meanwhile, in the Chingleput Court, held, that the order of the Sessions Judge staying proceedings in the Court of a Magistrate in the Chingleput District was ultra vires 26 M. 131. Quere Having regard to the Full Bench Ruling in 30 M. 382 (F.B.) the decision in this case that it was not competent to the Sessions Judge under s 438 to revise the sanction proceedings himself but that he should have reported it for the orders of the High Court with a recommendation to quash the sanction is probably not correct.

185. Application for stay of proceedings must be made on the criminal side.—Though an application to revise sanction given or refused by a Civil Court should be made on the civil side, yet an application to stay proceedings in the Criminal Court based on the sanction should be made on the criminal side by a criminal miscellaneous petition, 8 C. W. N. 31

186. Advisability of postponing criminal proceedings.—It is advisable to postpone criminal proceed parties to the suit. As to those not parties to the suit it is not advisable to prosecute them while the civil proceedings are pending and so the criminal proceedings should be stayed 16 M. L. J. (B.N.) 41, 7 Bar L. J. 73 = 15 Cr. L. J. 458. A Court may well hesitate to give sanction under s 195 to a private individual to prosecute his adversary for an offence alleged to have been committed during the pendency of a civil litigation, before it has terminated. But it would, however, be a dangerous doctrine to lay down any hard and fast rule to the effect that a criminal trial or inquiry should, of necessity be stayed simply because a civil suit has been instituted between the parties in which some or all the matters materially in issue in the criminal case would have to be determined, until the civil litigation was finally decided, 13 C. W. N. 393 = 11 Cr. L. J. 4. See also 14 C. W. N. 131 and Notes to s 476.

187. Sanction not to be used to stifle appeals.—Great caution ought to be exercised that sanction is not merely sought by a su filed pending the disposal

n committed, held, that it was undesirable to grant sanction pending disposal of appeal and that the proper course would be to await the conclusion of the litigation and then to move the highest appellate tribunal to take action if necessary in the ends of public justice. See also 7 A. L. J. 847 = 11 Cr. L. J. 445; 12 C. L. J. 270.

188. High Court's power to stay proceedings.—The High Court might stay criminal proceedings pending disposal of a civil suit or appeal, 18 B. 729; 26 B. 785; 30 M. 226. But this, however, is not an invariable rule, 18 B. 581. In 23 C. 610, RAMPINI, J., was of opinion that the High Court had no such power, see also 35 C. 909. It makes no difference in principle whether the criminal proceedings have been instituted in pursuance of sanction given by a Court or in the exercise of the right given to a party to institute proceedings when no sanction is necessary. In either case the test is whether the party is likely to be prejudiced by proceedings going on when a civil suit is pending in which the genuineness of the document is in issue, 15 Cr. L. J. 637 (M). In 5 C. W. N. 44, the question as to the High Court's power was not raised and it was held that the Magistrate ought to have stayed proceedings pending the decision of a civil suit touching the same matter and the High Court made the necessary order staying proceedings. Where proceedings are stayed the accused might be put on terms as to his appearance, 23 C. 610. See also 31 C. 858 = 7 Bar. L. T. 73 = 15 Cr. L. J. 488; 8 S. L. R. 20 = 15 Cr. L. J. 631, 19 C. W. N. 125 = 16 Cr. L. J. 309.

XXIV.—PROPRIETY OF SANCTION NOT TO BE QUESTIONED BY COURT ENTERTAINING COMPLAINT.

189. Trying Court not to question the propriety of sanction.—Where sanction is given by a superior Court a Court subordinate to it cannot question its propriety, but is bound to accept it as valid and leave the accused to question it before a competent Court if so advised. In other words, the propriety or impropriety of the sanction is a question for the accused which he may raise before a competent Court, 4 C. 869 = 4 C. L. R. 413; 26 M. 189; Ratanlal 475; 26 M. 592. The most it can do is to stay proceedings in order to allow the accused to get the sanction revoked by some Court to which the Court granting the sanction is subordinate, 18 P. R. 1887; 2 P. R. 1888. It cannot refuse to act on the ground of the insufficiency of the sanction. 1893 A. W. N. 177. See also Ratanlal 718; 41 C. 446.

190. Magistrate cannot discharge accused for impropriety of sanction.—A Magistrate to whom a complaint accompanied by a sanction is presented, cannot discharge the accused because in his opinion the sanction ought not to have been granted. He can discharge only, if in his opinion the evidence against the accused is not sufficient to frame a charge or to commit to the Court of Session. 5 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 41.

XXV.—EFFECT OF SANCTION ON POWERS OF TRYING COURT—SUB-SEC. (5).

191. After grant of sanction, trial Court may proceed against others and for other offences.—Once a Magistrate has taken cognizance, he has power under sub-sec. (5) to frame a charge in respect of any other offence referred to in this section and which may be disclosed by the facts and the Magistrate might also proceed against persons other than those against whom sanction has been accorded. The Magistrate who has taken cognizance of the offence with jurisdiction has jurisdiction to deal with the entire case, 4 C. W. N. 187; 15 C. W. N. 124; 12 Cr. L. J. 320 (Sind), 26 M. 592. Rulings to the contrary in 10 W. R. 24-A and 15 W. R. 53 seem to be no longer law, sub-sec. (5) was put in specially to meet, 8 B. H. C. R. 28, where it was held that the trying Magistrate could not add a new charge for which sanction has not been accorded. Under sub-sec. (5), the Magistrate may frame a charge for any other offence covered by the same facts and referred to in this section, 30 C. 905.

192. When sanction is accorded for forgery, trying Magistrate may try for any cognate offence.—Where sanction is accorded for a prosecution for forgery, the trying Magistrate might charge the accused in addition with fraudulent using (s. 471, I P C.) or abetment of forgery, 6 W. R. 20. Sanction was given for offences under ss. 417 and 468 I P C., and the conviction was under ss. 468 and 109, I P C., held that the conviction was right, 30 C. 905.

193. Trying Court may convict for offence different from that sanctioned when facts identical.—Where a complaint was made by a Sub-Inspector after obtaining sanction under s. 353 I P C., for prosecution in respect of facts which disclosed offences under ss. 186 and 225-B, I P C., though, the Police-officer thought that s. 353 was the more appropriate section the trying Magistrate altered the charge into one under ss. 186 and 225-B, I P C., and convicted the accused, held the conviction was good as there was a distinct complaint of facts constituting an offence under s. 186, I P C., by the public servant concerned. 13 C. W. N. 124.

194. A similar but entirely different offence cannot be charged.—A Magistrate inquiring into a case of perjury in respect of a particular statement specified in the order of sanction cannot pick out a wholly different statement in the same deposition and charge the accused on that, 10 Bar. L. R. 77; s 537 will not cure such irregularities

195. Power of Appellate Court under s. 423 to alter finding not controlled by this section.—An Appellate Court when it alters the finding under s 423 is not bound by the requirements of a previous sanction, 25 A. 534. But it was held in 18 Cr. L. J. 603 (Bar.) that a Revisional Court cannot convert the conviction for an offence for which no sanction is required to conviction or an offence in respect of which sanction would be necessary.

196. One sanction covers only one complaint.—Where once a sanction to prosecute is availed of and a complaint instituted on its strength proves infructuous, a fresh complaint on the same sanction is incompetent, 17 O. C. 18 = 15 Cr. L. J. 230.

XXVI.—JUDGE GRANTING SANCTION OUGHT NOT TO TRY THE CASE HIMSELF.

197. Highly desirable sanctioning Judge should not try.—It is highly undesirable that the same Judge who has heard the evidence and expressed an opinion in granting sanction should also be the Judge to try a prisoner on a complaint based upon the sanction and supported by the same evidence, though a conviction is not necessarily bad for this reason, 22 W. R. 16; 14 A. 354; 1884 A. W. N. 37; 16 C. 766 (F.B.), 6 B. 479, 18 B. 380 (F.B.), 38 P. R. 1852. In 16 M 561, where a Head Assistant Magistrate on sanctioning under this section a prosecution for an offence under s. 211, I P C., forwarded the proceedings to the Deputy Magistrate of another division, who ordinarily had no jurisdiction over the place where the alleged offence was committed, it was held no objection could be taken to the jurisdiction of the Deputy Magistrate to try the charge.

198. Whether Magistrate giving sanction may hear appeal.—A District Magistrate who gave sanction to the prosecution on the Police report of an offence under s. 182 I P C., is competent to hear the appeal from the conviction, as s 487 does not apply, 27 C. 452.

199. Judge giving sanction competent to hear appeal from conviction.—See 15 Bom. L. R. 104 = 14 Cr. L. J. 190 following 6 B 479 and 16 C. 766. See also Notes under ss 487 and 566

200. Trial for disobedience of an order of Magistrate.—A Magistrate is not competent to try and convict a person under s 188, I P C., for disobedience of an order under s. 144 issued by himself. Further by s. 487, he is disqualified from trying such a case himself, as the offence is one mentioned in this section, Ratanlal 904 where 18 B. 380 is distinguished. See however 8 B. L. R. 41 = 15 Cr. L. J. 649. A person was ordered by a Magistrate to appear before him which that person failed to do. He was thereupon convicted by that Magistrate under s 174 I P C. Held that having regard to s 487, Cr P C., the Magistrate whose order had been disobeyed could not try the case it being a case within the purview of s. 195 16 A. L. J. 432.

XXVII.—MISCELLANEOUS.

201. This section does not apply to a matter coming before the Collector in his administrative capacity and proceedings taken not bad for want of a sanction, 20 Cr. L. J. 798.

202. Orders under this section and s. 250 might be made at the same time.—A Court while granting sanction for a prosecution under s 211 I P C., might at the same time make an order for compensation under s 250, 15 W. R. 9 = 6 B. L. R. 296; 21 M. 237; 26 C. 181; 30 C. 123 (F.B.) overruling 28 C. 251; 22 C. 586 construed and see also 29 C. 479; 18 P. R. 1901; 6 P. R. 1904 and Notes under s. 250

203. Damages for unsuccessful application for sanction.—See 9 A. 59.

204. Sections of the Code and other Acts where previous sanction is required.

Act XI of 1878 (Arms), s. 29, previous sanction of the Magistrate of the district or in Presidency towns of the Commissioner of Police. See 27 C. 592.

Act I of 1889 (Metal Tokens), s. 5, previous sanction of the District Magistrate or of Sub-divisional Magistrates.

Act XVII of 1890 (Census), s. 11, previous sanction of the Local Government or of some officer authorized in this behalf by name or office.

Act V of 1898 (Cr Pro Code), see ss 108, 132, 188, 195, 196, 196-A, 197, 198, 199, 339 and see also ss, 230, 238 and 537 which deal with previous sanctions.

Act II of 1899 (Stamp), s 70, sanction of the Collector or such other officer as the Local Government generally or the Collector specially authorizes in that behalf. See 1883 A. W. N. 98.

Act III of 1877, s 83, Act XVI 1908 (Registration), s 82, see 11 C. 566.

Act XXII of 1881, s 47 and XII of 1896, s 57 (Exercise Act), see 9 P. R. 1903; 8 P. R. 1901; 22 P. R. 1900; 9 P. R. 1897.

Act VI of 1898 (Post Office) s 72, see 10 C. W. N. 1029.

Act XII of 1882 (Salt) s 11 see 20 B. 543.

205. Power of Appellate Court to grant sanction under s. 197.—This section does not confer on an Appellate Court any authority having regard to the provisions of s. 439, in respect of an order made by a Subordinate Court under s. 197, 26 C. 852. But see Ratanlal 683, where it was held that a District Magistrate is not precluded from taking cognizance of offences under s. 193 I P C, merely because a Subordinate Magistrate in whose Court the evidence had been given had refused to give sanction to prosecute.

196. No Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under Chapter VI or IX A* of the Indian Penal Code (except section 127), or punishable under section 108-A or section 153-A, or section 294 A, or section 505 of the same Code, unless upon complaint made by order of, or under authority from, the Governor General in Council, the Local Government or some officer empowered by the Governor General in Council in this behalf

Prosecution for offences against the State

Notes.—1. Chap VI—Of offences against the State s 127.—Receiving property knowing the same to have been taken by waging war against any Asiatic power in alliance or at peace with the Queen, or committing depredation on the territories of such power S 294 A—keeping lottery office or publishing proposals regarding lotteries S 108—Abetment in British India or offences outside British India S 133-A—Promoting enmity between classes S 505—Statements conducing to public mischief

* We have added to the list of offences which can only be proceeded against under the order of the Government, offences under ss 108-A, 153-A and 505. The two latter offences resemble in substance offences against the State, and offences under s. 108-A involve questions affecting Foreign States.—See Com Rep. Offences under Ch IX A relating to election from s 171 E to 171 I were added to this list by Act XXIX of 1920

2. Difference between sanction under the old s 195 and that under this and the following sections.—There is a marked distinction between the classes of offences dealt with in old s 195 and those dealt with in this section and s 197. A Court granting sanction under clauses (b) and (c) of sub-sec (1) of s 195 does so in connection with offences committed in or in relation to any proceeding in such Court and the Court therefore acts in its judicial capacity in granting the sanction upon legal evidence. But the Government in according or withholding sanction under this and the following sections acts purely in its executive capacity and the sanction need not be based on legal evidence. The Government certainly does not act in a judicial capacity nor exercise a judicial function in sanctioning a prosecution under this or the next section 27 M. 54.

3. Persons authorized to complain in Burma.—(1) Deputy Commissioners and Assistant Commissioners have been empowered to make complaints or to authorize the making of complaints of offences under s. 294-A, I P C (Burma Gazette, 1897, Pt. II, p 144), (2) Deputy Commissioners of Hunthawaddy, Amherst and Pegu have been empowered to order or to authorize the institution of prosecutions for such offences (Burma Gazette, 1880, Pt. I, p. 411, 1883, Pt. II, p 55) and (3) the Commissioners of Arakan Tenasserim Pegu and the Deputy Commissioners of Shwegyin, Toungoo, Tavoy, Mergu, Prome, Basseln, Thayetmyo, Henzada and Thongwa (Burma Gazette, 133 Pt. II, p 103).

4. Absence of complaint vitiates the trial and conviction.—A Magistrate or a Sessions Court proceeding to try a person accused of an offence under Chap VI, I P C exceeds his jurisdiction if he takes cognizance of such offence without a complaint and this defect is not cured by the provisions of s 537, 16 P. R. 1890. The absence of such authority is a defect which vitiates the proceedings ab initio and is not a mere irregularity curable under s 537, 42 P. R. 1894. Absence of complaint makes the whole proceeding void ab initio. The defect goes to the root of the matter and makes it impossible for the Court to hold a valid trial for the offence, the offence not being specified and the accused person not being mentioned, 15 C. L. J. 517 = 13 Cr. L. J. 609. When the accused were committed for trial under s 121, I P C., without the complaint or sanction of the Government and convicted, held distinguishing 9 B. 288 and dissenting from 22 B. 112, that s. 532 did not cure the defect. There was a want of jurisdiction not only in the Magistrate, but also in the Court of Sessions for at no stage were the conditions of s 196 satisfied, 16 P. R. 1890 approved 37 C. 467-492. When the complainant omitted to name an accused person in his petition of complaint the defect goes to the root of the matter and the accused not so named stands discharged from the trial initiated on such a complaint even though his name appears in the sanction authorizing the complaint, 33 C. 399. Sanction is different from a complaint. But where the accused was prosecuted under s 505, I P C., upon a letter of the Commissioner conveying the sanction of the Government without a formal complaint and no objection was taken at the trial. Held, that as the absence of the complaint had not prejudiced the accused the defect was cured by s 537 (a), 8 P. R. 1908 = 13 P. W. R. 1908 = 7 Cr. L. J. 353, where 16 P. R. 1890 was distinguished on the ground that in that case the necessary sanction was not given until long after the institution of proceedings, see also 1, 2 and 3 P. R. 1892.

5 Effect of irregularity or insufficiency of complaint.—Where after a trial and conviction it was contended on appeal that the complaint was defective inasmuch as it did not set forth the facts relied on as constituting the offences and the words of the sections of the Penal Code were literally copied out held that after an elaborate inquiry and trial it was plainly no longer competent to the accused to invite the Appellate Court to set aside the conviction on the ground that the inquiry was materially defective. Such a case is completely covered by s. 537, 15 C. L. J. 517 = 13 Cr. L. J. 609. The proper course is to bring up the question of the sufficiency or legality of the complaint to the proper tribunal before the completion of the case in the Subordinate Court and get the proceedings quashed, 11 C. W. N. 178 = 8 Cr. L. J. 13 referred to Per MUKERJEE, J., in 15 C. L. J. 517 = 13 Cr. L. J. 609. In such a case, to make the whole proceeding void ab initio, it is necessary for the accused to show that there was no complaint before the Magistrate and Magistrate had no other course but to refuse issue of process on the ground that he had no jurisdiction. It is not enough to say that the materials which the Magistrate had before him were meagre or even insufficient, for if the Magistrate had jurisdiction to issue process, the trial would be perfectly regular even if the Magistrate had exercised that jurisdiction on insufficient material. Per HARRINGTON, J., ibid.

6 Complaint must set out facts and not merely copy the sections of the Penal Code.—MUKERJEE J., held that the following complaint was defective as it did not state the concrete facts constituting the offences but merely copied the words of the sections.—Your petitioner has reasons to believe that the persons named in the Government Order, dated the 28th July 1910 which is hereto annexed have amongst themselves and together with other persons known or unknown conspired to wage war against His Majesty the King and to deprive His Majesty of the Sovereignty of British India and they have collected arms and have otherwise prepared to wage war with the intention of either waging war or being prepared to wage war against the King and have further concealed with intent to facilitate a design to wage war against the King, and have thereby committed offences punishable under ss 121 A, 122 and 123 I P C.' 16 C. W. N. 1105 = 15 C. L. J. 517 = 13 Cr. L. J. 609.

7. Letter of Government is not the complaint nor the person who signs it the complainant.—A letter by Government sanctioning the prosecution of S. K. under s 121 I P C. may be an authority to institute a complaint but the letter itself is not a complaint 16 P. R. 1890. Nor is the person who signs the letter of authority the complainant and it is not therefore necessary to take his examination under the law. The person who armed with authority makes the application to the Court for the apprehension of the accused is the complainant and his examination is to be taken, 33 C. 141.

8. Want of sanction cannot be cured even by subsequent order of Government.—The accused were committed for trial under s. 121, I P C. At the trial objection was taken to the charge for want of sanction of Government. An order authorizing the institution of a complaint was obtained from the Government while the case was before the Court of Sessions and the accused were convicted. Held that the subsequent order was of no value. Under s 196 the only order or authority within the competence of the Government is one that permits a complaint, but no complaint was made 37 C. 467 at p. 492. Where the sanctions, as they originally stood contained a misdescription of the articles on which the prosecution was based and this was rectified by a subsequent sanction filed in course of the trial, held the petitioner was not prejudiced and the defect was cured by s 537 33 C. 141. S 537 does not cure any irregularity in or defect of a sanction under s. 194, 31 M. 80.

9. Section does not prescribe any particular form of order and does not even require the order to be in writing.—At the trial of Mr Tillak for an offence under s 124 A, I P C, an order for his prosecution given by Government under this section in the following form was tendered in evidence.—“Under the provisions of s 196, Cr Pro Code M A Baig, Oriental Translator to Government, is hereby ordered by H E the Governor in Council to make a complaint against Mr Bai Bangadhur Tillak, Publisher, Proprietor and Editor of the the order was sufficient and was admissible, 23 B. 112 at p. 150; 19 C. 35; but see 37 C. 467. What the section requires is that the complaint should be made upon authority from the Local Government. There is nothing in the section to warrant the construction that the actual complaint must be expressly authorized by the Local Government. The only question which the Court has to consider is ‘is the complaint which I am asked to entertain, a complaint made by order or under authority of Government,’ 32 M. 3. When the persons to be prosecuted are named and the sections under which they are alleged have committed the offences as also the period of their activity are specified the mere circumstance that these persons are not described as members of the Revolutionary Society, the existence whereof was sought to be established at the trial does not affect the validity of the sanction, 15 C. L. J. 817 = 13 Cr. L. J. 609. Sanction by telegram from Government is sufficient under this section (1918) M. W. N. 926, 42 M. L. J. 106.

A letter purporting to be issued from the Chief Secretary to the Government of Bengal was signed by the Deputy Secretary, not in his official capacity, but for the Chief Secretary, and it was held that there was no legal proof that the Local Government had sanctioned the prosecution under s 196 of the Code, 60 C. 135 (35 C. 141 distinguished).

10. Authority need not be signed by the Governor.—The authority under this section need not in the case of Local Government be signed personally by the Lieutenant Governor, it is enough if it is signed by one of his accredited and Gazetted Officers. It must be presumed that all official acts have been duly performed and s. 144 Indian Evidence Act, amply supplies all omissions in the method of communication of the sanction to the prosecuting officer and the Magistrate 35 C. 141. The order granting the sanction need not be signed personally by the Governor, 27 C. 467 at p. 493, 42 M. L. J. 557; 44 M. L. J. 166.

11. Sanction must be strictly proved and accused's identity established.—In a trial under s 121, I P C the sanction of the Local Government, required by this section, must be strictly proved in the manner laid down in s. 78 of the Evidence Act and the identity of the prisoner named in the sanction must be established, 1 Bar. & R. 389. But where the letter of authority for a prosecution under s 124 A did not specify the name of the accused, but he was sufficiently indicated from the first and his name was supplied at the commencement of the Police Court proceeding, held it was a sufficient compliance with the section, 35 C. 141.

12. Absence of Government sanction, does not affect accused's liability for other offence requiring no sanction.—Where a person is accused of committing acts which constitute a grave offence requiring sanction under this section, but the Government refuses to accord sanction it does not affect the accused's liability to punishment on the same facts for a minor offence under some other section which requires no sanction. Thus the accused was tried and convicted by an Assistant Sessions Judge of abetting or attempting dacoity. The Sessions Judge on appeal held that the evidence disclosed the offence of attempting to wage war against the Queen under s 122, I P C, but as no charge could be framed under that section for want of sanction by Government, the accused could not be brought to trial at all and he set aside the conviction. On appeal by Government the High Court reversed the acquittal holding the refusal of the Government to prosecute under s 122, I P C, did not effect the liability of the accused under other sections, 23 B 90. See also 13 B 502 which proceeds on the same principle, and also 42 C. 957, 7 Lah. 218.

13. Commitment for offences not in complaint authorized by Government bad.—Where an order under s 196 authorized a particular Police-officer to prefer a complaint of offences under ss 121 A, 122 123 and 124 of the Penal Code, “or under any other section of the said Code which may be found applicable to the case,” and the examination of the complainant also referred to the same sections. Held that no complaint under s 121 of the Penal Code was thereby authorized by the Local Government or in fact preferred and that the Magistrate had no power to commit thereunder 37 C 467 at p. 491. But in 32 M. 3 it was held that a sanction for an offence under s 124-A, I P C. will authorize a complaint under ss 124 A and 114, I P C. Quare whether this section deals with offences of abetment (except that under s 108-A, I P C) and any sanction is necessary, 20 M. 8 referred to

14. Local Government cannot delegate its powers—The Local Government cannot delegate to any other body or person the controlling power and discretion of determining whether cognizance shall be taken by the Court of an offence mentioned in this section and its judgment must be specifically directed to the particular section and no other, under which the prosecution is to be carried on and the order or authority should be proceeded by a deliberate determination in this respect. An order authorizing a complaint under certain specified sections or under any other sections found applicable if it means found by anyone other than the Government involves a delegation which cannot be sustained 37 C 487 at pp 489 and 490

15. Definition of Lottery—Lottery is a scheme for the distribution of property by lot or chance among persons who had paid or agree to pay a valuable consideration for the privilege of participating in such scheme.—MacClain's Criminal Law of the United States

16. Publication of advertisement of lotteries—The publication of advertisement in newspapers of any proposals relating to lotteries which have not been authorized by the Government is an offence punishable under s 294 A I P C. Magistrate should therefore take steps to make the Government acquainted with any such cases occurring in their district in order that sanction to the prosecution of offenders may be obtained under the provisions of this section. Reg and Ord N W P p 376. Before deciding not to proceed against the parties concerned in a lottery he should investigate the matter and take the orders of Government. Madras Notification 4th June 1874

Prosecution for certain classes of criminal conspiracy

196-A. No Court shall take cognizance of the offence of criminal conspiracy punishable under section 120-B of the Indian Penal Code

(1) in a case where the object of the conspiracy is to commit an illegal act other than an offence or a legal act by illegal means or an offence to which the provisions of section 186 apply, unless upon complaint made by order or under authority from the Governor General in Council the Local Government or some officer empowered by the Governor General in Council in this behalf or

(2) in a case where the object of the conspiracy is to commit any non cognizable offence or a cognizable offence, not punishable with death transportation or rigorous imprisonment for a term of two years or upwards unless the Local Government or a Chief Presidency Magistrate or a District Magistrate empowered in this behalf by the Local Government has by order in writing consented to the institution of the proceedings

Provided that where the criminal conspiracy is one to which the provisions of * sub-section (4) of section 185 apply no such consent shall be necessary

Notes.—1 Section new—This section was inserted by s 5 of the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act \ III of 1913

2 Definition and punishment of criminal conspiracy—See Chapter \ A newly inserted by s 3 of Act \ III of 1913 in the Indian Penal Code

120-A. When two or more persons agree to do or cause to be done—

(1) An illegal act or

(2) An act which is not illegal by illegal means such an agreement is designated a criminal conspiracy

Provided that no agreement except an agreement to commit an offence shall amount to a criminal conspiracy unless some act besides the agreement is done to effect the object thereof by one or more parties to such agreement.

Explanation.—It is immaterial whether the illegal act is the ultimate object of such agreement or is merely incidental to that object.

120-B (1) Whoever is a party to a criminal conspiracy to commit an offence punishable with death transportation or rigorous imprisonment for a term of two years or upwards shall where no express provision is made in this Code for the punishment of such a conspiracy be punished in the same manner as if he had abetted such offence.

(2) Whoever is a party to a criminal conspiracy other than a criminal conspiracy to commit an offence punishable as aforesaid shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding six months or with fine or with both.

* The words sub-section (4) was inserted for sub-section (5) by Act \ VIII of 1977

3. Object and scope of the section—Except s. 121 A, I P C., the offence of criminal conspiracy per se was unknown to the Indian Criminal Law. By Act VIII of 1913, criminal conspiracy was for the first time made a substantive offence in British India. The word 'illegal' used in the definition of the offence (s. 120-A, I P C.) is as defined by s. 43, I P C., applicable to everything which is an offence, or which is prohibited by law or which furnishes ground for a civil action. The very wide scope of the definition would make even a civil trespass indictable as a criminal conspiracy. Under English Law to which the Indian Law has been assimilated, indictments for conspiracy extend to almost every possible sort of case (see Russell on Crimes). In order to avoid any possible danger of the provisions of the new Act being misused two safeguards,—viz., (1) amendment of s. 195 by the addition of the words 'criminal conspiracies to commit such offences and to' after the words 'the abetment' in sub-secs (3) and (2) the insertion of this section, were introduced in the Select Committee. 'We think that these safeguards will satisfactorily ensure that the provisions of the Bill will only be used when prosecutions are necessary in the public interest.' See the Report of the Select Committee, 10th March, 1913.

Thus to take cognizance of the offence of criminal conspiracy, it is requisite that if the object of the conspiracy is (1) to commit an offence specified in sub-sec. (1) of s. 195, there must either be the complaint or sanction of the public servant or Court as the case may be, or is (2) to commit an offence specified in s. 196, there must be a complaint made by order or under authority of the Governor General in Council, etc., or is (3) to commit a non cognizable offence or a cognizable offence not punishable with death transportation or rigorous imprisonment for a term of two years or upwards and not specified in s. 195, there must be to the initiation of the proceedings a consent in writing of the Local Government or a Chief Presidency or District Magistrate empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, or (4) to commit either an illegal act other than an offence, or a legal act by illegal means, there must be a complaint as specified in sub-sec. (1) above.

So there is no condition precedent to a Court taking cognizance of a criminal conspiracy the object of which is to commit an offence punishable with death, transportation or rigorous imprisonment for two years or upwards and not specified in ss. 195 and 196, see 49 C. 573 = 26 C. W. N. 680.

3-A.—The proviso "not punishable with death, etc." in s. 196-A does not apply to the commission of a non-cognizable offence but is confined to a cognizable offence only, 15 A. L. J. 841.

4. What a complaint for conspiracy must set out.—Generally a tolerably full statement of the concrete facts must be incorporated in the complaint so as to enable the Magistrate to discharge his judicial functions under ss. 203 and 204 and in the event of the issue of process under the latter section to furnish indication to the accused of the outlines of the case for the prosecution. A complaint which merely copies out literally the words of the sections in the Penal Code is a colourable compliance with the requirements of the statute and not a complaint as required by s. 190. 'It is well settled that in accordance with the general rule in criminal prosecutions, an indictment or information for conspiracy must contain a statement of the facts relied upon as constituting the offence in ordinary and concise language, with as much certainty as the nature of the case will admit. Rex v. Jones (1832) 5 B. and Ald. 345; Rex v. King (1844) 7 Q. B. 782—795. I am not unmindful of the view sometimes taken that where conspiracy is made a statutory offence, if the statute sets out fully and without uncertainty or ambiguity, the elements necessary to constitute the offence intended to be punished, a charge in the language of the statute is sufficient, Reg. v. Rowlands (1851) 17 Q. B. 671. But it is indisputable that if the statute employs broad and comprehensive language descriptive of the general nature of the offence denounced, the complaint should embody a particular statement of the facts and circumstances; Rex v. Peck (1839) 9 A. and E. 682; Pellibone v. United States (1892) 148 W. B. 197." PER MUKERJEE, J., 15 C. L. J. 517 = 13 Cr. L. J. 609. See also 42 C. 937.

5. Absence of complaint under authority or consent in writing.—In the absence of a complaint or consent in writing as required by the section the proceedings would be void ab initio. S. 537 does not remedy the absence of a complaint or of a consent as required by this section. See Note 4 to s. 196.

Consent in writing of the authorities specified in s. 196-A of the Criminal Procedure Code is not necessary to a prosecution for criminal conspiracy to commit a non-cognizable offence when s. 195 (3) is applicable, 60 C. 461 (49 C. 551 followed).

Where the criminal conspiracy falls within sub-sec. (1) of s. 196-A absence of complaint by the Governor-General would altogether vitiate proceedings in a Magisterial Court. Further held, that s. 196-A of the Code applies only to a prosecution for conspiracy punishable under s. 120-B, I P C., and not for abetment of conspiracy punishable under s. 109 I P C., 3 R. 95.

6. Charge for conspiracy—See Note 8 under s. 223

196-B. In the case of any offence in respect of which the provisions of section 196 or section 196-A apply a District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate may, notwithstanding anything contained in those sections or in any other part of this Code, order a preliminary investigation by a Police-officer not being below the rank of Inspector in which case such Police-officer shall have the powers referred to in section 155, sub-section (3)

Note.—This new section is designed to meet the difficulty which arises from the fact that cases under ss. 196 and 196-A cannot be properly investigated by the Police before complaints are made. Doubts have arisen as to whether investigation can be ordered under s. 155 cl. (2) by a Magistrate without his taking cognizance of the case. The new section will provide for a preliminary investigation. We recognize that it does not altogether meet the case where the desirability of adding a new charge arises in the Sessions Court. It has been suggested that this difficulty might be met to some extent by substituting the words 'proceed to the trial' for the words 'take cognizance' in ss. 196 196-A. But on the whole we prefer not to make this change and to leave the sections unaltered (Report of the Joint Committee 1922).

† 197. (1) When any person who is a Judge within the meaning of s. 19 of the Indian Penal Code or when any Magistrate or when any public servant who is not removable from his office save by or with the sanction of a Local Government or some higher authority is accused of any offence alleged to have been committed by him while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty, no Court shall take cognizance of such offence except with the previous sanction of the Local Government

(2) Such Government may determine the person by whom the manner in which the offence or offences for which the prosecution of such Judge, Magistrate † or public servant is to be conducted and may specify the Court before which the trial is to be held

Note.—Referring to amendment of this section the Select Committee say It has been pointed out to us that difficulties with regard to s. 197 have recently come to light. There are certain public servants who are only removable from office by the Secretary of State and it is unreasonable that they should obtain no protection under the section. Further in view of s. 4 cl. (2) of the Code the word 'Judge' has to be interpreted according to the definition given in s. 29 of the Indian Penal Code with the result that Magistrates acting in certain capacities under the Code e.g. when holding inquiries obtain no protection. We have therefore proposed a re-draft of sub-sec. (1) of s. 197 to meet these difficulties. We have confined the operation of the section to public servants removable by a Local Government or some higher authority and have provided that the sanction required for a prosecution will be the sanction of the authority which has power to remove. Mr Chaudhary would prefer to leave s. 197 unaltered save in so far as the Bill proposed to amend it, he considers that the amendment proposed by us would enhance the difficulty of obtaining sanction.

Notes.—1 Scope of this section.—The section does not apply unless the person accused is (1) a Judge or public servant 3 C. 758, and (2) not removable from office without the sanction of Government 4 B. 357 and 479, and 12 M. L. T. 331 = 13 Cr. L. J. 770, and (3) the act constituting the offence was done by the accused while acting as Judge or public servant. The section applies to those cases only in which the offence charged is an offence which can be committed by a public servant only i.e. in which his being a public servant is a necessary element in the offence 26 C. 852, 2 Bom. L. R. 1079, 32 M. 255, 30 G. 927, 23 M. 540, 2 B. 481. For the distinction between ss. 197 and 195 see 2 L.R. 303, where it is held that a District Judge ordering sanction against a Sub-Judge under s. 197 act, in his executive capacity and such order cannot be revised by the High Court.

I—JUDGE AND PUBLIC SERVANTS

2 Who are public servants?—See ss. 19 and 21 I. P. C. and s. 4 (2) which make these definitions applicable—(1) Committing Magistrate—Though all Judges are public servants all public servants are obviously not Judges e.g. a committing Magistrate inquiring into a case triable exclusively by a Court of Session though not a Judge would be protected by this section as a public servant, 6 M. H. C. Appz. XXI (2) Volunteer

* Section 96 B has been added by the Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Act 1923.

† Section 197 was substituted by Act XXIII of 1924.

* The word "Magistrate" added by Act XXIII of 1923

In s 8 A. 201, Mr Justice STRAIGHT held, that any person, whether receiving pay or not, who chooses to take upon himself duties and responsibilities belonging to the position of a public servant, and performs those duties and accept those responsibilities and is recognized as filling the position of a public servant, must be recorded as such, e.g., a volunteer in a Tahsildar's office (3) Every Manager under the Sindh Encumbered Estates Act s 35 of Act XX of 1896, is a public servant within the meaning of the I P C. As to Chairman of a Union Panchayat, see (1916) M. W. N. 384 = 17 Cr. L. J. 168.

3. Municipal Commissioner is a public servant.—A Municipal Commissioner appointed under Act XIII of 1884 (now Act XX of 1891), is a public servant, he not being removable from his office except by Government, therefore he cannot be prosecuted for any act done by him in his capacity as a Commissioner except with the sanction of Government, 14 P. R. 1890 followed 17 P. R. 1902. Similarly as regards a Municipal Chairman Weir I, 243. But a Chairman delegate is not so protected for acts done by him as such, even though he be also a Municipal Councillor, Weir II, 226.

4. Municipal Corporation not a public servant.—A Municipal Corporation is not a public servant within the meaning of this section, and may, therefore, be prosecuted under the Penal Code without the previous sanction of Government 3 C. 753 = 2 C. L. R. 520. A Corporation is liable to prosecution for nuisance under the Penal Code in the same way as any ordinary individual.—The Birmingham and Gloucester Ry Co., 3 Q. B. Rep. 223, Scott 8 Q. B. Rep 547, The Great North of England Ry Co. 9 Q. B. Rep 315; Weir I, 143.

5. Sanction not necessary where public servant removable from office without sanction of Government.

(i) Police Patel in Bombay—The prosecution of a Police patel for an offence committed by him in his official capacity as such needs no previous sanction. The provisions of the Bombay Act VIII of 1867 (Village Police Act), s 9, as amended by Act I of 1876, render a Police patel removable from his office without the previous sanction of Government, and, therefore, this section does not apply, 4 B. 357 and 479; Ratanlal 147.

(ii) Sub-Overseer in Madras—No sanction is necessary to prosecute a Sub-Overseer in the Madras Presidency, for a charge of bribery against him inasmuch as under the rules of the Public Works Department he can be appointed or removed by the Superintending Engineer without reference to the Local Government 12 M. L. T. 331 = 13 Cr. L. J. 770.

(iii) Member of Union Committee—The sanction of the Local Government under s 187 of the Code is not necessary for the prosecution of the Chairman of a Union Committee who is not removable from his office only by the Local Government, 29 C. W. N. 650.

6. Effect of delegation by Government of the power of removal.—Where a public servant is one not removable from his office without the sanction of the Government the fact that the power of removal has been delegated to other authorities does not remove the public servant from the category of persons who are not removable from office without the sanction of Government. The delegation by the Local Government of its power to a special officer only means that the Local Government performs that act itself through the medium of a particular officer as the channel through which it is done and it is an ordinary case of quifacit per alium ficti per se 1916 M. W. N. 384 = 17 Cr. L. J. 168.

7. Village Headman in Madras—A Village Magistrate whose authority and position as Village Magistrate were made use of in order to constrain a person to give a bribe was held not liable to be prosecuted for extortion without sanction under this section Weir II, 221. But it was held that no such sanction was necessary when the Village Magistrate was alleged to have caused hurt in trying to prevent an altercation because in so doing he was preventing an offence and not trying an offender. Illustration (d) to s 19 I P C., makes it clear that in such capacity he was not a Judge and since he is not a public servant within the meaning of this section no sanction is necessary. A Village Magistrate exercising jurisdiction and trying an offender under Regulation IX of 1816 would be a Judge, 23 M. 560. So also when a Village Magistrate is charged for extortion no sanction is necessary 6 M. L. T. 126, and when a Village Magistrate fabricates a record, of a Criminal Case, sanction is not required for his prosecution, for a Magistrate who fabricates a record in which he figures as a Judge cannot properly be said to be acting as a Judge when he does so, 32 M. 235.

7-A.—A member of a Village Panchayat in Madras.—A member of a Village Panchayat established under Act II of 1920 is a Judge and complainant of an offence alleged to have been committed by him either under s 171 E or s 161, I P C., requires sanction. In the former case under s 196, Cr P C., as amended by s 3 of Act XXIX of 1920 in the latter with reference to s 199 Cr P Code, 42 M. L. J. 139.

II.—OFFENCES FOR WHICH SANCTION IS REQUIRED.

8. Sanction to prosecute a Judge for words uttered or acts done on the Bench.—Where a Judge was charged with using defamatory language to a witness during the trial of a suit it was held that under s 197 the complaint could not be entertained by a Magistrate without sanction, 9 M. 439, followed in 9 P. L. R. 1905, where it was held that sanction was required where a Munsiff was charged under ss 342, 500 and 506, I P C. See also 29 P. R. 1904; 17 P. R. 1902. But the Madras case was dissented from in 26 C. 852 and 25 M. 18. In the Calcutta case it was held that sanction under this section is necessary in those cases only in which the offence charged is an offence which can be committed by a public servant only, i.e., in which his being a public servant is a necessary element in the offence. The language of the section 'is accused as such Judge,' etc seems sufficient to indicate that the offence charged must involve, as one of its elements, that it was committed by a person filling that character, and it is not apparent why, in cases outside that category, the sanction provided by the section should be required. This case was followed in 2 Bom. L. R. 1079, where it was held that no sanction was required to prosecute a Magistrate for having used abusive language to another Magistrate when both were sitting together as a Bench. See 2 B. 431. A Magistrate who fabricates a record in which he figures as Judge cannot be said to be acting as a Judge when he fabricates the record and no sanction is necessary, 32 M. 255.

9. Section extends only to offences which could be committed by public servants alone.—This section extends to all acts ostensibly done by a public servant, i.e., to acts which would have no special significance except as acts done by a public servant, 2 B. 481; 7 B. H. C. R. Cr. C. 61; 26 C. 852, 9 M. 439 and 8 P. R. 1879. Thus, sanction under this section is not necessary to prosecute a public servant, when the offence charged does not involve as one of its necessary elements that it can be committed only by a person filling that character, 25 M. 18; 26 C. 852, where a Village Magistrate is charged with extortion 6 M. L. T. 17 and 32 M. 255. Again where the Administrator General of Bengal was appointed by the High Court administrator to a particular estate and in his capacity as such administrator was charged with an offence under the Calcutta Municipal Act, held that the fact that he was administrator to that particular estate was a mere accident and that no sanction under this section was necessary as he was not charged as a public servant with any offence committed in his public capacity, 30 C. 927 where 26 C. 852 is followed. Quare whether this section is limited in its application to Chap IX of the I P C. alone? In all cases where a public servant purports to exercise his function as such he must be deemed to be acting 'as such public servant. The test is not whether the particular act is within his power but whether he acted in the capacity with which he is clothed. Of course if he simply uses his position as a public servant to commit an illegal act he will not be acting as such public servant, 17 Cr. L. J. 894 (M.). Where a Magistrate abuses or defames a witness or a legal practitioner appearing before him it cannot be said that he is acting in a judicial capacity. But if in order to examine a witness he detains him until the time of his re-examination comes or until he makes inquiries as to the failure of the witness to appear before him his acts are purely judicial and it any offence is committed by the Magistrate exceeding his powers in doing those acts, sanction should be necessary under s 197, 25 C. W. N. 936.

10. No sanction necessary for offences not covered by this section.—Where a complaint charged a person who was one of the public servants mentioned in this section with committing acts which, if committed by a private individual would have constituted the offence of extortion, held (in the particular case) that it was not illegal to treat the charge as a charge of extortion, and to proceed with the trial without sanction for the prosecution 7 B. H. C. R. Ca. 61 followed in 2 B. 481, and approved in 26 C. 852, but want of sanction for an offence covered by the section vitiates the trial, 31 M. 80. See also 19 B. 51; Note 19, 9 B. 288 and Note 17.

10-A. Is sanction necessary for offence of criminal breach of trust by a public servant.—The question before the Court in 1916 M. W. N. 384 = 17 Cr. L. J. 188 = 33 In. Ca. 643 was 'whether an offence is committed by a person as a public servant when the statute says that he commits the same offence as any other person but the property in respect of which he commits criminal breach of trust comes into his hands as a public servant. The public servant was charged with an offence under s. 409, I P C. Courts-Trotter, J., held after considerable hesitation that sanction was not necessary. 'I think on the whole that even if it is a necessary averment to say that he was a public servant and not a mere matter of proof, nevertheless the offence is the offence of criminal breach of trust, and that it is not an offence which is committed by him in his capacity of public servant as such, his capacity of public servant being only that which puts him, so to speak, in a position in which such an offence can be committed.'

11. Conviction for abetment when sanction is given for substantive offence only.—The omission from this section of a provision similar to s. 195 (3) does not necessarily suggest that separate sanction for an abetment is necessary when sanction for the substantive offence has been granted. By virtue of s. 230 when the conviction for an abetment of an offence is based on the same facts in respect of which sanction for the substantive offence has been granted no fresh sanction is necessary from the abetment, 30 C. 1905.

III.—SANCTIONING AUTHORITY IN FORM OF SANCTION.

12. Sanctioning authority as regards Village Headmen, Police Inspectors, etc., in Madras.—The power of sanctioning prosecution of heads of villages in their capacity as Village Munsiffs as well as in their magisterial capacity is vested in the District Magistrate (G O No 1886-J, dated 9th October, 1874). Similarly the power of sanctioning the prosecution of Subordinate Magistrates, Tahsildars and Deputy Tahsildars in their magisterial and revenue capacities is delegated to the Board of Revenue (G O No 1281 J, dated 29th June, 1891) while in regard to all other classes of Magistrate the like power is reserved to the Governor in Council (Fort St George Gazette, 1873, p 1503).

Inspectors of Police are public servants not removable from office without the order of Government and the power of sanctioning under this section their prosecution is given to the Inspector General of Police and to the District Magistrate (G O No 1085, Judicial, dated 8th June, 1874, and G O No 1365, Judicial, dated 25th July, 1874 See Mad Pol Man Vol I, p. 175). The like power as regards Registrars and Sub-Registrars is vested in the Inspector-General of Registration, Mad. Jur. 31.

12-A. Meaning of 'empowered in this behalf.'—The words 'empowered in this behalf' mean empowered to give sanction for prosecution and not empowered to order his removal, 1916 M W. N. 384 = 37 Cr. L. J. 168.

13. Sanction against kulkarni may be given by mamlatdar or patel.—The sanction for the prosecution of a kulkarni for making a false report as a public servant may be given by the mamlatdar or by the patel to whom such kulkarni is subordinate The sanction of the Collector is not necessary, 7 B H. C. R. Ca. 64.

14. Power of superior Court or officer to sanction prosecution.—Every Court or officer to whom the Judge or other public servant is subordinate has implied authority unless such authority has been expressly limited by Government to sanction or direct a prosecution for an offence committed by such Judge or public servant in his capacity as such public servant, 7 M. H. C. R. 58. See 4 P. R. 1919 (Cr.).

15. No particular form in which sanction has to be given.—The Code does not prescribe any particular form for the sanction required by this section, as it does, eg., by sub-sec. (4) or s 185 Hence the omission to mention the place or time does not affect the validity of sanction, 27 M. 54 Where an Executive Engineer by a letter addressed to the Magistrate gave sanction to prosecute a first-grade Overseer (a public servant within the meaning of this section) held that the letter constituted a sufficient sanction for prosecution, Ratanlal 32; 30 C. 903, 20 Bom. L. R. 607.

16. Sanction to be in respect of specific offence.—Delegation of authority to sanction prosecution—The sanction required by this section must be granted with reference to some specific offence with which the accused is charged in his capacity as a public servant, and the intention of the Legislature clearly was that the authority empowered to grant the sanction should take the responsibility of deciding whether there were reasonable grounds for prosecuting such public servant for such offence Therefore, where an order was passed by the Board of Revenue sanctioning the prosecution of a Deputy Tahsildar by the Collector of the district for "breach or such of the charges set forth in the Deputy Collector's report as he thinks likely to stand investigation by a Criminal Court," held that it is not a legal sanction within the meaning of s 197, as the Board had no power to delegate its discretion, 16 M. 468 Unlike s 195 a general sanction is insufficient under this section. But the offence need not be specified with the same precision as is necessary in framing a charge, 13 C. W. N. 1062. The Local Government granted sanction for the prosecution of one of its servants of an offence under s. 161, I P C., or any other section of the Code that may be found to be applicable in respect of the offence briefly described in the schedules hereto annexed and in the schedule the facts were duly set out. It was contended that this section was too vague and indefinite and that the Local Government practically delegated its functions under s 197 to some other person which it had no power to do, held that the sanction was not vague or indefinite and that there was no delegation, 16 M. 468, distinguished All that the Local Government has done is to make it clear that it sanctions the prosecution of the petitioner in respect of certain specific acts committed by him that it considers that these acts are punishable under s 161, I P C., but that it leaves it open to the Court to convict him upon these facts of any other offence, in the opinion of the Court some other section of the I P C. is more relevant thereto than s. 161, 37 C. 447, which deals with a sanction under s. 196 is not in point The considerations which arise in a case to which s. 197 is applicable are essentially different from those considerations of policy which underlie the sanction under s 198 referred to in that case, 11 P. R. 1911 = 146 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 217.—No doubt the authority which gives the sanction must specify the offence but that does not mean that the particular section of the Penal Code should be mentioned. If the facts mentioned in the sanction point to a particular offence the terms of the section are complied with, 1916 M. W. N. 384 = 17 Cr. L. J. 168. See also 43 Bom. 167.

17. Notice to accused before sanction not necessary.—The sanction given by Government under this section cannot be held to be null and void for the reason that no notice was given to the accused to show cause why sanction should not be given. It is a matter left entirely to the discretion of Government whether such opportunity should be given to the person concerned before sanctioning his prosecution, 27 M. 54.

18. Preliminary inquiry before granting sanction is not a judicial proceeding.—There is no provision of law which authorizes the Government or its officer to whom the power of granting sanction is delegated to inform his mind by holding a judicial inquiry himself or by another, and there is no authority in him or the person acting for him to administer an oath, and the inquiry held by such person is merely departmental. Therefore a person giving false evidence such inquiry cannot be prosecuted for perjury under s 193 I. P. C., 23 M. 223.

IV.—ABSENCE OF SANCTION.

19. Want of sanction vitiates the trial.—The saving clause of s 537 will not avail where the previous sanction required under this section is wanting. Where, therefore, a Village Magistrate was convicted of an offence in his official capacity of Village Magistrate, without previous sanction being obtained under this section the conviction was set aside, 31 M. 80. Where a sanction is granted in general terms and is too vague, s 537 will not cure the defect, 15 M. 463; 9 B. 238; 9 P. L. R. 1905. In 42 B. 172 it is held that absence of sanction renders a commitment by a Magistrate illegal and s 537 will not cure such defect but in 35 M. L. J. 259 holds a contrary view to the effect that an order of commitment upon a complaint in respect of which sanction is necessary under ss 195 and 197 of the Code, but in respect of which no sanction was obtained, is not necessarily invalid and the provisions of ss 531 and 537 of the Code apply to such a case. But it is submitted that in view of the new amendment of s 537 by the omission of cl (b) to s 537 containing references to ss 195 and 476, the Legislature has adopted the Bombay view.

20. Commitment without previous sanction not necessarily invalid.—An European British subject being a public servant was committed for trial to the High Court without any previous sanction being obtained under s 197. No objection as to sanction was raised at the magisterial inquiry. Held, that the language of s 197 is so strong in requiring a previous sanction that if it be not previously obtained there is no jurisdiction, but the Judge, presiding in a Court of Session to which the prisoner had been committed has power in his discretion under s 532 to accept the commitment and proceed with the trial. 9 B. 283 at p. 296; followed in 22 B. 112. See Note 9 under s 196. But now see 25 M. 61 (P. G.) and Note above. See 20 Bom. L. R. 89.

21. Subsequent sanction is of no effect.—A sanction obtained subsequently, i.e., after commencement of the trial, is of no effect. 9 B. 238; 2 B. 431; 7 M. H. G. R. 58; 7 B. H. G. R. Cr. Ca. 61.

22. Inquiry without sanction is a departmental inquiry and not a "taking cognizance of an offence."—The Local Government having received petitions charging a Deputy Collector with bribery, forwarded them to the Commissioner, who sent them to the Collector for inquiry and report, with directions to take evidence. The Collector took evidence and reported to the Commissioner. The Commissioner then permitted the Deputy Collector to prosecute such petitioner for defamation by words spoken by him in reply to questions put by the District Magistrate in the so-called preliminary inquiry, and the accused was convicted under s 211, I. P. C. Held that on account of want of sanction under s 197, the District Magistrate's inquiry was not a "taking cognizance of an offence," but a mere departmental inquiry, 19 B. 51.

23. Taking sworn statement of complainant would not amount to "taking cognizance."—A Magistrate may receive a complaint against a public servant and if he thinks right make under s 202 a preliminary inquiry into the truth thereof. But he should not cause the attendance of the accused, or take any evidence against him until he has obtained the necessary sanction, 7 B. H. G. R. Cr. Ca. 61. The preliminary examination of the complainant is not such cognizance as is intended by this section. It is often necessary to examine the complainant before his complaint can be understood and the complaint must be understood before sanction can be given 7 M C R 182 at p 187, 3 G W N 17. A complaint against a public servant, eg, the Chairman of a Municipality must be dealt with in the same manner as any other complaint. The question of the applicability of s. 197 to the case should be postponed until after the complainant has been examined on oath in accordance with law 3 G W N 17

25. Non-compliance with terms of Government Order vacates jurisdiction—Where the Local Government directed by its sanction that the accused public servant should be prosecuted upon such charges as Mr C. might be prepared to prefer against him and there was nothing on the record to show nor did it otherwise appear that Mr C had preferred any charge against or taken any part in the prosecution of the accused public servant the High Court quashed the conviction of the accused as being without jurisdiction 8 B H C R Cr Ca 32. The person by whom the prosecution of such Judge or public servant is to be conducted cannot delegate his authority to anyone else unless specially authorized so to do. When the Government gives specific directions as to the person by whom and the manner in which the prosecution is to be conducted the Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a charge preferred otherwise than in accordance with such direction.

Y—SUB-SEC (2)—POWER OF GOVERNMENT AS TO PROSECUTION

25 Local Government can specify any Court for trial of public servant irrespective of jurisdiction—In 4 L B R 265 = 8 Cr L J 70, it was held that the power given in s 197 (2) of the Code overrides the general rule contained in s 177. As such the Local Government was entitled to specify any Court for the trial of a public servant charged with offences under ss 162 and 164 I P C committed within the jurisdiction of the Judicial Commissioner of Upper Burma and that a Magistrate within the jurisdiction of the Chief Court of Lower Burma who refused to receive a complaint presented by the Government Advocate Mandalay erred in holding that he had no power to receive the complaint.

26 Specifications of Court is not subject to control of High Court.—The power of Government to specify the Court before which the Judge or public servant shall be tried is not subject to the exercise of the general power of the High Court to transfer a criminal case—vide s 226 (7).

27 Validity of joint trial of a Judge and one not a public servant, when sanction specifies a particular Court—K A Subordinate Judge was charged under ss 161 and ¹⁶⁴/₁₀₉ I P C. and S not a public servant within the meaning of this section under s 164 I P C. abetted by K. The Local Government in the exercise of its power under this section specified the Sessions Court at Tellicherry as the Court which should try both the prisoners and as Mr Cox the permanent Judge was disqualified to try this case by reason of having taken a special interest in launching this prosecution the case was referred to the Judge of Tellicherry. By a subsequent Government Order of Tellicherry. On the conviction of both the prisoners the Government having designated the Sessions Court of Tellicherry as the Court which should try the case and an Additional Sessions Court being a Court entirely distinct from a Sessions Court Mr Irvine had no jurisdiction to try the case and (14) that Government had no power to specify the Court which should try S he being not one of the class of public servants referred to in this section. Held though there can be only one Sessions Court for each Sessions division there may be more than one Judge for each Sessions Court and that the appointment of Mr Irvine as an Additional Sessions Judge did not constitute an Additional Sessions Court and that as an Additional Sessions Judge has jurisdiction to try only such cases as the Government might refer to him under s 193 Mr Irvine as Additional Sessions Judge of the Court of Tellicherry had jurisdiction to try the cases against both K and S. Weir II, 215

YI—REVISION

28 Power of High Court to revise orders under this section—Having regard to s. 439 the power of the High Court Appellate and Revisional are co-extensive and s 19a does not confer on an Appellate Court any authority in respect of an order made by a Subordinate Court under this section 25 G 832. The High Court therefore refused to interfere under s 439 but affirmed its power of interference with orders of Subordinate Courts made under this section under s. 15 of the Charter Act

Prosecution for

famation and offences against morality

198. No Court shall take cognizance of an offence falling under Chap XIX or Chap XXI of the Indian Penal Code or under sections 493 to 496 (both inclusive) of the same Code except upon a complaint made by some person aggrieved by such offence

* Provided that where the person so aggrieved is a woman who according to the customs and manners of the country, ought not to be compelled to appear in public or where such person is under the age of eighteen years or is an idiot or lunatic or is from sickness or infirmity unable to make a complaint some other person may, with the leave of the Court make a complaint on his or her behalf

Notes.—1 Chap. XIX—Of Criminal Breaches of Contracts of Service Chap. XXI—Of Defamation Sections 493—496 relate to offences against marriage

2. Taking cognizance of an offence mentioned in the section without a complaint is illegal—for definition of 'complaint' see s. 4 (b) and Notes thereto and see Notes to s. 190 A charge of defamation not contained in the complaint presented to the Magistrate but added subsequently by the Magistrate upon statements made by the complainant in his examination under s. 200 (whether of his own accord or in consequence of suggestions from the Magistrate) is not a legal complaint made by an aggrieved person within the meaning of s. 4 (A) and this section so as to enable the Magistrate to take cognizance of the offence 10 A 39, 5 A 233.

not prima facie amount to defamation and a Magistrate without a complaint as is required by s. 198 commits material thereon a criminal prosecution and the High Court can interfere 3 P W R 1909 = 9 Cr L J 154. A Criminal Court is not competent to amend or alter a complaint under s. 501 I P C. into one under s. 500 The two offences are distinct and a Court cannot take cognizance of an offence under Chapter XXI I P C. except upon complaint by a person aggrieved of such offence 18 P R 1889 See the new amendment in the proviso authorizing some other person to complain on behalf of a woman or child.

(i) Substance of the complaint must be looked to—A complaint was made to the Magistrate under s. 211 that the accused had made a false charge against him (the complainant) of poisoning his daughter in law with a view to injure his reputation but the Magistrate dealt with it under s. 500 and framed a charge under the latter section to which the accused pleaded and put in his defence and called witnesses and eventually appealed against conviction. Held that looking to the substance of the complaint made to the Magistrate it could not be affirmed that there had been in the action of the Magistrate any violation of the rule laid down by this section 24 P R 1884. See also 8 P R 1891 It is not necessary that a complainant should state precisely the section of the Code under which the accused shall be charged. It is sufficient if the complainant lays before the Magistrate facts which if proved would be sufficient to sustain a charge under any of the sections of the I P C. referred to in this section. It does not matter that the complainant originally charged the accused with an offence under some other section only 25 A 209 where 1 G L R. 528 is followed When the case is properly once before the Magistrate he may proceed against any person implicated Where in the course of proceedings before a Magistrate against a person of having taken away or kept complainant's wife it appeared from information obtained by the husband after the institution of such proceedings and communicated to the Magistrate that the wife had committed bigamy with another man and the Magistrate thereupon without fresh complaint by the husband against the wife made the latter an accused person and the husband proceeded to adduce evidence against her of the second marriage, on which she was committed for trial by the Magistrate. Held that the proceedings of the Magistrate were not irregular and such committal was perfectly good 1 C L R. 523. But see 5 A. 233; 29 C. 415; 10 A 39, 14 C. W N 275 and Note 3 to s. 199

In 8 Lah 375 it was held that it is sufficient for the complainant to state the true facts in his own language and it is for the Magistrate to apply the law to those facts Thus where in a complaint purporting to be made under ss. 193 and 211, I P C. The Magistrate after hearing the evidence framed a charge of defamation and convicted the petitioner under s. 500 I P C. Held that, provided the complainant personally satisfied the conditions of s. 198 of the Code the failure in his complaint to mention specifically an offence under s. 500

3. Abetment taking cognizance of without complaint bad.—A Magistrate who takes cognizance of an offence falling under s. 494 I P C. and any section of the Code under abetment must be held to take cognizance of an offence under s. 494 within the meaning of this section 4 P R. 1888

can be given, 7 M. C. R. 182 at p 187; 3 C. W. N. 17. A complaint against a public servant, e.g., the Chairman of a Municipality must be dealt with in the same manner as any other complaint. The question of the applicability of s. 197 to the case should be postponed until after the complainant has been examined on oath in accordance with law, 3 C. W. N. 17.

25. Non-compliance with terms of Government Order vacates jurisdiction.—Where the Local Government directed by its sanction that the accused public servant should be prosecuted upon such charges as Mr C might be prepared to prefer against him, and there was nothing on the record to show, nor did it otherwise appear that Mr C had preferred any charge against, or taken any part in the prosecution of the accused public servant, the High Court quashed the conviction of the accused as being without jurisdiction, 8 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 32. The person by whom the prosecution of such Judge or public servant is to be conducted, must not delegate his authority to anyone else, unless specially authorized so to do. When the Government gives specific directions as to the person by whom and the manner in which the prosecution is to be conducted, the Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a charge preferred otherwise than in accordance with such direction.

V.—SUB-SEC (2)—POWER OF GOVERNMENT AS TO PROSECUTION.

25. Local Government can specify any Court for trial of public servant irrespective of jurisdiction.—In 4 L. B. R. 265 = 8 Cr. L. J. 70, it was held that the power given in s. 197 (2) of the Code overrides the general rule contained in s. 177. As such the Local Government was entitled to specify any Court for the trial of a public servant, charged with offences under ss 162 and 164, I P C., committed within the jurisdiction of the Judicial Commissioner of Upper Burma and that a Magistrate within the jurisdiction of the Chief Court of Lower Burma who refused to receive a complaint presented by the Government Advocate, Mandalay, erred in holding that he had no power to receive the complaint.

26. Specifications of Court is not subject to control of High Court.—The power of Government to specify the Court before which the Judge or public servant shall be tried is not subject to the exercise of the general power of the High Court to transfer a criminal case—vide s. 526 (7).

27. Validity of joint trial of a Judge and one not a public servant, when sanction specifies a particular Court.—K a Subordinate Judge was charged under ss 161 and ^{164, 165} I P C., and S not a public servant within the meaning of this section under s. 164, I P C., abetted by K. The Local Government in the exercise of its power under this section, specified the Sessions Court at Tellicherry as the Court which should try both the prisoners and as Mr Cox, the permanent Judge, was disqualified to try this case by reason of having taken a special interest in launching this prosecution, Mr Irvine was appointed the Officiating Sessions Judge of Tellicherry. By a subsequent Government Order Mr Irvine was appointed Additional Sessions Judge of Tellicherry. On the conviction of both the prisoners, it was objected in appeal on behalf of S (i) that Government having designated the Sessions Court of Tellicherry as the Court which should try the case and an Additional Sessions Court being a Court entirely distinct from a Sessions Court, Mr Irvine had no jurisdiction to try the case, and (ii) that Government had no power to specify the Court which should try S he being not one of the class of public servants referred to in this section. Held, though there can be only one Sessions Court for each Sessions division there may be more than one Judge for each Sessions Court and that the appointment of Mr Irvine as an Additional Sessions Judge did not constitute an Additional Sessions Court and that as an Additional Sessions Judge has jurisdiction to try only such cases as the Government might refer to him under s. 193 Mr Irvine as Additional Sessions Judge of the Court of Tellicherry, had jurisdiction to try the cases against both K and S Weir II, 215.

VI—REVISION.

28. Power of High Court to revise orders under this section.—Having regard to s. 439 the powers of the High Court Appellate and Revisional are co-extensive and s. 195 does not confer on an Appellate Court any authority in respect of an order made by a Subordinate Court under this section, 26 C. 832. The High Court therefore refused to interfere under s. 439, but affirmed its power of interference with orders of Subordinate Courts made under this section under s. 15 of the Charter Act.

198. No Court shall take cognizance of an offence falling under Chap XIX or Chap XXI of the Indian Penal Code, or under sections 493 to 496 (both inclusive) of the same Code, except upon a complaint made by some person aggrieved by such offence

Notes.—1 Chap. XIX—Of Criminal Breaches of Contracts of Service Chap. XXI—Of Defamation Sections 493—496 relate to offences against marriage

2. Taking cognizance of an offence mentioned in the section without a complaint is illegal.—For definition of complaint see s. 4(b) and Notes thereto and see Notes to s. 190. A charge of defamation not contained in the complaint presented to the Magistrate but added subsequently by the Magistrate upon statements made by the complainant in his examination under s. 200 (whether of his own record or in consequence of suggestions from the Magistrate) is not a legal complaint made by an aggrieved person within the meaning of s. 4(A) and this section so as to enable the Magistrate to take cognizance of the offence 10 A 39; 5 A 233.

not prima facie amount to defamation and a Magistrate without a complaint as is required by s. 198 commits material thereon a criminal prosecution and the High Court can. I Court is not competent to amend or alter a complaint under s. 501 I P C. into one under s. 500. The two offences are distinct and a Court cannot take cognizance of an offence under Chapter XXI I P C. except upon complaint by a person aggrieved of such offence 18 P R. 1889. See the new amendment in the proviso authorizing some other person to complain on behalf of a woman or child.

(i) Substance of the complaint must be looked to—A complaint was made to the Magistrate under s. 211 that the accused had made a false charge against him (the complainant) of poisoning his daughter in law with a view to injure his reputation but the Magistrate dealt with it under s. 500 and framed a charge under the latter section to which the accused pleaded and put in his defence and called witnesses and eventually

Magistrate any violation of the rule laid down by necessary that a complainant should state precisely the section of the Code under which the accused shall be charged. It is sufficient if the complainant lays before the Magistrate facts which if proved would be sufficient to sustain a charge under any of the sections of the I P C. referred to in this section. It does not matter that the complainant originally charged the accused with an offence under some other section only 25 A 209 where 1 C L R. 528 is followed. When the case is properly once before the Magistrate he may proceed against any person implicated. Where in the course of proceedings before a Magistrate against a person of having taken away or kept complainant's wife it appeared from information obtained by the husband after the institution of such proceedings and communicated to the Magistrate that the wife had committed bigamy with another man and the Magistrate thereupon without fresh complaint by the husband against the wife made the latter an accused person and the husband proceeded to adduce evidence against her of the second marriage on which she was committed for trial by the Magistrate. Held that the proceedings of the Magistrate were not irregular and such committal was perfectly good 1 C L R. 523. But see 5 A 233, 29 C 415; 10 A 39, 14 C W N 275 and Note 3 to s. 199.

In 6 Lab 375 it was held that it is sufficient for the complainant to state the true facts in his own language and it is for the Magistrate to apply the law to those facts. Thus where in a complaint purporting to be made under ss. 193 and 211 I P C. The Magistrate after hearing the evidence framed a charge of defamation and convicted the petitioner under s. 500 I P C. Held that provided the complainant personally satisfied the conditions of s. 198 of the Code the failure in his complaint to mention specifically an offence under s. 500 I P C. did not restrict the Magistrate from taking cognizance under that section.

3. Abetment taking cognizance of without complaint bad.—A Magistrate who takes cognizance of an offence falling under s. 494 I P C. and any section of the Code under abetment must be held to take cognizance of an offence under s. 494 within the meaning of this section 4 P R. 1838

5. Public servant complaining of defamation.—The following order has been passed by the Government of India in regard to a complaint by an officer of Government.

No officer of Government is permitted to have recourse to the Courts for vindication of his public acts or of his character as a public functionary from defamatory attacks upon it, as it is for the Government to decide in each case whether the institution of proceedings is necessary or expedient. The Local Government will decide whether the circumstances are such that the Government shall bear the costs of the proceedings civil or criminal, or leave the officer to institute the suit or prosecution at his own expense, and in the latter case it will also determine, in the event of the matter being decided by the Court in the officer's favour, whether he should be recouped by the Government the whole or any part of the costs of the action in connection with this subject (Government of India, 5th September, 1890). It may be added that all officers of Government have been forbidden, without the official consent in writing of the Local Government under whom they may serve, to communicate to the press any explanation or defence of their official conduct (Government of India, 20th May, 1900).

5. Who is a person aggrieved by defamation depends upon circumstances.—It is impossible to lay down any inflexible rule determining for every case whether the complainant is a person aggrieved by the offence alleged within the meaning of this section. It must be determined in each case according to its own circumstances whether the complainant can be said to be in a legal sense a person aggrieved. Where the complainant is the head of the family, his son a lunatic and the daughter in law is living under his protection and an allegation is made to the effect that she was taken away to her father's house and married to another person, the offence, if true, seriously affects his reputation and status in society. Hence the father in law is the person aggrieved within the meaning of this section and is competent to institute a complaint. Grievance referred to in the words "person aggrieved" in this section does not contemplate any fanciful sentimental grievance. It must be such a grievance that the law can appreciate, it must be a legal grievance and not a state prorogatio voluntas reason (per MUKERJEE, J.), 3 C. L. J. 38 = 3 Cr. L. J. 187 where 25 B 151 (F.B.) and 32 C 425 are referred to and 10 B. 340 explained, 1914 M. W. N. 351 = 15 Cr. L. J. 357. Where certain allegations in a newspaper against A and others found to be true as regards A though untrue as regards the others, held A was not a person aggrieved by the publication of the allegations, 1914 M. W. N. 351 = 15 Cr. L. J. 357. In cases of defamation, the words person aggrieved must be treated as equivalent with the expression 'person injured, the object of the section apparently being to limit the right of complaint to the person who suffered injury 1 Bur. B R. 617.

6. "Some person aggrieved" is not limited to the person defamed.—(i) Husband—When an imputation of unchastity is cast upon a married woman, living with her husband, prima facie her husband is

(ii) Son. As regards his capacity to institute criminal proceedings under s 499 I P C, the Allahabad High Court in 1893 A. W. N. 207 held that a son is not in the same position with respect to his mother as a husband is with respect to his wife and he cannot therefore lodge a complaint for the alleged defamation of his mother (iii) Brother. But this view was not accepted by the Calcutta High Court which remarked 'A Hindu lady living with her father, her brother or her son is a member of his family, and her reputation is bound up with the reputation or the person in whose house and under whose charge she is living. If any imputation is made against her character, that would affect as much the relative with whom she is living as herself, and therefore having regard to the circumstances and conditions under which people live in Bengal, the brother of a Hindu widow who was defamed and with whom she was living, was held to be an aggrieved person competent under this section to lodge a complaint 32 C. 425. In this case the Bombay I ul Bench view, in 25 B 151 was dissented from and 18 M. 250 distinguished (iv) Father-in-law. See 3 C L. J. 38 = 3 Cr. L. J. 187 noted above. See 5 Lah. 301; 22 M. L. J. 146.

7. Municipal President not person aggrieved when his subordinates have been defamed.—When certain newspaper-comments, alleged to be defamatory, were made against the Health Officer and his Subordinates who were all subordinate to the President of the Municipal Corporation and the latter officer lodged a complaint contending that he was responsible for the efficient discharge of their duties by his subordinate officers and that his credit had been injured held that assuming the statements were of the subordinate officers they were not defamatory of the complainant and that he was not therefore a person aggrieved within the meaning of this section though he was responsible for the efficient administration of the Health Department, 26 M. 43.

8. Person aggrieved in respect of bigamy is either the first or second husband.—In the case of an offence under s. 494 I P C., the husband of the woman is the person aggrieved 26 C. 338. The mother of a minor husband cannot be regarded as the person aggrieved. The husband alone can make such a complaint Wheir II, 231. See also 10 B. 340; 1 C. L. R. 523; 25 A. 132. The father of either of the husbands is not a person aggrieved, 32 A. 78; the father of the girl is not a person aggrieved 13 Cr. L. J. 204 (Mad). Brother of the husband is not a person aggrieved, 11 O. C. 143 = 7 Cr. L. J. 437. The brother of a female, whose wife is charged with having committed bigamy, is not 'a person aggrieved by such offence' within the meaning of this section 10 B. 340; 1 C. L. R. 523, nor is the brother of the second husband, 25 A. 132.

9. Abatement of prosecution for defamation on death of complainant.—Since the offence of defamation is compoundable without the permission of the Court before conviction, and even after conviction with the permission of the Appellate Court, the death of the complainant during the course of criminal proceedings for defamation has the effect of terminating those proceedings, 112 P. L. R. 1908 = 10 P. R. 1908 = 7 Cr. L. J. 200 at p. 353. See 31 C. 993 (F.B.).

10. No complaint for defamation would lie against a witness.—A witness cannot be prosecuted for defamation in respect of statements made by him in a judicial proceedings as they are privileged, nor can the witness be sued in tort 17 B. 127 and 573; 16 M. 335; 11 M. 477; 28 C. 794. But if a witness makes a statement irrelevant to the matter under inquiry or trial, maliciously and not in reply to a question put to him, he is not protected from prosecution for defamation, 32 C. 786.

199. No Court shall take cognizance of an offence under section 497 or section 498

Prosecution for adultery of the Indian Penal Code except upon a complaint made by the husband of the woman, or in his absence, 'a' made with the leave of the Court" by some person who had care of such woman on his behalf at the time when such offence was committed † "Provided that, where such husband is under the age of eighteen years, or is an idiot or lunatic, or is from sickness or infirmity unable to make a complaint, some other person may, with the leave of the Court, make a complaint on his behalf"

Note.—The Select Committee say "We note that the case of the absent husband with in view of the amendment proposed in the Bill be provided for twice. Under s. 199 of the Code as it stands any person who had care of the woman on behalf of the absent husband at the time when the offence was committed can make a complaint. Whereas under the proviso any other person may, with the leave of the Court make a complaint. We think this was probably an oversight. We have therefore removed the case of absence from the proviso and provided in the main section for the leave in the Court in the case where the husband is absent.

Notes.—1. S. 497, I P C., deals with adultery s. 498 I P C. provides punishment for enticing or taking away or detaining a married woman with criminal intent.

2. Complaint.—The word complaint in this section means a complaint as defined by s. 4 (A). See pp. 16-19. Therefore an information laid before the Police cannot be regarded as a sufficient complaint to warrant a conviction under s. 497 or s. 498, I P C. 30 C. 910 (F.B.). In this Full Bench case, KAMRINI, J., was of opinion that the word 'complaint' whenever it occurs in this Code means always complaint as defined in s. 4 (A). Where a statement was made to a Magistrate by husband solely with the object of intimidating his wife to return certain jewels without having recourse to criminal proceedings held that such a statement did not amount to a complaint within the meaning of s. 4 and was not sufficient to give a Court jurisdiction to take cognizance of an offence under s. 498, I P C. 18 Cr. L. J. 466 (M). See also 6 A. 96, 7 M. 553, 11 M. 443, 14 C. 707 and 23 M. 626. A report to the Police even of a cognizable case is not a complaint 17 O. P. L. R. 705, nor the report of a Police-officer, 32 P. R. 1910 = 12 Cr. L. J. 80. See also Notes to s. 199 43 M. L. J. 554.

3. Conviction under ss. 497, 498, I P C., without a specific complaint as required by this section illegal.—A conviction for an offence under s. 498 I P C., without a complaint by the person referred to in this section is illegal Wheir II, 235, 31 B. 218, 4 P. R. 1835, 32 P. R. 1910 = 12 Cr. L. J. 80; 20 O. 610 (F.B.). Courts are not empowered to take cognizance on a Police Report, 32 P. R. 1910 = 12 Cr. L. J. 80; U B R. (1912), (4th quarter), 155 = 14 Cr. L. J. 284.

* The words in bracketed were added by Act XVIII of 1923

† The proviso was added by Act XVIII of 1923.

(i) Is it necessary that the specific sections should be mentioned in the complaint or is it sufficient if the complaint mentions all the facts?—The complaint referred to in the section is a complaint by the husband of a woman charged with adultery under s. 498, I P C. The criminal charge of adultery is with law, 5 A. 233; 29 C. 415. The commencement of the inquiry no charge was formulated against accused under s. 498 I P C. On examination of complainant, who was the husband of the woman concerned, certain statements in his deposition disclosed an offence under s. 498, and the accused was acquitted on charges under ss. 366 and 379 but convicted of an offence under s. 498. Held, that the conviction must be set aside as the husband, being the aggrieved person, had not taken the initial steps by means of a complaint to a Magistrate, before the latter could take cognizance of the offence under s. 498 and had made no complaint to the Magistrate as required by law, 15 Bom. L. R. 141 = 13 Cr. L. J. 287. In 23 P. R. 1895, it was, however, held that it is quite sufficient for the husband to state the true facts in his complaint without mentioning the section or even mentioning a wrong section see also 25 A. 209; 1 C. L. R. 523.

(ii) Husband appearing as prosecution witness is not a compliance with the section—The circumstances that a husband appears as a witness for the prosecution in the case of rape against his wife cannot be regarded as amounting to the institution of complaint within the meaning of this section, 5 A. 233 followed in 27 M. 61; 10 A. 39; 29 C. 415, 1881 A. W. N. 112; 1882 A. W. N. 165. During the course of a trial for an offence under s. 366, I P C., the husband who was examined as a witness stated that he wished the accused should be prosecuted for committing adultery, held that such a statement was a complaint within the meaning of s. 4 (h) and 1 C. L. R. 523 and 23 A. 82 were not followed, 38 A. 276 = 14 A. L. J. 233 = 17 Cr. L. J. 72.

(iii) Does complaint include examination of complainant?—Where a complainant made a case against the accused specifying ss. 368, 397, 330 and 497, I P C., in his complaint, and when examined under s. 200 he said that the accused had kept his wife hidden and had enticed her away, the Magistrate found him guilty under s. 498, but the Sessions Judge on appeal quashed the conviction and sentence, holding that it was not enough that complainant's subsequent evidence disclosed an offence under s. 498 held, that the word "complaint" used in this section must be taken as including not only a written complaint, but also the examination of the complainant, at any rate prior to the issue of the process, Ratanlal 584. But in 14 Bom. L. R. 141 = 1 Bom. Cr. Ca. 83 = 13 Cr. L. J. 287, it was held that the statement by a husband in his deposition is not a complaint. It has also been doubted whether the formal assent of a husband to a charge of adultery added at the end of his deposition is a proper compliance with this section, 24 W. R. 16, 10 P. R. 1633. See Note to s. 180.

(iv) On a complaint under ss. 494 and 498, no jurisdiction to try under s. 497, I P C.—A complaint of an offence under ss. 494 and 498, I P C., does not involve a complaint of an offence under s. 497, I P C., and a Magistrate has under this section no jurisdiction to try the accused for an offence under s. 497, when the husband has complained only under ss. 494 and 498, Ratanlal 531; 14 C. W. N. 275. Similarly on a complaint under s. 497, I P C., the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to convict under s. 498, I P C., 12 C. W. N. 116; 18 P. R. 1873.

(v) On a complaint of rape, cannot convict of adultery—A person charged by the husband under s. 316, I P C., may if the evidence be such as to justify a conviction for a minor offence, and yet insufficient for a conviction for the graver offence, be convicted, it was formerly held, of an offence under s. 493, I P C. The intention of the law is to prevent Magistrates inquiring of their own motion into cases connected with marriage, unless the husband or other person authorized moves them to do so, 20 C. 483; 1 C. L. R. 523. But see 27 M. 61 which in exactly similar circumstances disapproved of this Calcutta case, following 5 A. 233 and 22 C. 1006 at p. 1010 where the earlier Calcutta Ruling is doubted, and 30 C. 910 where it is distinguished. If, therefore a husband brings a complaint of rape only, the accused cannot be tried and convicted of adultery, 29 C. 415, 31 B. 218; U. B. R. (1912), 4th quarter, p. 155, 14 Bom. L. R. 141 = 13 Cr. L. J. 287; 32 P. R. 1910 = 12 Cr. L. J. 60. Acquittal of an offence under s. 366 I P C., does not bar a subsequent trial for an offence under s. 498, I P C., which the earlier Court was not competent to try in the absence of a complaint by the husband, 15 Cr. L. J. 637 (B.). Where the complaint was one of theft only there cannot be a conviction under s. 498, I P C., without a complaint by the husband under this section, 2 P. R. 1918 (Cr.).

(vi) Adding of a fresh charge under s. 498 at the Sessions trial unwarranted—The accused was charged under s. 498, I P C., and convicted of an offence under s. 498, I P C., and convicted the accused on all Judge was not regular and the accused was materially prejudiced by the additional charge framed at that late stage. The conviction, therefore, under s. 498, I P C., was set aside and a fresh trial ordered on the other charges, 31 B. 218; 14 Bom. L. R. 141 = 1 Bom. Cr. Ca. 82 = 13 Cr. L. J. 287; 29 C. 415.

(vi) Does this section limit the power of the Appellate Court to alter the conviction?—See 25 A. 534; 1 W. R. 45, Note 2 (i) to s. 198 and Notes to s. 423

4. Charge of house-trespass with intent to commit adultery requires no complaint of husband—A charge of house-trespass with intent to commit adultery, may be inquired into without the husband's complaint, Weir I, 531; 2 P. R. 1877, per FITZPATRICK and LINDSAY, JJ (FLORDEV, J, dissenting) See contra 5 M. H. C. R. Appx. Y. Where the husband charged the accused with an offence under s. 457, I P C., alleging that the trespass was with intent to commit theft, but it was found at the trial that the intent was to commit adultery with complainant's wife, held the conviction under s. 457 could be sustained even though the husband had made no specific complaint of trespass with intent to commit an offence under s. 497, I P C. 23 A. 82; 19 A. 74.

5. Representation of minor husband—It was ruled prior to the 1882 Code that a minor husband can not be represented by another person for the purpose of instituting a prosecution for adultery, Weir II, 235. But now it seems but fair that the minor should be allowed to do so acting under the advice of his next friend, having regard to the fact that the section specially empowers some custodian of the wife on behalf of the husband to launch the prosecution in his absence.

6. Husband's death—abatement of prosecution—The death of the husband does not necessarily put an end to a prosecution for adultery. All that the law requires is that the prosecution should be instituted by the husband, 4 M. H. C. R. Appx. LV. See also 1 S. L. R. 72 = 8 Cr. L. J. 190.

7. Unwillingness of husband to proceed with the prosecution—Where the husband professed himself unwilling to proceed with the prosecution and the Assistant Sessions Judge thereupon ordered the accused to be discharged, the High Court declined to interfere, 5 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 27. But in similar circumstances it was held a Magistrate who had made out the order of committal cannot discharge, the High Court alone having the power to quash a committal under s. 215 4 A. 150. See s. 213 (2) which is new, as to cancelling a charge already framed.

8. Marriage must be strictly proved—In all prosecutions for adultery, under s. 497, I P C., the legal marriage of the woman with whom the adultery is said to have been committed, should be strictly proved. Neither the assertion of the complainant nor a general admission on the part of the accused is sufficient for this purpose—C P Cr. Cir No 13. Marriage should be strictly proved 7 C. W. N. 143 and there should be neither consent nor connivance on the part of the husband 1 P. R. 1874. Where the complainant had divorced his wife previous to making his complaint an order of acquittal under s. 498 was upheld 27 P. R. 1879.

9. Right of care-taker is limited to 'absence' of husband—The words 'in his absence' limit the right of the care-taker and therefore a complaint of the care-taker would not give jurisdiction unless the husband was absent. The absence must be from the place and where a complaint was by a nephew of the husband when the husband was bed ridden with paralysis held that the Court could not take cognizance. The Legislature has made no provision for the protection of the lunatic, paralytic or invalid husbands, and the word absence cannot be taken to include such cases, 3 S. L. R. 15 = 9 Cr. L. J. 450. A father in whose custody a minor wife is, may complain even if the husband stands by, 17 Cr. L. J. 383 (M).

10. Acquittal from want of a proper complaint is no bar to a fresh trial on proper complaint.—Brother of the husband alleging authority from husband instituted complaint under s. 498, I P C. After taking evidence the Magistrate acquitted the accused as the brother and no authority. On the husband instituting a complaint under s. 498 I P C., held that previous acquittal was no bar, 31 A. 317. See also 16 Cr. L. J. 637 (B).

11. Cases under ss. 497 and 498 how registered—The High Court of N W P has directed that cases under ss. 497 and 498 ought not to be registered as 'King Emperor v. Accused' but only as 'Private Complainant v. Accused'.—N-W P Gazette, 1879, p. 123

* 199-A.

Objection by lawful guardian to complaint by person other than person aggrieved shall before granting the application give him a reasonable opportunity of objecting to the grant ing thereof

When in any case falling under section 198 or section 199 the person on whose behalf the complaint is sought to be made is under the age of eighteen years or is a lunatic, and the person applying for leave has not been appointed or declared by competent authority to be the guardian of the person of the said minor or lunatic, and the Court is satisfied that there is a guardian so appointed or declared notice shall be given to such guardian, and the Court

CHAPTER XVI

OF COMPLAINTS TO MAGISTRATES

1. 200. A Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence on complaint shall at once examine the complainant upon oath and the substance of the examination shall be reduced to writing and shall be signed by the complainant and also by the Magistrate

Examination of complainant

Provided as follows —

(a) when the complaint is made in writing nothing herein contained shall be deemed to require a Magistrate to examine the complainant before transferring the case under s 192, § (aa) when the complaint is made in writing nothing herein contained shall be deemed to require the examination of a complainant in any case in which the complaint has been made by a Court or by a public servant acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duties

(b) where the Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate such examination may be on oath or not as the Magistrate in each case thinks fit and need not be reduced to writing, but the Magistrate may if he thinks fit before the matter of the complaint is brought before him require it to be reduced to writing,

(c) when the case has been transferred under s 192 and the Magistrate so transferring it has already examined the complainant the Magistrate to whom it is so transferred shall not be bound to re-examine the complainant

Notes —1 The proviso § (aa) to this section has been newly added to this section with a view to disengage with the examination of the complainant when the complaint is under s 476 (see Select Committee Report 1918).

2 Proceeding of Magistrates not empowered.—As to the effect of a Magistrate not empowered in that behalf erroneously and in good faith taking cognizance of an offence on a complaint under s 190 (1) cf (a) see s 529 (c).

3. Taking cognizance.—A Magistrate takes cognizance of a complaint under s 190 (1), (a) see Note 3 thereto. A Magistrate is bound to take cognizance see Note 16 under s. 140

4. Complaint.—For definition see s 4 (b) and for what is or is not a complaint see Notes 2—12 there under and Notes under Heading II under s 190. The provisions of this section and s. 203 do not apply to applications under s 552 for restoration of abducted females when no offence is alleged 4 Bom L. R. 809

5 Complainant—who may complain See Notes 3 and 14 under s. 190

(1) Complaint in state prosecution authorized under s 196—See 35 C. 141, 32 M. 3. Note 7 to s. 196 and Note II at p 9

* Added by Act XVIII of 1923

* The words "subject to the provisions of section 46" have been omitted by the Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Act 1923. Clause (aa) has been added by the Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Act 1924

6 Ordinarily complaint must be presented in person.—The words 'at once' clearly indicate that ordinarily a complaint must be presented in person. A complaint should never be accepted which is not signed by the complainant and is not preferred by a person duly authorized to prefer that specific complaint, 40 C. 92.

(i) Mukhtyar cannot present complaint—A complaint under ss. 408 and 409, I P. C., having been presented by the complainant's Mukhtyar instead of by the complainant himself who was not present in Court, held, that the Magistrate was justified in dismissing the complaint, as he had no opportunity of examining the complainant as required by this section, Ratanlal 623. But it is not necessary for a Magistrate receiving a Police report to treat the reporting office as a complainant, 2 L. B. R. 146.

(ii) Agent may present complaint—Where sanction to prosecute has been accorded to a particular person, the prosecution might be initiated either by his heir or by any person specially authorized, but, in the latter case, the Magistrate is bound to record the authority of the actual complainant, even though the Magistrate be a Presidency Magistrate to whom cl (b) of this section applies. No summons could lawfully issue on the accused until the complainant's authority had been exhibited and recorded, 32 C. 489. See also 8 C. W. N. 797.

7. Sections 200-203 must be strictly complied with.—Ss. 200-203 should be read together, 14 C. 141. The procedure laid down by these sections must be strictly complied with. See 11 A. L. J. 921 = 15 Cr. L. J. 21, 1885 A. W. N. 47; 10 M. L. T. 120 = 12 Cr. L. J. 463; 10 C. W. N. 773 = 3 Cr. L. J. 471; 30 C. 923; 8 C. W. N. 199; 8 C. W. N. 80; 17 Cr. L. J. 396, (C).

(i) Magistrate must deal with the complaint as provided by this Chapter and cannot refer to Police under s 156 (3).—On the presentation of a complaint the Magistrate has no option of either taking cognizance in the manner provided by this Chapter or of referring to the Police for investigation under s 156 (3). It is his duty to immediately proceed in the manner laid down in this Chapter (1911) 3 M. W. N. 74 = 10 M. L. T. 120 = 12 Cr. L. J. 463. The case in 30 C. 923, it was explained does not pronounce any opinion on the legality of the action in not proceeding as laid down by s 200 but merely considers the effect of his omission on the legality of orders subsequently passed under ss 200 and 476.

(ii) Cannot refer to a superior Magistrate for orders—A Magistrate who receives a complaint and examines the complainant must deal with it himself under s. 203 or s. 204, and cannot send it to the District Magistrate for orders, 40 C. W. N. 1085. Where a complaint against a Police-officer was preferred to a Deputy Magistrate who having examined the complainant, put the case up before the District Magistrate and the latter officer on the strength of a report from the District Superintendent of Police dismissed the complaint under s. 203, without even examining the complainant, held that the provisions of ss 201 and 202 not having been complied with and the complainant not being examined by the Magistrate who dismissed the complaint, the order of dismissal was wrong and illegal 9 C. W. N. 199 = 2 Cr. L. J. 51. See also 6 C. W. N. 843; 39 C. 1041.

(iii) Magistrates cannot decline jurisdiction and refuse to entertain complaint—A Magistrate cannot decline jurisdiction because the offence complained against is cognizable by the village headman, 7 M. H. C. R. Appx. XXXI = Wair, II 237. A Magistrate cannot refuse a summons to a complainant, even in a case in which the charge might have been made to the Police in the first instance, 14 W. R. 36. A complaint properly laid under the Indian Penal Code should be investigated even if the case be one in which a civil action will lie, 10 W. R. 40. But where a complaint is purely of a civil nature and discloses no offence, the Magistrate may refuse to entertain it. An order directing the petition of complaint to be filed se, to be shelved in the office is illegal, 16 W. R. 68.

8. Object of examination is to ascertain if there is a prima facie case.—The object of the provision is to prevent the issue of process in cases where the examination of the complainant would show that the complaint was clearly false, frivolous or veracious and that further proceedings would tend merely to harass unnecessarily an accused person and waste the time of the Court 11 P. R. 1911 = 146 P. L. R. 1911 = 13 Cr. L. J. 217; 10 A. L. J. 79 = 13 Cr. L. J. 704.

9. Examination of complainant how to be made.—A cross-examination of a complainant by a Magistrate taking cognizance of a case on the depositions recorded by another Magistrate is not a sufficient compliance with law to enable the Magistrate to deal with the case under s. 203, 30 C. 923. See 13 B. 600 as to whether a Magistrate can cross-examine a complainant. The prescribed mode of ascertaining what a complaint is, is to examine the complainant and reduce his examination to writing, Wair II, 237. Care should be taken in conducting examinations of complainants under this section to make the inquiry sufficiently full to enable the Magistrate to judge whether there are any grounds for proceeding—Bom C Cr. Cir., p 14 The examination of the complainant is not to be a mere form, but an intelligent inquiry into the subject matter of the complaint, carried far enough to enable the Magistrate to exercise his judgment as to whether there is or is not sufficient ground for proceeding, Wilkins 2.

In every case the complainant should be examined intelligently in such a manner as to enable the Magistrate to determine whether there is prima facie sufficient ground for proceeding. The indiscriminate issue of process almost as a matter of course encourages false, frivolous and vexatious complaints and results in serious hardship to a large portion of the persons accused, besides wasting the time of the Courts. Special caution should be used when several persons are accused at once and in cases where it appears that there is dispute between the complainant and the accused about a matter which should be decided by the Civil Courts. Magistrates should also bear in mind the provisions of s 90, I P C and apply them reasonably to the complainants before them, with reference to the position in life of the parties concerned and the habits of the class to which they belong. The law requires that the complainant shall be examined 'at once'. The practice of fixing a future date for the examination of a complainant is absolutely prohibited.—C P Cr. Cir., Part II, No 14

(i) Can complainant be examined on commission?—A commission cannot be issued for the examination of a complainant, inasmuch as s 503 relates to commissions for the examination of witnesses, and in the preliminary stage of proceeding a complainant is not a witness but a complainant, 10 P. R. 1896 Contra 42 C. 19, where it was held that the terms of s. 503 are very wide. They refer not only to an inquiry and a trial, but to any other proceeding. The section authorizes the examination of any witness and a complainant is certainly a witness.

(ii) Effect of omission to take the signature of the complainant.—The omission to take the signature of the complainant vitiates the record and cannot be cured by s 537, so that a conviction cannot be had under s. 193 I P C, in respect of two contradictory statements, one made under this section but not signed, and the other made while examined as a witness. 6 C. W. N 540

10. Complainant must be examined at once—Is attestation or complaint on oath sufficient? It is the Magistrate's duty at once to examine the complainant on oath and reduce the substance of that examination into writing. It is his duty to find out whether there is any matter which calls for investigation by a Criminal Court. 10 A. L. J. 79 = 13 C. L. J. 704. On presentation of a complaint the Magistrate must examine the complainant upon oath and reduce or cause to be reduced the substance of that examination to writing and that writing must be distinct from the complaint. Merely calling upon the complainant to attest the complaint on oath is not sufficient compliance with the law, 18 A. 221. In distinguishing the case in 9 A. 666, the High Court observed 'that the case was of an exceptional character. The complaint was made by an Englishman against an Englishman. The contents of the complaint, which was drawn up in English had evidently been drawn up with a great deal of care and not in the way in which complaints are so often prepared for the Courts of Magistrates. Except when the complaint, is in writing and he transfers the case under s. 182, the Magistrate taking cognizance of the offence is bound to examine the complainant, and then he can either issue a summons to the accused or order an inquiry under s. 202, or dismiss the complaint under s. 203. 13 C. 334. See also 6 Bom. L. R. 662; 35 M. 606. A Presidency Magistrate need examine the complaint, only when the complaint is oral and he transfers the case under s. 192, 2 P. R. 1912 = 11 P. L. R. 1912 = 12 Cr. L. J. 539. In 6 Bom. L. R. 662 it is stated that when a complaint is in writing and is sufficiently clear, it may frequently be a sufficient compliance with s. 200 if the Magistrate reads it over to the complainant and the complainant is on oath asked to subscribe it. It is only when the written complaint is obscure or vague, that the Magistrate is bound to examine the complainant at sufficient length for the purpose of clearly ascertaining the allegations on which the complaint is made.

11. Effect of omission to examine complainant—(i) Cannot dismiss complaint.—The examination of a complaint is not a matter of form, and when a Magistrate dismisses a complaint without making such examination himself, the omission is a material one and he does what he has no authority to do under the Code, U B R. (1910) 1. 79 = 12 Cr. L. J. 325. Where a Magistrate, before whom a complaint was laid, dismissed the complaint and sanctioned proceedings against the complainant under s. 182, I P C, without examining the complainant or the witnesses named by him but only on a comparison of the complaint and the papers connected with a complaint that had previously been made at a Police-station. Held that the proceedings were irregular and must be quashed, and the Magistrate should be directed to re-open the inquiry and examine the complainant, 4 C. L. R. 134. See also 17 W. R. 2. Dismissal of complaint without examination will be set aside 30 C. 923; 9 C. W. N. 199; 3 C. W. N. 17; 25 Bom. L. R. 183.

(ii) Cannot refer for inquiry and report under s 202.—See Note 10 to s 202. Unless a complainant is duly examined, inquiry and report under s 202 cannot be called for and if made, are made without jurisdiction and cannot form the basis of any further action 27 C. 921; 4 C. W. N. 303; 1900 A. W. N. 189; 2 P. R. 1912 = 11 P. L. R. 1912 = 12 Cr. L. J. 539.

(iii) Cannot issue process for appearance of accused.—Process issued to the accused without examining complainant may be set aside, 17 C. W. N. 443 = 14 Cr. L. J. 76. Where a Magistrate summoned the accused before examining the complainant, it was held that he had misconceived his duty in supposing that it was not his business to examine the complainant, 1884 W. R. 37; 4 M. H. C. R. 162. But where an accused person appears voluntarily before a Magistrate to answer a charge, the want of a complaint on oath, necessary for the issuing of a summons or warrant becomes immaterial, 8 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 29.

(iv) Calling for report from accused before examining complainant.—It is an irregular proceeding on the part of the Magistrate to call on the person complained against to submit a report as to the truth or otherwise of the allegations made against him, at any rate, this should not be done before the complainant has been examined, 3 C. W. N. 17; 9 A. 866. A presented a complaint to a District Magistrate against a first-class Magistrate for his having used certain offensive words during the course of an inquiry, which A alleged amounted to defamation. The District Magistrate expressing himself satisfied with the report of the first-class Magistrate rejected A's complaint without examining him. Held, that the action of the District Magistrate in calling for the report was not proper, and that in any case he ought to have heard the complainant and his witnesses before acting upon any statement made in the report by the person complained against, Ratanlal 934.

(v) No sanction can be granted for prosecution under s 211, I P C.—Where a complainant presented a petition to a Magistrate impugning the correctness of a report made by the Police regarding proceedings instituted by him at the thana, held the complaint to the Magistrate ought to have been dealt with under this section and the complainant examined, before any order can legally be made for the prosecution of the complainant under s 211 I P C., 33 C. 1; 10 C. W. N. 773 = 3 Cr. L. J. 471; see also 14 C. 707; 27 C. 921; 4 C. W. N. 305; 3 C. W. N. 234; 7 M. 292; 22 B. 596; 15 A. 336; 2 P. R. 1912 = 11 P. L. R. 1912 = 12 Cr. L. J. 539; 18 C. W. N. 93; 25 Bom. L. R. 183.

Where a complainant prefers a criminal charge before a Magistrate who neither examines him on oath nor takes down his statement in writing, he cannot be proceeded against under s 211 I P C. even if the charge turns out to be a false one 25 Bom. L. R. 490.

(vi) When omission amounts to mere irregularity.—Where a Tahsildar sent a Yadast to a Magistrate charging a person with an offence under s 174 I P C., it was held that the omission of the Magistrate to examine the Tahsildar was but an irregularity curable by s 537, 11 M. 443; 15 C. W. N. 55. Every Magistrate who takes cognizance of an offence upon complaint should as a matter of ordinary practice forthwith examine the complainant on oath and reduce the substance of his examination to writing and make the complainant sign the same. This is a very salutary provision of law and Magistrates should be careful strictly to observe it in every case. Where however, the complaint was preferred by a responsible public official was reduced to writing and signed by the said official and was accompanied with a formal sanction by the Local Government for the prosecution of one of its servants and the accused person was actually convicted, held the Magistrate's failure to examine the complainant on oath had not in any way prejudiced the accused or caused a failure or miscarriage of justice and that the irregularity had been covered by s 527 (a), (9 A. 668, 11 M. 443 and 63 P. R. 1901 followed) 11 P. R. 1911 = 146 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 217. Omission to examine complainant is a mere irregularity, 15 Cr. L. J. 649 (Blind), 13 A. L. J. 840. But in 43 M. L. J. 710 it is held that omission to examine the complainant under s. 200 is a serious irregularity justifying interference in revision by the High Court. But 46 C. 807 holds that a Police report in a non-cognizable case is either a complaint under s. 4 or a Police report within s. 190 (i) (d) and the Magistrate has jurisdiction to take cognizance of an offence under s. 211 of the I P C., disclosed therein (25 B. 150 and 32 M. 3 not followed). If it is a complaint the omission of the Magistrate to examine the Police-officer under s 200 is a mere irregularity not going to the root of his jurisdiction. Failure to examine the complainant was merely an irregularity covered by s 537 A as it did not occasion a miscarriage of justice or prejudice the accused in any manner, 4 Lab. 359 (11 P. R. 1911 followed).

12 Procedure after examination.—Having examined the complainant, the Magistrate must either (i) issue summons, s 204, or (ii) order inquiry under s 202, or (iii) dismiss the complaint under s 203, 13 C. 334, 12 B. 161; 16 C. W. N. 143 = 13 Cr. L. J. 125.

(i) Magistrate cannot refuse judicial inquiry.—A complainant is entitled to be examined on his complaint and if his case is found to be true, to have process against the accused. After having found the complaint to be true, the Magistrate cannot refuse judicial inquiry on the ground that there is no probability of conviction 29 C. 410; 13 C. 333. See Note 7 to s 203 and Note 16 to s 190.

13. When complaint suspicious, complainant may be warned.—When Magistrates have a suspicion that a charge is false and vexatious, but the suspicion is not strong enough to justify them in withholding process they may before directing issue of process or ordering a local inquiry, warn the complainant of the risk he runs of being prosecuted for a false complaint, or of being ordered to pay compensation to the accused by way of amends. Magistrates should always endeavour to avoid compelling a person to appear before them to answer a criminal charge, unless they have first satisfied themselves that there is reason for proceeding against such person, Oadh Cr. Dig. p 7.

14. Original complaint not to be returned.—It is irregular to endorse and return to a party his petition or complaint alleging an offence. The petitioner is only entitled to an authenticated copy of the Magistrate's order, on proper stamp, Weir II, 237.

15. Refusal to sign statement is punishable under s 180, 1 P C

16 Complaint and examination of complainant whether and when admissible in evidence.—A complaint though sworn to is a statement not made in presence of the accused and cannot be taken as evidence as against him 10 M. L. T. 806 = (1911) 2 M. W. N. 576 = 12 Cr. L. J. 555. A petition of complaint and the examination of complainant on oath taken under this section are admissible as dying declarations under s 32 clause (1) of the Evidence Act, and are not as such, matters required by law to be reduced to the form of a document within the meaning of s 91 of that Act so as to exclude parol evidence of their terms. The statement admissible in evidence when made in the absence of the accused is the oral statement of the deceased, and not the record of it and such oral statement must be proved by the person who recorded it or heard it made, 8 C. 211 and 6 C. W. N 72 followed in 36 C. 659.

17. No action lies for defamation in respect of statements made in complaint.—A statement contained in a complaint is absolutely privileged. If the complaint is false, the complainant may be prosecuted for preferring a false charge, but he cannot be convicted of defamation, 11 M. L. T. 431 = 13 Cr. L. J. 293; 39 C. 850. See also Illey v. Roney, 61 L. J. Q. B. 727, 36 M. 216 (F.B.).

201. (1) If the complaint has been made in writing to a Magistrate who is not competent to take cognizance of the case, he shall return the complaint for presentation to the proper Court with an endorsement to that effect

2) If the complaint has not been made in writing, such Magistrate shall direct the complainant to the proper Court

Notes.—1. Oral complaints.—Sub-sec. (2) which is new contemplates the presentation of oral complaints. The corresponding section of the 1882 Code dealt only with complaints in writing.

2. Competency of Magistrates.—The want of competency contemplated by this section may be due to (i) the Magistrate not being empowered under s. 190 or (ii) want of local jurisdiction, or (iii) want of previous sanction under s 132 or ss 195–199 or under some Special or Local law, or (iv) to the Magistrate not being qualified to try under Sch II, col. 8 or to commit for trial under s. 206 or (v) where the accused is an European British subject. A refusal to act for want of a proper sanction is no bar to a subsequent complaint with a proper sanction, 24 M. 337.

3. Procedure where Magistrate is not competent.—If on perusal of the petition of complaint the Magistrate finds he has no jurisdiction he is not bound to examine the complainant, and indeed he could not do so, but should return it, after making the endorsement required by this section when the complaint is in writing, Agra N. A. 1882 at p 318. If not competent to take cognizance the Magistrate should act immediately under this section without examining the complainant 10 C. W. N 1088.

Procedure by Magistrate not competent to take cognizance of the case

202. (1) Any Magistrate on receipt of a complaint of an offence of which he is authorized to take cognizance, or which has been transferred to him under section 192 may, if he thinks fit for reasons to be recorded in writing, postpone the issue of process for

Postponement for issue of process postpone the issue of process for compelling the attendance of the person complained against and either inquire into the case himself or, if he is a Magistrate other than a Magistrate of the third class direct an inquiry or investigation to be made by any Magistrate subordinate to him, or by a Police-officer or by such other person as he thinks fit for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or falsehood of the complaint

Provided that no such direction shall be made—

(a) unless the complainant has been examined on oath under the provisions of section 200 or

(b) where the complaint has been made by a Court under the provisions of this Code

2 (2) If any inquiry or investigation under this section is made by a person not being a Magistrate or a Police-officer, such person shall exercise all the powers conferred by this Code on an officer in charge of a Police-station except that he shall not have power to arrest without warrant.

†“(2A) Any Magistrate inquiring into a case under this section may, if he thinks fit, take evidence of witnesses on oath

(3) This section applies also to the Police in the town of Calcutta and Bombay

Note—Under the new amendment a Magistrate can act under s 202 though a case be transferred to him under s 192 (dealing with transfer of cases by Magistrates). The proviso under sub-clauses (a) and (b) is newly added. Clause (2 A) was newly inserted 46 C. 854 which was decided before the section was amended holds that it has been a long practice to refer complaints to Subordinate Magistrates for local inquiry and report. The words ‘direct a previous local investigation by any officer subordinate include a local investigation by a Subordinate Magistrate. The definitions of inquiry” and investigation in s 4 are not exhaustive and are expressed to be subject to the context. The present amendment clearly confers the power upon a Magistrate other than a Magistrate of the third class to direct an inquiry or investigation to be made by any Magistrate subordinate to him and therefore expressly adopts the view held in 46 C. 854. And the rulings in 38 C. 68 and 15 A. L. J. 642 holding to the contrary are no longer good law. (See Note 9 infra)

APPLICATION OF SECTION

1. Third-class Magistrates not competent to postpone process.—A Magistrate of the third class cannot postpone the issue of process even if he distrusts the truth of the complaint

5 Section applies only when Magistrate takes cognizance on complaint.—Magistrate cannot make enquiry without complaint—This section by its terms only applies to cases where there is a complaint which is expressly distinguished from information in s. 191 and further applies only to cases where the Magistrate sees reason to distrust the truth of the complaint and a Magistrate acting upon second-hand information cannot be said to be acting upon complaint, 25 P. R. 1833 Magistrate taking cognizance under s. 190 (c) is not competent to refer, 7 B. L. R. 75 = 14 Cr. L. J. 400 When there is no formal complaint before a Magistrate any inquiry made by him into the truth of any information received by him is not an investigation directed by law and has no legal character and is not in any sense a judicial proceeding. Therefore any person making a false statement on oath in such inquiry cannot be prosecuted for giving false evidence as the Magistrate had no more authority to administer an oath or compel his questions to be answered than a private individual, 15 P. R. 1894, cf 32 A. 30. See also 7 A. L. J. 618 = 11 Cr. L. J. 351. On receipt of a Police report of an offence under s 173, a Sub-divisional Magistrate directed another Subordinate Magistrate to investigate, the Subordinate Magistrate examined witnesses and made a report to the Sub-divisional Magistrate who thereupon directed the issue of summons, held the proceedings were wholly irregular. It was open to the Sub-divisional Magistrate to take cognizance of the case under s 190 (b), but he did not choose to do so and proceeded to make over the case for inquiry and report as though the matter he was dealing with was on a complaint under s 200. The proceedings before the Subordinate Magistrate were not in consonance with the provisions of the law, 40 C. 854; 17 C. W. N. 795 = 14 Cr. L. J. 425. So also where information was lodged with the Police who reported it to be false and a Magistrate on receipt of the Police report passed the order 'complainant to prove his case' and made over the case to another Magistrate who made an order under s 476, held, that such order was made without jurisdiction. 17 C. W. N. 824 = 14 Cr. L. J. 387.

* Sub-sections (1) and (2) were substituted for the original sub-sections by Act XLIII of 1923 s. 43

(i) No power to direct investigation when person discharged under s 253—The inquiry under this section should not be confounded with the inquiry under Chapter XVIII. This section applies only to the case of a complaint on which the Magistrate does not see fit to issue process. It is not competent to a Magistrate in virtue of this section to direct further inquiry to be made by the Police into a case in which the accused has been discharged under s 253, Weir II, 239.

(ii) No power to refer for inquiry in maintenance cases, s 488—A petition under s. 488 is not a case instituted on a complaint as defined in s 4 (h), and therefore the Magistrate to whom such a petition is preferred must inquire into it himself and has no power to refer it to a Subordinate Magistrate for inquiry and to dismiss it on his report, 29 P. R. 1905 = 90 P. L. R. 1905 = 2 Cr. L. J. 421 following 11 M. 199.

6. Complainant entitled to be believed and have process issued.—Every complainant is entitled to have the accused summoned unless the Magistrate who takes cognizance of the complaint does not believe it or has some doubts regarding its truth, 27 C. 798, U. B. R. (1910) 1. 73 = 12 Cr. L. J. 385. When a man files a complaint and supports it by his oath rendering himself liable to prosecution and imprisonment if it is false, he is entitled to be believed, unless there is some apparent reason for disbelieving him and he is entitled to have the persons against whom he complains, brought before the Court and tried, 40 C. 444. The Magistrate should start upon the right and healthy presumption that a person who has taken the trouble to come into Court and to take the further step of instituting a complaint is acting upon knowledge or information which he believes to be true. To start with the presumption that a complaint is false is not a sound method of procedure. Hence it is that when a Magistrate is not satisfied as to the truth of a complaint the law requires him to record his reasons for not being so satisfied 11 A. L. J. 754 = 14 Cr. L. J. 493. See also 29 C. 410.

7. Process may be postponed only when Magistrate is not satisfied as to the truth of the complaint.—Ordinarily after the examination of the complaint process shall issue. The Magistrate has no discretion to make a judicial inquiry. Such an inquiry can be held only when he, is not satisfied as to the truth of the complaint, 14 C. 141, 9 A. 85, 1900 A. W. N. 189. A Magistrate can send a case for inquiry by the Police under this section only when for reasons stated by him he distrusts the truth of the complaint. A circular issued by the District Magistrate that all cases against the Police should be sent for inquiry to the Superintendent of Police is illegal 20 M. 337.

8. Magistrate must record his reasons for distrusting the truth of the complaint.—The Magistrate is bound to state his reasons for not being satisfied, 27 C. 921; 14 C. 141; 1884 A. W. N. 47, 1902 A. W. N. 195, 6 B. L. R. 83 = 13 Cr. L. J. 749, 20 M. 337, 40 C. 41—The reasons so recorded will enable the Court of Revision to see whether proper discretion has been exercised 14 C. 141, 17 Cr. L. J. 396 (C).

(i) Reason for amendment—We have substituted the words is not satisfied as to the truth of a complaint for sees no reason to distrust the truth of a complaint, in sub-sec. (1) in order to give a little further latitude to the Magistrate's discretion.—See Com Rep

(ii) Failure to record reasons—The failure of a Magistrate having jurisdiction to act under this section, to record his reasons before ordering an inquiry is at most an irregularity, and unless it in fact occasions a failure of justice it can be no ground for setting aside his order of discharge under s 203 23 M. 546; Weir II, 244;

5 M. L. T. 79; 10 M. L. T. 120 = (1911) 2 M. W. N. 74 = 12 Cr. L. J. 463; 15 A. L. J. 642. But see 14 C. 141; 27 C. 921 and 40 C. 41. Where it was held that such a failure was not a mere irregularity as the provisions of the statute were imperative and were directly disobeyed. See Note above

9. Magistrate may 'inquire' or 'direct inquiry or investigation'—Magistrate not competent to adopt any other course. (i) Cannot call for and can for action. (ii) Cannot call for and can for action. (iii) Cannot call for and can for action.

section, if he is not satisfied as to the truth of the complaint, 11 A. L. J. 921 = 15 Cr. L. J. 21.

(ii) Can call upon the Subordinate Magistrate to make an inquiry other than a local investigation—Under the old section a Magistrate could not call upon a Subordinate Magistrate to make an inquiry other than a local investigation, but now under the present amendment a Magistrate other than a Magistrate of the third class may direct an inquiry by a Subordinate Magistrate. Therefore 38 C. 668 and 15 A. L. J. 642 holding the contrary view are no longer law (see Note above).

(iii) Cannot direct local investigation by a superior Magistrate—A Deputy Magistrate in charge of the District Magistrate's office at headquarters has no power as such, after taking cognizance of a complaint and examining the complainant on oath to send the case under this section for local investigation by the Subdivisional Officer to whom he is by law subordinate, nor dismiss the complaint, and to direct the prosecution of the complainant under s. 476 on the report and investigation by the latter, 39 C. 1041.

(iv) Cannot refer the matter for the orders of the District Magistrate—After the examination of the complainant a Subordinate Magistrate may either dismiss the complaint for good cause or direct any investigation under this section postponing the issue of process or immediately issue process for the attendance of the accused. He cannot suspend action and report the matter for the orders of the District Magistrate because that officer directed that he should do so whenever a complaint is made of a particular class or offence. Such a direction is illegal, 10 C. W. N. 1088 = 4 Cr. L. J. 213. But if he has not suspended his proceedings, but has proceeded either under this section or under s. 204 there seems to be no reason why he may not report to the District Magistrate so as to enable the latter either to withdraw the case for trial by himself or to transfer it to some other competent Magistrate for trial.

B-A. After receipt of result of the local investigation, cannot Magistrate hold another inquiry?—When a Magistrate has once acted under s. 202 and ordered an investigation by a person other than himself he is precluded from following the local investigation up by another inquiry. If there is ground for any further inquiry, it is better that process should issue against the accused and the evidence adduced in his presence, 11 A. L. J. 754 = 14 Cr. L. J. 493. But see 38 C. 68, Note 9 (ii).

10 Reference cannot be made before examination of complainant.—A complainant must be examined either by the Magistrate who receives the complaint or by some other Magistrate to whom the case might have been transferred before a report can be called for under this section. Ratanlal 363. Where therefore a report was called for before the examination of the complainant, held that the inquiry conducted by the Magistrate who was asked to report was irregular and made without jurisdiction and that no action could validly be taken upon such report 27 C. 921, see also 4 C. W. N. 305, 30 C. 923; 4 C. L. R. 134; 13 C. 334, 3 C. W. N. 17 and 9 C. W. N. 199, 2 P. R. 1912 = 11 P. L. R. 1912 = 12 Cr. L. J. 539; 8 S. L. R. 21 = 15 Cr. L. J. 662. When without examining the complainant, the Magistrate referred the case for Police investigation and on receipt of the report proceeded to act under s. 203 and the complainant asked for a judicial inquiry held that it could not be refused, 29 C. 410. Unless a complainant is duly examined, an inquiry and report under this section cannot be called for, and if made, are without jurisdiction and cannot form the basis of any further action, and a complainant, who was not examined cannot be prosecuted in respect of his complaint which was dismissed on a report called for under this section 2 P. R. 1912 = 11 P. L. R. 1912 = 12 Cr. L. J. 539.

(i) Examination by Subordinate Magistrate of no avail, when reference made by superior Magistrate—Where a superior Magistrate transferred to his own file a case pending on the file of a Magistrate subordinate to him after the complainant had been examined by the latter, and referred it to the Police for inquiry and report, without examining the complainant and recording his reasons for distrusting the truth of the complaint and on receipt of a report from the Police that the complaint was not bona fide, dismissed it, held, the order of dismissal was illegal for failure to follow the provisions of this and the next section, Weir II, 244.

11 Reference cannot be made after issue of process to accused—Once process has been issued against the accused the Magistrate cannot exercise the option of holding a preliminary inquiry. He must proceed with the trial. 6 S L R 83=13 Cr L J 749. When a Magistrate has accepted a complaint and issued process upon it and taken evidence for the complainant his successor cannot refer the case to the Police for inquiry. Such a procedure is contrary to the provisions of s. 350 B M 282. This section does not contemplate action being taken under it when the case for the prosecution has closed. 1900 A. W. N 189. A Magistrate discharging an accused under s. 253 cannot order further inquiry. Weir II, 239. The procedure prescribed by this section can only be adopted before a process issues compelling the attendance of a person complained against. A Magistrate who after issue of process and taking of evidence in a case calls upon another person to make inquiry and report acts distinctly in contravention of the procedure prescribed by law. When he acts upon that report which is not evidence and decides the case upon it, he in fact abdicates his judicial functions and instead of deciding the case himself upon evidence as the law requires him to do leaves it to another person not authorized by law to decide it. 1896 A. W. N 140. The previous inquiry provided for by this section before complaint is taken up ought not to be made after the accused has been brought before the Court under a warrant. 21 W. R. 44.

(1) District Magistrate cannot direct further inquiry after a Magistrate has taken cognizance and has issued process—Perils of the combination of executive and judicial functions in the same officer—A complaint was filed before a first-class Magistrate on behalf of the Collector as the head of the excise administration against S under s. 49 of the Excise Act XII of 1896. Process was duly issued under s. 204 without any inquiry under this section and proceedings under ss. 242 and 244 were also taken. Notwithstanding all this the Collector who was also the District Magistrate ordered the Police to make independent investigation in the case. On being asked by the Chief Court the District Magistrate explained that he acted as head of the excise administration. Held that the procedure of the District Magistrate as such or as a Collector was wholly illegal and ultra vires. Also when an illegal order is passed and action taken which involves matters coming within the purview of law and justice and within the scope of the authority of the Courts such authority cannot be ousted by the mere ipse dixit of the officer that he was not acting as a judicial officer but in his executive capacity and the High Court can interfere in such matters in revision. 4 P. R. 1905=7 Cr L J 202.

(2) Interference by District Magistrate illegal when Subordinate Magistrate has ordered issue of process—Where a Subordinate Magistrate has after examination of the complainant ordered process to issue the District Magistrate unless he thought it proper to remove the case to his own file under s. 528 has no power to interfere in the trial of the case and to pass an order (e.g., one directing a judicial inquiry by another Magistrate) in the case so as to postpone the trial. Quare even if the District Magistrate had withdrawn the case to his own file whether he could direct a judicial inquiry by any other Magistrate before the issue of process so as to postpone the trial because every complainant is entitled to have the accused summoned unless the Magistrate who takes cognizance of the complaint does not believe it or has some doubts regarding it, its trial. 27 C. 798. See also 27 C. 979, 4 C. W. N 242 and 30 C. 449, 15 A. L. J 842.

LOCAL INVESTIGATION

12 Magistrate must himself make inquiry and not refer without necessity—After a perfunctory examination of the complainant the Magistrate who took cognizance of the complaint had directed an investigation of the case (viz. a criminal breach of trust against a munim) by a Subordinate Magistrate. Knox J Held that such an order was illegal. The duty of making such an inquiry lies upon the Magistrate taking cognizance. The present was no case for a local investigation. There was no quarrel about boundaries or any matter of that kind and it is only a local investigation which the Magistrate after examining the complainant can pass on to some one else. 30 A. L. J 78=13 Cr L J 704. The Magistrate of a district who took cognizance of a complaint against a public officer made it over to a first-class Magistrate to make a local inquiry and then dispose of the case. The first-class Magistrate held the local inquiry examined the prosecution witnesses and passed an order dismissing the complaint and directed the prosecution of the complainant under s. 476 for an offence under s. 211 I. P. C. Held that the order of the District Magistrate before whom the complaint was laid directing the Subordinate Magistrate to whom the case was transferred to hold a local inquiry was bad inasmuch as the Code made no provision for such a course. 18 C. W. N 95=15 Cr L J 70. The Code does not permit a Magistrate to refer a complaint to another Magistrate for inquiry and report. 20 C. W. N 63. A Magistrate may inure to the case himself before directing a local investigation. A Magistrate taking cognizance cannot hold a further inquiry after receipt of the report of a local investigation.

11 A. L. R. 754 = 14 Cr. L. J. 493. The existence of a previous departmental inquiry exonerating accused from accusation which formed the subject of complaint is not a sufficient substitute for the personal inquiry or the local investigation contemplated by this section, 33 P. R. 1857.

12. Who may make investigation.—(i) Even a clerk—The investigation contemplated by this section may be made by any officer subordinate to the Magistrate, even though he be a clerk, but if the investigation is entrusted to a Subordinate Magistrate he can in conducting the investigation exercise all magisterial powers, including the power to administer an oath, 36 C. 72

(ii) Magistrate not competent to take cognizance of complaint—A Magistrate holding a local investigation under this section need not be competent to entertain the complaint which he is asked to investigate. Where the Magistrate who directs the investigation is competent to entertain it and dispose of the complaint on the evidence recorded at the local investigation there is no irregularity, and the complainant is not entitled to have all his witnesses examined by a Magistrate competent to take cognizance of the complaint, 5 C. W. N. 295. But if a District Magistrate to whom a complaint of an offence exclusively triable by a Court of Session is made, makes it over for inquiry to a second-class Magistrate before examining the complainant, such inquiry cannot be regarded as one made under this section, 4 C. W. N. 305.

another Magistrate of the first class to make inquiry under this section 2 P. R. 1912 = 11 P. L. R. 1912 = 12 Cr. L. J. 539. See also 39 C. 1041.

(iv) Directing Police-officer who is himself accused to inquire is illegal—If the accused be himself a Police-officer and as such subordinate to a Magistrate, it is not proper, and it was never contemplated, that the Magistrate should call for report from him for the purpose of ascertaining the truth of the complaint, 14 C. 141; 3 C. W. N. 17, 1884 A. W. N. 47. In such cases it is generally better that the inquiry should be prosecuted by a Magistrate, 20 M. 337, and he should arrive at a conclusion from evidence taken by himself 4 C. W. N. 221; 1901 A. W. N. 189. Where there is a complaint against an officer of the Police force, it is inadvisable to direct the Superintendent of Police to make a local investigation and to report as to the truth of the facts of the complaint 9 C. W. N. 199 = 2 Cr. L. J. 51

14 Indiscriminate use of Police agency for investigating complaints objectionable—It is an abuse of the power given by this section to refer petty cases of assault and the like to the Police for inquiry. The proper course for a Magistrate is to take action on the complaint at once unless it is manifestly false. There is abundance of serious work to occupy the time of the Police force without setting them to make preliminary inquiries into petty matters in which moreover they are under a strong temptation to make money out of the complaint 19 P. R. 1894. It is not a proper course for a Magistrate when a complaint is made before him of an offence of which he can take cognizance to refer the complainant to a Police-officer. He is bound to receive the complaint, and after examining the complainant to proceed according to law. A different course would foster abuses and defeat the purpose of law, which is to give to persons who have been injured an access to justice independent of Police 12 B. 151. Magistrates are cautioned against the indiscriminate use of Police agency for the purpose of ascertaining matters as to which a Magistrate is bound to form his own opinion upon evidence given in his presence. This caution is especially needful in respect of cases triable under Chapter XX and cases regarding offences not cognizable by the Police—Wilkins 108. The practice of referring trivial cases for Police investigation is objectionable on general grounds and tends to produce undesirable results in Police administration. It will be frequently found sufficient to limit the inquiry to the particular matters which have created distrust as to the truth of the complaint. When inquiry is found necessary, and the case is of a serious nature the Police should ordinarily be employed, but in trivial cases, unless there be some special reason for using a Police-officer one of the other modes of inquiry permitted by the section should be adopted.—Pun Cr. Chap XLI p 219. The employment of the Police to inquire into non-cognizable cases is open to much objection and should be discouraged. When however, it is necessary to employ the Police in such cases the Magistrate should mention the section under which the complaint seems to fall and should indicate clearly the particular point or points into which inquiry is needed.—Beng Pol Code p 570

15. Procedure in referring for investigation complaints of non-cognizable offences through Police.—In referring complaints of non-cognizable offences to the Police for investigation, Magistrates should adopt the following procedure —

(1) Before issue of orders to the Police to investigate any complaint, the complainant should be examined and the substance of his statement recorded on the back of his petition. (2) In no case should the original petition be made over to the Police. Should it appear necessary or advisable, for the proper understanding of the points which require local investigation, to communicate the terms of the petition to the Police, a copy of the petition should be sent. (3) The point or points requiring local inquiry should be definitely and specially stated in the order sent to the Police. (4) Only such complaints should be referred to the Police for investigation as the Magistrate considers cannot be properly decided without such inquiry, and he should in all cases, record on the original his reasons for ordering the inquiry. — Reg and Ord., N-W P, v 307

16 Magistrate making local investigation acts judicially and may administer oaths—Where a Magistrate after taking cognizance of a case on complaint sent it to another Magistrate who after inquiry directed the prosecution of the complainant under s. 476, held, that he was competent to do so as the proceeding conducted by him was a judicial proceeding where witnesses were examined, 36 C. 72. It is clear from the definition of 'Court in the Indian Evidence Act which includes all Magistrates and from s. 4 of the Oaths Act which authorizes all Courts to administer oaths that a Magistrate conducting a local investigation is competent to administer oaths to persons examined by him at such local investigation. As this local investigation is held by the Magistrate under authority of the law, i.e., s. 202, the oath was lawfully administered by him in the course of such investigation. Sub-sec (2) and the concluding portion of sub-sec. (1) make it clear that the local investigation if entrusted to a Magistrate is entrusted to him as a Magistrate subordinate to the Magistrate directing the local investigation and he can therefore exercise all the powers of a Magistrate including the power to administer on oath. Such proceeding is a judicial proceeding within the meaning of s. 476, 1 Cr. L. J. 118 (M). Contra—A preliminary investigation undertaken by a Court under this section is not a judicial proceeding and therefore a person cannot be prosecuted for an offence brought to the notice of the Court during the presence of the complainant who was allowed to suggest questions, sanction to prosecute a person for making a false statement under such circumstances was set aside as illegal, Weir II, 167.

17. Evidence need not be confined to complainant alone.—The provisions of the section do not confine evidence in the inquiry under it to that of the complainant, but leave it to the discretion of the Magistrate to examine such witnesses and make such inquiry as he thinks fit, Ratanlal 669. The investigating officer may examine the complainant and his witnesses and the defendant and his witnesses, if any, 33 C. 1282. Want of personal knowledge on the part of the complainant of the circumstances alleged in the complaint is not a sufficient reason for dismissing the complaint. The complainant should be allowed to bring evidence to prove them. But see 11 C. W. N. 170

18 Local investigation not intended to supersede a regular trial—The object of this section is to prevent the issue of process where there is some initial ground for doubting the truth of the complaint and where on a local investigation there appears no evidence to support it. A local investigation was not intended by the Legislature to supersede a regular trial. When it is found that there is evidence in support of the complainant's charge, the function of the officer making the local investigation is fulfilled. Process should then be issued and the truth or falsity of the evidence should be determined in a regular manner. The officer who conducts the local investigation cannot himself decide upon the truth or falsity of the complaint. U. B. R. (1910) 1, 73 = 12 Cr. L. J. 393.

19. Person complained against not an accused person—Has he any right or duty to appear during preliminary inquiry?—The Magistrate having jurisdiction to ascertain the truth of the complaint before issuing process under this section may, before issuing it, take any preliminary steps for finding out whether the complaint is true or not. He may call upon the person complained against to show cause why process should not issue against him and the person is at liberty to appear or not, whereas under a process issued under this section he is bound to appear, 6 Bom. L. R. 91. A Magistrate acts illegally when proceeding under s. 202 he calls for a report from an accused person even if that person, happens to be an officer subordinate to that Magistrate, 16 C. 161. The practice of conducting the preliminary inquiry in the person of the accused is to be highly condemned and the accused should not be allowed to cross-examine the complainant's witnesses 40 C. 444. A person complained against is not a party to the investigation held under s. 202 nor is he entitled to claim under s. 340 the right to be represented by a pleader at the investigation 33 C. 830; 17 Cr. L. J. 396 (C). A trial cannot be said to have commenced and a person complained against does not become an accused person until it has been decided to issue process against him under Chapter XVI of this Code. Section 340 does not hence entitle a person complained against to be represented by a pleader during the preliminary inquiry which may be held under s. 202 (1). If he chooses to attend the proceedings he may of course do so like any other member of the public but he has no locus standi as a party the purpose of the law being clearly to exclude him until sufficient ground

Magistrate refusing permission to cross-examine the complainant's witnesses gave cause to apprehend some bias in his mind against the person complained against held dismissing the application that there was no reason to think that the Magistrate was biased against the accused or that the latter has any plausible grounds for apprehending its existence 4 N. L. R. 81 = 8 Cr. L. J. 20. See also 32 C. 1083, 23 C. 493, 16 B. 681, 12 Cr. L. J. 307 (C) and also Note 2 to s. 204. See also 27 C. W. N. 196 where the Magistrate caused notice to be served upon a person named as an accused in a petition of complaint and directed him to show cause why process should not issue against him and on such cause being shown by a pleader on his behalf dismissed the complaint against him held that the procedure adopted was improper and was not in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure as laid down in ss. 202 and 203. An accused person has no locus standi to appear or to be represented by a lawyer before the issue of process against him.

20 Practice—permitting Advocates or Pleaders to watch on behalf of person complained against, during preliminary inquiry—Although a person with regard to whom a preliminary inquiry is held under this section is not by any rule of law entitled to intervene there is no reason why he should not in practice be admitted to watch the proceedings and assist the Court in making its preliminary investigation by allowing a duly authorized Advocate or Pleader of Court on his behalf to act as amicus curiae in the preliminary inquiry 12 Cr. L. J. 207 (C). The practice is strongly condemned in 40 C. 444.

31 Report of investigation forms part of the record—The report made and submitted by the Police-officer to whom the complaint has been referred for investigation forms part of the record of the case especially when the Magistrate dismisses the complaint under s. 203 on the result of such investigation 14 C. 141.

22 Magistrate making inquiry is not disqualified thereby from trying the case.—A Magistrate before whom a complaint is made and who before issuing process holds a preliminary inquiry under this section for the purpose of ascertaining its truth or falsehood and afterwards tries the case is not disqualified from trying the case. To such a case s. 558 is not applicable inasmuch as the Magistrate had not initiated the proceedings against the accused person nor taken an active part in the arrest or collection of evidence against such person 24 C. 167, 4 C. W. N. 604, see 20 C. 857 and 23 C. 328, as to circumstances under which he is disqualified from trying.

23. Magistrate holding inquiry under this section is disqualified from recording a confession.—A Magistrate holding an investigation under this section is not competent under s. 164 or s. 364 to record a confession made by an accused person. Consequently if recorded it is not admissible in evidence against him under s. 80 of the Evidence Act unless it is proved by some evidence to have been made as so recorded 32 C. 1083. But see 37 C. 467, where this case is distinguished and Note 4 to s. 164.

24. Date must be fixed for return of report.—In every case referred for inquiry a date should be fixed by the Magistrate by which the report or an explanation of the cause of delay is to reach him the complainant should be informed of this date. Beng. Pol. Code p. 370.

25. Statement by the person complained against.—A statement made during an inquiry under this section by a person against whom the complaint is made cannot be used in evidence against him as proving itself but the question whether such a statement could be proved in any way was left open 32 C. 1093.

26. Complaint kept pending for a long time.—Magistrates have no right to keep complaints without passing orders for several months such action is in the highest degree improper and shows want of proper understanding as to what their duties are 18 Cr. L. J. 271.

203. The Magistrate before whom a complaint is made, or to whom it has been transferred, may dismiss the complaint, if "after considering the statement on oath (if any) of the complainant and the result of any investigation or inquiry under s 202¹ there is in his judgment no sufficient ground for proceeding

In such case he shall briefly record his reasons for so doing

Notes —1. When resort may be had to this section.—This section may be resorted to (i) when after examination of the complainant the Magistrate has reason not to believe the truth of the complaint or (ii) after such examination the Magistrate entertains a reasonable doubt of such complaint, which doubt is confirmed by a proper report called for under s 202. In all other cases the complainant as soon as he has been examined is entitled to have the accused person brought before the Magistrate, 27 C. 921. See also U. B. R. (1910) I, 73 = 12 Cr. L. J. 385. A Magistrate may dismiss a complaint in one of the three following cases and refuse to issue process—(i) If he, upon the statement made by the complainant reduced to writing under s 200, finds that no offence has been committed, (ii) If he distrusts the statement made by the complainant and (iii) If he distrusts the complainant's statement but his distrust is not sufficiently strong to warrant him to act upon it he proceeds under s 202 and after considering the result of the investigation he finds no sufficient ground for proceeding, 14 C. 161, 13 B. 600.

2. Must strictly comply with the provisions of ss. 200 and 202.—A complaint was preferred to a Magistrate who without examining the complainant, sent it to the Police for inquiry, purporting to act under s 156 and on receipt of the Police report directed a Subordinate Magistrate under s. 159, to make a preliminary inquiry into the case. On receipt of the Subordinate Magistrate's report, the superior Magistrate not being satisfied with it, cross examined the complainant and some of his witnesses, examined three witnesses sent up by the Police and dismissing the complaint under this section, directed the prosecution of the complainant for an offence under s. 211, I P C, held that on the materials before him, the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to deal with the case or to dismiss it under this section, as there was no previous local investigation ordered under s 202 nor any examination of the complainant as directed by s 200. On receipt of the report of the preliminary inquiry under s 159 he should have dealt with the case in the same way as he would have dealt with it on receipt of a report from a Police-officer 30 G 923. See also 9 C. W. N. 199 = 2 Cr. L. J. 51; 33 C. 1, 2 P. R. 1912 = 11 P. L. R. 1912 = 12 Cr. L. J. 839 and 11 A. L. J. 921

3 Section does not apply when process has issued.—This section applies only to cases falling under Chapter XVI, where there has been no issue of process. When an accused person has been summoned to appear before a Magistrate, there has been a commencement of proceedings and a complaint cannot be dismissed under this section Ratanlal 544; 11 A. L. J. 451 = 14 Cr. L. J. 412.

COMPETENCY OF COURTS TO DISMISS COMPLAINTS.

4. Magistrate taking cognizance of complaint must deal with it unless it is withdrawn by superior authority.—The Magistrate to whom a complaint was preferred, examined some witnesses and recorded an order that he did not believe the complainant, but instead of dismissing the complaint submitted it to the District Magistrate. The District Magistrate however, directed the issue of summons and made over the case for disposal to another Magistrate held that the order of the original Magistrate submitting the case to the District Magistrate and the order of the latter Magistrate directing issue of summons were both illegal. The Magistrate who has power to receive the complaint has power to deal with it finally and it is his duty to do so. It is for him to dispose of it either by grant of process or by dismissing the complaint. The District Magistrate has no power to pass any order for the issue of process unless he first removes the case to his own file, 6 C. W. N. 843. See also 9 C. W. N. 199 and 10 C. W. N. 1086. The proper officer to issue a warrant is the officer who has heard the complaint made because it was he who can best exercise a discretion with regard to the prima facie merits of the complaint. When that officer has issued the warrant, the case ought to go on in due course according to the procedure prescribed by the Code, unless something occurs to show that the Magistrate who had issued the warrant had from some cause or another made a wrong exercise of his discretion. Where a District Magistrate removed a case from the file of the Subordinate Magistrate to his own after a complaint had been made and warrants issued by the Subordinate Magistrate upon the footing of the complaint and thereupon suspended the warrant and dismissed the complaint without hearing it in due course of procedure; held that it was an improper proceeding; he ought to have proceeded with the case from the stage at which it was when he removed it, 10 B. L. R. Appx. 26 = 19 W. R. 23.

5. Power of District Magistrate to dispose of case pending on the file of Sub-Magistrate.—A District Magistrate has no power to pass an order of dismissal under this section in a case which has been transferred to a Sub-Magistrate and which was at the time pending on the file of the latter, 3 C. W. N. 490. Where a superior Magistrate makes over a case to a Subordinate Magistrate for trial, the jurisdiction of the former Magistrate to do anything more in the case, ceases so long as the transfer is in existence. Until he formally withdraws the case, the only person who can deal with the case is the Subordinate Magistrate to whom the case has been made over, 13 W. R. 53; 27 C. 795; 27 C. 979; 30 C. 449; 4 C. W. N. 242. A District Magistrate has no power to transfer a case remanded for further inquiry by a Sessions Judge to a Deputy Magistrate, 11 C. W. N. 316 = 5 Cr. L. J. 112 followed in 8 C. L. J. 241 = 8 Cr. L. J. 386.

6. District Magistrate's jurisdiction to discharge accused.—A District Magistrate called for proceedings from a Subordinate Magistrate, and having perused them ordered the discharge of the accused, held, that if the Magistrate came to the conclusion that there was no case of criminal character made out against the accused he was not only competent, but was bound to order the discharge of the accused, 6 B. L. R. Appx. 6 = 14 W. R. 63.

7. Direction to submit particular classes of cases to the District Magistrate illegal.—A direction by a District Magistrate that as regards a particular class of cases, Subordinate Magistrate taking cognizance of them are not to pass orders under this or the next section, but to submit them to him is clearly illegal, 10 C. W. N. 1086 = 4 Cr. L. J. 213. See also 27 C. 798 and Note 11 to s. 202.

DUTY OF MAGISTRATES BEFORE DISMISSAL.

8. Must examine complainant.—See Notes 12 and 13 to s. 200. A Magistrate is bound to examine the complainant before dismissing the complaint, 3 B. L. R. App. Cr. 53. He cannot dismiss a complaint under this section until he has examined the complainant to see whether there is prima facie evidence of criminal offence. Until the Magistrate has examined the complainant, he is not in a position to exercise the discretionary power to issue process or dismiss the complaint, 4 M. H. C. R. 162. A Magistrate to whom the case is transferred cannot dismiss the complaint summarily, unless he has satisfied himself by examining the complainant that there is no sufficient ground to proceed, 3 C. W. N. 285. See also 30 C. 923 and 9 C. W. N. 199; 3 C. W. N. 17 and Note 12 (i) to s. 200. See also 26 Bom. L. R. 183 = 43 Bom. 360.

9. No examination necessary when complaint is in form of Police report.—A complaint made in the form of a Police report may be dismissed under this section without examining witnesses if the facts stated in the report constitute no offence. The complainant need not be examined because a Police report is expressly excluded from the definition of complaint in s. 4 (b), Weir II, 246. Procedure on receipt of Police report.—A Magistrate having before him a Police report submitted on him under s. 157 (b) may determine as he thinks expedient either (i) to take no further steps or (ii) to take cognizance of the offence under s. 190 (b) or (iii) proceed under this section, Weir II, 119.

10. Must afford opportunity to complainant to substantiate his complaint.—A complainant should be afforded an opportunity of being heard before any final order is passed on his complaint Ratanlal 363. A Magistrate must give an opportunity to the complainant to prove his case, 16 W. N. 143 = 13 Cr. L. J. 126. But a Magistrate disbelieving the story of the complainant is not bound to examine all his witnesses, but may proceed under this section on the investigation report, 6 C. W. N. 295. Where the complainant was willing to produce evidence and the Magistrate refused and ordered proceedings under s. 476, held that the proceeding was illegal and must be set aside, 21 M. L. J. 795 = (1911) 2 M. W. N. 9 = 10 M. L. T. 47 = 12 Cr. L. J. 323. It is improper for a Magistrate to dismiss a complaint while sitting in his private room and without giving the complainant or his pleader an opportunity of being heard, 10 C. W. N. 1036. Where on the acquittal of a co-accused, the other accused against whom process of arrest had been issued, surrendered before the Deputy Magistrate who tried the accused and he passes an order directing that the accused should not be proceeded against, held, that the order of the Deputy Magistrate was bad in law and should be set aside. The proper course for him was to send notice to the complainant, require him to proceed with the case and then dispose of it according to law, 12 C. W. N. 63. Where the Magistrate, after examining the complainant on oath, without either dismissing the complaint at once or issuing process, adjourned the case to another date, and on that date, he made certain inquiries and heard the pleaders of the accused who had appeared without process and looked into certain

17. What are proper grounds for dismissal—(i) Default of complainant to appear—Where a Magistrate called upon the complainant to produce proof ex parte to justify the issue of process and upon default dismissed the charge, the High Court declined to say that, as a matter of law, Magistrate acted illegally in dismissing the case 17 W. R. 2. In 13 B. 600, it was laid down that where the offence is a summons case and not a warrant case the Magistrate ought to proceed with the inquiry or trial in spite of the withdrawal of the complainant, if he finds the elements of an offence on the facts as set forth in the complaint. See also 23 C. 211 and Notes to ss. 247 and 259.

(ii) That the offender is unknown—Where the complaint discloses a cognizable offence against an unknown offender, the Magistrate must record under this section that there are in his judgment no sufficient grounds for proceeding. It will be also open to him to communicate with the Police recording the information supplied to him or to leave it to the complainant either to apply to the Police or take such other measures as he thinks proper for discovering the offender—1884 Pun Rec Cir No VIII, dated 21st June, 1884.

(iii) That the complaint is based upon evidence which is privileged and not allowed to be produced—Where a complaint is based on some official communication, oral or in writing, falling within the ss. 123, 124 or 125 of the Indian Evidence Act, and there is no likelihood of proving the communication by primary or direct evidence the Magistrate is justified in dismissing the complaint. No secondary evidence regarding the contents of written communications, made in official confidence is admissible, 4 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 205.

18 What are not proper grounds for dismissal—(i) Low caste of complainant is no ground—The fact that the complainant is of low caste and the accusation was theft of a goat, and that such an accusation against such a man was only a harm under s. 95, I P C and not an offence is no ground for dismissal of a complaint of defamation under this section, 3 W. R. 35.

(ii) Tendency to stir up religious ill feelings no ground—It is not competent to a Magistrate to refuse to entertain a complaint or to dismiss it summarily on the ground that if entertained it would encourage hundreds of similar complaints and would also stir up old religious ill feelings, Ratanlal 582.

(iii) Bad motive and conduct of complainant not legal ground for dismissal—The existence of malicious feeling on the part of complainant is not a legal ground for refusing to entertain a complaint of an offence, and that the circumstance, that the alleged offence was committed six years ago and would be difficult of proof that party feeling ran high at the place and that if the act of the accused were held criminal, a large part of the population of the district would soon be in jail do not justify such a refusal, Ratanlal 549. In exercising his discretion the Magistrate ought not to allow himself to be influenced by a consideration of the motive by which the complainant may have been actuated in moving in the matter, 13 B. 590 (F.B.). The motives by which complainants are actuated must necessarily be of the most varied description, any attempt to determine them would open out a very wide and speculative field of inquiry. The object of the Code is to provide a machinery for the punishment of offences against the substantive criminal law. Had it been intended that the Magistrate should only proceed to inquire into an alleged offence when the complainant's motives were such as he could approve of very different language would have been used 13 B. 590, p. 598 (F.B.). That the Magistrate considered the probable result of the proceeding undesirable or the motive and conduct of the complainant discreditable are not relevant considerations, 35 M. 812.

(iv) Libellous matter being a mere re-publication is no ground—The fact that the libellous publication was used as a mere re-publication of a charge already made and published for s. 499, I P C, if the complaint is is bound to take

(v) Want of personal knowledge by the complainant of the circumstances alleged by him is not a sufficient reason for dismissing a complaint but the complainant should be allowed to bring forward evidence to prove them, Ratanlal 589. But see cases noted under Note 7 to s. 200 supra.

(vi) Existence of civil remedy no ground—If upon any complaint duly made before a Magistrate it should appear to him that the act imputed amounts to an offence under the Indian Penal Code or any other penal law in force, and that there is a prima facie reason to suppose the accusation to be true, it is his duty to proceed to inquire into the matter, and to grant a more convenient or appropriate remedy, 8 W. R. 140 and 1 M. H. C. R. 66. In the last creation refused to proceed with a criminal charge pending a civil action in respect of the matter out of which the charge arose, but the High Court refused to grant a Mundamus to compel the bearing of the charge. In 10 P. W. R. 1913 = 33 P. L. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 128 it was observed that every discouragement should be given to the habit of rushing into the criminal Courts when a civil suit is pending.

(11) Bare denial of accused—Where certain statements in a book were complained of as defamatory of the complainant but the Magistrate dismissed the complaint on the bare denial of the accused that they referred to the complainant held directing further inquiry that the complainant must be given an opportunity to prove that the statements were intended to apply to the complainant (1911) 2 M W N 8 = 10 M L T. 95 = 12 Cr L J 497

(viii) No possibility of conviction—See 29 C 410

(ix) Withdrawal of a complaint in a warrant case—See s 248 and 14 C 141

(x) That the complainant is not personally injured or affected by the offence—Where the offence is one against public interest (bribery) a Magistrate acts wrongly in dismissing a complaint by reason of the absence of personal injury to the complainant and the fact of his being a mere instrument 13 B 600

(xi) Failure to pay process fee This section does not apply where process has been issued See s 204 (3) for dismissal of complaint where process fee has not been paid

(xii) Death of complainant—As there is no abatement of a criminal case on the death of a complainant it ought not to be dismissed See 16 C L J 713 (M) and Note 4 to s. 247

(xiii) Where on the conclusion of the hearing of a case—The Bench Magistrates directed the accused to be present on the day fixed for judgment and the accused having absented himself on that date the Bench Magistrates ordered the complainant to file process fee to secure the attendance of the accused on a subsequent default of prosecution and fixing a date for pronouncement without jurisdiction 23

A L J 304

IRREGULAR ORDERS THAT MAY OR MAY NOT AMOUNT TO DISMISSAL

19 Striking off case from Police file is not legal disposal—Where after a complaint was referred to the Police the Magistrate made an order directing that the complaint may be struck off the Police file held that such a direction was not a legal disposal of the complaint (1911) 2 M W N 74 = 10 M L T 120 = 12 Cr L J 468

20 Expending from list is not dismissal—A person made a complaint to the Police that the accused had enticed away his wife (non-cognizable offence) and committed theft a cognizable offence. The Police inquired into the latter offence only and finding no prima facie case made out reported to that effect to the Magistrate who directed that that offence be expunged from the list of reported offences held that under the circumstances there had been no dismissal of the complaint in respect of the former offence and that there was no bar to the complaint of that offence being taken up and proceeded with 5 B 405

21 Dismissing complaint for want of sanction under s 195 is not a proper disposal—This section refers to the procedure of a Magistrate who has taken cognizance of a case. Where therefore a complaint requiring sanction is made to a Magistrate without previous sanction obtained he must refuse to take cognizance of it and not dismiss it under this section. Where a Magistrate erroneously dismissed a complaint under this section while in fact it was dismissed for want of sanction held that the Magistrate was competent to re-entertain the complaint after sanction is got 24 M 337 This ruling is no longer of importance having regard to the Full Bench Ruling in 29 M 125

22 Refusal to issue process may amount to dismissal—On a complaint against several persons the Magistrate proceeded against only one and convicted him. Thereafter the complainant applied for processes against the others, but the application was refused. Held that such a refusal was to all intents and purposes an order under this section subject to the Sessions Judge's power of revision under s 437 29 C 457 2 C W N 290 See also 27 C 979 Where upon a complaint the Magistrate merely passed an order to the effect "enter mistake of law" and refused to issue processes held following 29 C 457 and 8 C W N 458 = 1 Cr L J 355 that the order amounted to dismissal 17 C W N 461 = 14 Cr L J 123, 4 C W N 242, 30 C 449, 32 C 449, 32 C 783 at p 790 But where one of the accused is tried for one offence only and is convicted of that offence because there has been a conviction on that complaint the complaint cannot be said to have been dismissed in regard to the other offences for which the accused was not tried at all nor with regard to the other accused mentioned in the complaint 27 C 658, 5 B 405 See 12 C W N 68, 24 M 136, 17 C W N 451 = 14 Cr L J 123

INCIDENTAL ORDERS THAT MAY BE PASSED ON DISMISSAL OF COMPLAINT

23 Is a Court dismissing a complaint competent to pass any order as to disposal of property?—Where a complaint is dismissed but it is not held that there has been any inquiry or trial in a

Magistrate's Court and therefore no order can be made under s 517, but where property has been seized by the Police in the investigation of a false complaint and the Magistrate is of opinion that the property was found under circumstances which create suspicion of the commission of an offence (in this case of fabricating false evidence against the accused) the Magistrate is competent under s. 523 to pass such order as he thinks fit respecting the disposal of the property and in this case an order of forfeiture of the property to the Government was upheld, 24 M. L. J. 1 = 14 Cr. L. J. 27.

24. Compensation of false and vexatious complaint cannot be awarded.—In cases in which the complaint is dismissed under this section without the issue of process to the accused, the fact that the latter was present with a pleader at the inquiry under s 202 would not enable the Court to award compensation to the accused under s. 200, 3 P. R. 1906 = 84 P. L. R. 1906 = 4 Cr. L. J. 36; 29 A. 137 and 14 P. R. 1897.

25. Prosecution for preferring false complaint.—So long as a complaint is not dismissed under this section, or otherwise judicially determined, no proceeding can be instituted under s 211, I, P. C., against the person lodging that complaint. The original complaint must be first disposed of according to law, before such proceedings can be taken, 3 C. W. N. 753. But where a Magistrate after receiving a complaint, examined the complainant and on receipt of an investigation report under s 202 dismissed the complaint under this section, it was held that there was a legal determination of the complaint for the purpose of a prosecution under s. 211, I P. C., 6 C. W. N. 293, 2 P. R. 1907 = 5 Cr. L. J. 491; 49 P. L. R. 1907 = 6 Cr. L. J. 233. But see 8 A. 38. See Notes to ss 195 and 200

COMPETENCY OF COURTS TO ENTERTAIN COMPLAINTS ONCE DISMISSED.

26. A Court is competent to take cognizance of complaint once dismissed under this section.—It was held by the majority of the Full Bench (SUBRAMANJA AIVAR AND DAVIES, JJ., dissenting) that a Court dismissing a complaint under this section is competent to rehear the complaint without any order for further inquiry by a superior tribunal under s. 437, 29 M. 126 (F.B.) following 25 C. 632 (F.B.), (Presidency Magistrates) and 29 C. 728 (F.B.) (Mofussil Magistrate), dissenting from 23 C. 933 and 24 C. 239; overruling 23 M. 255 and Weir II, 247 approving, 1 B. 84 and 9 A. 83, distinguishing to 22 A. 106 referring to 19 B. 732, 22 B. 949 and 23 M. 310. Quere (BEYSON, J.) whether it would not make any difference if the Magistrate seeking to revive the complaint be different from the Magistrate that originally acted under this section? Quere (MOORE, J.) whether the Full Bench view could be sustained if the case was one of discharge under s. 253 or s. 259

Where the accused is once discharged under s 203 of the Code it is open to the complainant to file another complaint on the same facts before another Magistrate, but it is incumbent on the complainant to inform the second Magistrate the dismissal of the first complaint, 27 Bom. L. R. 352

SUBRAMANJA AIVAR, J (DAVIES, J., concurring). If a person against whom a prima facie case has been made out, but who was acquitted after trial, is entitled to be protected then a person against whom the case is so weak as not to warrant his being put on his trial is a fortiori entitled to protection.

Held by WHITFIELD, J. in the Madras Full Bench Case that an order under this section is not a judgment within the meaning of s 369 and that the revisional powers conferred on Superior Courts cannot be regarded as in any way restricting the jurisdiction conferred on Magistrates to inquire into offences. See also 1 C. W. N. 49 and 5 C. W. N. 169; 4 M. L. T. 142 = 3 Cr. L. J. 203; 9 Bom. L. R. 250 = 5 Cr. L. J. 235; 18 C. W. N. 1211 = 15 Cr. L. J. 728. In 16 Cr. L. J. 713 (M.) a second complaint was made as the case instituted on the previous complaint was said to have abated by reason of the death of the complainant. The High Court dismissed the second complaint but directed the previous case to be restored to file and proceeded with. A complaint was filed by a woman charging the accused with certain offences one of which was that her daughter was wrongfully taken away by the accused. The complaint was dismissed. A second complaint was filed by the husband of the girl, the acts complained of being the same as in the complaint of the mother, although the offences suggested were different. Held that the Magistrate had jurisdiction and was bound to entertain the second complaint and deal with it according to law. 23 A. 7. See also 9 A. 83, 1935 A. W. N. 85; 5 A. L. J. 137 = 1903 A. W. N. 67 = 7 Cr. L. J. 297; 35 A. 53.

In 1 N. L. R. 13, it was held following the Rulings approved of by the Madras Full Bench, that a Magistrate dismissing a complaint under this section may entertain fresh complaint upon the same facts but if the order of dismissal or discharge amounts to a judgment within the meaning of s. 367, a fresh complaint cannot be entertained. The Punjab Chief Court in 19 P. R. 1911 (F.B.) = 24 P. W. R. 1911 = 205 P. L. R. 1011 = 12 Cr. L. J. 368 following the other High Courts overruled 33 P. R. 1931 where it was held that a second complaint cannot be entertained. See also 23 P. W. R. 1923 = 8 Cr. L. J. 249; 17 O. C. 273 = 15 Cr. L. J. 633. In 5 S. L. R. 196 = 16 Cr. L. J. 174 it was held following 29 M. 126 that the mere fact that a complaint has been dismissed under s 259 is not a sufficient ground for refusing to entertain a second complaint. But the complainant was directed by the High Court to enter into a bond with one surety undertaking to pay the costs of the accused if the prosecution did not succeed as the complaint was of a trivial kind.

Successor may take cognizance of a fresh complaint—A second complaint was made to a Magistrate who had dismissed a previous complaint on the same facts, but before he could dispose of the second complaint he was transferred and his successor took up the case and ordered process to issue. Held, that the successor in office of a particular Magistrate although a different individual constituted the same tribunal and had jurisdiction to deal with the second complaint, 36 A. 129 distinguishing 22 A. 106.

27. Magistrate bound to entertain cognizable case if sent by Police even if he had previously dismissed it—A Magistrate is not only competent, but is bound to entertain a cognizable case forwarded to him by the Police notwithstanding that he may have previously dismissed the same case under this section Oadh. B. C. No. 230; cf 36 A. 53.

28. Cannot Magistrate of co-ordinate authority re-hear complaint?—Another Magistrate of co-ordinate authority is not competent to hear a complaint which has been dismissed under this section, 22 A. 106. It is submitted that though this case has not been overruled but expressly distinguished in 29 A. 7 and 36 A. 129, it is of doubtful weight in the light of the decisions of all the High Courts. See 16 Cr. L. J. 814 (M.). But unless there are very special reasons, a Magistrate might not entertain a complaint for the second time. See 10 P. R. 1912 = 12 Cr. L. J. 334 (F.B.).

29. Revival of Complaint after District Magistrate or Sessions Judge has refused further inquiry.—There is nothing illegal or ultra vires of a Deputy Magistrate reviving a complaint which he had dismissed under s. 203, after the District Magistrate has on an application made to him declined under s. 437, to order further inquiry into the complaint, 36 C. 415. In 11 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 347, however it was held that a Magistrate cannot entertain a fresh complaint when a previous one on the same facts has been dismissed by his predecessor after a full inquiry and the order of dismissal has been upheld by the Sessions Judge. In such a case the complainant's remedy is to apply to the High Court for revising the lower Court's orders.

REVISION.

30. Revisional powers of High Court in cases of complaint dismissed by Presidency and other Magistrates.—The High Court has under s. 423, embodied in s. 439 power to set aside the order of discharge passed by all subordinate Criminal Courts including Presidency Magistrate, and direct a charge to be framed and tried by the proper Court. It can, under s. 436 and probably also under s. 439, order a further inquiry instead of a committal, irrespective of the question of jurisdiction 36 C. 994 applying 23 C. 211 (F.B.) 15 C. 603 (F.B.), 28 C. 746; 27 B. 84, and dissenting from 27 C. 126 and not approving 33 C. 1232 and 6 C. L. J. 705. See also 7 C. W. N. 821 and 13 O. C. 289 = 11 Cr. L. J. 629. In Weir II, 253 and 33 M. 512, this point was raised, but not decided.

31. Power of the High Courts under the Charter Act.—The High Court cannot interfere under s 15 of the Charter Act with the order of a subordinate Court on the ground of an error in law, but only for an error affecting jurisdiction ie, either a want or refusal of jurisdiction or an illegality in the exercise of it, 36 C. 994; 1 A. 101; 26 C. 746, 6 C. L. J. 705. There is no form of judicial injustice which the High Court, if need be, cannot reach under the Charter Act 12 C. W. N. 678 = 7 Cr. L. J. 499.

FURTHER INQUIRY.

32. Further inquiry and notice to accused.—See s 436 and Notes thereunder, 18 A. L. J. 30.

33. When directed to make further inquiry, Magistrate cannot again dismiss under this section.—Where a case once dismissed under this section is remanded under s. 437 now 436 the Magistrate holding further inquiry ought to summon the accused, but is not justified in again dismissing the complaint under this section, 11 C. W. N. 316. See Note 18 to section 436.

But it should be noted that in 30 C. W. N. 312 it is held that where on receipt of a complaint a Magistrate holds an enquiry under s 202 of the Code and dismisses the complaint under s. 203, the Sessions Judge under s. 436 can only direct a full and proper enquiry of the same nature as the Magistrate has already held and cannot direct a further enquiry after summoning the accused.

The practice of allowing the accused to be represented in an enquiry under s 202 has been condemned.

34. Case remanded for further inquiry cannot be transferred.—Where a Sessions Judge remands a case which was dismissed by a Deputy Magistrate under s. 203 and directs that further proceedings should be held under the same section, the case cannot after remand be transferred by the District Magistrate from the Deputy Magistrate, 11 C. W. N. 316 = 5 Cr. L. J. 112.

APPEAL.

35 No appeal from an order under this section.—Having regard to section 401 no appeal can lie from an order under this section but further inquiry might be ordered under s. 437

CHAPTER XVII.

OF THE COMMENCEMENT OF PROCEEDINGS BEFORE MAGISTRATES

204. (1) If, in the opinion of a Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence there is sufficient ground for proceeding, and the case appears to be one in which according to the fourth column of the second schedule, a summons should issue in the first instance, he shall issue his summons for the attendance of the accused. If the case appears to be one in which according to that column, a warrant should issue in the first instance, he may issue a warrant or, if he thinks fit, a summons for causing the accused to be brought or appear at a certain time before such Magistrate or (if he has not jurisdiction himself) some other Magistrate having jurisdiction

(2) Nothing in the section shall be deemed to affect the provisions of s. 90

(3) When by any law for the time being in force any process fees or other fees are payable, no process shall be issued until the fees are paid and if such fees are not paid within a reasonable time the Magistrate may dismiss the complaint

Notes.—1 S. 68 relates to the issue of summons s. 75 to that of a warrant and s. 90 to the issuing of warrant in lieu of or in addition to, summons For forms see Sch. V Nos 1 and 2.

2 Till process is issued, person complained against is not an accused person.—When an accused person has been summoned to appear before a Magistrate there has been commencement of proceedings within the meaning of Chapter XVII, of the Code, Ratanlal 544. Till process is issued under this section the person complained against does not become an accused person, he is not a part to the investigation under s. 202 nor is he entitled to claim under s. 340 the right to be represented by a pleader at that investigation. If he is present that is not by compulsion of law but out of his own free will, 38 C. 880; 37 C. 335. Therefore no suit for malicious prosecution will lie when a complaint is dismissed under s. 203 23 M. L. J. 1 See however, 2 B 481; 23 B 226 and Note 19 pp 578 and 579

DUTY OF MAGISTRATES BEFORE ISSUING PROCESS.

3 Until there is sufficient ground for proceeding, process must not issue.—The Magistrate should not issue process unless satisfied that there is sufficient ground for proceeding with the complaint. So when the complainant stated in his examination that he made his statements solely on information derived from others the Magistrate should satisfy himself upon proper materials that a case has been made out before issuing such process, otherwise his proceedings are liable to be quashed 10 C. W. N. 1090. It is not competent to a Magistrate to issue a warrant or order of arrest in anticipation of an offence being committed. Such a case is merely one for the interference of the Police Ratanlal 90 Where a Government Pleader having no personal knowledge of the facts constituting an offence lodges a complaint on mere information, held it was not a proper complaint under section 200 on which a judicial inquiry could be directed and that a Court before issuing summons against an accused should satisfy itself on proper materials that a case has been made out for issuing summons, 11 C. W. N. 170 = 5 Cr. L. J. 13 See also 10 C. W. N. 1093; 1090 and 1884 W. R. 33 and 18 Cr. L. J. 626

Magistrate must come to an independent conclusion of his own.—The opinion of the Magistrate referred to in this section is his own independent opinion. Where a Police inquiry is ordered and the result reported, the opinion expressed by an Inspector will not warrant the complaint being dealt with, otherwise than it would have been if there had been no such report, 4 M. H. C. R. 162 See also cases cited in Note 18.

4 Magistrate must be properly seized of the case before he can issue process.—Where a Subordinate Magistrate to whom a case had been made over for disposal convicted some of the accused, but refused to issue process against the others. Held that the issue of the process under this section by the superior Magistrate who made over the case was without jurisdiction, 32 C. 763 See also 27 C. 979; 30 C. 449 and 4 C. W. N. 212.

5 Caution and discretion must be used in issuing process.—In exercising the discretion under this section, Magistrates must be guided by the circumstances of each case, the main point for consideration being whether having regard to the nature of the offences charged and the age, sex, position, etc., of the accused his appearance can be secured or not without his arrest. In cases relating to hurt, criminal force or assault, marriage, defamation, mischief and criminal intimidation, caution and discretion should be used in issuing summonses. An accused person ought not to be dragged off to answer a charge merely because a complaint has been lodged against him. The Magistrate should see there is a prima facie case against the accused, and, if not, should refuse the summons, or direct complainant first to produce his witnesses, or one or two of the chief of them, and should then grant or refuse the summons according as a prima facie case is or is not made out.—Oudh Cr Dig. p 7

6. Supervision by District Magistrates to prevent hasty and inconsiderate issue of process.—Magistrates of districts should endeavour, by exercising a systematic supervision over the procedure of Subordinate Magistrate, to prevent hasty and inconsiderate issue of process on complaints, and to enforce payment of compensation for frivolous or vexatious complaints or information. By requiring periodical returns of the results of criminal trials in the subordinate Courts District Magistrate will be able to keep themselves regularly informed of the working of those Courts, and to interpose promptly, and effectively, whenever they observe any tendency to laxity of procedure.—Oudh Cr Dig. p 7 As to unauthorised interference by the District Magistrate see s. 202 Note 11 at 570

7. If complaint is believed, process must issue.—See Note 6 to s. 302. Where the Police report was to the effect that the complainant was true and the Magistrate thereupon had directed the case to be entered as such, he cannot decline to enter on a judicial inquiry merely because in his opinion there was no chance of conviction and no useful purpose would be served by an inquiry. The complainant was entitled to have process against the accused for the attendance of his witnesses, 29 C. 410. The only condition requisite for the issue of process is that the complainant's disposition must show some ground for proceeding 1884 W. R. 33 and 37. See also 4 M. H. C. R. 162. It appears to be a common fault on the part of Magistrate to issue process against some of the accused although there is no reason in the examination of the complainant to discriminate between the several accused. Such a procedure is without jurisdiction and in every view objectionable 4 G. W. N. 560.

ISSUE OF PROCESS.

8 Notice to the person complained against is not a 'process'.—Where proceedings begin with the issue of a summons or warrant after a complaint is instituted and the Magistrate issues a notice to the person complained against that a preliminary inquiry will be held in the matter of the complaint such a notice does not amount to a summons or to the invitation to the party charged to appear to take any step in the matter, such a notice is not contemplated either by the Code nor is it one of the forms in the Fifth Schedule, 23 M. L. J. 1

9 Conviction cannot be quashed for issuing warrant instead of summons.—If a Magistrate issues a warrant in a case in which he ought to have issued a summons and passes a sentence, the High Court cannot quash the conviction on the simple ground that the Magistrate was mistaken in issuing a warrant, 1 W. R. 16

10. Substitution of summons for warrant discretionary.—Magistrates should use the discretion given them by this section and should not issue a warrant as a matter of course, especially in cases where a petty charge of defamation, insult to provoke breach of the peace or criminal intimidation is preferred before them.—C. P. Cr. Cr., Part II, No 16.—Oudh Cr Dig. p 8

11. Magistrate can cancel warrant issued and issue summons.—A Magistrate has also discretion under this section on sufficient cause being shown to cancel the warrants issued at first against an accused and issue summons instead, 1 S. L. R. 69 = 8 Cr. L. J. 187; 7 S. L. R. 50 = 14 Cr. L. J. 604. Vide s 70

12. Magistrate may issue bailable warrant even in non-bailable cases.—See s. 76. Where on a complaint made against the accused, of robbery of certain articles belonging to a Mutt of which accused claimed to be the head, two witnesses were examined to prove the charge, and a non bailable warrant was issued. Held in the circumstances only a bailable warrant should have been issued, (1911) 1 M. W. N. 432 = 12 Cr. L. J. 430.

13. Summons unnecessary where accused appears voluntarily.—Where the accused appears voluntarily to answer a charge, the want of summons or of a complaint antecedent to the issue of summons becomes immaterial Ratanlal & . If the complainant does not take up process against all the persons accused every one of them may appear voluntarily and insist either that the complaint against him shall be proceeded with or dismissed 26 B 552

SUB-SEC (3)—PROCESS-FEES

14. Power to direct further inquiry into dismissed complaints.—When a complaint is dismissed under sub-sec. (3) for non-payment of process-fee the High Court or Sessions Judge or District Magistrate may under s. 437 direct a further inquiry

15. Dismissal of maintenance case for failure to pay process-fee.—An application for maintenance under section 439 should not however, be dismissed under sub-sec. (3) on the applicant's failure to comply with an order for the payment of process-fees as neglect to maintain is not an offence and process-fee is leviable under the Court Fees Act only for an offence. 16 M 234.

16. Complaint cannot be dismissed under cl (3) when case adjourned.—Where a Magistrate who has entertained a complaint is unable to record evidence on the date originally fixed and has adjourned the case the witnesses in attendance should be told to appear on the adjourned date and a party should not be required to repeatedly summon his witnesses on payment of fresh process-fees. A dismissal of the complaint under clause (3) is not therefore justifiable in law 3 P W R, 1912 = 60 P. L R 1912 = 18 Cr L J 176

17. Court fees.—As to the payment of Court fees in connection with criminal cases see Court Fees Act VII of 1870 s. 20 and the Rules framed by the various High Courts thereunder

REVISION

18. High Court competent to suspend proceedings.—See s. 439 and Notes thereto. Where neither the complaint nor the evidence for the prosecution made out any case against a person but process was issued the High Court quashed the proceedings against him holding that it was most unfair to him that he should be called on to rebut a charge which upon the evidence was baseless in so far as it affected him 28 C 788, 1899 A W N 212, 21 C 131, 25 C 233, 38 C 63, 20 B 343, 21 W R 23, 28 M L J 505 = 16 Cr L J 477

205. (1) Whenever a Magistrate issues a summons he may if he deems it reasonable to do so dispense with the personal attendance of the accused and permit him to appear by his pleader

(2) But the Magistrate inquiring into or trying the case may in his discretion at any stage of the proceedings direct the personal attendance of the accused and if necessary enforce such attendance in manner hereinbefore provided

Notes.—1. No warrant for ex parte proceedings in criminal cases.—Under the Code an accused person cannot be proceeded against ex parte. The Code does not contemplate such a proceeding. It is only with the special leave of the Magistrate that his personal attendance can be dispensed with and he be allowed to appear by an agent 24 W R 23

2. Pleader how far he may act for accused.—As to the definition of the word Pleader see s. 4 (r). It includes any person appointed with the permission of the Court to act in a criminal case and thus an agent may come within the definition. But where he is allowed to appear by a Pleader even a judgment may be pronounced in the presence of such Pleader where the sentence is one of fine only. See s. 366

3. What a Pleader may do.—When an order is made under this section allowing the accused to appear by a Pleader such appearance involves the performance of all acts which devolve upon the accused in the course of the trial such as answering the examination by the Court under s. 342 or pleading or refusing to plead to the charge under s. 255. The terms of s. 366 (2) support this view for it contemplates the absence of the accused up to the stage of judgment and even after that stage where the judgment is one of acquittal or one awarding a sentence of fine. See also form of summons to an accused Sch. V Form I 68. L R 206 = 14 Cr L J 272.

4. Prosecution cannot be ordered for disobedience of summons where accused appears by Pleader.—Where appearance is made on behalf of the accused by his Mukhtyar who asked the Magistrate to dispense with the personal attendance of the accused a prosecution under s. 174 I P C. cannot be directed against the accused for disobedience of summons. Appearance by a Mukhtyar is a valid appearance, though not a personal appearance 27 C 935. In such cases the Magistrate should rather tell the Mukhtyar that he requires the personal attendance of the accused on some fixed day and that if the accused does not choose to appear he will issue a warrant.

5. Applicability of section to security proceedings.—Though the Madras High Court in Weir II, 54 held that this section is not applicable to proceedings under Chapter VIII and that a person required to show cause why he should not be bound over for good behaviour cannot be permitted to appear by an agent yet was held in 25 A 375 following 23 C 493 and 27 C 656 that persons against whom proceedings are taken under Chapter VIII are accused persons within the meaning of the Code and as such have a right to be defended by a pleader and that notice of the date of hearing should be given them, Quere Whether personal attendance could not be dispensed with in such a case under special circumstances?

6. Section applies to all cases where a summons is issued.—The application of this section is not limited to summons-cases, but to any case in which a Magistrate may issue a summons. Therefore, in a warrant case if a Magistrate issues a summons in the first instance to a pardanashin lady, he can dispense with her personal attendance and thus he has discretion to do under s 204, 21 C. 535; 20 P. W. R. 1908. The section applies only to cases where a summons is issued in the first instance, 2 Pat. 793.

7. Accused cannot be exempted when warrant issued.—S 205 applies only to case where accused persons are summoned, where a warrant is issued to compel the attendance of accused he cannot be exempted from personal appearance in Court, unless the accused is by reason of his illness unable to attend personally, 13 C. W. N. 150; 18 Cr. L. J. 975. But if a warrant has been issued by inadvertence, the Magistrates has power to act under this section. The Magistrate may on discovering his mistake direct the major process of warrant to take effect as a summons, 7 S. L. R. 40 = 14 Cr. L. J. 604.

8. Personal appearance may be dispensed with any number of times.—A Magistrate can excuse the attendance of an accused as often as he pleases, 16 C. W. N. 131.

9. Section should be freely utilized.—In 38 L. R. 167 = 11 Cr. L. J. 197; 7 S. L. R. 40 = 14 Cr. L. J. 604 it has been pointed out that s 205 is not confined to strict pardanashins, and that the section should be freely utilized in such a country as Sind where so much prejudice exists against the appearance of females in public. See also 6 S. L. R. 208 = 14 Cr. L. J. 272. Where the accused is a pardanashin lady, it is in the discretion of the Magistrate to dispense with her personal attendance and to permit her to appear by a Pleader until he has before him some legal and satisfactory evidence indicative of her having committed a breach of the criminal law when it will be proper time to require her to appear personally, 6 A. 59; 7 S. L. R. 161 = 15 Cr. L. J. 539. In 17 C. W. N. 1243 = 15 Cr. L. J. 281, where a Magistrate refused to dispense with the presence of certain pardanashins, the High Court in revision made an order allowing them to appear by Pleader before the Magistrate as also in the Court of Sessions, if they were committed, subject to their having to appear to hear sentence in case of conviction. See s 210 which provides for the charge being read and explained to the accused. As to the right of pardanashin women to give evidence in their palanquins see 1 B. L. R. (S.N.) v and 41 P. R. 1887.

10. Personal appearance of a Pardanashin lady.—Pardanashin women are not of right exempted from personal attendance in Court, 5 A 92. But a Criminal Court should abstain from compelling a pardanashin woman to attend in person unless and until the case against her has reached the stage at which her personal attendance is clearly and legally required in the interests of justice, 8 P. W. R. 1809.

11. Accused being represented by her mother-in-law or father-in-law.—A woman was charged with causing obstruction under Bombay District Municipal Act VI of 1873, s 48. She having gone to a village, her mother-in-law appeared in Court on her behalf and the Magistrate proceeded with the case and convicted her. Held that the conviction must be set aside as the accused was neither present nor duly represented in the case, Ratnial 205. But where a woman was charged with the offence of 'fouling water' under s 61 of Bombay District Municipal Act VI of 1873 she being unwell, her father-in-law appeared in Court on her behalf, and the trying Magistrate proceeded with the case and convicted her. Held, that the father-in-law of the accused might probably have been received by the trying Magistrate as person appointed by her to act in the proceedings before him consistently with s 4 of the 1884 Code, and that the High Court did not consider it necessary in so trivial a case to make any order, Ratnial 206.

11-A. Appearance by an Estate Manager.—Where the personal appearance of an accused is dispensed with and he appears by his estate-agent, the fact of such appearance should be taken note of by the Court. The Court allowing the estate-agent to appear for the accused can act upon a plea given by the estate-agent in a case falling under ss. 242 and 243 of the Code. 50 B 250.

12. Reasons for refusing leave to appear by Pleader to be recorded.—The Magistrate should place upon record his reasons for refusing an application for leave to appear in Court by a Pleader and not in person, more particularly when such application is made by a pardanashin woman accused of an offence. 6 A. 59. See also 6 C. W. N. 59, where an order requiring the personal attendance of an invalid was set aside as unreasonable.

13. Recognizance bond should be taken from accused and not from his agent.—Where the personal attendance of an accused is dispensed with, a recognizance bond if such be deemed necessary should be taken from him and not from his agent, binding him (the accused) to appear either in person or by an agent, and if the agent neglects to attend when the case is called on, the recognizance bond may be held to be forfeited and the accused made liable for the payment of the penalty. A Magistrate has no legal authority to secure the attendance of an agent by such a bond. 5 B. M. C. R. Cr. Ca. 66.

14. A Sessions Judge can dispense with the personal attendance of an accused person under s. 205, read with s. 333:—

A Sessions Judge has power to dispense with the personal attendance of an accused and allow him to appear by a Pleader during a sessions trial, 45 M. 339.

CHAPTER XVIII.

OF INQUIRY INTO CASES TRIABLE BY THE COURT OF SESSION OR HIGH COURT*

Scope of Chapter.—Nowhere but in this Chapter is the procedure laid down to be followed in making a commitment. The procedure to be adopted under this Chapter is not confined to cases exclusively triable by the Court of Session, but is also applicable to cases which in the opinion of the Magistrate concerned, ought to be tried by such Court, 5 A. 477; 24 C. 439 and 5 Bom. L. R. 85. The provisions of this Chapter must be conformed to by every committing Magistrate. If ab initio he is convinced that the case ought to be committed, he should follow the procedure laid down by this Chapter from the start, and if he becomes convinced at a late stage of any inquiry or trial that the case ought to be committed, he should stay further proceeding and adopt the procedure laid down by this Chapter. S. 347 ought not to be so construed as to override the express provisions of this Chapter, 5 Bur. L. T. 239 = 6 L. B. R. 129 = 13 Cr. L. J. 877 (F.B.) dissenting from 36 C. 48 and Ratanlal 978. The direction in s. 347 to stop further proceedings does not justify a Magistrate in disregarding the provisions of this Chapter but only requires him to stop proceedings with the case as a trial and instead to commit the case under the provisions of this Chapter 36 M. 321, 13 Cr. L. J. 366 (M); contra 15 Cr. L. J. 704 (M).

† 206 (1) Any Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, or any Magistrate† (not being a Magistrate of the third class) empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, may commit any person for trial to the Court of Session or High Court for any offence triable by such Court.

(2) But, save as herein otherwise provided no person triable by the Court of Session shall be committed for trial to the High Court.

Notes 1—"This amendment is on the same lines as that of s. 144 cl. (1) we do not think that the powers under this section should be granted to a Magistrate of third class" Report of Select Committee, 1918

2. Sessions Judge can only take cognizance when the accused is committed.—See s. 190 J. A Sessions Judge can only take cognizance as a Court of original jurisdiction when the accused has been duly committed. Where there is no proper commitment he cannot try the case.

3. Magistrates empowered in this behalf.—In Madras all Magistrates are empowered to commit to the Court of Session (Fort St. George Gazette, 1873 p. 717) except the Tahsildar Magistrates of taluks in which there are Stationary Sub-Magistrates (Fort St. George Gazette, 1893, Pt. I, p. 579). In Bengal and in the Punjab, all Magistrates of the second class were similarly empowered but this power has been cancelled in Bengal (Calcutta Gazette, 1891, Pt. I, p. 1000) and withdrawn in the Punjab (Punjab Gazette, 9th March, 1893).

* Magistrates exercising jurisdiction in the Town of Rangoon when committing prisoners for trial commit them to the Chief Court Sec. 136 of the Lower Burma Courts Act VI of 1900 which came into operation on the 16th April 1900. See Gazette of India, 1900 Pt. I p. 216.

† The words and figures "subject to the provisions of s. 443" have been omitted by the Cr. Law Amendment Act (1931) (XVII of 1931).

‡ The words in brackets were added by Act XVIII of 1923.

(d) Interruption—The examination of the witness shall not be interrupted for the purpose of enabling the Magistrate or Judge to attend to other business unless such business is an urgent nature.

(e) Violation of rules to be reported.—It shall be the duty of every Appellate Court subordinate to the High Court to examine the memorandum of the evidence made by the subordinate Court, and to report to the High Court cases in which it shall appear that the above rules have not been strictly and properly attended to.

(f) Evidence to be in presence of deciding officer.—The evidence of every witness shall invariably be recorded in the presence of the officer who may decide the case except in the cases provided by ss. 349 and 350 of the Code, in which the recalling and re-examination of the witnesses is optional with the superior Magistrate. No more than one deposition should be written on each sheet of paper.

(g) Trial of inquiry.—After the examination of witnesses has commenced the trial or preliminary inquiry under Chap XVIII should be proceeded with until all the witnesses in attendance have been examined, those for the prosecution being first examined and if any witness be detained for a longer period than two days the Magistrate should record a memorandum stating the reasons of such detention.

(h) Adjournment.—When it is deemed necessary to adjourn the hearing of a case the adjournment shall be for as short a time as possible and no person accused of any offence shall be remanded to custody for any period exceeding 15 days (s. 344).

(i) Hour of business.—Every Sessions Judge and Magistrate shall sit daily and punctually at the hour appointed for the opening of his Court unless prevented by circumstances which are to be recorded in the proceedings of the Court. Wilkins 6

3. Witnesses not to be kept waiting.—(a) The evidence of witnesses should invariably be recorded as soon as possible after their attendance. If from unavoidable causes an adjournment is indispensable, there should be no unnecessary delay. Witnesses remaining over one day should as a rule be examined at the first sitting of the Court on the following day. By this means the public will be put to no inconvenience and justice will be administered in a prompt and satisfactory manner.

(b) Supervision.—Chief Magistrates of Districts should carefully supervise the returns of their subordinates as they will be held responsible for the correction of irregularities, the prompt discharge of witnesses and the early completion of all trials. Wilkins 7

4. Remand without taking evidence.—A prisoner arrested under a warrant should be promptly brought before a Magistrate who has then no authority to detain him further in custody or to remand him to prison without some reason being made manifest to him either in the shape of sworn testimony given before him or in some other form which can be put upon the record and which is sufficient to justify him in sending the prisoner to prison and there to be detained for a limited period for further examination. A period which is never in any case to exceed 15 days. 20 W R 23, also 6 M 53 and 69. See s. 344 and Notes thereunder.

5. Precautions to be taken in granting further periods of remand.—In Police prosecutions the general rule is that when an accused person is brought before a Magistrate and a remand is required by the prosecutor it is ordinarily sufficient to show by the evidence produced that the accused is a person of whom it is believed to be reliable that he will not abscond after remand and a further remand by the Magistrate to justify him in refusing bail and with each remand the necessity for production of evidence of guilt becomes stronger. 6 M 69, 36 C. 174 and Notes to s. 344.

6. Preliminary inquiry to be in the presence of the accused.—Where a Magistrate recorded evidence in the absence of the accused and committed him for trial it was held that his procedure was illegal. Refr II 239, 3 C. W. N. 110

7. Duty of Magistrate to make full inquiry and take all evidence.—In every inquiry into a Sessions case a Magistrate is bound to make full inquiry and draw up a charge to take all such evidence as may be produced (1) in support of the prosecution (2) on behalf of the accused and (3) as may be called for by the Magistrate. If he does not take all the evidence he errs unless he can justify his procedure on some such ground as the evidence of a witness is obviously irrelevant or that he considers the fact in issue between the parties proved by the evidence already produced. 10 A L J 184 = 13 Cr L J 453. As all the evidence is ready at the trial it is the duty of a committing Magistrate to make full and careful inquiry to record the testimony of witnesses. He ought to do this even if the evidence is not in dispute.

13. Recognizance bond should be taken from accused and not from his agent.—Where the personal attendance of an accused is dispensed with, a recognizance bond if such be deemed necessary should be taken from him and not from his agent, binding him (the accused) to appear either in person or by an agent, and if the agent neglects to attend when the case is called on, the recognizance bond may be held to be forfeited and the accused made liable for the payment of the penalty. A Magistrate has no legal authority to secure the attendance of an agent by such a bond. 5 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 66.

14. A Sessions Judge can dispense with the personal attendance of an accused person under s. 205, read with s. 353:—

A Sessions Judge has power to dispense with the personal attendance of an accused and allow him to appear by a pleader during a sessions trial, 45 M 359.

CHAPTER XVIII.

OF INQUIRY INTO CASES TRIABLE BY THE COURT OF SESSION OR HIGH COURT *

Scope of Chapter.—Nowhere but in this Chapter is the procedure laid down to be followed in making a commitment. The procedure to be adopted under this Chapter is not confined to cases exclusively triable by the Court of Session, but is also applicable to cases which, in the opinion of the Magistrate concerned, ought to be tried by such Court, 5 A. 477; 24 C 419 and 4 Bom. L. R. 85. The provisions of this Chapter must be conformed to by every committing Magistrate. If ab initio he is convinced that the case ought to be committed, he should follow the procedure laid down by this Chapter from the start, and if he becomes convinced at a late stage of any inquiry or trial that the case ought to be committed, he should stay further proceedings and adopt the procedure laid down by this Chapter. S. 347 ought not to be so construed as to override the express provisions of this Chapter, 5 Bur. L. T. 239 = 6 L. B. R. 129 = 13 C. L. J. 877 (F.B.) dissenting from 36 C. 48 and Ratanlal 978. The direction in s. 347 to stop further proceedings does not justify a Magistrate in disregarding the provisions of this Chapter but only requires him to stop proceedings with the case as a trial and instead to commit the case under the provisions of this Chapter, 36 M. 321; 15 Cr. L. J. 386 (M.); contra 15 Cr. L. J. 704 (M.).

† 206 (1)  Any Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, or any Magistrate† (not being a Magistrate of the third class) empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, may commit any person for trial to the Court of Session or High Court for any offence triable by such Court.

(2) But, save as herein otherwise provided, no person triable by the Court of Session shall be committed for trial to the High Court.

Notes 1.—† This amendment is on the same lines as that of s. 144 cl (1) we do not think that the powers under this section should be granted to a Magistrate of third class. Report of Select Committee, 1918

2. Sessions Judge can only take cognizance when the accused is committed.—Sec. 190. A Sessions Judge can only take cognizance as a Court of original jurisdiction when the accused has been duly committed. Where there is no proper commitment he cannot try the case.

3. Magistrates empowered in this behalf.—In Madras all Magistrates are empowered to commit to the Court of Session (Fort St. George Gazette, 1873, p. 717) except the Tahsildar Magistrates of taluks in which there are Stationary Sub-Magistrates (Fort St. George Gazette 1893, Pt. I, p. 579). In Bengal and in the Punjab, all Magistrates of the second class were similarly empowered but this power has been cancelled in Bengal (Calcutta Gazette, 1891, Pt. I, p. 1000) and withdrawn in the Punjab (Punjab Gazette, 9th March, 1883).

* Magistrates exercising jurisdiction in the Town of Bangalore when committing prisoners for trial commit them to the Chief Court. Sec. 15 of the Lower Burma Courts Act of 1900 which came into operation on the 16th April, 1900. See Gazette of India, 1, p. 116.

† The words and figures "subject to the provisions of s. 443" have been omitted by the Criminal Amendment Act 1911.

‡ The words in brackets were added by Act XXIII of 1903.

Concurrent jurisdiction of Magistrate and Coroner.—An inquisition made by a Coroner, has the effect of a valid commitment to the High Court in Calcutta or Bombay when the High Court accepts the commitment. 31 C. 1. But the power to commit has been taken away. See s 25 of the Coroner's Act, 1871, Appendix VIII.

4 Effect of committal by Magistrate not empowered.—Under s 532 if any Magistrate purporting to exercise powers duly conferred which were not so conferred commits for trial, the Court to which the commitment is made may accept the commitment if it considers that the accused was not injured thereby and no objection was taken to the authority of such Magistrate but if it considers that accused was injured or that objection was taken, the Court shall quash the commitment and direct a fresh inquiry. Where a Magistrate without jurisdiction commits an accused to the Sessions Court, such commitment is void and no reference to the High Court is necessary to have it set aside, 11 C. L. R. 55. But a commitment made with jurisdiction can only be quashed by the High Court on a point of law under s 215. See s 532 as to the validation of irregular commitments under certain circumstances. See Ratanlal 922.

5 Committal by Magistrate not having local jurisdiction.—Where a Magistrate duly empowered to commit makes an order of committal in respect of an offence over which he has no territorial jurisdiction, such commitment is valid unless such irregularity has in fact occasioned a failure of justice. See s 531, 28 M. 640, 17 M. 403, 7 Bar. L. T. 26 = 15 Cr. L. J. 270. In 11 C. L. R. 55 such a commitment was, however, held to be void. If a Magistrate commits to a Court of Session without having any jurisdiction over the offence or the offenders the commitment is clearly invalid and the Sessions Judge, if satisfied by the evidence before him on these points could, notwithstanding the commitment, discharge the accused. If however, the illegality affects the procedure of the Magistrate and does not affect the jurisdiction of the Sessions Judge, a reference to the High Court under s 215 was the only way to set aside a duly made commitment, Ratanlal 922.

6. Committal to Court having no local jurisdiction.—If the committal is made to a Court having no local jurisdiction under s 177 over the offence, the Bombay and Allahabad High Courts are of opinion that the commitment ought not to be set aside unless there has been a failure of justice. See s B 312, 18 B. 200, 16 A. 850, but the Madras High Court held in 38 M. 337, that such a commitment must be set aside. See Note 8 to s 177 and Notes to s 531.

7. Interference of District Magistrate with the discretion of other Magistrates as to commitment.—If for purposes of commitment a Subordinate Magistrate is duly empowered has equal powers with the District Magistrate and the latter cannot give instructions to the Subordinate Magistrate regarding a judicial proceeding, e.g., the commencement of the preliminary inquiry or the desirability of commitment. If the District Magistrate desires to interfere he must first withdraw. If he does not, the first class who conducted a preliminary inquiry to a Deputy Commissioner with special power either to discharge or to commit the accused to the Court of Sessions, but that he had no authority to act in the way he did. The accused who had been convicted were however, held not prejudiced by such irregular commitment. 7 C. W. N. 457.

8 Power to commit includes power to dispose of the case.—The powers conferred under this section convey authority to carry into effect any of the provisions of Chapter XVIII of the Code, B. A. 477.

207 The following procedure shall be adopted in inquiries before Magistrates where the case is triable exclusively by a Court of Session or High Court or, in the opinion of the Magistrate, ought to be tried by such Court.

Procedure in inquiries preparatory to commitment

Notes 1—The following procedure shall be adopted—The language is imperative. S 347 ought not to be construed to override the terms of this section. See Note at the head of this Chapter.

2. Cases which ought to be tried by such Court.—The words "ought to be tried by the Court of Session" in this section and in s 347 must be read with s 254, and a case which ought to be tried by a Court of Session is one which the Magistrate is not competent to try or in which in his opinion adequate punishment cannot be inflicted by him. 4 Bom. L. R. 83, where 24 C. 429 and Ratanlal 110 are referred to. See also 18 B. 330; 11 A. L. J. 439 = 16 Cr. L. J. 204. If the case be one which the Magistrate is both competent to try and can adequately punish he has no discretion to commit it to the Court of Session, 8 B. L. R. 23 = 15 Cr. L. J. 664.

This section is apparently to be interpreted in the light of s 254 so that a case which, 'bought to be tried' by the Court of Session, as contemplated by the former section, must be taken to be a case in which adequate punishment cannot be awarded by the Magistrate, and not merely one which, for any other reason he may think it desirable that the Court of Session should try—C P Cr Cr Part II, No 30

3. Is commitment of case not exclusively triable by Sessions Court bad?—See Note 9 to s 215

4. Joint inquiry into the case of several accused persons.—There is no provision in the Code which requires a separate inquiry in respect of each accused person, as the provision contained in s 233 relates to separate trials only. The trial no doubt could not be joint, but there is no objection to a joint inquiry on the ground that the inquiry was conducted against the accused jointly with others, 7 Bom L.R. 457 = 2 Cr L.J. 432; 25 M. 592, 1900 A. W. N 206. See Note 7 (1) to s 215

5. Object of preliminary inquiry—The object of the law in providing that the inquiry shall be held by the Magistrate before the accused has to undergo a trial in the Court of Session seems to be to prevent the commitment of cases in which there is no reasonable ground for conviction, 5 A. 161 at p. 162; and the Code seems to have been carefully framed with a view to provide that no one shall be committed for trial without having previously had a fair opportunity of meeting the charge upon which he is to be committed, 10 B. L. R. 285 at p. 289. See also 3 M. 354. The legislature has laid down provisions for procedure before commitment, some of which were obviously intended for the benefit of accused persons. The object of its provision that all the accused shall be made aware of all the evidence against them and hearing defence counsel is that there are not sufficient reasons for not doing so. See 5 Bar.

L. T. 239 = 13 Cr. L. J. 877.

208 (1) The Magistrate shall, when the accused appears or is brought before him, proceed to hear the complainant (if any), and taken in manner herein after provided all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution or in behalf of the accused, or as may be called for by the Magistrate.

Taking of evidence produced.

(2) The accused shall be at liberty to cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution and in such case the prosecutor may re-examine them

(3) If the complainant or officer conducting the prosecution or the accused applies to the Magistrate to issue process to compel the attendance of any witness or the production of any document or thing, the Magistrate shall issue such process unless for reasons to be recorded he deems it unnecessary to do so

Process for production of further evidence

(4) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to require a Presidency Magistrate to record his reasons

Notes.—1. Sub-sec. (2) incorporates the decision in 21 G. 662, and merely re-enacts the provisions of s. 199 of the Evidence Act.

2 Rules for the examination of complainants and witnesses framed by the Calcutta High Court.

(a) Examination to be viva voce in Court.—Every witness shall be examined viva voce in open Court.

(b) No other business to be attended to.—A Magistrate or Judge shall not be engaged in any other business whilst the examination of the witness is going on, or whilst any documentary evidence is being read.

(c) Supervision of examination.—If, after examination of a witness has commenced, the Magistrate or Judge is compelled to attend to any other business, the examination of the witness shall be suspended so far as such other business is being attended to

(d) Interruption.—The examination of the witness shall not be interrupted for the purpose of enabling the Magistrate or Judge to attend to other business unless such business is of an urgent nature.

(e) Violation of rules to be reported.—It shall be the duty of every Appellate Court subordinate to the High Court to examine the memorandum of the evidence made by the subordinate Court, and to report to the High Court cases in which it shall appear that the above rules have not been strictly and properly attended to.

(f) Evidence to be in presence of deciding officer.—The evidence of every witness shall invariably be recorded in the presence of the officer who may decide the case except in the cases provided by ss. 349 and 350 of the Code, in which the recalling and re-examination of the witnesses is optional with the superior Magistrate. No more than one deposition should be written on each sheet of paper.

(g) Trial of inquiry.—After the examination of witnesses has commenced, the trial or preliminary inquiry under Chap XVIII should be proceeded with until all the witnesses in attendance have been examined those for the prosecution being first examined and if any witness be detained for a longer period than two days, the Magistrate should record a memorandum stating the reasons of such detention.

(h) Adjournment.—When it is deemed necessary to adjourn the hearing of a case the adjournment shall be for as short a time as possible and no person accused of any offence shall be remanded to custody for any period exceeding 15 days (s. 344).

(i) Hour of business.—Every Sessions Judge and Magistrate shall sit daily and punctually at the hour appointed for the opening of his Court unless prevented by circumstances which are to be recorded in the proceedings of the Court. Halkins 6

3. Witnesses not to be kept waiting.—(a) The evidence of witnesses should invariably be recorded as soon as possible after their attendance. If from unavoidable causes an adjournment is indispensable, there should be no unnecessary delay. Witnesses remaining over one day should, as a rule, be examined at the first sitting of the Court on the following day. By this means the public will be put to no inconvenience and justice will be administered in a prompt and satisfactory manner.

(b) Supervision.—Chief Magistrates or Districts should carefully supervise the returns of their subordinates as they will be held responsible for the correction of irregularities the prompt discharge of witnesses and the early completion of all trials. Halkins 7

4. Remand without taking evidence.—A prisoner arrested under a warrant should be promptly brought before a Magistrate who has then no authority to detain him further in custody or to remand him to prison, without some reason being made manifest to him either in the shape of sworn testimony given before him or in some other form which can be put upon the record and which is sufficient to justify him in sending the prisoner to prison and there to be detained for a limited period for further examination a period which is never in any case to exceed 15 days. 20 W R. 23; also 6 M 53 and 69. See s. 344 and Notes thereunder.

5. Precautions to be taken in granting further periods of remand.—In Police cases the rule is that when an accused person is brought before a Magistrate and it is ordinarily sufficient to show by the evidence of a Police-officer that he is believed to be reliable that the accused has committed an offence up after remand and a further remand is needed some direct evidence by the Magistrate to justify him in refusing bail and with each remand the necessity for production of evidence of guilt becomes stronger. 6 M 69, 36 C. 174 and Notes to s. 344. accused is required

6. Preliminary inquiry to be in the presence of the accused.—Where a Magistrate recorded evidence in the absence of the accused and committed him for trial, it was held that his procedure was illegal. Wells II 259, 5 C. W N 110

7. Duty of Magistrate in to make full inquiry and take all evidence.—In every inquiry into a Session case a Magistrate is bound before he draws up a charge to take all such evidence as may be produced (1) in support of the prosecution (2) on behalf of the accused and (3) as may be called for by the Magistrate. If he does not take that evidence, he errs unless he can justify his procedure on some such ground as the evidence of a witness is obviously irrelevant or that he considers the fact in issue between the parties proved one way or the other by the evidence already produced. 10 A L J 146—13 C. L J 463. As all the evidence and not merely a part should be ready at the trial it is the duty of a committing Magistrate to make full and careful inquiry into the alleged offence and to record the testimony of witnesses. He ought to do this even when confession of the accused had been recorded as there are many cases to show that confessions are often retracted at the trial Ratanlal 882. It is the duty of the committing Magistrate to place before the Sessions Court all the evidence procurable Bar B.R. 538. A commitment made without examining all the witnesses for the prosecution is illegal 4 M 277. A commitment made without taking any evidence on a preliminary is illegal Ratanlal 100. A committing Magistrate cannot discharge before examining all the witnesses for the prosecution, 4 M 329.

8. Prosecution bound to produce all the available evidence—The prosecutor is bound to produce all the evidence in his favour directly bearing upon the charge. He is not free to choose how much evidence he will bring before the Court. It is prima facie his duty accordingly to call those witnesses who prove their connection with the transaction in question and who must be able to give important information. Per Wilson J in 8 C. 121 at p. 124. See also 10 C. 1070, 14 C. 245, 14 A 521, 15 A 6. See 13 P R 196 = 17 Cr L.J. 267.

In a trial before a Court of Session or the High Court if a Public Prosecutor is of opinion that a witness is a false witness or is likely to give false testimony if examined he is not bound to call that witness or to tender him for cross-examination. In cases in which the prisoner is undefended the presiding Judge should look at the deposition of any witness appearing in the Calendar as a witness for the Crown and not called as such or tendered for cross-examination in order to ascertain whether he should not himself take action under s. 540 16 A 84 at p. 87. See Notes under s 286.

9. Magistrates duty to take evidence for the defence in a Session case—Procedure—Sub-sec. (1) contemplates the production of evidence by the prosecution or by the accused without the aid of the Magistrate, sub-sec. (3) contemplates the intervention of the Magistrate to secure the attendance of witnesses and in regard to this evidence the Magistrate has a discretion for reasons to be recorded by him to refuse to issue process if he deems unnecessary to do so. The distinction between the duty of the Magistrate in regard to the evidence produced before him by the accused and evidence not produced before him but which the accused desires to obtain by issue of process must be borne in mind. Ss. 209 and 210 do not require the Magistrate to record the evidence of witnesses whom in the exercise of the discretion given by sub-sec. (3) he has deemed it unnecessary to summon. It is open to a Magistrate to decline to issue summonses where the application has been delayed until the last minute before the charge, 38 M 321, 42 C. 608. See Note 7 (v) to s 215. A Magistrate inquiring into a case under this Chapter is not empowered to frame a charge or make out an order of commitment until and after he has taken all such evidence as the accused may produce before him for hearing 20 A 264. A Magistrate investigating a case and committing the accused to the Sessions without examining the witnesses applied for by the accused acts erroneously under sub-sec. (3) of this section and the order of commitment must be set aside as bad in law 26 A 177. Where a Magistrate after recording the evidence for the prosecution had summoned witnesses for the defence and had consented to make a local inspection also but in pursuance of a direction of the Sessions Court committed the accused without examining the defence witnesses or making the local inspection held that the commitment was bad in law 1905 A W N 306 = 4 Cr L J 432, but see 15 Cr L J 704 (M) 46 A 137.

10. Witnesses who fail to appear must be compelled to attend—The accused has further the right to call upon the Court to compel the attendance of witnesses who have been summoned and who have neglected to attend 1 C. W N 545. The accused ought to have an opportunity of adducing evidence on his behalf before the Magistrate and which the Magistrate cannot refuse to take without recording his reasons Ratanlal 100. A Magistrate going on leave exercises an improper discretion in committing to the Court of Session a case properly triable by the Magistrate merely on the ground that the witnesses for the defence are not in attendance and that it would be inconvenient for his successor to commence the trial new Ratanlal 110.

11. Right to cross-examine when to be exercised—Fox C.J., of the Burma Chief Court is of opinion that as this Chapter contains no provision similar to that in s 256 (1) for recalling prosecution witnesses for cross-examination the proper time for cross-examining a witness in an inquiry under this Chapter is in the ordinary course immediately after the witnesses examination, 5 Bar L.T. 239 = 13 Cr L.J. 877. It is impossible to construe this section as conferring upon an accused the right, if he thinks fit, to ask for an order and to have an order made that the cross-examination of the witnesses for the prosecution may be reserved until after all the prosecution witnesses have been examined in chief 14 M L.T. 532 = 15 Cr L.J. 29. See also 36 C. 48. As each witness is examined he should then and there be cross-examined and re-examined and allowed to go home. It is illegal for a Magistrate not to allow any cross-examination before he frames a charge or till such time that the examination in chief of all witnesses for prosecution is over 10 A L J 144 = 13 Cr L J 443. But it is open to a Magistrate to allow cross-examination of witnesses for the prosecution even after a charge is drawn up 39 C 825 See also 5 C W N 110

12 Effect of not allowing cross examination—When depositions of witnesses for the prosecution were taken without any cross-examination being allowed held that such depositions were improperly treated as evidence in the Sessions trial as they had not been duly taken within the meaning of s 288 21 C 642 and see Notes to s 288

13 Is Magistrate committing under s 347 not bound to allow cross examination and hear defence evidence?—Section 347 is not to be read as subject to the provisions of this section and it is not imperative on the Magistrate to allow the accused to cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution or to call witnesses in his defence before ordering commitment under this section 38 C 843, Ratanlal 975, 15 Cr L J 704 (M). This view was not accepted by the Madras High Court 38 M 321, and by the Burma Chief Court in 6 L B R 129 (F B) = 3 Bar L T, 239 = 13 Cr L J 877 See Note under s 347 and the Note at the head of this Chapter

14 Evidence to be recorded in manner hereinafter provided—See Chapter XXV ss 356 357 359 and 360 s 363 makes a special provision for the recording of evidence by the Presidency Magistrate

15 Evidence of an accused person—An accused person cannot be admitted as an approver in a preliminary inquiry against others jointly accused with him until he is either discharged or pardoned 7 W R 44

16 Attendance of respectable Hindu ladies as witnesses—The attendance of Hindu ladies of secluded habits and respectability as witnesses should not be insisted upon when no distinct charge is made out 3 W R 46

209 (1) When the evidence referred to in section 208 sub-sections (1) and (3) has been taken and he has (if necessary) examined the accused for the purpose of enabling him to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him such Magistrate shall, if he finds that there are not sufficient grounds for committing the accused person for trial record his reasons and discharge him unless it appears to the Magistrate that such person should be tried before himself or some other Magistrate in which case he shall proceed accordingly

When accused person to be discharged.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prevent a Magistrate from discharging the accused at any previous stage of the case if for reasons to be recorded by such Magistrate he considers the charge to be groundless

1 Examination of accused before committal absolutely necessary—It is the duty of a Magistrate before committing accused persons for trial to examine them for the purpose of enabling them to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against them. The effect of this section is that it is not left to the discretion of a Magistrate who intends to commit to examine the accused persons. He is bound to examine the accused and if he makes an order of commitment without examining him the order is irregular and might be quashed if the irregularity has occasioned a failure of justice 23 M 636 But see 2 W R 80

2 Extent and scope of the examination of the accused—See s 342. The real object of the Law in allowing the accused to be examined is to enable the Judge to ascertain from time to time from a prisoner particularly if he is undefended what examination he may desire to offer regarding any fact stated by the witness or after the close of the case how he can meet what the Judge may consider to be detrimental evidence against him per KIRKPATRICK J in 6 C. 96 at p 102 = 6 C L R. 821 at p 527 See also 2 C. W N 702 5 A. 253 at p 256 A Magistrate has no power to order the accused to file a written statement in proceedings under this Chapter Weir II, 225 But if the accused desires to make a statement it is not competent to the Magistrate to refuse to allow him to do so 10 C L R. 54

3. Power of examining accused not to be abused—The accused should never be examined with a view to filling up gaps in the evidence for the prosecution 26 C. 43, or to supplement the evidence where it is deficient 1 C L R. 436 The Code empowers the Magistrate to commit without inquiring into the defence of the accused. The Magistrate should therefore be careful not to abuse the discretion given by this section to examine the accused 14 W R 16 and 1 B L R (84 N) 16 The discretionary power given by this section should be used to ascertain from the prisoner how he may explain facts in evidence appearing against him that those facts should not stand against him unexplained, but not to drive him to make self-criminating statement, 1 M. H. C. R. 199; 1 G. L. R. 436, 6 G. L. R. 521; 25 W. R. 57; 8 W. R. (F.B.) 47; 6 G. L. R. 431; 6 C. 279 = 7 G. L. R. 335; 17 C. W. N. 354 = 14 Cr. L. J. 429. The proceedings should not be of an inquisitorial nature. See also 3 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 51. The accused need not be examined at all, when the evidence is not sufficient to charge him with the offence, 10 W. R. 25. A commitment without examining the accused is bad in law, 23 M. 636.

4. May discharge at any stage.—Sub-sec. (2) of this section and s. 253 (2) relieve a Magistrate from the necessity of going on with an inquiry or trial when he is reasonably convinced on what has been already deposed to, that a criminal charge cannot be sustained, Ratanlal 201. Where a Government officer has been discharged, on an application by the head of the Department, a copy of the order of discharge shall be given free of cost.—Government of India, 31st August, 1899

5. Magistrate may proceed for minor offence summarily.—Where in the opinion of the Magistrate the evidence is not sufficient to justify a committal, but discloses an offence over which he has summarily jurisdiction, it is competent for him to deal with the case summarily and in such a case he cannot be said to disregard that part of the charge which takes the case out of his summary jurisdiction for the purpose of dealing with the case summarily, 22 M. 439

6. Conviction for minor offence when evidence discloses graver offence, not invalid.—But where a complaint was laid of an offence under s. 409, I P C., and the accused was tried and convicted for that offence, and on appeal the contention was set up that the Magistrate who convicted had no jurisdiction, because the evidence disclosed an offence under s. 466, I P C., triable exclusively by the Court of Session, held per KNOX, J., that the complaint gave the Magistrate jurisdiction to try the accused for the offence complained of and if it was established, to convict him and that the Magistrate was not bound to commit, merely because the evidence disclosed another offence triable exclusively by the Court of Session, 27 A. 69. See 24 M. 678; 22 M. 459; 2 M. L. T. 495 = 7 Cr. L. J. 215; 27 A. 69; 25 B. 90; but see Note 20 at p. 604

7. Magistrate ought not to treat a grave offence as a less grave offence to elude jurisdiction.—A Magistrate should not treat a grave offence beyond his jurisdiction as a less grave offence in order to bring it within his jurisdiction, nor should he ordinarily go into the defence evidence in a case triable exclusively by a Court of Session and in which a prima facie case for committal has been made ought by the prosecution, since to do so is to take upon himself the function of a superior Court, (1910) M. W. N. 559 = 12 Cr. L. J. 20.

8. Procedure when several persons are charged and the offence of one or more of them is beyond the Magistrate's cognizance.—When several persons are charged with different offences arising out of one act or transaction one or more of which are beyond the cognizance of the Magistrate, and the rest within his cognizance, he shall not try the persons accused of the offences within his cognizance, and commit the other accused persons, but commit the whole of them to the Sessions Court.—Oadh Cr. Dig at p. 8; Willkins, at p. 108. See Note 6 to s. 210

9. No compensation when accused discharged in a sessions case.—Although a first-class Magistrate discharges the accused under this section on account of the charge being vexatious, yet if the offence charged be triable exclusively by the Court of Session, the Magistrate cannot award compensation under s. 250 to the accused, Ratanlal 961; 40 A. L. J. 486.

10. Discharge of accused before recording any evidence and without recording any reasons therefore whether legal.—Competency of discharged co-accused to testify.—Though a Magistrate has power to discharge an accused even before recording evidence he should then and there record his reasons for so doing, but if he omits to do so, the discharge is not illegal. Where one of two accused persons sent up by the Police was discharged by a Magistrate without recording evidence and without recording any reasons and the discharged person was examined as a witness against the co-accused, held, that his evidence was admissible, 23 B. 212 followed 4 L. R. 362 = 6 Cr. L. J. 370.

11. Effect of discharge on subsequent inquiry for the same offence.—The discharge of a person accused of an offence triable exclusively by the Court of Session is no bar to his being brought up again with a view to commitment before a Magistrate who may proceed without an order for further inquiry. An order of discharge might be passed at any stage of the case and does not amount to an acquittal, 8 W. R. 61. See also 10 B. 319; 9 B. 100; 21 C. 397; 24 M. 136; 20 C. 623; 23 M. 725. In 28 C. 367 it was laid down that in order under s. 437 would be necessary in such a case. But now see 29 C 728 (F B), 28 C. 652; 27 B 84 and 28 M 310, where it¹ was held no order under s. 437 was necessary. But evidence must be taken de novo. 5 C 121 = 4 C. L. R. 303. See Notes 27 and 28 to s. 203.

A Court which has passed an order of discharge cannot re-open the same case but there is no bar to a second case being instituted. the order of discharge does not stand in the way of such proceedings being taken. 21 A. L. J. 215.

12 Remedy for improper exercise of discretion by inquiring Magistrate.—The remedy for an erroneous exercise of discretion is provided for in ss. 436 and 437. But in considering whether an accused has been improperly discharged within the terms of s. 436 a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate is bound to consider all the grounds upon which the discharge has been passed including the evidence which has not been disbelieved or held to be sufficient to establish a prima facie case before ordering a commitment or directing a further inquiry. 7 C. W. N. 77. See also 9 B 100, 5 A. 161, 9 W. R. 5, 2 C. 110 and 28 C. 397.

13 Superior Courts power of interference to be exercised in clear cases only.—See s. 438 and Notes thereto. The fact that the District Magistrate or Sessions Judge might be disposed to take the view that the Magistrate discharging an accused discredited the prosecution evidence for insufficient reasons and discharging the accused without committing him for trial is no ground for interference by it, Weir II, 255. Where a Sessions Judge acting under s. 436 directs a Magistrate to commit on evidence which is unreliable and insufficient it was held the High Court had authority to set aside the commitment on the merits of the case. 7 C. W. N. 327; 39 M. 224, 15 Cr. L. J. 373 (M).

14 Power of High Court to revise an order of discharge by a Presidency Magistrate.—The Madras High Court has held that it has power under the Code to interfere with an order of discharge made by a Presidency Magistrate which contravenes an express provision of law or where on the merits the order of discharge was wrong. Weir II, 255, 27 B 84 36 C. 994 dissenting from 33 C. 1282; 6 C. L. J. 705 and 27 C. 126. See also 14 M. L. T. 200 = 14 Cr. L. J. 529.

15 Refusal of Magistrate to charge accused with an offence triable exclusively by Court of Session amounts only to discharge.—Where a Magistrate on a complaint charging the accused with offences under ss. 879 and 477 I. P. C. tried and acquitted them of the charge under s. 379 but refused to charge them with the offence under s. 477 held that such refusal was in substance an order of discharge under sub-sec. (1) of this section as there is no other provision of the Code for dealing with a case where the Magistrate is of opinion that there is no evidence of an alleged offence exclusively triable by a Court of Session and as he could not proceed to act under the latter part of sub-sec. (1) until he had discharged the accused under the former part of the sub-section a Sessions Judge had jurisdiction to make an order under s. 436 in respect of the offence under s. 477 I. P. C. 24 M. 138 where 20 C. 633 and 23 M. 225 are dissented from.

FUNCTION OF AN INQUIRING MAGISTRATE—SESSIONS CASES.

16 Magistrate must make a thorough inquiry and sift every fact bearing upon the case.—I have for some time felt from examination of criminal trials that any Magistrates are too hasty in making commitments or rather that they do not make the thorough inquiry which I think they ought to make previous to commitment. In a case of murder more especially there can be no doubt that it is the duty of the Magistrate to sift every fact bearing on the case in order to ascertain whether the accused is guilty or innocent and to examine the accused on the facts which bear against him. One of the points of the evidence in this case which led to the presumption of the accused's guilt was that he had been absent about the time the murder was committed. His statement is to where he was at that time should have been recorded and should also have been thoroughly inquired into. It is not sufficient to say that the accused might bring witnesses to prove his innocence at the trial. It is possible that the accused may not know the names of witnesses and, if the witnesses can give evidence in his favour to exculpate him he should not be committed. A long time elapses before a trial at the Session comes on and witnesses cannot then give as clear evidence more especially as to time and date as when the facts have only lately occurred. I think every inquiry should have been made previous to commitment to ascertain not only whether there was presumption of the guilt of the accused but also whether he was innocent. It is the duty of the Police and the Magistrate not only to bring the parties suspected of being guilty to trial but also to ascertain whether the suspected can clear themselves from the crime of which they are accused. There is a clause in the Procedure Code which empowers Magistrate to commit inquiry to the defence of the accused. I believe the discretion given by this clause is much abused. It may be applied in certain cases but in serious charges of murder when the life of the accused is at stake I think the clause should not be acted upon, because no certainty of the accused's guilt can arise until his defence is negatived, and proof that his defence is false is frequently very strong evidence in favour of the prosecution of the result of the inquiry into the defence leaves the matter in doubt, it is the duty of the Magistrate to commit and leave the Sessions Court to decide which is the true story' Per JACKSON, J., in 14 W. K. 16. 11

17. If no evidence against accused is forthcoming, Magistrate is bound to discharge him.—Where the accused, who has been duly summoned or arrested under a warrant, is present to meet any charge, and no evidence is forthcoming against him owing to the absence of the prosecutor and his witnesses, if it be not shown to the Magistrate that the case is one in which he ought to adjourn the inquiry under s 344, he is bound to discharge such accused person, 15 W. R. 53. A commitment to the Sessions would not be justifiable unless the committing Magistrate considers that a prima facie case had been made out, which in his judgment ought to be tried at the Sessions, 15 M. 39. Superior Magistrates ought not in any way to fetter the discretion of their subordinates in this matter. A commitment must depend on the evidence before the Court and not on evidence which may be given in the future, 16 Cr. L. J. 5 (C); 37 A. 355.

18. Magistrate must decide whether or not there are sufficient grounds to commit and not whether accused is innocent or guilty.—A committing Magistrate has no doubt to perform the task of weighing the evidence before him with a view to decide a particular question, but the question he has to decide is not whether the accused is innocent or guilty, but whether or not there are sufficient grounds for committing the accused for trial, i.e., whether or not there was sufficient legal evidence or reasonable ground of suspicion. 26 A. 584.

19. When Magistrate may commit or discharge.—The law requires that a Magistrate should take not merely all the evidence produced in support of the prosecution, but also that produced on behalf of the accused. He is also empowered to examine the accused. Even after framing a charge a Magistrate is entitled upon consideration of the evidence, adduced before him by the accused to cancel the charge and discharge the accused s 213 (2). A Magistrate is not justified simply because there is evidence before him which seeks to lay to the charge of an accused person an offence triable by a Court of Session, in committing the accused, 1899 A. W. N. 135; nor is he justified in a grave case triable by the Court of Session, when the prosecution evidence pointed both to a dacoity having been committed and to the accused having been the persons concerned in the dacoity, in discharging the accused without there being any rebutting evidence because the evidence seemed to him improbable and exaggerated, 26 A. 584; 11 B. 372. It is not possible to fix positively the limits within which the Magistrate should exercise his discretion and different Judges have laid down various tests (some of them conflicting) which should guide a Magistrate in committing or discharging. One of the tests suggested is.—If there is sufficient evidence to go to the jury the Magistrate must commit.—I should prefer to express the rule negatively by saying that he must not in any way encroach upon the functions of a jury. BAKERELL, J. in 14 M. L. T. 200 = 14 Cr. L. J. 529, 15 Cr. L. J. 373 (M). "The test which should be applied to decide whether a commitment ought or ought not to be made on the facts is this.—Assuming that the whole of the evidence telling against the accused is true, is there a case which a Judge at a trial could leave to a jury? If the evidence is such that a Judge would have been bound to rule that there was no evidence on which a jury could convict, then a commitment ought not to be made. If there was any evidence which called for an answer, however great the preponderance in favour of the prisoner might be, then the commitment was proper'—Per HARRINGTON, J., in 9 C. W. N. 819. "The object of the preliminary inquiry in a criminal case is to ascertain whether there is any real case against the accused before a commitment is made and if all that can be said is that there is a mere scintilla of evidence, there should be no commitment."—Per HENDERSON, J. ibid, see also 11 B. 372. Another rule laid down is where a prima facie case is made out against the accused and credible witnesses have given evidence, he must be committed. "The duty of the committing officer is to ascertain whether by the evidence of the prosecution a prima facie case is made out incumbent on them to satisfy themselves fully of erroneous. Where there is a sufficient ground commitment, and he has discharged all the But a Magistrate will not be justified in making a commitment to the Sessions, unless he considers that a prima facie case has been made out, which in his judgment ought to be tried at the Sessions, 15 M. 39. In Weir II, 853, the Madras High Court observed "that a Magistrate is justified in committing an accused person for trial by a Court of Session where a prima facie case is made out that the accused has committed an offence cognizable by a Court of Session. In other words, where there is evidence not obviously false and on which, if it be accepted as reliable, a Court of Session might convict an accused person, the Magistrate is justified in sending up the case for trial and if the case is triable by a Court of Session only, he is bound to do so' See also Weir II, 542.—Where in an inquiry into a case triable by the Court of Session the prosecution evidence pointed both to a dacoity having been committed and to the accused having been the persons concerned in the dacoity, but the Magistrate considering the evidence improbable and exaggerated, rejected it and discharged the accused without there being any rebutting evidence, it was held that the Magistrate ought not to have discharged the accused as by thus pronouncing upon evidence merely because it did not commend itself to his mind he really tried the case and not merely considered whether there were sufficient grounds for committing the accused for trial, 25 A. 564 See however, the cases cited in Note 17

20. In grave offences it is better to commit the accused.—Where it appears from some of the evidence the accused might have been charged with an offence beyond the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to take cognizance of, an officer invested with powers under s 34 should rarely, if ever, try a case himself under this section 10 C. 85 = 13 C. L. R. 378, Wilkins, 112 See also 13 B. 502; 24 M 675, 25 B. 90; 3 P. R. 1891 and 1 P. R. 1893.

(i) Where death is caused by violence, Magistrate ought to commit.—The accused threw his wife down and deliberately kicked her several times thus inflicting injuries which caused her death The first class Magistrate convicted him of voluntarily causing hurt, and sentenced him to five months simple imprisonment. Held that in such a case, where death is caused by violence, the accused ought not finally to have been dealt with by the Magistrate, but should have been committed to the Court of Session Ratanlal 332. Instructions as to cases where death has ensued.—In cases where death appears to have resulted from injuries voluntarily inflicted by the accused party, Magistrate ought to be very careful not to take it upon themselves to absolve the accused from the graver charge, and convict him of hurt or grievous hurt only unless they are quite clear that there is no sufficient evidence to warrant a commitment to the Sessions for murder, or culpable homicide not amounting to murder, Wilkins 112, 10 C. B. 85 = 13 C. L. R. 373; Ratanlal 332, 13 B. 502. 3 P. R. 1891, and where the act amounts to an attempt to commit murder, 5 M. L. T. 257 = 9 Cr. L. J. 224

(ii) Attempt to murder.—Where the act of the accused amounts prima facie on the evidence to an attempt to murder a Magistrate should commit the case and not try the case himself Where he did so the conviction was set aside and the accused committed to the Sessions, 5 M. L. T. 257 = 11 Cr. L. J. 198

(iii) Grievous hurt and robbery must be committed.—If a Magistrate finds an accused person has caused grievous hurt in committing robbery, he is bound to commit him to the Court of Session under s 397, I. P. C. It is illegal to treat the grievous hurt as simple hurt and convict the accused under s 394 I. P. C. Ratanlal 376

(iv) False charge of rape.—The offence of making a false charge of rape are triable by a Sessions Court exclusively therefore a first class Magistrate has no power to convict the accused under s 378 I. P. C., but must after framing charge commit him to the Sessions, Ratanlal 393, 5 M. L. T. 257 = 9 Cr. L. J. 224

21 Where the question of discharge or commitment is one merely of probabilities better to commit, —A Magistrate has in cases triable by a Court of Session a wide discretion in the matter of weighing the evidence produced on one side or the other, but if in the exercise of such discretion the question of discharge or commitment is one merely of probabilities, the Magistrate ought rather to commit than to make an order of discharge 25 A. 564, 1904 A. W. N. B., 14 P. R. 1908 = 8 Cr. L. J. 263 An order of discharge in a case inquired into under this Chapter is proper if the Magistrate had applied his mind to the evidence, and the order shows on the whole that he came to the conclusion that no prima facie case has been made out, Weir II, 233 See Notes to s 210

22. Duty of Magistrate in dealing with the evidence adduced before him.—It is in laying down the principles which should guide a Magistrate in dealing with the evidence adduced before him that there appears to be a sharp line of difference of opinion. On the one hand it is laid down that a Magistrate must decide only on the possibility of conviction and not weigh the evidence A Magistrate ought to commit a case to the Court of Session when the evidence is enough to put the party on his trial and such a case obviously arises when credible witnesses make statements which, if believed, would sustain a conviction. Weighing of their testimony with regard to improbabilities and apparent discrepancies is more properly the function of the Court having jurisdiction to try the case, Ratanlal 319. Where there is evidence on which a conviction is possible in law the Magistrate has sufficient grounds for committing and he is bound to commit. The weighing of evidence to arrive at an opinion as to the guilt of the accused is the function of the Court having jurisdiction evidence for the defence is such in their opinion that there is a strong or probable presumption that the jury would acquit the accused if he were committed they should dismiss the charge, R. v. Cardew (1899); 8 Q. B. D. 1, per COCKBURN, C. J., at p. 6. See also Cox v Coleridge (1822) 1 B. and C. 37 at p. 80 and Halsbury's Laws of England Vol. IX, p. 320. The sort of prima facie case that warrants a committal, is defined by the Statute c. 25, as one "that is sufficient to put the party on his trial for an indictable offence."

23A. Function of a Magistrate in a case exclusively triable by a Court of Session.—In a case exclusively triable by a Court of Session a Magistrate is not empowered to write a judgment. All that he is empowered to do is to record reasons of discharge if he makes such an order and to pass the order of discharge. 40 A. 615 = 16 A. L. J. 436

MAGISTERIAL CASES

24. It is extremely undesirable that any case should be committed which the Magistrate can deal with.—It is for several reasons extremely undesirable that any case should be committed to the Sessions which can be adequately dealt with by the Magistrate. The witnesses are unnecessarily harassed, the time of the Sessions Judge and that of the assessors are needlessly taken up, the Government is put to unnecessary expense in travelling and diet expenses and the lapse of time which often occurs before the Sessions trial, introduces special risks of failure of justice. All cases which are ordinarily triable by the Court of Session, but can be disposed of by the District Magistrate under the provisions of s. 30 supra, should be kept by the latter on his own file and not made over to a Subordinate Magistrate. If a Subordinate Magistrate finds, in the course of a trial before him, that the case is one which should, in his opinion, be dealt with by the District Magistrate under s. 30, he should, though he may have power to commit to the Court of Session, stay proceedings, and submit the case, under the provisions of c. 346, to the District Magistrate. C P Cr Clr, Part II, No 30. See 1 B. L. R. 103 = 8 Cr. L. J. 360; 10 P. R. 1909 = 11 Cr. L. J. 18.

25. Careful exercise of discretion necessary—only cases which Magistrates cannot adequately punish should be committed.—It is only where the Magistrate is of opinion that adequate punishment cannot be inflicted by him that he should commit 4 Bom. L. R. 85. Reading ss. 251 and 207, it would seem that the Legislature has given to a Magistrate discretion to commit to a Court of Session only such of those cases as he is competent to try as, in his opinion, ought to be tried by such Court because the offence cannot be adequately punished by himself. If a case be one which a Magistrate is both competent to try and can adequately punish, then apparently he has no discretion to commit it, 8 B. L. R. 23 = 25 Cr. L. J. 654. When a Magistrate could commit a magisterial case—A case shown in Col. 8, Sch. II, as triable by a Magistrate only might, yet be committed to the Court of Session, for although the maximum sentence of imprisonment that can be passed may be within the Magistrate's power, if there is no limit to the amount of fine by which the offence is punishable, as the Magistrate's power in this respect is limited, the commitment may be made to obtain a sentence of fine in a higher amount by the Court of Session, 24 C. 429. The order of commitment should specifically state that the case had been committed with a view to the infliction of a heavier sentence of fine than the Magistrate is competent to inflict otherwise, the commitment is liable to be quashed. See also 2 A. 32, and Notes 9 to 215

26. Case which he can adequately punish ought not to be committed—In committing cases not exclusively triable by the Court of Session, Magistrates should exercise a proper discretion and give adequate reasons for making commitment to the Court of Sessions. Where a Magistrate finding that there was a prima facie case against an accused person under ss. 352 and 447, I P. C. committed the accused to the Court of Session, it was held that the commitment was wrong on a point of law because (1) there was no warrant for the commitment of such cases and (2) the maximum punishment under each offence was one which the Magistrate could inflict, 1906 A. W. N. 28 = 3 A. L. J. 14 = 3 Cr. L. J. 94; 15 Bom. L. R. 998 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 165; 8 B. L. R. 23 = 15 Cr. L. J. 664

27. Magistrate must give reasons.—The Magistrate must give his reasons so as to enable the High Court to judge whether the commitment is made in the sound exercise of the discretionary power vested in him by law, 11 Bom. L. R. 18 = 9 Cr. L. J. 163. The Magistrate should specially state that the case has been committed with a view to the infliction of a heavier sentence than he is competent to inflict, 24 C. 429. If the Magistrate does not give adequate reasons, the commitment may be quashed, 1906 A. W. N. 28 = 3 A. L. J. 14 = 3 Cr. L. J. 94; 6 A. L. J. 889 = 11 Cr. L. J. 8; 15 Bom. L. R. 998 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 165 = 14 Cr. L. J. 657; 8 B. L. R. 23 = 15 Cr. L. J. 664

28 Offence exclusively by Magistrate cannot be committed—A commitment of the accused charged under s 9 of Act I of 1878 (Opium) is bad in law as under that section the conviction if there be one, must be before a Magistrate 19 A 463, 1 W R 5, 5 M H C R 277

210. (1) When upon such evidence being taken and such examination (if any) being made, the Magistrate is satisfied that there are sufficient grounds for committing the accused for trial he shall frame a charge under his hand declaring with what offence the accused is charged

When charge is to be explained and copy furnished to accused (2) As soon as *such charge has been framed it shall be read and explained to the accused, and a copy thereof shall, if he so require be given to him free of cost

1 Upon such evidence being taken.—A commitment made without taking any evidence on a preliminary inquiry is illegal and ought to be quashed Ratanlal 100 Having regard to s 208 a Magistrate inquiring into a case under this Chapter is not empowered to frame a charge or make out an order for commitment until he has taken all such evidence as the accused may produce before him 20 A 264, 28 A 177 This section does not require a Magistrate to record the evidence of witnesses, whom in the exercise of the discretion given by sub-sec (3) of s 208 he has deemed unnecessary to summon 36 M 321 But when an accused person wishes to make a statement the Magistrate is bound to record it 10 C L R 54 though an omission to comply with s 342 might be treated as an irregularity 23 M 636 See Notes 7 to 10 to s. 208

Magistrate may commit on evidence recorded by another Magistrate—After the prosecution evidence was recorded by a second class Magistrate the District Magistrate transferred the case to a first-class Magistrate who acting on the evidence already recorded by the second class Magistrate committed the accused held the order of commitment was not illegal 35 A 315

2 Discretion of the inquiring Magistrate ought not to be fettered by superior Magistrate.—A District Magistrate is not justified having regard to the express language of the section in calling on a Subordinate Magistrate to commit a case unless it can be shown that if that Magistrate was not satisfied as required by this section he ought to have been satisfied 9 Bom L R 225 = 5 Cr L J 213, where 11 B 372 and 27 B. 84 are referred to

Adding charges merely for the purpose of committing is bad—The practice followed by some Magistrates of adding charges apparently for the purpose of enabling them to commit those cases to the Court of Session without any reasonable ground for the addition is to be highly deprecated 11 Bom L R 18 = 9 Cr L J 163

4 Magistrate should frame a charge before commitment—If no charge is framed the procedure under s 228 will have to be observed In the Code generally the word charge is used as a statement of a specific offence and not as indicating the entire series of offences of which a person is accused 8 B 200 See definition of charge s 4 (c)

5 Even after framing a charge Magistrate can make an order of discharge—See s 213 (2). A Magistrate framed certain charges against the accused intending to commit the case to the Court of Sessions On objection being taken that a charge was bad for want of sanction the Magistrate amended the charges and expressed his desire to hear the case himself It was then contended that the Magistrate could not amend the charge and proceed with the case himself when once he had committed to the Court of Sessions and s. 215 was relied on held that the mere framing of a charge does not amount to an order of commitment under s. 213 or s. 214 which takes effect after framing a charge under s. 210 it is open to the Magistrate to consider whether he ought to commit or not 12 Bom L R 521 = 11 Cr L J 436, 5 C W N 110; 39 C 833, U B R (1915) 3rd Qr 29 See however Ratanlal 161 where it was held down that the drawing up of a charge must always follow the determination of a Magistrate to commit a case to the Court of Sessions which determination when duly expressed the Magistrate becomes functus officio as to that matter. Where therefore, a Magistrate first drew up a charge directing the commitment of the accused, and afterwards, taking further evidence, discharged them. Held that the order of discharge is illegal and the case should be committed for trial to the Court of Session. See Note 4 to s. 213.

6 Persons implicated in the commission of the same offence should all be tried or committed together.—When several persons are accused of the commission of the same offence it would be obviously convenient if a Magistrate were to punish some and commit others to the Court of Session, and as the Code does not seem to contemplate such a procedure, Magistrate should, if he considers the case to be one for the Sessions commit all those concerned for trial before that tribunal Wilkins, 108; Oudh Cr. Dig., at p. 8, 1881 A. W. N. 6. But the mere fact that the accused who have been committed to the Sessions were acting in concert with those who have not yet been arrested is no reason for quashing the commitment, 7 M. L. T. 187 = 11 Cr. L. J. 333. See also Wells 1, 443, where it was held, that where two or more persons are jointly indicted and the jurisdiction of the Magistrate is ousted in the case of one, the proper course is to commit both or all for trial before the Court of Session. See also 15 Bom. L. R. 998 = 3 Bom. Cr. Ca. 165 = 14 Cr. L. J. 657.

7. Charge when framed shall be read to the accused.—The Magistrate when he has prepared the charge is bound to read it to the accused and to ask him if he wishes to have any witnesses summoned to give evidence on his behalf at the Sessions. 2 W. R. 80.

8 Sessions Judge must either accept or frame other charges.—Where a Magistrate gives reason for committing a case for trial in a certain way, the Sessions Judge must either accept the charge as framed or frame others himself. He is not authorised by the Code to insist on a re-drawing of the charge by the Magistrate unless he specifies the charge which he wishes to be sent up, 25 W. R. 17.

9. Remission of Court-fee on copy of charge.—In the exercise of the powers conferred by s. 85 of The Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), the Governor General in Council is pleased to remit the fee payable on a copy of a charge or translation thereof when the copy is given to an accused person. Notification, Government of India No 310 of 21st January, 1886, Wilkins, 177, Adden, 153.

211. (1) The accused shall be required at once to give in, orally or in writing, a list of the persons (if any) whom he wishes to be summoned to give evidence on his trial.

(2) The Magistrate may, in his discretion allow the accused to give in any further list of witnesses at a subsequent time, and where the accused is committed for trial before the High Court nothing in this section shall be deemed to preclude the accused from giving, at any time before his trial to the clerk of the Crown a further list of the persons whom he wishes to be summoned to give evidence on such trial.

Notes—1. Accused is entitled to have the witnesses named in the list summoned to attend at the trial.—Section 291 lays down that an accused shall not be entitled of right to have any witness summoned other than the witnesses named in the list except as provided by this section and s. 231. See s. 216 as to duty of the Magistrate. An accused person is entitled to have his witnesses summoned and examined even though they were named as implicated in the offence with which he is charged, 6 B. L. R. Appx. 65 = 15 W. R. 7; 19 M. 375 and even when the Magistrate entertains doubts as to the value of their evidence, as it is impossible to state beforehand what credit will be given to their evidence 6 B. L. R. Appx. 78 = 15 W. R. 15. As a matter of right, a prisoner is entitled to have the witnesses in the list, which he delivers to the Magistrate, summoned and examined, 23 W. R. 56; 2 W. R. 6; 3 W. R. 36.

2 Duty of Magistrate to call upon the accused specifically to give in the list.—The question by the Magistrate to the accused "have you any evidence?" is not a sufficient compliance with this section. It is ambiguous and might suggest to the accused only an enquiry as to whether he had witnesses ready in Court. What the Magistrate is bound to do under this section is to require the accused to give a list of the witnesses he desires to call, 7 Bom. L. R. 723. Though the language of the section is thus imperative, there is nothing in it which leaves it open to a Magistrate to prevent a prisoner from reserving his defence for the Court of Session, 4 B. L. R. Appx. 1.

3 Accused's right to reserve defence and not to disclose names of his witnesses—An accused person may reserve his defence and also refuse to furnish the Magistrate with a list of his witnesses as for instance for fear that his witnesses might be tampered with. In such a case he might bring his own witnesses but is not entitled as of right to have the assistance of the Court to compel their attendance 14 A 242

4 Witnesses' list may be filed after commitment—Committing Magistrates cannot force the accused to disclose either the names of their intended witnesses or what those witnesses would be called to prove 14 A 232

5 Accused has no right to have his witnesses summoned after committal—If an accused person on being called upon under this section to give a list of witnesses whom he wishes to be summoned to give evidence on his trial declines to give in such list he cannot compel the Magistrate after committal to issue any summons for witnesses on his behalf. Neither under such circumstances will the Sessions Judge be obliged to issue summonses for the attendance of such witnesses unless he is satisfied that their evidence may be material 19 A 502

6 Grounds of refusal to summon defence witnesses must be stated.—See Note 9 to s. 108. When a prisoner under this section gives in a list of witnesses he wishes to summon after his case has been committed the Magistrate is bound to exercise his discretion upon the point and to state whether he will summon the witnesses or not and he ought to state his reasons for not doing so. If he thinks the witnesses were included in the list for the purpose of delay he should proceed under the second proviso of s. 210 16 W. R. 14. There is no reason to refuse an application for summons simply because a large number of witnesses is mentioned therein 110 785 at p. 780

212. The Magistrate may in his discretion summon and examine any witness named in any list given to him under section 211

Notes—1 Object of the section—The object of this section is to prevent the concoction of false evidence after commitment. This is a discretion that should be rarely exercised for the inconsiderate examination of witnesses cited for the defence at the trial may seriously prejudice the accused person and harass the witnesses. But if he examines such witness at his own motion or at the request of the accused and is satisfied from such evidence that there is no sufficient ground for committing the accused then s. 213 (2) enables him to cancel the charge and discharge the accused.

2 Examination of defence witnesses by Magistrate when defence reserved—The fact that an accused person committed to a Court of Session by a Magistrate has reserved his defence does not preclude the Magistrate from acting under this section. The section gives the Magistrate the widest possible discretion to summon and to examine any witness named in any list given to him under s. 211. The Code does not require a Magistrate to record his reasons. He is given a discretion which he may be trusted to use properly and it will be for a person impugning his order to prove that a judicial discretion is not used before the High Court will interfere 18 A 380; 4 B L R Appx. 1.

3. Legality as commitment without such examination when Magistrate intended to examine—Where the evidence for the prosecution had been recorded and certain witnesses for the defence had been summoned and the Magistrate at the request of the accused had also consented to make a local inspection but finally at the direction of the Sessions Judge committed the case to the Sessions without examining any of the defence witnesses and without making the intended local inspection held the commitment was bad in law and ought to be quashed 1906 A W N 306 = 4 Cr L J 452. In 15 Cr L J 704 W it was held that s. 212 shows that it is not imperative on Magistrate to examine any defence witnesses after reaching the stage of framing a charge under s. 210 and it does not matter that summonses have been issued to the witnesses. This case was committed under s. 347. See Note 7 to s. 215

4. Witnesses not to be unfairly dealt with—When witnesses for the defence do attend it is illegal on the part of the Court to threaten them with penalties of the law unless they are evidently giving wilfully false evidence or persistently refusing to give evidence of facts which must be within their knowledge, 18 A 242

213. (1) When the accused on being required to give in a list under section 211 has declined to do so or when he has given in such list and the witnesses (if any) included therein whom the Magistrate desires to examine have been summoned and examined under section 212 the Magistrate may make an

order committing the accused for trial by the High Court or the Court of Session (as the case may be) and (unless the Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate) shall also record briefly the reasons for such commitment.

(2) If the Magistrate, after hearing the witnesses for the defence is satisfied that there are not sufficient grounds for committing the accused he may cancel the charge and discharge the accused.

Notes.—1 Commitment must be to the Sessions Court having local jurisdiction.—The expression 'the Court of Session' here can only mean the Court of Session having jurisdiction to try the case under s 177 Section 63 of Act X of 1872 provided that Magistrates shall ordinarily commit to the Court of Session for the Sessions division in which the district to which they appointed is situated. But the present Code contains no similar provision. Where a commitment is made to a wrong Sessions Court it must be set aside notwithstanding the provision of s. 531 35 M 331 dissenting from 8 B 312 and 15 A 350.

2. Magistrate not bound to examine witness for the defence.—Sections 212 and 213 do not compel a Magistrate to summon and examine witnesses for the defence after a charge has been drawn up or even before the charge is drawn up if the Magistrate for reasons to be recorded deems it unnecessary to do so. s. 208 (3) 35 M 331 See Note 8 under s. 203 and Note 7 to s. 215.

3. Cross-examination of prosecution witnesses may be allowed even after charge.—The words 'witnesses for the defence' in sub-sec. (2) are wide enough to cover evidence extracted by cross-examination from witnesses for the prosecution. It is therefore open to the Magistrate to allow cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses even after a charge had been framed and on consideration of such evidence cancel the charge 39 C. 885; 5 C. W. N 110 referred to. See Note 11 to s. 208. S 347 cannot be read as subject to s. 208 so as to render it imperative on a Magistrate after he has decided to commit the case to the Sessions to allow the accused to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses and to call witnesses in his defence 35 C. 43; Ratanlal 975, 12 Bom. L. R. 923 = 11 Cr. L. J 692 See however Note 13 to s. 208.

4. Until commitment a Magistrate may cancel the charge.—It is only the order of commitment under s. 213 or s. 214 which takes away the Magistrate's power of further proceeding with the case. Even after framing a charge under s. 210 it is open to the Magistrate to consider whether he ought to commit or not 5 C. W. N 110; 12 Bom. L. R. 821 = 11 Cr. L. J 496 —But if he commits he has no longer the power to discharge nor is a Magistrate who has pronounced the order of commitment competent to try the accused for an offence triable by him by cancelling the charges of offences beyond his jurisdiction 3 C. L. J 33. See 1 L. B. R. 346 as to the scope of sub-sec. (2). The ruling in Ratanlal 161 of the year 1881 which seems to lay down that an order of commitment must follow the making of a charge does not seem to be correct having regard to sub-sec. (2). See Note 5 to s. 210.

5. Case compounded after commitment, discharge illegal.—Where a Magistrate after committing a person for trial on a charge of adultery immediately afterwards on the representation of the prosecutor that he wished to withdraw from the prosecution discharged the accused it was held that the order of discharge was bad as under this section a commitment once made can be quashed by the High Court only. The order of discharge was therefore quashed and the case sent back to the Sessions Judge directing him to examine the complainant and then take such further proceedings as to him might seem fit 4 A 150.

6. Power to commit after cancelling discharge.—Where a Magistrate after examining four witnesses for the prosecution discharged the accused but subsequently on becoming aware that there was a fifth witness present cancelled his order of discharge took further evidence and committed the accused for trial to the Court of Session held that the commitment was good 7 M. H. C. R. Appx. XL, 28 C. 211.

7. Magistrate must marshal the evidence.—In preparing the reasons for commitment the committing Magistrate should marshal the evidence in the order in which it should come under judicial precision the proof against each particular

8. Magistrate must give reasons for commitment.—Failure of the Magistrate to give reasons for commitment in a case which he could deal with may amount to an illegality and the High Court may set aside the commitment 15 Bom. L. R. 898 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 165 = 14 Cr. L. J 637 and see Note 27 to s. 209.

3. Accused's right to reserve defence and not to disclose names of his witnesses—An accused person reserves his right to reserve his defence, and to reserve his witnesses, as for instance for his own witnesses, but not for his defence, 14 A. 242

3. Witnesses' list may be filed after commitment—Committing Magistrates cannot force the accused to disclose either the names of their intended witnesses, or what those witnesses would be called to prove, 14 A. 242

5. Accused has no right to have his witnesses summoned after committal—If an accused person on being called upon under this section to give a list of witnesses whom he wishes to be summoned to give evidence on his trial, declines to give in such list, he cannot compel the Magistrate after committal to issue any summons for witnesses on his behalf. Neither under such circumstances will the Sessions Judge be obliged to issue summonses for the attendance of such witnesses unless he is satisfied that their evidence may be material, 19 A. 802

6. Grounds of refusal to summon defence witnesses must be stated.—See Note 9 to s. 208. When a prisoner under this section gives in a list of witnesses he wishes to summon, after his case has been committed, the Magistrate is bound to exercise his discretion upon the point, and to state whether he will summon the witnesses or not and if he is not to summon them, he must state the reasons why, 19 A. 802

Power of Magistrate to examine such witnesses, s. 200 para. 2

212. The Magistrate may, in his discretion, summon and examine any witness named in any list given to him under section 211

Notes—1. Object of the section—The object of this section is to prevent the concoction of false evidence after commitment. This is a discretion that should be rarely exercised, for the inconsiderate examination of witnesses cited for the defence at the trial, may seriously prejudice the accused person and harass the witnesses. But if he examines such witness at his own motion or at the request of the accused and is satisfied from such evidence that there is no sufficient ground for committing the accused then s. 213 (2) enables him to cancel the charge and discharge the accused.

2. Examination of defence witnesses by Magistrate when defence reserved—The fact that an accused person committed to a Court of Session by a Magistrate has reserved his defence does not preclude the Magistrate from acting under this section. The section gives the Magistrate the widest possible discretion to summon and to examine any witness named in any list given to him under s. 211. The Code does not require a Magistrate to record his reasons. He is given a discretion which he may be trusted to use properly and it will be for a person impugning his order to prove that a judicial discretion is not used, before the High Court will interfere, 18 A. 380, 4 B. L. R. Appx. 1

3. Legality of commitment without such examination when Magistrate intended to examine—Where the evidence for the prosecution had been recorded and certain witnesses for the defence had been summoned and the Magistrate at the request of the accused had also consented to make a local inspection, but finally at the direction of the Sessions Judge committed the case to the Sessions without examining any of the defence witnesses, and without making the intended local inspection, held the commitment was bad in law and ought to be quashed, 1908 A. W. N. 306 ~ 4 Cr. L. J. 432. In 15 Cr. L. J. 704 (M) it was held that s. 212 shows that it is not imperative on Magistrate to examine any defence witnesses after reaching the stage of framing a charge under s. 210 and it does not matter that summonses have been issued to the witnesses. This case was committed under s. 347. See Note 7 to s. 215

4. Witnesses not to be unfairly dealt with.—When witnesses for the defence do attend it is illegal on the part of the Court to threaten them with penalties of the law, unless they are evidently giving wilfully false evidence or persistently refusing to give evidence of facts which must be within their knowledge, 14 A. 242

213. (1) When the accused on being required to give in a list under section 211, has declined to do so, or when he has given in such list and the witnesses (if any) included therein whom the Magistrate desires to examine have been summoned and examined under section 212, the Magistrate may make an order committing the accused for trial by the High Court or the Court of Session (as the case may be), and (unless the Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate) shall also record briefly the reasons for such commitment.

(2) If the Magistrate, after hearing the witnesses for the defence, is satisfied that there are not sufficient grounds for committing the accused, he may cancel the charge and discharge the accused.

Notes.—1. Commitment must be to the Sessions Court having local jurisdiction.—The expression 'the Court of Session' here can only mean the Court of Session having jurisdiction to try the case under s. 177 Section 63 of Act X of 1872 provided that Magistrates shall ordinarily commit to the Court of Session for the Sessions division in which the district to which they appointed is situated. But the present Code contains no similar provision. Where a commitment is made to a wrong Sessions Court, it must be set aside notwithstanding the provision of s. 531, 35 M. 387 dissenting from 8 B. 313 and 18 A. 330.

2. Magistrate not bound to examine witness for the defence.—Sections 212 and 213 do not compel a Magistrate to summon and examine witnesses for the defence after a charge has been drawn up or even before the charge is drawn up if the Magistrate for reasons to be recorded deems it unnecessary to do so, s. 208 (3), 36 M. 321. See Note 8 under s. 203 and Note 7 to s. 215.

3. Cross-examination of prosecution witnesses may be allowed even after charge.—The words 'witnesses for the defence' in subsec. (2) are wide enough to cover evidence extracted by cross-examination from witnesses for the prosecution. It is therefore open to the Magistrate to allow cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses even after a charge had been framed and on consideration of such evidence cancel the charge, 39 C. 885; 5 C. W. N. 110 referred to. See Note 11 to s. 203. S. 347 cannot be read as subject to s. 208, so as to render it imperative on a Magistrate after he has decided to commit the case to the Sessions to allow the accused to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses and to call witnesses in his defence, 36 C. 48; Ratanlal 975; 12 Bom. L. R. 923 = 11 Cr. L. J. 692. See, however, Note 13 to s. 208.

4. Until commitment a Magistrate may cancel the charge.—It is only the order of commitment under s. 213 or s. 214 which takes away the Magistrate's power of further proceeding with the case. Even after framing a charge under s. 210 it is open to the Magistrate to consider whether he ought to commit or not 5 C. W. N. 110; 12 Bom. L. R. 821 = 11 Cr. L. J. 496. But if he commits, he has no longer the power to discharge, nor is a Magistrate who has pronounced the order of commitment, competent to try the accused for an offence triable by him by cancelling the charges of offences beyond his jurisdiction, 2 C. L. J. 33. See 1 L. B. P. 345 as to the scope of subsec. (2). The ruling in Ratanlal 181 of the year 1881 which seems to lay down that an order of commitment must follow the making of a charge does not seem to be correct having regard to subsec. (2). See Note 5 to s. 210.

5. Case compounded after commitment, discharge illegal.—Where a Magistrate after committing a person for trial on a charge of adultery, immediately afterwards on the representation of the prosecutor wished to withdraw from the prosecution discharged the accused, it was held that the order of discharge was bad, as under this section a commitment once made can be quashed by the High Court only. The discharge was therefore quashed and the case sent back to the Sessions Judge, directing him to complainant and then take such further proceedings as to him might seem fit, 4 A. 160.

6. Power to commit after cancelling discharge.—Where a Magistrate after examining the prosecution discharged the accused but subsequently on becoming aware that the accused had present cancelled his order of discharge, took further evidence and committed the accused to the Court of Session, held that the commitment was good, 7 M. H. C. R. Appx. XL; 23 C. 211.

7. Magistrate must marshal the evidence.—In preparing the charge committing Magistrate should marshal the evidence in the order in which it is given.

8. Magistrate must give reasons for commitment.—Failure of the Magistrate to give reasons for commitment in a case which he could deal with may amount to an illegality as to the commitment, 15 Bom. L. R. 998 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 165 = 14 Cr. L. J. 887 and

9 Magistrate must sign warrant of commitment.—The signature of the Magistrate to the warrant of commitment should not be affixed by a stamp, 6 M 396

10 Commitment in the absence of the accused.—Where one of the accused is absent when the proceedings are held at which the order of commitment is made, the order is illegal, 5 C W. N. 110. But where a person, who was allowed under s 285 to appear by agent was committed, the High Court held that the commitment was not necessarily illegal, but as the agent had not been required to give in a list of witnesses whom he wished to have summoned for his principal, the Court directed the Magistrate to make the demand, 2 W. R. 50. See also 17 C. W. N. 1248.

11. Joint indictment of two or more persons.—When two or more persons are jointly indicted and the jurisdiction of the Magistrate is ousted in the case of one, the proper course is to commit both or all for trial before the Court of Session, Welr I, 448. But the adoption of a different course by the committing Magistrate is not in contravention of any provision of law, Welr II, 258. See Note 6 to s. 210

12. Opposing fractions not to be jointly committed.—Where riot is charged and the Magistrate is about to commit the contending parties for trial, not only should separate charges be drawn up against each party, but separate trials should be held, since the offences of each party are distinct and separate and both the parties have not the same common object, 8 W. R. 47; 9 W. R. 33; 6 C 96; 14 C. 338; 20 C. 537; 8 C. W. N. 180. But the ruling in 25 M. 61 (P.C.) does not apply to preliminary inquiries prior to commitment, 26 M. 592. In cases of joint commitment, the Sessions Judge should frame separate charges and try separately. See Note 7 to s. 215

13 High Court's power of quashing commitment.—A commitment made under this section can be quashed by the High Court under s 215 only on a point of law, 15 A. L. J. 756. Absence of evidence to warrant commitment is a point of law and may furnish good ground for quashing commitment, U. B. R. (1917) 3rd 2r. 29. But a commitment made under s 436 is liable in revision to be set aside by the High Court on the merits, &c., where it is made on evidence which is insufficient and unreliable, 7 C. W. N. 327.

214. [Repealed by Act XII of 1923] See Chapter XXXIII.

215. A commitment once made under section 213* by a competent Magistrate† or by a Civil or Revenue Court under section 478, can be quashed by the High Court only, and only on a point of law

Notes.—1. Section applies only to commitments made under the four sections specified.—This section does not deal with commitments directed by the District Magistrate or Sessions Judge under s 436, 31 C. 1; 7 C. W. N. 327; 30 M. 224; 27 M. 54. An order passed by the High Court directing a commitment under s 528 (i) (ii) is not at all subject to its revisional powers, nor is this section applicable to such a commitment 27 M. 54

2 Section does not apply to directions to commit but High Court may revise.—This section only applies to a commitment actually made and not to a case where under s. 436, a Sessions Judge has merely directed a commitment to be made, 30 M. 224, where 7 C. W. N. 327; 15 C. 621 and 14 M. 334 are referred to, such directions are subject to the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court under ss. 435 and 439 and may be quashed on the merits. An order of commitment made by a District Magistrate in direct contravention of the provisions of s. 436 (a) in committing the accused without allowing them an opportunity to show cause against the commitment is bad in law and must be quashed, 28 F. W. R. 1913 = 14 C. L. J. 605; 15 M. L. J. 373 = 2 C. L. J. 774; 6 M. 372

3 Does this section oust the general revisional jurisdiction of the High Court?—In 2 A. 398, STUART, C. J. (SIAMKIE, J., doubting), was of opinion that the terms of the section were not used in any exclusive sense so as to deprive the High Court of its large powers of revision

4. Jurisdiction of the Criminal Appellate Bench of the High Court to quash the commitment made to it in its original criminal jurisdiction.—It is doubtful if the Criminal Appellate Bench of the High Court has jurisdiction to quash a commitment made to the High Court for trial under its ordinary original criminal jurisdiction. The practice has been to apply to the Judge exercising the original criminal jurisdiction of the High Court, 36 C. 45.

* The words and figure "or section 216" have been omitted by the Criminal Law Amendment Act 1923

† The words "or by a Court of Session under section 477" have been omitted by the Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Act 1923

5. High Court alone can quash commitment.—Except the High Court no other authority is competent to quash any commitment, even in a compoundable case, 4 A. 180; 18 M. L. J. 523; Weir II, 282. If in the opinion of the Sessions Judge, commitment made to his Court is illegal, he should refer the case for the orders of the High Court, the insufficiency of the legal evidence against the prisoner is no ground for such a reference 1 W. R. 8. In such cases it may sometimes be advisable to bring the matter to the notice of the District Magistrate with a view to his instructing the committing Magistrate to obtain additional evidence.

6. No application to quash commitment will lie after commitment of trial.—This section is inapplicable to a case in which a reference is made to quash the commitment after the accused has been put on his trial before the Court of Session and pleaded not guilty and has been tried with the aid of assessors, Weir II, 282; 12 C. L. R. 120; 9 L. J. 230 (Bind). See contra 6 C. 384, where it was held that the High Court can quash a commitment at any stage of the case.

7. Irregularities in procedure how far vitiate a commitment.—The principles laid down in s. 537 should in general guide the High Court in dealing with an application under this section, 12 Cr. L. J. 320 (Bind).

(i) Joint inquiry does not vitiate commitment.—There is no provision of law requiring separate inquiry in respect of each accused person. S. 233 refers to trials only. Though the trial could not be joint there can be no objection to the proceedings prior to commitment, on the ground there was misjoinder of offences or offenders at the preliminary inquiry, 7 Bom. L. R. 431 = 2 Cr. L. J. 432. The ruling of the Privy Council in 23 M. 61 cannot be extended to a preliminary inquiry leading up to a commitment so as to render the commitment itself illegal because there was misjoinder of offences or offenders. S. 233 and the succeeding sections apply to joint trials only. In such a case the Sessions Court ought to frame separate charges and try the accused separately as if there were two or more commitments, 26 M. 392, 17 Cr. L. J. 389. See also 1920 A. W. N. 306, where it was held that the fact the Magistrate had wrongly committed jointly three persons charged with offences under ss. 212 and 216, I. P. C., to the Sessions, when they should have been committed separately under s. 233 was not a sufficient ground for quashing their commitment under this section. A commitment is not vitiated because charges are framed in respect of offences which cannot be tried together (1916) 2 M. W. N. 179 = 17 Cr. L. J. 369. Where, however, a Magistrate held a joint investigation in the case of four accused persons who were charged with different offences under ss. 211, 214, 465 and 193, I. P. C. Held, that the procedure was illegal and so much to the prejudice of the accused that the commitment must be quashed, Ratanlal 925. See Note 4.

(ii) Issuing a warrant instead of a summons.—The error of a Magistrate in proceeding by a warrant instead of by a summons is not an error for which the commitment is quashed.

(iii) Intitling instead of signing the warrant of commitment is not material. 12 Cr. L. J. 320 (Bind).

(iv) Want of sanction under s. 195.—Unless the accused have been prejudiced and there has been a failure of justice, a commitment ought not to be quashed merely because of the absence of sanction under s. 195. See 12 Cr. L. J. 320 (Bind), and Note 23 to s. 195 and 24 M. 121. See however, 6 A. 95.

(v) Refused by the Inquiring Magistrate to allow cross examination or to examine witnesses of the accused under s. 208.—A Magistrate in making a commitment must follow the provisions of this Chapter. Where he has not carried out the imperative provisions of law laid down in s. 208 before committing the accused for trial, the case come before the Sessions Court in a manner not contemplated by law and the commitment is illegal and must be quashed. A Magistrate is bound under s. 208 to take all the evidence which may be produced by the prosecution, to allow all the witnesses of the prosecution to be cross-examined by the accused, and to take all such evidence as might be produced on behalf of the accused. A commitment made without complying with these provisions is illegal and will be quashed 6 L. B. R. 123 = 5 Bar. L. T. 239 = 10 Cr. L. J. 877 (F.B.) ROBINSON, J., dissenting. But where as under s. 208 (3) and ss. 212 and 213 the law allows a Magistrate a discretion and does not compel him to summon and examine witnesses for the defence and a Magistrate refused to summon certain witness for the accused on the ground that the application for summoning the witnesses was made too late, the commitment is valid, 36 M. 321; 42 C. 608. A Magistrate is not empowered to frame a charge or make out an order for commitment until and after he had taken all such evidence as the accused had before him for hearing, 20 A. 268; 26 A. 177. In these two cases the rule is stated in terms wider than those of the Code and no reference is made to the discretion of the Magistrate. See also 1906 A. W. N. 306 = 4 Cr. L. J. 452. A Magistrate errs if he does not take all the evidence produced before drawing up a charge unless he can justify his procedure on some such ground as the evidence of a witness is obviously irrelevant or that he considers the fact in essence between the parties proved one way or the other by the evidence already produced 10 A. L. J. 144 = 13 Cr. L. J. 443. In Ratanlal 975 and 36 C. 48, it was held that under the provisions of

s. 347 a Magistrate was not bound to examine the witnesses of the accused and a commitment was not illegal because the Magistrate refused to do so. These cases were not followed in the Burma Full Bench Case. In 36 C. 43 the accused did not cross-examine the prosecution witnesses immediately after their examination in chief, but applied to cross-examine the witness after the prosecution closed its case. The decisions may be supported though the reasoning is open to question. In 15 Cr. L. J. 704 (M.) it was held following 36 C. 43 and dissenting from 20 A. 264 and 26 A. 177 that the Magistrate has a discretion to examine witnesses or not after he reaches the stage of framing a charge under s. 210.

(vi) Not giving reasons may invalidate commitment—See Note 9 below

8. Insufficiency of evidence, how far a ground for quashing commitment.—A commitment can be quashed on a point of law only. An order of commitment cannot be quashed on the ground that there is no evidence on the committing Magistrate's record to sustain the charges, 13 Bom. L. R. 201 = 12 Cr. L. J. 336; 7 Bur. L. T. 26 = 13 Cr. L. J. 270. In 27 M. L. J. 593 = 15 Cr. L. J. 665, it was held following 13 Bom. L. R. 201 that it is not open to a High Court to quash a commitment on the ground that there is no evidence to justify the commitment and in such a case the accused ought not to be deprived of the benefit of an acquittal, the case in 6 A. 93 was not followed. A commitment made without direct evidence and merely on presumption is not erroneous in point of law, and as such cannot be quashed under this section. Where there is evidence that a forged document was used on behalf of an accused person with his knowledge or under his instructions or with his approval, which might be proved by the conduct of the accused, it cannot be said that there is no evidence upon which commitment could be made, 4 C. W. N. 116. But where the order of commitment rests upon a misapprehension and there is no evidence upon which it could be supported, Weir 11, 282; or accepting the evidence as true if it does not necessary establish an offence, 2 C. L. J. 46 = 2 Cr. L. J. 333; or there is no evidence to connect the accused with the charge, 6 A. 93, the commitment may be quashed. In 5 C. W. N. 411 and 9 C. W. N. 829, the Calcutta High Court has laid down that whether there is or is not sufficient evidence to warrant a commitment is a question of law within the meaning of this section. Commitments duly made could be quashed under this section, when the evidence stopped short of a case which could properly be left to a jury. Under the Code, a Sessions Judge has not the power to withdraw a case from the jury on any account whatsoever. But if the evidence in a case is such that the presiding judge would, if he had the power, withdraw it from the jury, the High Court (which alone has the power to quash a commitment) ought not to allow the commitment to stand. But it is questionable, how far it is for the benefit of the accused to object to the commitment. The result of the trial would be an acquittal, but by obtaining an order under this section, he would be liable under s. 403 to further proceedings if evidence is found against him which was overlooked before 2 A. 398. See also 1886 A. W. N. 236.

9. That the case is triable by a Magistrate whether a ground for quashing commitment.—If a Magistrate thinks that a case not exclusively triable by the Court of Session must be committed, he must state his grounds in the order to enable the High Court to judge whether the commitment is made in the sound exercise of the discretionary power vested in him by law, 11 Bom. L. R. 18 = 9 Cr. L. J. 163; 15 Bom. L. R. 998 and 999 = 14 Cr. L. J. 657; 24 C. 429; 8 B. L. R. 23 = 15 Cr. L. J. 664. The mere fact that the offences disclosed by the evidence not interfere as there is no point of law, 11 A. L. J. 439 = 14 Cr. L. J. 304. A Magistrate going on leave exercises all improper discretion in committing to the Court of Session a case properly triable by the Magistrate, merely on the ground that the witnesses for the defence are not in attendance, and that it would be inconvenient for his successors to commence the trial anew, but in so doing he does not commit such illegality as will justify the High Court in quashing the commitment, Ratanlal 110. Where a Magistrate committed the accused on a charge under s. 323, I. P. C., triable by any Magistrate, held that the words 'ought to be tried' in ss. 207 and 247 of this Code must be read with s. 254 and a case which ought to be tried by a Court of Session is one which the Magistrate is either not competent to try or is one in which, in his opinion, adequate punishment cannot be inflicted by him. As this was not the opinion of the Magistrate, the Bombay High Court in the case of Purni Ramchod (3rd January, 1902) quashed the commitment, holding the same illegal and directed the Magistrate to dispose of the case according to law. But where there were counter-charges of riot one of which resulted in homicide and the Magistrate committed both cases although the charge under s. 143, I. P. C., in one case was purely magisterial, the High Court refused to quash the commitment as it was not illegal and the Magistrate's discretion ought not to be lightly interfered with, 1886 A. W. N. 356; 1900 A. W. N. 206. In 1908 A. W. N. 28

3 A. L. J. 14—3 Cr. L. J. 84 and 8 A. L. J. 939—11 Cr. L. J. 81, it has, however, been held where a Magistrate finding there was a prima facie case against an accused person under ss. 352 and 447, I P. C., committed the accused to the Court of Session held the commitment was wrong on a point of law, because (i) there was no warrant for the commitment of such case and (ii) the maximum punishment under each offence was one which the Magistrate could inflict.

10 Grounds held sufficient to quash a commitment.—(i) That the Sessions Court has no territorial jurisdiction over the offence—In 8 B. 312 and 18 A. 350, it was held that though commitment to a Sessions Court having no jurisdiction to try the case is illegal, yet the High Court may direct the case to the Court having jurisdiction, but in 38 M. 327, however, it was held that the High Court cannot uphold the commitment by directing the transfer to the Court having jurisdiction.

(ii) Commencement of prosecution six months after sanction, s. 195 (4).—When prosecution is commenced after expiration of six months from the date of sanction given under s. 195 and proceedings are carried on in spite of the objection of the accused and he is committed to the Sessions the High Court will quash the commitment 22 C. 176; s. 537 cannot cure such a defect.

(iii) Quashing of the commitment of the European British subject jointly charged—If the commitment of an European British subject be quashed on account of any irregularity in the proceedings e.g. want of sanction the commitment of a person jointly charged with him must be quashed also 9 B. 238 at p. 200 Per SARI FANT C. J.

(iv) Commitment without the exercise of judicial discretion but at the suggestion of another Magistrate—Where a commitment is made by a Magistrate without exercising his judicial discretion, but at the suggestion of the District Magistrate, held that the commitment must be quashed, 18 M. 39. An order directing a Magistrate to commit an accused person who has been discharged by him, simply because the offence is triable exclusively by the Court of Session is bad in law, Weir II, 250; 9 Bom. L. R. 225—5 Cr. L. J. 213.

(i) Commitment of approver along with co-accused—Secs. 337. A Magistrate believing that an approver to whom pardon had been tendered had given false evidence in the case declared the tender forfeited and committed him along with others to the Court of Session, held that the commitment must be quashed and that nothing could be done against such person till after the case in the Sessions Court against his co-accused had finished and that then his trial should be commenced de novo if it is deemed necessary to take proceedings against him 23 B. 493; 24 M. 321, 14 W. R. 10; 19 W. R. 43, 23 B. 678. Where the conditional pardon tendered to an accused person was forfeited and he was committed to the Sessions Court for trial along with the others charged with the same offence, the commitment was quashed because he had not had an opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses 20 A. 529. The Sessions Judge has no power himself to direct the trial of such a person or to try him at once with the others for under s. 193 except as otherwise specially provided a Sessions Court cannot take cognizance of an offence without a commitment 22 C. 50, 15 M. 352. A preliminary inquiry should therefore precede the commitment. See Notes to ss. 337 and 339.

(ii) Commitment of approver before trial of other accused liable to be quashed—There may arise cases in which owing to the absconding of the offenders the trial of an approver who may not have complied with the conditions of pardon will appear to be necessary or expedient and in such cases the result of the trial of the principals may not be waited for. But still as a general rule the provisions of s. 337 must be complied with and ordinarily in every such case he should be examined as witness and until he has been so examined,

16 A. 11.

(iii) Commitment in the absence of or without notice to the accused liable to be quashed—A commitment based on evidence recorded in the absence of the accused is illegal Weir II, 259; it is illegal to make an order of commitment in the absence of the accused 5 C. W. N. 110, 8 M. 372, see also Note 10 to s. 213. But see 12 C. L. R. 120.

(iv) Committing two accused for reason that one or other of them is guilty—Where a Magistrate by the same committal order commits two sets of accused on the ground that one or other of them is guilty of the murder of a boy the commitment is illegal 17 M. L. J. (S. N.) 46.

(v) Commitment made under the mistaken view that the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to try—When a Magistrate committed a case under s. 147, I P. C. owing to a mistaken view of a High Court Circular which he thought prevented him from trying the case the commitment was quashed. 24 C. 429.

§ 347 a Magistrate was not bound to examine the witnesses of the accused and a commitment was not illegal because the Magistrate refused to do so. These cases were not followed in the Burma Full Bench Case. In 36 C. 48 the accused did not cross-examine the prosecution witnesses immediately after their examination in chief, but applied to cross-examine the witness after the prosecution closed its case. The decisions may be supported though the reasoning is open to question. In 15 Cr. L. J. 705 (M) it was held following 36 C. 48 and dissenting from 20 A. 264 and 26 A. 177 that the Magistrate has a discretion to examine witnesses or not after he reaches the stage of framing a charge under s. 210.

(iv) Not giving reasons may invalidate commitment—See Note 9 below

8. Insufficiency of evidence, how far a ground for quashing commitment.—A commitment can be quashed on a point of law only. An order of commitment cannot be quashed on the ground that there is no evidence on the committing Magistrate's record to sustain the charges, 13 Bom. L. R. 201 = 12 Cr. L. J. 236; 7 Bar. L. T. 26 = 15 Cr. L. J. 270. In 27 M. L. J. 693 = 18 Cr. L. J. 665, it was held following 13 Bom. L. R. 201 that it is not open to a High Court to quash a commitment on the ground that there is no evidence to justify the commitment and in such a case the accused ought not to be deprived of the benefit of an acquittal, the case in 6 A. 93 was not followed. A commitment made without direct evidence and merely on presumption is not erroneous in point of law, and is such cannot be quashed under this section. Where there is evidence that a forged document was used on behalf of an accused person with his knowledge or under his instructions or with his approval, which might be proved by the conduct of the accused, it cannot be said that there is no evidence upon which commitment could be made, 4 C. W. N. 116. But where the order of commitment rests upon a misapprehension and there is no evidence upon which it could be supported, Weir 11, 292; or accepting the evidence as true it does not necessary establish an offence, 2 C. L. J. 46 = 2 Cr. L. J. 283; or there is no evidence to connect the accused with the charge, 6 A. 98, the commitment may be quashed. In 5 C. W. N. 411 and 9 C. W. N. 829, the Calcutta High Court has laid down that whether there is or is not sufficient evidence to warrant a commitment is a question of law within the meaning of this section. Commitments duly made could be quashed under this section, when the evidence stopped short of a case which could properly be left to a jury. Under the Code, a Sessions Judge has not the power to withdraw a case from the jury on any account whatsoever. But if the evidence in a case is such that the presiding Judge would, if he had the power, withdraw it from the jury, the High Court (which alone has the power to quash a commitment) ought not to allow the commitment to stand. But it is questionable, how far it is for the benefit of the accused to object to the commitment. The result of the trial would be an acquittal, but by obtaining an order under this section, he would be liable under s. 403 to further proceedings if evidence is found against him which was overlooked before 2 A. 396. See also 1886 A. W. N. 256

9. That the case is triable by a Magistrate whether a ground for quashing commitment.—If a Magistrate thinks that a case not exclusively triable by the Court of Session must be committed, he must state his grounds in the order to enable the High Court to judge whether the commitment is made in the sound exercise of the discretionary power vested in him by law, 11 Bom. L. R. 18 = 9 Cr. L. J. 163; 12 Bom. L. R. 999 and 999 = 14 Cr. L. J. 647; 24 C. 429; 8 A. L. R. 23 = 15 Cr. L. J. 864. The mere fact that the offences disclosed by the evidence taken at the preliminary inquiry are not exclusively triable by the Sessions Court is no ground for quashing the commitment, 7 M. L. T. 186 = 11 Cr. L. J. 333; 16 M. L. J. 825 = 5 Cr. L. J. 99. Where a Magistrate in his discretion commits an accused being of opinion that the accused cannot be adequately punished by him the High Court can not interfere as there is no point of law, 11 A. L. J. 439 = 14 Cr. L. J. 304. A Magistrate going on leave exercises an improper discretion in committing to the Court of Session a case properly triable by the Magistrate, merely on the ground that the witnesses for the defence are not in attendance, and that it would be inconvenient for his successors to commence the trial anew, but in so doing he does not commit such illegality as will justify the High Court in quashing the commitment, Ratanlal 110. Where a Magistrate committed the accused on a charge under s. 323, I. P. C., triable by any Magistrate, held that the words 'ought to be tried' in ss. 207 and 347 of this Code must be read with s. 254 and a case which ought to be tried by a Court of Session is one which the Magistrate, is either not competent to try or is one in which, in his opinion, adequate punishment cannot be inflicted by him. As this was not the opinion of the Magistrate, the Bombay High Court in the case of Purni Ramchod (3rd January 1902) quashed the commitment, holding the same illegal and directed the Magistrate to dispose of the case according to law. But where there were counter charges of not one of which resulted in homicide and the Magistrate committed both cases although it was purely magisterial, the High Court refused to quash the commitment. The discretion ought not to be lightly interfered with, 1886 A. W. N. 256.

3 A. L. J. 14—3 Cr. L. J. 94 and 6 A. L. J. 939—11 Cr. L. J. 54. It has, however, been held where a Magistrate finding there was a prima facie case against an accused person under ss. 352 and 447, I P. C., committed the accused to the Court of Session, held the commitment was wrong on a point of law, because (i) there was no warrant for the commitment of such case and (ii) the maximum punishment under each offence was one which the Magistrate could inflict.

10. Grounds held sufficient to quash a commitment.—(i) That the Sessions Court has no territorial jurisdiction over the offence—In 8 B. 313 and 18 A. 350, it was held that though commitment to a Sessions Court having no jurisdiction to try the case is illegal, yet the High Court may direct the case to the Court having jurisdiction, but in 36 M. 387, however, it was held that the High Court cannot uphold the commitment, by directing the transfer to the Court having jurisdiction.

(ii) Commencement of prosecution six months after sanction, s. 195 (6).—When prosecution is commenced after expiration of six months from the date of sanction given under s. 195, and proceedings are carried on in spite of the objection of the accused and he is committed to the Sessions, the High Court will quash the commitment 22 C. 176; s. 537 cannot cure such a defect.

(iii) Quashing of the commitment of the European British subject jointly charged.—If the commitment of an European British subject be quashed on account of any irregularity in the proceedings e.g., want of sanction the commitment of a person jointly charged with him must be quashed also, 9 B. 288 at p. 200. Per SARGENT, C J

(iv) Commitment without the exercise of judicial discretion, but at the suggestion of another Magistrate.—Where a commitment is made by a Magistrate without exercising his judicial discretion, but at the suggestion of the District Magistrate, held that the commitment must be quashed, 15 M. 29. An order directing a Magistrate to commit an accused person who has been discharged by him, simply because the offence is triable, exclusively by the Court of Session is bad in law, Weir II, 280; 9 Bom. L. R. 225—5 Cr. L. J. 213.

(v) Commitment of approver along with co-accused.—See s. 337. A Magistrate believing that an approver to whom pardon had been tendered had given false evidence in the case, declared the tender forfeited and committed him along with others to the Court of Session. Held, that the commitment must be quashed and that nothing could be done against such person till after the case in the Sessions Court against his co-accused had finished, and that then his trial should be commenced de novo, if it is deemed necessary to take proceedings against him, 23 B. 493; 24 M. 321; 14 W. R. 10; 19 W. R. 43; 25 B. 875. Where the conditional pardon tendered to an accused person was forfeited and he was committed to the Sessions Court for trial along with the others charged with the same offence, the commitment was quashed, because he had not had an opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses 20 A. 529. The Sessions Judge has no power himself to direct the trial of such a person or to try him at once with the others for, under s. 193 except as otherwise specially provided, a Sessions Court cannot take cognizance of an offence without a committal, 22 C. 50; 15 M. 852. A preliminary inquiry should therefore precede the commitment. See Notes to ss. 337 and 339.

(vi) Commitment of approver before trial of other accused, liable to be quashed.—There may arise cases in which owing to the absconding of the offenders, the trial of an approver who may not have complied with the conditions of pardon, will appear to be necessary or expedient and in such cases, the result of the trial of the principals may not be waited for. But still as a general rule, the provisions of s. 337 must be complied with and ordinarily in every such case he should be examined as witness and until he has been so examined, his trial for any offence connected with the one in respect of which pardon has been granted should not take place. In 14 A. 336, the Allahabad High Court in a murder case, quashed the commitment of an approver made before the completion of the trial of the principal offenders charged with the murder.

(vii) Commitment in the absence of or without notice to the accused liable to be quashed.—A commitment based on evidence recorded in the absence of the accused is illegal, Weir II, 259; it is illegal to make an order of commitment in the absence of the accused, 5 C. W. N. 110; 6 M. 372, see also Note 10 to s. 213. But see 12 C. L. R. 120.

(viii) Committing two accused for reason that one or other of them is guilty.—Where a Magistrate by the same committal order commits two sets of accused on the ground that one or other of them is guilty of the murder of a boy, the commitment is illegal, 17 M. L. J. (S. N.) 46.

(ix) Commitment made under the mistaken view that the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to try.—When a Magistrate committed a case under s. 147, I P. C., owing to a mistaken view of a High Court Circular which he thought prevented him from trying the case, the commitment was quashed. 24 C. 429

(x) Commitment on the request of the accused.—The committal of an accused to the Court of Session, either on his own request or because the case has created sensation in his community or on the ground that the amount involved is large, is not proper and is liable to be set aside by the High Court. 23 Bom. L. R. 293.

11. What are not proper grounds for quashing a commitment.—

(i) That the committing Magistrate had no territorial jurisdiction.—If the commitment is valid on the face of it, a Sessions Judge cannot refer the case to the High Court simply because the accused were not British subjects and the offence with which they were charged was committed out of British India. He should dispose of the case according to law. Should he, after taking evidence, find that he has no jurisdiction over the accused by reason of their being foreign subjects and the offence being committed in foreign territory, he must discharge the accused. Ratanlal 922. A commitment ought not to be quashed for want of territorial jurisdiction on the part of the committing Magistrate unless a failure of justice has in fact been caused, 7 Bar. L. T. 26=15 Cr. L. J. 370. See also 16 B. 204; 26 M. 640. The facts that the committing Magistrate had no territorial jurisdiction over the place in which the alleged offence was committed and that the Sessions Judge did not quash the commitment under s 532, even though objection was taken prior to commitment, were held to be no grounds for setting aside the conviction of the Sessions Court, 17 M. 402. See Notes under s 531.

(ii) That the committing Magistrate was not duly empowered.—See s. 531 and Notes 2 to s. 207.

(iii) That the committal has been made after a previous discharge.—Where a Magistrate, after examining four witnesses for the prosecution, discharged the accused, and subsequently, on becoming aware that there was a fifth witness present, cancelled his order of discharge, took further evidence, and committed the accused for trial to the Court of Session, held, that the commitment was good, 7 M. H. C. R. App. XL. Similarly a commitment by a Presidency Magistrate on fresh evidence was held legal, although the accused may have been discharged by another Presidency Magistrate and the order of discharge had not been set aside, 5 C. W. N. 169. The discharge of an accused by a Sessions Judge on appeal on the ground that the trying Magistrate had no jurisdiction, is no bar to a Court of competent jurisdiction taking fresh proceeding and in cases exclusively triable by the Court of Session, committing the accused, 29 C. 411. The failure on the part of the Sessions Judge to order a re-trial is not a defect of law for which the High Court would quash the commitment under this section.

(iv) Filing of regular suit to establish genuineness of document is no ground for quashing commitment.—The fact that a regular suit has been filed to establish the genuineness of a transaction is not sufficient to enable the High Court to quash a commitment regularly made by a Subordinate Judge to the Sessions Court or to direct the trial to be adjourned pending the hearing of the civil suit or appeal therefrom, 18 B 581, 31 C. 858. But it was held in Weir 11, 260 that where a complaint of forgery of a document has been dismissed by a Magistrate and the question of its genuineness is pending in a suit in the Civil Court though subsequently brought, it is desirable to postpone further criminal proceedings, in respect of the complaint of forgery.

(v) Discovery of fresh evidence after commitment.—Where a Magistrate after commitment made, held further inquiry and recorded that if the inquiry had been previously made he would not have committed, the High Court refused to quash the commitment but ordered the trial to proceed 1885 A. W. N. 53. The proper course for the Magistrate under such circumstances would be to instruct the Public Prosecutor to withdraw from the prosecution under s 494 with the consent of the Sessions Judge. But the Public Prosecutor ought not to abandon the case without the sanction of the Court at the mere direction of the District Magistrate, as that would amount to the indirect reversal of the order of the committing Magistrate of which the direct reversal would have been illegal.

(vi) Committal in cases of perjury, to the very Judge before whom false evidence is given not bad.—An accused having been committed to the Sessions Court on a charge under s. 193, I P C., for having given false evidence in a judicial proceeding before the same Sessions Judge, held that the commitment could not be quashed, because there was no error in law, but in the absence of an Additional or Assistant Sessions Judge, the case was transferred to another Sessions Court, 1 B. 311; 4 A. 150.

(vii) Omission to inquire into false charge brought by accused will not invalidate commitment.—A commitment for trial under the provisions of s. 211, I P C., for knowingly instituting a false charge is not illegal, merely because the complaint which the accused made had not been judicially inquired into, but is based on the report of the Police that the case was false, 6 C. 582.

(viii) Simultaneous commitment of robber and receiver of stolen property not illegal.—The commitment for trial in one and the same case of accused, some for the offence of robbery, and the rest for receiving property stolen in that robbery, not being illegal cannot be quashed under this section, Ratanlal 915.

(1r) That a number of the joint offenders have not been arrested.—The fact that some of the accused were committed while other persons acting in concert were not yet arrested is not a ground for quashing the commitment, 7 M L T 187 = 11 Cr L J 333.

(2) Commitment of European British subjects in British Baluchistan to a Court of Sessions.—A commitment of an European British subject to the Court of Session by the Extra Assistant Commissioner Quetta, is proper and cannot be quashed under this section, as the Court of Sessions in Baluchistan have by Regulation VIII of 1896 jurisdiction to try European British subjects duly committed 5 P R 1907 = 6 Cr L J 108

(3) Commitment on evidence recorded Magistrate from where file case is transferred.—It is open to a Magistrate to commit an accused on evidence recorded by another Magistrate from whose file the case was transferred under s 29. S. 350 applies to such a case, 36 A. 315

12 Sessions Judge must forthwith examine the record of commitment.—Sessions Judges shall carefully examine the record of each case committed in order to satisfy themselves that Magistrate have carried out the requirements of the law, and the instructions issued by the Judicial Commissioner. This should be done immediately on receipt of the record so that it may be at once returned to the committing Magistrate to supply the deficiencies if there are any Oudh Cr Dig at p 10

13. When Court of Session can discharge without trial.—It is only when the charge attributes acts which do not constitute an offence that the Court of Session can discharge without a trial. But in all other cases where a prisoner has once been committed for trial on a certain charge the Court of Session is bound to require him to plead to the charge however insufficient the evidence may appear to be. Where the order of commitment rests upon a misapprehension and there is no evidence upon which it could be supported the High Court alone can under this section set aside the order and quash the commitment Weir II, 282

14. Court of Session has no power to remand case committed, for further evidence.—A Court of Session to which a case may be committed for trial has no power to remand it to the committing Magistrate for the cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses whose cross-examination may have been reserved by the accused for the Sessions Court Weir II, 280

216. When the accused has given in any list of witnesses under section 211 and has been committed for trial the Magistrate shall summon such of the witnesses included in the list as have not appeared before himself to appear before the Court to which the accused has been committed

Summons to witnesses for defence when accused is committed.

Provided that where the accused has been committed to the High Court the Magistrate may in his discretion leave such witnesses to be summoned by the Clerk of the Crown and such witnesses may be summoned accordingly

Provided also that if the Magistrate thinks that any witness is included in the list for the purpose of vexation or delay, or of defeating the ends of justice the Magistrate may require the accused to satisfy him that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the evidence of such witness is material and if he is not so satisfied may refuse to summon the witness (recording his reasons for such refusal) or may before summoning him require such sum to be deposited as such Magistrate thinks necessary to defray the expense of obtaining the attendance of the witness and all other proper expenses

Refusal to summon unnecessary witness unless deposit made

Notes—1 Refusal to summon witnesses for defence.—A Magistrate is not justified (except on grounds of vexation, delay, etc.) in refusing to summon witnesses named for the defence merely because the evidence appears to him (the Magistrate) not to be material or reliable Weir II, 263. A prisoner is entitled as a matter of right to have any witnesses named in the list he delivers summoned and examined 23 W R 56; 2 W R 6, 3 W R 36 The Magistrate must deal with the application for summonses and not merely direct it to be filed 6 C. W N 548 See Note 1 under s. 213

2. Reasons for refusal must be recorded.—When he does refuse he must record his reason for such refusal. They must show that the witnesses not material. Simply saying that the reasons assigned for application to have a certain witness summoned as a defence witness were insufficient, does not show that witness's evidence was not material, and is, therefore, not a proper ground for refusing the application, 8 A. 688; nor the fact that the accused stated that he did not wish to examine certain witnesses, when he required them to be summoned again to meet fresh evidence given subsequent to the defence being closed, 6 C. 714 = 8 C. L. R. 70.

3. When such order is improper.—An order by a Magistrate refusing to summon witnesses for the defence without their expenses being paid by the accused, though legal, should be passed very sparingly, and is an improper order in a case in which the accused is unable or unwilling to deposit money, and the result is that he is convicted without his witnesses being heard, especially if the case is one in which severe sentence is inflicted, 7 P. R. 1898.

4. A Magistrate cannot inquire into the nature of defence.—Proviso 2 of this section is not intended to enable the Magistrate to inquire into what the defence of the accused person is to be, and to consider whether on learning the nature of the defence he is absolutely to abstain from summoning the whole of the witnesses cited by the accused, 3 C. 573 = 2 G. L. R. 82.

5. Magistrate ought to fix the amount to be deposited.—Though a Magistrate is at liberty under this section to decline to summon the person named in the list when the prisoner declines to satisfy him that they are material witnesses, yet he ought to fix the amount which he considers necessary to defray the cost of the attendance of the persons named and intimate to the prisoner his readiness to issue summonses on that amount being deposited, 4 M. H. C. R. 81. The amount may include not only the process-fee, but also travelling and diet allowances of and all other proper expenses such as the fee of experts.

6. A Magistrate cannot order deposit money to be credited to Government.—A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to order a sum of money deposited (for the expenses of witnesses), for the refund of which an application is made, to be credited to Government, 6 M. H. C. R. Appx. IX.

7. A Magistrate is bound to re-summon absent witness, when absence is due to delay in service of summon.—The last proviso is clearly inapplicable where a witness, though once summoned, failed to appear on the day fixed on account of some delay in the service of the summons. In such a case it was held, the Magistrate was bound to make a further attempt—the first being a nominal one only—to secure the attendance of the absent witness, 4 A. 53.

8. Deciding credit to be attached to evidence before hearing.—It is not open to a Judge to decide on the credit to be attached to the evidence of a witness before he had an opportunity of hearing it. By doing so he simply exceeds the discretion given to him by law, 19 M. 373; 6 B. L. R. Appx. 65 = 15 W. R. 7.

217. (1) Complainants and witnesses for the prosecution and defence whose attendance before the Court of Session or High Court is necessary and who appears before the Magistrates, shall execute before him bonds binding themselves to be in attendance when called upon at the Court of Session or High Court to prosecute or to give evidence, as the case may be.

Lond. of complainants and witnesses

(2) If any complainant or witness refuses to attend before the Court of Session or High Court, or execute the bond above directed, the Magistrate may detain him in custody until he executes such bond, or until his attendance at the Court of Session or High Court is required, when the Magistrate shall send him in custody to the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be.

Detention in custody in case of refusal to attend or to execute bond.

Notes.—1. Witnesses whose attendance is necessary.—It is not necessary for the Magistrate to bind over every witness who is examined before him. He is only bound to bind over those whose evidence is material to the case. It is always open to the accused or the Sessions Judge to procure the attendance of such of the Crown witnesses as have been examined at the preliminary inquiry and who do not appear at the trial, 1883 A. W. N. 37.

2. Binding of medical witnesses.—The attention of Magistrates is called to s. 509, Cr. P. C., and they are informed that a committing Magistrate should not, except for some special reason, bind over a medical witness, whose evidence he has taken to appear in the Sessions Court. It is very undesirable that medical men in the districts should be taken away from their dispensaries more frequently or for a longer period than is absolutely necessary.—Bom. H. C. Cr. p. 18

3. Witnesses cannot be asked to furnish sureties.—Under this section, Magistrates have no jurisdiction to call for bonds with sureties, nor have they power to require recognizances from defence witnesses who have never appeared before them. A complainant who withdraws from his charge after commitment will forfeit his recognizance, 2 W. R. 57.

218. (1) When the accused is committed for trial, the Magistrate shall issue an order * to such person as may be appointed by the Local Government in this behalf notifying the commitment, and stating the offence in the same form as the charge, unless the Magistrate is satisfied that such person is already aware of the commitment and the form of the charge, and shall send the charge, the record of the inquiry and any weapon or other thing which is to be produced in evidence, to the Court of Session or (where the commitment is made to the High Court) to the Clerk of the Crown or other officer appointed in this behalf by the High Court

Commitment when to be notified.

Charge etc. to be forwarded to High Court or Court of Session.

English translation to be forwarded to High Court.

(1) When the commitment is made to the High Court and any part of the record is not in English, an English translation of such part shall be forwarded with the record

Note.—Completion of the record of commitment.—A committing Magistrate is bound to make his record complete if he fails in the first instance to get all the necessary evidence down, he should discover his own mistake when he is preparing the calendar, and if he thus made the order of commitment under s 218 he can still take further evidence under s 219 without any order from the Sessions Judge.—Pun Cr, Chap LIV, para. 11 A, p 235, Oudh Cr Dig, p 10

219. (1)† “The committing Magistrate or, in the absence of such Magistrate, any other Magistrate empowered by or under section 206” may, if he thinks fit, summon and examine supplementary witnesses after the commitment and before the commencement of the trial, and bind them over in manner herein before provided to appear and give evidence

Power to summon supplementary witnesses.

(2) Such examination shall, if possible, be taken in the presence of the accused and, where the Magistrate, is not a Presidency Magistrate, a copy of the evidence of such witnesses shall, † be given to the accused free of cost

Note.—“We have given effect to the suggestion of the Calcutta High Court that powers under s 219 should only be exercised by Magistrates who are empowered to commit for trial. (Report of Select Committee)

Notes.—1 Directing committing Magistrate to take additional evidence after commencement of trial is illegal.—After a Sessions trial has commenced the Sessions Judge can only cause witnesses to be summoned before himself, or under certain circumstances have them examined by commission. He has no authority to direct the committing Magistrate, or any other person to call additional witnesses and hold an inquiry. Such Magistrates authority ceases with the commencement of the trial, 30 P. R. 1888. But see 6 C. 714 = 8 C. L. R. 70 as to power of Magistrate to record evidence at any time after commitment, but before commencement of trial under s 540. If additional evidence is recorded under this section an opportunity should be given to the accused to cite witnesses to meet such evidence. See also 5 A. 698.

2. Proper course for taking evidence after commitment.—If on receiving the order of commitment a Sessions Judge in view of Magistrate's recorded opinion thinks that further evidence should be taken, the proper course is to point out to the committing Magistrate that he could summon and examine any supplementary witness who could give evidence and bind them over under s 219 to appear at the trial, and not to send the case to the Magistrate after the conclusion of the trial and the opinions of the assessors have been taken 4 P. R. 1892

3. When such order is improper.—An order by a Magistrate refusing to summon witnesses for the defence without their expenses being paid by the accused, though legal, should be passed very sparingly, and is an improper order in a case in which the accused is unable or unwilling to deposit money, and the result is that he is convicted without his witnesses being heard, especially if the case is one in which severe sentence is inflicted, 7 P. R. 1898.

4. A Magistrate cannot inquire into the nature of defence.—Proviso 2 of this section is not intended to enable the Magistrate to inquire into what the defence of the accused person is to be, and to consider whether on learning the nature of the defence he is absolutely to abstain from summoning the whole of the witnesses cited by the accused 8 G. 373 = 2 G. L. R. 62.

5. Magistrate ought to fix the amount to be deposited.—Though a Magistrate is at liberty under this section to decline to summon the person named in the list when the prisoner declines to satisfy him that they are material witnesses, yet he ought to fix the amount which he considers necessary to defray the cost of the attendance of the persons named and intimate to the prisoner his readiness to issue summonses on that amount being deposited, 4 M. H. C. R. 81. The amount may include not only the process-fee, but also travelling and diet allowances of and all other proper expenses such as the fee of experts.

6. A Magistrate cannot order deposit money to be credited to Government.—A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to order a sum of money deposited (for the expenses of witnesses), for the refund of which an application is made, to be credited to Government, 6 M. H. C. R. Appx. 1K.

7. A Magistrate is bound to re-summer absent witness, when absence is due to delay in service of summon.—The last proviso is clearly inapplicable where a witness, though once summoned, failed to appear on the day fixed on account of some delay in the service of the summons. In such a case it was held, the Magistrate was bound to make a further attempt—the first being a nominal one only—to secure the attendance of the absent witness, 4 A. 53.

8. Deciding credit to be attached to evidence before hearing—It is not open to a Judge to decide on the credit to be attached to the evidence of a witness before he had an opportunity of hearing it. By doing so he simply exceeds the discretion given to him by law, 19 M. 373; 6 B. L. R. Appx. 65 = 15 W. R. 7.

217. CHAPTER XIX.

OF THE CHARGE

Form of Charges

Charge to state offence

221. (1) Every charge under this Code shall state the offence with which the accused is charged,

Specific name of offence sufficient description.

(2) If the law which creates the offence gives it any specific name, the offence may be described in the charge by that name only.

How stated where offence has no specific name

(3) If the law which creates the offence does not give it any specific name, so much of the definition of the offence must be stated as to give the accused notice of the matter with which he is charged

(4) The law and the section of the law against which the offence is said to have been committed shall be mentioned in the charge

What implied in charge every legal condition required by law to constitute the offence charged was fulfilled in the particular case

Language of charge
(6) In the Presidency towns the charge shall be written in English, elsewhere it shall be written either in English or in the language of the Court

(7) If the accused* having been previously convicted of any offence, is liable by reason of such previous conviction, to enhanced punishment or to punishment of a different kind, for a subsequent offence, and it is intended to prove such previous conviction for the purpose of affecting the punishment which the Court may think fit to award for the subsequent offence, the fact date and place of the previous conviction shall be stated in the charge. If such statement† has been omitted, the Court may add it any time before sentence is passed

Illustrations

(a) A is charged with the murder of B. This is equivalent to a statement that A's act fell within the definition of murder given in ss 299 and 302 of the Indian Penal Code, that it did not fall within any of the general exceptions of the same Code, and that it did not fall within any of the five exceptions to s 300 or that if it did fall within exception 1 one or other of the three provisos to that exception applied to it.

* The words in inverted commas were substituted by Act XVIII of 1923

† The words has been omitted were substituted for the words is omitted by Act XVIII of 1923

(b) A is charged, under s. 326 of the Indian Penal Code, with voluntarily causing grievous hurt to B by means of an instrument for shooting. This is equivalent to a statement that the case was not provided for by s. 335 of the Indian Penal Code, and that the general exceptions did not apply to it.

(c) A is accused of murder, cheating, theft, extortion, adultery or criminal intimidation, or using a false property mark. The charge may state that A committed murder, or cheating, or theft, or extortion, or adultery or criminal intimidation, or that he used a false property mark, without reference to the definitions of those crimes contained in the Indian Penal Code, but the sections under which the offence is punishable must in each instance, be referred to in the charge.

(d) A is charged, under s. 184 of the Indian Penal Code, with intentionally obstructing a sale of property offered for sale by the lawful authority of a public servant. The charge should be in those words.

Notes.—1. For forms see Schedule V, No XXVIII. See s. 75, I P. C., and s. 4 of the Whipping Act, 1909, Appendix III as to when previous conviction affects punishment.

2. What is a charge?—A charge may be defined to be a written document containing the description of the offence which the Court, either in an inquiry or trial, finds prima facie proved by evidence before it to have been committed by the accused, so as to require him to defend himself. In spite of the definition in s. 4 (c), the Code uses the term throughout as the statement of a specific offence and not as indicating the entire series of offences of which a prisoner is accused, 8 B. 200. One count charging each separate offence and describing it with a reasonable degree of certainty is sufficient, 5 W. R. 7. See also 9 A. 525.

3. Drawing up charges not governed by English authorities as to indictments.—As respects the framing of charges, the Courts in this country are governed by the provisions of the Code which are not and do not purport to be an exact reproduction of the English rules as to indictments, and indeed were expressly framed in such a manner, as to give no room for merely technical objections not going to the merits of the case, 32 M. 384. See also 32 M. 3 and 19 C. W. N. 72 = 16 Cr. L. J. 41.

4. Charge under I. P. C. how to be drawn up.—Sections 221, 222 and 223.—If the law does not give the offences (e.g., offences under ss. 124 A and 153-A, I P. C.) any specific name, then under s. 221 (3), so much of the definition of the offence must be stated as to give the accused notice of the matter with which he is charged. Then under s. 222 the charge must contain particulars as to the time and place of the alleged offence and under s. 223, when the offence is such that the particulars in ss. 221 and 222 do not give the accused sufficient notice of the matter with which he is charged, the charge shall contain such particulars of the manner in which the offence was committed as will be sufficient for that purpose. Per WALLIS, J., in 32 M. 384, p. 395. The charge of an offence under the I. P. C. should be drawn up in the words of the section defining the offence, 5 C. P. Cr. 18. The models of charge given in Sch. V, contain or imply the setting forth with reasonable particularity of the matters alleged to constitute the offence, 2 B. 142 at p. 144.

5. Cases where no charge need be framed joint trial of warrant and summons-cases.—See ss. 177 (2), 242 and 263. See 29 C. 481, Note 3 under s. 225 and Note 3 to s. 233. Where a warrant-case and summons case are tried together at one trial, the trial of the two together forms only one case and not two, and as the case relates to an offence punishable with more than six months' imprisonment, it is a warrant-case. The fact that it relates to some other offence also does not alter its nature and so formal charges ought to be framed for both offences. Thus, where the accused had committed the offences of mischief and insult on two different occasions, charges of the two offences could not be tried together, as they did not form parts of one transaction within the meaning of this section, 3 L. B. R. 113 = 3 Cr. L. J. 350.

6. Useless details must not be inserted.—A common fault in the framing of charges is the insertion of useless details. It should be remembered that nothing, which is not essential to the offence, should be included in the charge, except such details of time and place as are sufficient to give the accused notice of the matter with which he is charged. It is unnecessary, for instance, to specify in a charge of murder the weapon with which the murder was committed. In prosecutions for giving false evidence under ss. 193, 194 and 195, I P. C., the particular statements alleged to be false must invariably be set out in the charge, to enable the accused to fully understand the offence with which he stands charged.—C. P. Cr. Part II, No 18. Unnecessary allegations may be treated as surplusage, 4 Bom. H. C. R. 17.

7. Accused entitled to know exact value of charge made against him.—An accused is entitled to know with certainty and accuracy the exact value of the charge brought against him, and unless he has this knowledge he must be seriously prejudiced in his defence. This is true in all cases, but it is more especially true in case where it is sought to implicate him for acts not committed by himself, but by others with whom he is in company, 11 C. 106. See also 22 C. 276; 391 at p. 402 and 4 C. W. N. 196; 42 C. 957. Thus in 529, the accused was summoned for storing wool and was convicted of storing cotton. Held, that the conviction could not be upheld as the accused had no proper notice and no proper opportunity of answering the charge of storing cotton. Similarly, where the accused is liable to be punished under the Whipping Act, the charge must state the liability, 5 M. 188. See also 17 C. W. N. 419 = 14 Cr. L. J. 212; 12 C. W. N. 577. An accused is entitled to know with certainty and accuracy the exact value of the charge brought against him. But where the accused fully understood the nature of the offence with which they were charged they had clearly not been prejudiced by the omission of the words "unlawfully and maliciously" and "in British India" occurring in section 4 (b) of Act VI of 1908. Such an omission can be cured by the verdict. The Queen v Manslow, (1893) 1 Q. B. 758, referred to, 42 C. 957.

But where in a charge of cheating, the manner of the cheating was set out to be "by deceiving with false representations and promises as well as by conduct," held that the expressions used were too vague and indefinite to give the accused proper notice of the manner of the cheating and was so dangerously wide as might include almost anything. An accused person is entitled to know with certainty and accuracy the exact value of the accusation brought against him, 29 C. W. N. 508.

8. Charge must refer to the law and section and the words of the statute must be adhered to.—A charge should be so framed as to refer to the section of the Penal Code under which the offence charged is punishable, 9 W. R. 33, but omission to comply with the requirement will not invalidate the commitment, 1 In. Jur. N. 8. 43. Where there are several parts to a section (s. 175, I. P. C.) the charge should be framed in parts of the term applicable, 15 B. 189. It is a wholesome rule that the Court should adhere to the language of the statute as far as practicable, when a charge is drawn up, nothing is gained by a paraphrase, while opportunity is afforded to the accused to take exception to the form of the charge, 42 C. 957.

9. Aggravating circumstances have to be set forth in the charge.—When an offence falls within the provisions of a section like s. 397, I. P. C., which on account of the existence of aggravating circumstances provides a minimum punishment for the offence, the existence of such aggravating circumstances should be set forth in the charge so that the accused person may know what it is to which he pleads guilty and the full effect of such plea, or in the event of his pleading not guilty may know what the material facts are which he is called upon to rebut, Ratanlal 55. Similarly in respect of a charge of cheating, see s. 223, illus (b). In a charge of rioting under s. 147, I. P. C. the common object should be stated, 9 C. W. N. 599.

10. What is previous conviction?—A previous conviction for the purpose of affecting the punishment which a Court is competent to award, is a conviction the penalty following which had been undergone by the accused (in whole or in part) at the time when he committed the offence for which he is being tried.—C. P. C. Cir, Part II, No. 19. Even though the accused has not been sentenced, but dealt with under s. 562 yet the particulars required as to the previous conviction must be stated in the charge.

11. Particulars of previous convictions necessary to be stated in the charge.—A mere allegation that at the time when the prisoner committed the offence (no offence whatever being mentioned in the charge) he has been previously convicted of offences punishable under the Indian Penal Code (22 W. R. 39) or that he "is an old offender," does not satisfy the requirements of this section, as that does not bring home to the accused person the particular offence or class of offences which renders him liable to a more severe sentence than would otherwise be imposed. The prosecution is bound to prove the previous convictions and that the accused was the person so convicted, Weir 11, 266. When the previous convictions are not stated in the charge as required by this section, they cannot be used for the purpose of the enhancing the sentence, Ratanlal 70; 7 M. L. T. 77 = 11 Cr. L. J. 217. A previous conviction which it is intended to prove for the purpose of affecting the punishment should be entered in the charge and the accused should be called on to plead thereto. His mere admission that he had been to jail once is insufficient to show that he pleaded guilty to a previous conviction in respect of an offence rendering him liable to whipping, 4 Bom. L. R. 177. An order under s. 565 is not such a punishment as is meant by the words in s. 221 (7), 9 N. L. R. 89 = 14 Cr. L. J. 390. The liability to whipping as an additional punishment under s. 3 of the Whipping Act and the liability to enhanced punishment under s. 75, I. P. C., are distinct liabilities and may or may not co-exist in any particular case. Either or both liabilities must be set out in the charge according as they arise or not in the circumstances of each particular case, Weir 11, 267.

If a prisoner is to be tried under s. 75 I. P. C., a separate charge under that section must be framed and recorded, 9 M. 284. The charge should state the fact, date and place of the previous conviction—otherwise the accused is not amenable to the terms of s. 75, I. P. C., 1883 A. W. N. 110. See, however, 1831 A. W. N. 32 where the accused was held not prejudiced by the omission as he was then actually undergoing the sentence imposed on the previous conviction. See 39 B. 326 and 1916 M. W. N. 327 = 17 Cr. L. J. 288.

12. Effect of omission to state previous conviction.—Where previous conviction of theft is not mentioned in a charge, the award of the sentence of whipping in addition to imprisonment is illegal, Weir II, 265. But when the sentence passed is one which the Magistrate is competent to pass for theft, the omission formally to charge the accused with a previous conviction does not render the sentence illegal, notwithstanding that the previous conviction affected the sentence, Weir II, 264. In another case, where the previous conviction did not form part of the charge, the enhanced sentence was set aside and the Sessions Judge directed to re-open the trial with the same set of jurors, on that charge giving the accused an opportunity of making a fresh defence to it 21 W. R. 40. Mere omission to set out the previous conviction is not sufficient reason for interfering in appeal or revision with the sentence passed unless there has been a failure of justice caused by such omission, 7 M. L. T. 77 = 11 Cr. L. J. 217.

13. Charge of previous conviction may be added at any time before sentence.—The previous conviction if not stated in the charge cannot be used for the purpose of enhancing the punishment. If it is omitted, it may be added at any time before the sentence is passed, and not afterwards, 19 W. R. 41, 10 B. L. R. Appx. XXXVI; Ratanlal 52 and 70.

14. Sentence on charge of previous conviction not to be separate.—Where previous conviction is proved for the purposes of s. 75, I P C., the prisoner cannot be dealt with under s. 35 as if he had been convicted of two offences, 11 A. 393.

15. Previous conviction is a question of fact.—The question of proof of previous conviction is one of fact which ought to go to the jury, and must be determined by a jury, 21 W. R. 40.

16. Proof of previous conviction.—A previous conviction may be charged and proved in the ordinary manner in cases in which the Magistrate, while not thinking it necessary that increased punishment should be imposed, nevertheless desires to obtain information as to the accused's antecedents for the purpose of determining the duration of the sentence, Weir II, 265. See also s. 511.

17. Duty of the Police regarding proof of previous convictions.—It is the duty of the Police, in conducting the investigation, to take proper steps to establish the identity of an accused person, and to obtain and produce evidence of previous convictions against him.—Pun. Cir., p. 314, Ratanlal 437 and 438. Demand should be asked for, when the particulars of the previous conviction are to hand, but the requisite copy of the sentence or certificate is not ready—C. P. Pbl. Man., p. 207.

18. Evidence of previous conviction when to be taken.—The law strictly enjoins that evidence of previous convictions cannot be allowed except where after the accused has been found guilty, it is necessary to receive it for the purpose of s. 75, I P C., or where the accused having given evidence of good character, the prosecution desires to adduce the evidence of previous convictions as proof of his bad character, 5 Bom. L. R. 1034.

19. Powers of Appellate Court regarding plea of guilty of being previous convict.—Where a charge has been framed against an accused person under s. 221 (7) and such person has pleaded guilty to the charge that he is a previous convict, the Appellate Court under s. 412 of the Code is precluded from opening the question whether the accused is a previous convict, 4 M. L. R. 163 = 9 Cr. L. J. 58.

222. (1) The charge shall contain such particulars as to the time and place of the alleged offence and the person (if any) against whom, or the thing (if any) in respect of which, it was committed as are reasonably sufficient to give the accused notice of the matter with which he is charged.

Particulars as to time, place and person.

(2) When the accused is charged with criminal breach of trust or dishonest misappropriation of money, it shall be sufficient to specify the gross sum in respect of which the offence is alleged to have been committed, and the date between which the offence is alleged to have been committed, without specifying particular items or exact dates, and the charge so framed shall be deemed to be a charge of one offence within the meaning of section 234.

Provided that the time included between the first and last of such dates shall not exceed one year.

Notes.—1. Charge must contain time, place, person and circumstances of the offence.—A conviction for unnatural offence under s. 377, I P C., cannot be sustained on a charge which does not specify the time when place where, or any known or unknown person with whom the offence was committed, the only fact 529, the accused was summoned for storing wool and was convicted of storing cotton. Held, that the conviction could not be upheld as the accused had no proper notice and no proper opportunity of answering the charge of storing cotton. Similarly, where the accused is liable to be punished under the Whipping Act, the charge must state the liability, 5 M. 188. See also 17 C. W. N. 419 = 14 Cr. L. J. 212; 12 C. W. N. 577. An accused is entitled to know with certainty and accuracy the exact value of the charge brought against him. But where the accused fully understood the nature of the offence with which they were charged they had clearly not been prejudiced by the omission of the words "unlawfully and maliciously" and "in British India" occurring in section 4 (b) of Act VI of 1908. Such an omission can be cured by the verdict. The Queen v Manslow, (1899) 1 Q. B. 758, referred to, 42 C. 957.

But where in a charge of cheating, the manner of the cheating was set out to be "by deceiving with false representations and promises as well as by conduct," held that the expressions used were too vague and indefinite to give the accused proper notice of the manner of the cheating and was so dangerously wide as might include almost anything. An accused person is entitled to know with certainty and accuracy the exact value of the accusation brought against him, 29 C. W. N. 408.

8. Charge must refer to the law and section and the words of the statute must be adhered to.—A charge should be so framed as to refer to the section of the Penal Code under which the offence charged is punishable, 9 W. R. 35, but omission to comply with the requirement will not invalidate the commitment, 1 Ind. Jar. N. 8. 43. Where there are several parts to a section (s. 175, I P. C.) the charge should be framed in parts of the term applicable, 15 B. 189. It is a wholesome rule that the Court should adhere to the language of the statute as far as practicable, when a charge is drawn up, nothing is gained by a paraphrase, while opportunity is afforded to the accused to take exception to the form of the charge, 43 C. 957.

9. Aggravating circumstances have to be set forth in the charge.—When an offence falls within the provisions of a section like s. 397, I P. C., which on account of the existence of aggravating circumstances provides a minimum punishment for the offence the existence of such aggravating circumstances should be set forth in the charge so that the accused person may know what it is to which he pleads guilty and the full effect of such plea, or in the event of his pleading not guilty may know what the material facts are which he is called upon to rebut, Ratanlal 55. Similarly in respect of a charge of cheating, see s. 223, illus (b). In a charge of rioting under s. 147 I P. C., the common object should be stated, 9 C. W. N. 599.

10. What is previous conviction?—A previous conviction for the purpose of affecting the punishment which a Court is competent to award, is a conviction the penalty following which had been undergone by the accused (in whole or in part) at the time when he committed the offence for which he is being tried.—C P. Cr. Cir., Part II, No. 19. Even though the accused has not been sentenced, but dealt with under s. 562 yet the particulars required as to the previous conviction must be stated in the charge.

11. Particulars of previous convictions necessary to be stated in the charge.—A mere allegation that at the time when the prisoner committed the offence (no offence whatever being mentioned in the charge) he has been previously convicted of offences punishable under the Indian Penal Code (22 W. R. 39) or that he "is an old offender," does not satisfy the requirements of this section, as that does not bring home to the accused person the particular offence or class of offences which renders him liable to a more severe sentence than would otherwise be imposed. The prosecution is bound to prove the previous convictions and that the accused was the person so convicted, Weir II, 266. When the previous convictions are not stated in the charge as required by this section, they cannot be used for the purpose of the enhancing the sentence, Ratanlal 70; 7 M. L. T. 77 = 11 Cr. L. J. 217. A previous conviction which it is intended to prove for the purpose of affecting the punishment should be entered in the charge and the accused should be called on to plead thereto. His mere admission that he had been to jail once is insufficient to show that he pleaded guilty to a previous conviction in respect of an offence rendering him liable to whipping, 4 Bom. L. R. 177. An order under s. 565 is not such a punishment as is meant by the words in s. 221 (7), 9 M. L. R. 88 = 14 Cr. L. J. 390. The liability to whipping as an additional punishment under s. 3 of the Whipping Act and the liability to enhanced punishment under s. 75 I P. C., are distinct liabilities and may or may not co-exist in any particular case. Either or both liabilities must be set out in the charge according as they arise or not in the circumstances of each particular case, Weir II, 267.

If a prisoner is to be tried under s. 75 I P. C., a separate charge under that section must be framed and recorded, 9 M. 284. The charge should state the fact, date and place of the previous conviction—otherwise the accused is not amenable to the terms of s. 75 I P. C., 1883 A. W. N. 110. See, however, 1881 A. W. N. 32 where the accused was held not prejudiced by the omission as he was then actually undergoing the sentence imposed on the previous conviction. See 39 B. 326 and 1916 M. W. N. 327 = 17 Cr. L. J. 288.

12. Effect of omission to state previous conviction.—Where previous conviction of theft is not mentioned in a charge, the award of the sentence of whipping in addition to imprisonment is illegal, Weir II, 265. But when the sentence passed is one which the Magistrate is competent to pass for theft, the omission formally to charge the accused with a previous conviction does not render the sentence illegal, notwithstanding that the previous conviction affected the sentence, Weir II, 264. In another case, where the previous conviction did not form part of the charge, the enhanced sentence was set aside and the Sessions Judge directed to re-open the trial, with the same set of jurors, on that charge giving the accused an opportunity of making a fresh defence to it 21 W. R. 40. Mere omission to set out the previous conviction is not sufficient reason for interfering in appeal or revision with the sentence passed unless there has been a failure of justice caused by such omission, 7 M. L. T. 77 = 11 Cr. L. J. 217.

13. Charge of previous conviction may be added at any time before sentence.—The previous conviction, if not stated in the charge, cannot be used for the purpose of enhancing the punishment. If it is omitted, it may be added at any time before the sentence is passed, and not afterwards, 19 W. R. 41; 10 B. L. R. Appx. XXXVI; Ratanlal 52 and 70.

14. Sentence on charge of previous conviction not to be separate.—Where previous conviction is proved for the purposes of s. 75, I P. C., the prisoner cannot be dealt with under s. 35 as if he had been convicted of two offences, 11 A. 393.

15. Previous conviction is a question of fact.—The question of proof of previous conviction is one of fact which ought to go to the jury, and must be determined by a jury, 21 W. R. 40.

16. Proof of previous conviction.—A previous conviction may be charged and proved in the ordinary manner in cases in which the Magistrate, while not thinking it necessary that increased punishment should be imposed, nevertheless desires to obtain information as to the accused's antecedents for the purpose of determining the duration of the sentence, Weir II, 265. See also s. 511.

17. Duty of the Police regarding proof of previous convictions.—It is the duty of the Police, in conducting the investigation, to take proper steps to establish the identity of an accused person, and to obtain and produce evidence of previous convictions against him.—Pun. Cir., p. 314, Ratanlal 457 and 458. Demand should be asked for, when the particulars of the previous conviction are to hand, but the requisite copy of the sentence or certificate is not ready—C P. Pol. Man., p. 207.

18. Evidence of previous conviction when to be taken.—The law strictly enjoins that evidence of previous convictions cannot be allowed except where after the accused has been found guilty, it is necessary to receive it for the purpose of s. 75, I P. C., or where the accused having given evidence of good character, the prosecution desires to adduce the evidence of previous convictions as proof of his bad character, 5 Bom. L. R. 1054.

19. Powers of Appellate Court regarding plea of guilty of being previous convict.—Where a charge has been framed against an accused person under s. 221 (7) and such person has pleaded guilty to the charge that he is a previous convict, the Appellate Court under s. 412 of the Code is precluded from opening the question whether the accused is a previous convict, 4 N. L. R. 163 = 9 Cr. L. J. 56.

222. (1) The charge shall contain such particulars as to the time and place of the alleged offence, and the person (if any) against whom, or the thing (if any) in respect of which, it was committed as are reasonably sufficient to give the accused notice of the matter with which he is charged.

Particulars as to time, place and person.

(2) When the accused is charged with criminal breach of trust or dishonest misappropriation of money, it shall be sufficient to specify the gross sum in respect of which the offence is alleged to have been committed, and the date between which the offence is alleged to have been committed, without specifying particular items or exact dates, and the charge so framed shall be deemed to be a charge of one offence within the meaning of section 234.

Provided that the time included between the first and last of such dates shall not exceed one year.

Notes.—1. Charge must contain time, place, person and circumstances of the offence.—A conviction for unnatural offence under s. 377, I P. C., cannot be sustained on a charge which does not specify the time when, place where, or any known or unknown person with whom the offence was committed, the only fact proved against him being that he habitually wore women's clothes and exhibited physical signs of having committed the offence, 6 A. 204. Sufficient particulars of time, place, person and circumstance as will give each of the accused notice of the matter with which he is charged must be inserted in the charge (ss. 330 346, 348, I P C.), 15 B. 491; name of person cheated and the manner of cheating must be set out in a charge of attempt to cheat, 8 C. W. N. 278. A charge under s. 406, I P C., in respect of 'some deeds,' dated 21st June, was set aside when there were no documents bearing that date, 12 C. W. N. 577 = 7 Cr. L. J. 372. In a case in which, the charge (s. 193, I P C.) did not contain such particulars, as to time and place as were reasonably sufficient to give notice to the accused of the matter with which he was charged, the accused was acquitted by the High Court, 23 W. R. 46. See 7 B. L. R. Appx. LXVI; 17 Cr. L. J. 411.

1-A. Particulars of time in a charge of adultery.—A charge of adultery committing commission of offences between two dates is legal where it is impossible in the circumstances of the case to assign particular dates on which sexual intercourse took place, 51 C. 438.

2. Theft and house-breaking.—A charge of theft and house-breaking is bad for vagueness if it does not specify the articles stolen or the name of the person whose house was broken into and the place of the offence, 28 M. L. J. 381 = 16 Cr. L. J. 298.

3. Where necessary intention must be specified in the charge.—A charge under s. 467 must set out the intention, 17 C. W. N. 354 = 14 Cr. L. J. 129 (see, however, 6 M. L. T. 266). A conviction for lurking house-trespass by night under s. 456 of the I. P. C., is not bad for want of the specification, of the intention in the charge, but one under s. 457 cannot be sustained without such specification. In a charge under the former section, though a guilty intention must be proved, it is not necessary to prove which of the several guilty intentions the accused had. It will be enough if it is shown that the intention must have been one or other of those specified in s. 441, though it may not be certain which it was, 22 C. 391; 20 C. W. N. 1075 where 16 W. R. 63 is referred to. See also 23 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 493. In a charge under s. 4 (b) of the Explosive Substances Act, 1908, it must be stated that it was the intent of the accused to endanger life in British India, but the omission is not material, 42 C. 957. See Note 8 to s. 221. In a charge under s. 411, I P C., it must be averred that the accused dishonestly received the property knowing or having reason to believe that the same had been stolen, 1898 A. W. N. 70.

4. What is reasonably sufficient to give the accused notice.—The reasonableness of the notice is the criterion by which the validity of the charge must be judged and this must depend in each case on the circumstances. In one case it may be necessary to specify accurately the time and place, while in another it may be unreasonable to require the prosecution to do so, Ratanal 659. Courts have wide discretion in the matter and no general rule as to the particularity required can be laid down, 1 B 610.

CHARGES OF EMBEZZLEMENT.

6. Effect of sub-sec. (2).—It supersedes the ruling in 2 C. W. N. 341, and modifies s. 234 in respect of charges of criminal breach of trust or dishonest misappropriation of money. The conflicting judgments in 13 B. 749; 17 A. 153; 18 A. 116 and 24 C. 193 need no longer be considered. This provision is merely enabling. The sub-section does not prohibit the prosecution from choosing some only out of the various sums misappropriated and framing charges in respect thereof, 12 Bom. L. R. 236 = 11 Cr. L. J. 337.

7. Sub-sec. (2) deals with breach of trust or misappropriation of 'money' only.—A person cannot be charged and convicted at one trial of the offences of mischief and criminal misappropriation in respect of a large number of trees cut by him at different times in one year, and there is nothing to show that all the cuttings were so connected as to form part of the same transaction, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 467 = 13 Cr. L. J. 567, 28 C. 560.

8. Sub-sec. (2) applies to a single accused only.—The wording of s. 222 refers to a single accused, and it must be so because it is impossible to hold that two persons can be guilty of misappropriation of the same parcel of money. S. 239 has no application in such a case, 16 C. W. N. 500 = 13 Cr. L. J. 606.

9. Charge need only mention the aggregate sum without enumerating the particular items.—The section does not require any particular formulation of the accusation but only enacts that it is sufficient to show the aggregate sum without specifying the details. It dispenses with the necessity for amplification.

does not prohibit the enumeration of the particular items in the charge, 30 B. 49. The section applies not only to cases where there is a general deficiency and the prosecution is unable to specify the particular items but also to cases where the items may be, but are not specified, 29 M. 558; 33 A. 36. The fact that the charge is more specific than it need have been is only an irregularity which could not have prejudiced the accused. Thus where an accused person is charged with the misappropriation of an aggregate sum of money, the whole sum having been wrongly dealt with by the accused within a period of one year, the mere fact that the items comprising such aggregate sum are specified and may be more than three in number will not render the charge obnoxious to the prohibition implied by s. 234, 26 A. 254; 27 A. 69; 1 B. L. R. 33 = 8 Cr. L. J. 160. In a charge of criminal misappropriation it is enough to mention the gross sum of money in respect of which the offence was committed. The mention of the specific instances which go to make up the gross sum, in addition, is superfluous, but will not vitiate the charge even though the instances are more than three, 31 C. 923. See also 41 C. 722. But see 42 A. 572 = 18 A. L. J. 633, where it was held that s. 222 (2) of the Code was meant to provide for the case of an agent or subordinate whose duty it might be merely to receive sums of money from time to time and to account for them. It is not suitable to the case of an agent whose employment involves the expenditure of money belonging to the principal as well as its receipt (33 A. 36 distinguished). In such a case it is not sufficient to charge a net balance as having been misappropriated.

10 Charge framed under cl. (2) constitutes only one offence within the meaning of s. 234.—The sub-section clearly admits of the trial of any number of acts of breach of trust within the year as only amounting to one offence, 38 B. 49. Thus where a charge of criminal misappropriation consisted of three counts alleging misappropriation on three different occasions, and two of these items were made up of three smaller sums of money each and the accused was convicted on all the three counts, it was contended in revision that the accused was really tried for seven offences and not three and that the trial was illegal. Held, the conviction was not illegal having regard to subsec. (2) of this section, 27 A. 69, where 26 A. 254 is followed. In 33 A. 36, it was held that where a man in a certain capacity is entrusted from time to time with various sums of money commits criminal breach of trust in respect thereto, he may be charged with an offence with respect to the gross sum embezzled and it is not necessary to specify the particular items embezzled or the exact dates on which they were so embezzled and that the charge so framed shall be deemed to be a charge of one offence, provided the period within such embezzlement has taken place is not more than one year. Section 234 (2) is qualified to some extent by s. 222, 26 A. 254; 27 A. 69, 31 C. 923, 32 C. 1085, 29 M. 558 followed, 12 Bom. L. R. 226 considered. Where a person was put upon his trial for embezzlement of three sums of money within one year and a single charge was drawn up in which all the three sums and the persons from whom he collected them were specified, but he was not charged with three offences under s. 409, I P C., but one offence and was convicted of one offence and sentenced to one term of imprisonment held that the charge was not illegal under s. 233 as it was in accordance with this section and s. 234, 32 C. 1085. Under this section a charge of criminal breach of trust in respect of a gross sum without specifying the items is a charge for one offence within the meaning of s. 234. The joinder in one trial of charges of criminal breach of trust in respect of two distinct items with a charge in respect of a gross sum (the item constituting which may be, but are not specified) is a joinder of only three charges and is not bad as contravening s. 234, 29 M. 558 where 25 M. 61 is distinguished, see also 30 M. 328. An Inamdar, the owner of a forest, obtained in October, 1891, a book of passes authorizing him to issue for the same the transit of the forest produce belonging to himself. Between October, 1891 and March, 1892 he issued passes covering forest produce belonging to Government. But it could not be made out what particular pass or passes covered the produce belonging to the Inamdar. The charge as framed by the Magistrate was in general terms with reference to all the transactions between October 1891 and March, 1892. Held that the general charge as framed by the Magistrate was correct, Ratanlal 659.

In a case of criminal breach of trust, a general charge of embezzlement mentioning the gross sum misappropriated, as laid down in subsec. (2) is sufficient, but it is defective and must fall through when the accused appears to have been prejudiced by not having any definite charges to answer, 16 P. W. R. 1907 = 6 Cr. L. J. 137.

11. Distinct breaches of trust though committed in one year cannot be deemed one transaction.—It is true this sub-section provides for a charge being framed in respect of a gross sum misappropriated within 12 months from first to last and enacts that a charge so framed shall be deemed to be a charge of one offence within the meaning of s. 234, but it does not provide that the acts so charged shall be deemed to be one transaction within the meaning of s. 235. See also 18 Cr. L. J. 310 as to distinct charges of theft and misappropriation hence where a man was tried at one trial for three distinct criminal breaches of trust and three separate falsifications of account, the trial was held bad for misjoinder of charges, 30 M. 328; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 536 = 13 Cr. L. J. 21. S 222 does not cover two sets of offences any number of which may be tried together, 51 C. 722. See Note 16 under s 233 and Note 8 under s 235

12 Where the misappropriation extends beyond one year, trial altogether illegal.—The charge ought not to refer to items which extend over a period of more than one year and a trial was held illegal and the conviction set aside where the charge related to items misappropriated during a period extending over two years, 14 P. R. 1905 = 64 P. L. R. 1905, where 25 M. 61 (P.C.) is followed. See also 11 C. 106.

It is not enough to know that there was embezzlement at some time before, during or after the period charged, because the charge was framed under the special provisions in s 222 (2) and it is at any rate necessary to show an act or acts of embezzlement in respect of the gross sum named in the charge or some part of it committed within the space of one year, 17 C. W. N. 479 = 14 Cr. L. J. 319.

13. Sub-sec. (2) does not cover cheating or falsification of accounts.—The alteration in law made by para 2 of this section does not apply to a charge under s 477 A, I P C. It applies only to criminal breach of trust or dishonest misappropriation of money, 26 C. 560; 41 C. 722, 13 A. L. J. 1059; 4 Bom. L. R. 433. Similarly, a charge of cheating relating to the sum total of different items, about 26 in number, said to have been taken by the accused on false representations from the complainant on different occasions is contrary to law. Such a charge is not justified by this section and a conviction on such a charge cannot be upheld, 1 A. L. J. 599. See Notes 7 and 8 to s 234.

14. Charge for criminal misappropriation how to be framed when several persons are implicated.—Where two persons are implicated in a case of criminal misappropriation or breach of trust with respect to a betment in the other ie, of misappropriation

223. When the nature of the case is such that the particulars mentioned in sections 221 and 222 do not give the accused sufficient notice of the matter with which he is charged, the charge shall also contain such particulars of the manner in which the alleged offence was committed as will be sufficient for that purpose

When manner of committing offence must be stated

Illustrations

(a) A is accused of the theft of a certain article at a certain time and place. The charge need not set out the manner in which the theft was effected.

(b) A is accused of cheating B at a given time and place. The charge must set out the manner in which A cheated B.

(c) A is accused of giving false evidence at a given time and place. The charge must set out that portion of the evidence given by A which is alleged to be false.

(d) A is accused of obstructing B, a public servant, in the discharge of his public functions at a given time and place. The charge must set out the manner in which A obstructed B in the discharge of his functions.

(e) A is accused of the murder of B at a given time and place. The charge need not state the manner in which A murdered B.

(f) A is accused of disobeying a direction of the law with intent to save B from punishment. The charge must set out the disobedience charged and the law infringed.

Notes—1 Particular in charges of unlawful assembly, rioting and under s 149, I. P. C.—Common object.—In every charge of rioting and unlawful assembly, the common object must be set out in the charge, 22 C. 276; 26 C. 630; 11 C. 106 and a conviction of rioting on a charge which does not state the common object is liable to be set aside, 3 C. W. N. 605; 33 C. 295; but as the offence of rioting can be legally described by its specific name and the question whether any further particulars are necessary under s 223 must be a question of discretion in each case 39 C. 781, but where there is evidence on the record to show what the common object was and the accused have not been prejudiced the conviction will not be bad, 21 C. 827; 9 C. W. N. 599; 28 P. W. R. 1907, if the variance between the common object charged and the common object found is material the conviction will be set aside—28 C. 265, but if not material the conviction will not be set aside, 37 C. 340; 33 C. 334. In every charge under s. 149 I P C., it is absolutely necessary that the common object must be set out.—There is no specific name for the offence and the fact that any offence is committed in prosecution of the common object is of the essence of the case and there could be no conviction for any offence committed with a different common object. It is therefore obligatory to set out the common object in a charge under s. 149 unless it has been already specified in the main charge under s. 147—33 C. 781. The accused is entitled to know with certainty and accuracy the exact value of the charge brought against him where it is sought to implicate him for acts not committed by himself but by others with whom he was in company—11 C. 108. The omission to mention the common object in the charge-sheet does not necessarily vitiate the trial, 17 Cr. L. J. 92 = 32 In. Ca. 834 (C.A.).

Property—Where the common object is alleged to be to take possession of certain property, the property must be specified—33 C. 293. See Notes under ss. 235 and 239.

2. Particulars in a charge of perjury.—Charges of perjury should contain a distinct assertion with regard to each statement intended to be characterized as perjury, that it was made that it is untrue in fact, and the accused knew it to be so when he made it—9 W. R. 34.

(i) Date must be given.—The charge should disclose the exact date on which the offence was committed, 10 W. R. 47; 7 B. L. R. Appx. LXVI.

(ii) Court.—The Court or other officer before whom the offence was committed must be specified, 10 W. R. 47.

(iii) Stage of the judicial proceeding.—The particular stage of the judicial proceeding should be specified, 1 B. L. R. Appx. XIII; 10 W. R. 37.

(iv) Exact words of the statement alleged to be false must be set out in the charge.—See 23 W. R. 28; 5 W. R. 71; Ratanlal 153; 9 W. R. 14 and 23; 36 C. 808; 1 L. B. R. 268. Where the charge was "you, on or about the 7th May, 1904, at L gave false evidence in a judicial proceeding, namely, in a case under s. 133, I P C., and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 193," it was held that the charge was vague and the conviction set aside, 10 C. W. N. 1099 = 4 Cr. L. J. 277 = 4 C. L. J. 558. But compare 13 C. W. N. 685 (P.C.) where it was stated that the whole evidence of a witness was a tissue of falsehood and it was held that the charge did not admit of being formulated in a series of specific allegations of perjury, but the gist of the accusation was sufficiently clear to the accused.

3. Charge of attempt to cheat.—Where a charge under ss. 417 and 511, I P C., was silent both as to the person upon whom the alleged attempt to cheat was made and also as to the manner in which it was intended by the accused to influence the conduct of that person and these omissions were not remedied until the close of the prosecution held that the omission was a somewhat serious defect and placed the accused at a considerable disadvantage in the conduct of his defence, 8 C. W. N. 276.

4. Charge under s. 124-A, I P C., for seditious writing on speeches.—Where an offence under s. 124 A, I P C. is alleged to have been committed by words spoken then the charge is defective if it does not set out the speeches or words alleged to be seditious. As the accused has not been prejudiced the defect was held not to vitiate the charge, 32 M. 3. But the actual words need not be set out, the requirements of the law are satisfied if the charge gives such a description of the words used as is reasonably sufficient to enable the accused to know the matter with which he is charged that is if the charge states the words used with substantial, though not absolute accuracy. Per WALLIS and BENSON JJ., 32 M. 384.

SANKARAN NAIR, J., contra, held that where the charge under s. 124 A, I P C., is for exciting disaffection of bringing His Majesty into hatred, the culpability consists in the disastrous consequences brought about by the words of the accused and the charge need not set out the words nor need the words themselves be proved as the gist of the offence in that case would be exciting disaffection, not the uttering of seditious words, and the speaker may be guilty even though his words may be innocent or uttered in a sense different from that in which they were understood by the audience. But where the charge is for attempting to create disaffection, the facts to be proved by the prosecution are entirely different. The section shows that a person must (a) speak or write certain words and (b) by such words attempt to excite disaffection and to judge whether the words are seditious, it is essential that the words themselves used by the speaker must be proved otherwise it would be impossible for him to know what he is to defend. Therefore, in that case, as the words written or spoken are the gist of the offence, they ought to be set out in the charge, and those words themselves, whether set out or not, must be proved.

another common object, that being an offence in respect of which they have had no opportunity of defending themselves, 37 C. 899; 3 C. L. J. 818. The essence of the offence defined by s. 114, I P. C., is the common unlawful purpose, and an accused person cannot be convicted, if the common object proved is different from the common object charged.—See SANKARAN NAIR, J., 8 M. L. T. 17; 40 C. 168. But when the difference is only slight and the accused has not been prejudiced the conviction is good 35 C. 334. See also 11 C. 106; 22 C. 391 and 38 C. 153. It is not a general proposition of law that a conviction under s. 147 of the Penal Code cannot be supported whenever the common object, as stated in the charge, is not precisely made out. The question in each case is whether the common object established agrees in essential particulars with that laid in the charge. Where the common object set out in the charge was to assault the complainant and his party, who were cutting the paddy of their land and, thereby to forcibly oust them but the common object established by the facts found by the Sessions Judge was to maintain possession of the land by the accused. Held, that the common object in the charge had not been substantially made out, and that the conviction under s. 147 of the Penal Code was, therefore, bad, 38 C. 865. See 11 P. W. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 334, Note 9 under s. 223 as to defects in a charge of conspiracy.

But in a Bombay case it is decided that the omission in a charge to state a common object of an unlawful assembly is not fatal to the trial, where it is specified in the complaint and found by the Court, 28 Bom. L. R. 497.

Duty of Appellate Court.—Where a charge, as drawn up by the Magistrate, alleges several alternative common objects of the unlawful assembly, it is incumbent on the Appellate Court to determine whether it is sustainable, and, if so, which of the common object stated has been made out, 35 C. 718. But when the common object is mentioned in the charge but there is no finding as it was not disputed, the conviction is good, 36 C. 158.

2. Test as to whether accused had been prejudiced.—In determining whether any error, omission or irregularity has occasioned a failure of justice, the Court should have regard to the fact whether the objection could and should have been raised at an earlier stage in the proceedings and to the manner in which the accused person has conducted his defence. It is for the Court to decide whether the accused has been misled, 10 B. H. C. R. 373; 42 C. 937. See also 32 M. S. 25 B. 90; 32 M. 334, cited in Notes 4 and 5 to s. 223 where defective charges were held to be cured by this section. See also 10 B. 124. Where the charge was that the accused had committed criminal breach of trust in respect of certain deeds but the accused was convicted of embezzling not the deeds but the amount obtained by them, held, the conviction was bad, 12 G. W. N. 577 = 7 Cr. L. J. 372.

3. In joint trial of warrant and summons-cases separate charge should be framed for the summons-case also.—Where a person is being tried on a charge framed for a warrant-case, if it is intended to try him on a summons-case as well, the offence in the latter case should also form a portion of the charge. Any omission in this respect, prejudicially affecting the accused in his defence in the summons-case would make the conviction in respect thereof bad, 29 C. 431. See Note 5 at p. 624.

4. Duty of Magistrate when charge found to be defective.—A charge of house-breaking with intent to commit theft broke down but the Magistrate convicted the accused finding that he had another object, the High Court quashed the conviction and held that where it appeared that there was another object, it was the bounden duty of the Magistrate to have given the accused notice of that, by drawing up a charge clearly stating what it was that he was accused of doing, 41. C. 743.

226. When any person is committed for trial without a charge, or with an imperfect or erroneous charge, the Court or, in the case of a High Court, the Clerk of the Crown, may frame a charge, or add to or otherwise alter the charge, as the case may be, having regard to the rules contained in this Code as to the form of charges

Procedure on commitment without charge or with imperfect charge

1 A is charged with the murder of C. A charge of abetting the murder of C may be added or substituted.

2 A is charged with forging a valuable security under s. 467 of the Indian Penal Code. A charge of fabricating false evidence under s. 193 may be added.

3 A is charged with receiving stolen property knowing it to be stolen. During the trial it incidentally appears that he has in his possession instruments for the purpose of counterfeiting coin. A charge under s. 235 of the Indian Penal Code cannot be added.

Notes—1. Signification of the word "charge."—In the Code generally the word "charge" is used as the statement of a specific offence, and not as indicating the entire series of offences of which a prisoner is accused. There is nothing in the Code to indicate that the word is to have a different construction in ss 226 and 227 from what it has in other sections. Per SARGENT, C J, and BAILY, J, 8 B. 200. The word 'charge' is used in the Code, both as indicating the whole series of counts or heads of charge, and also as indicating a charge of one specific offence. In s. 227 it is used in the latter sense. Per SCOTT, J, 8 B. 200. The latter construction was evidently approved by the Legislature when the word 'or add to' were added in s. 227 by the 1898 Code, 16 Cr. L. J. 573 (Sindh). See definition of charge s 4 (c).

2. "Without charge."—These words will apply not only to the case in which there is no charge at all, but also to the case in which there is no charge in respect of such offence as the Sessions Judge or Clerk of the Crown may think the prisoner ought to be tried for, 8 B. 200. In 27 M. 54 it was pointed out that no charge need be framed when a commitment is made under s 436 or under s 526 (i)–(iv).

3. Sessions Court has no power to expunge a charge altogether.—When an accused person is committed to take his trial on specific charges before the Sessions Court, the Judge has no power under this section to expunge a charge before calling on the accused to plead to it, 7 C. L. R. 143.

4. Power of Sessions Judge to add charge at any stage.—The combined effect of ss. 226 to 231 is to confer a very wide jurisdiction upon the Court of Session. At the beginning of the trial, if the Judge finds that the Magistrate has omitted to frame a charge, he may supply the omission and frame the charge that is made out on the evidence recorded by the Magistrate. If the charge framed by the Magistrate is imperfect or erroneous, the Judge may alter or add to the charge having regard to the offences disclosed in the evidence recorded by the Magistrate. Again, if in the course of the trial evidence is recorded which shows that the offences are different in character from those charged or that other offences also have been committed, the Judge may alter the charge or add to the charge and include the offences so disclosed. The material on which the Judge acts under s 226 is the evidence recorded by the Magistrate and under s 227 is the evidence recorded by himself in the course of the trial. Either under s 226 or s 227 charges for different offences may be added to the original charge and ss 228 to 231 do not imply that this power is limited in any way. The provisions for adjourning the trial, for directing a new trial, for recalling witnesses and even for obtaining sanction to the prosecution indicate very clearly that there need not necessarily be any connection between the added charge and the original charge. But the added charge must be for an offence made out by the evidence recorded before the Magistrate, s. 226 or by the evidence recorded by the Judge in the course of the trial, s 227, and secondly the accused must not be prejudiced and the trial on the added charges must not contravene the provisions of ss 233 and 239, 16 Cr. L. J. 573 where 8 B. 200 and 11 Bom. H. C. R. 278 are referred to with approval, 3 M. 351 is distinguished, and 8 A. 665, 32 C. 22 disapproved see 28 C. W. N. 661.

(a) Is the power of Sessions Court to add a charge limited by s 193?—The "addition" of a charge when not supported by evidence before the committing Magistrate, is not merely an error of procedure, but an improper assumption of jurisdiction although such charge may arise out of the same circumstances as the charge on which the accused has been committed. The object of restricting a Sessions Court from taking cognizance of any offence (except as provided in ss 480, 477 and 478) unless the accused person has been committed by a Magistrate, is to secure to the prisoner a preliminary inquiry which affords him an opportunity of becoming acquainted with the circumstances of the offence imputed to him and enables him to make his defence, 3 M. 351, 8 C. W. N. 784, 32 C. 22, but see 8 A. 665 and judgment of SCOTT, J, in 8 B. 200.

(b) Must the added charge be cognate to the charge on which committed?—Where a Sessions Judge altered a charge under ss 417 and 511, I P C., into one under ss 420 and 511, I P C., in that the accused attempted to cheat a Loan Office and convicted him, held that the conviction must be set aside as there was no complaint by the Loan Office but that the prosecution was instituted by a person in respect of a different matter with reference to an diction and though e to the immediate subject of the prosecution and committal and not with regard to a matter not covered by the indictment. Matter not covered by the charge before the Court cannot be made the subject of an additional charge, 32 C. 22, 20 P. W. R. 1900 = 11 Cr. L. J. 131. Where a of the same circumstances, was distinct and inasmuch as the charge so added

witness not examined at the preliminary inquiry by the Magistrate was for the first time examined by the Sessions Court, and, on her evidence alone, the conviction on the added charge was based. Held that the conviction was bad as the action of the Judge in adding the charge was ultra vires, and was not merely an error of procedure but an improper assumption of jurisdiction, 3 M. 331. See also 31 B. 218; 21 C. 97; 3 N.-W. H. C. R. 337; 23 C. W. N. 561.

5. When committed for an offence against A, it is illegal to add a charge of offence against B.—It is not open to a Sessions Judge in a commitment of the accused for the offence of the murder of A to add a charge under s. 326, I P C., for causing grievous hurt to B, 20 P. W. R. 1909 = 11 Cr. L. J. 131. Where a person was charged with having caused hurt to one person but was convicted of having hurt another person, the conviction was set aside, 14 C. W. N. 243. But in 8 A. 663 such an addition was held to be a mere irregularity which had not prejudiced the accused. Three persons were committed to the Court of Session, two of them as, or immediately after, the attack which resulted in the death of J. Held, that the case did not come within the terms of the section and the adding of the charge was an irregularity, but as the accused were not prejudiced in their defence, the High Court declined to interfere, 8 A. 663.

6. Application of evidence taken upon charge under one section to a wholly different offence.—Three persons were charged under s. 372 I P C., and also separately under s. 109 of the same Code. After their commitment, but before the commencement of the Sessions, supplementary evidence was incorporated in the case as to the age of the minor. At the commencement of the trial, the Sessions Judge was asked to allow a charge of abetment of rape to be entered founded upon that additional evidence—evidence taken only after the Sessions had commenced and after the Judge at the trial had drawn attention to the fact that the original depositions contained no evidence of age whatever. Held that under the circumstances of the case, it would not be right to include the charge of abetment of rape, or apply the evidence taken upon a charge under one section to a wholly different one, 21 C. 97.

7. Dismissal of complaint by Magistrate is no bar to Sessions Judge's adding new charge.—Where new heads of charges are proposed to be added before the Sessions Judge, the fact that a complaint regarding them was made to and dismissed by a Magistrate is no bar to the Sessions Judge's adding them.—Per TELANG, J., 15 B. 414.

8. Adding a fresh charge at the third trial.—Where an accused was tried twice under s. 409, I P C. and acquitted and the Sessions Judge in the third trial added an entirely new charge under s. 477 A, I P C. the High Court observed: "We think that it is doubtful whether on the former reference the parties ever contemplated that under the order of the Court an entirely new charge might be framed but looking to the terms of the order we cannot say that the Magistrate and the Sessions Judge overstepped the limits of their powers." Anyhow the charge newly framed was held irregular though not absolutely illegal 26 C. 560 at p. 563.

9. Power of otherwise altering the charge.—The power to alter ought to be used with great caution 6 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 76 and discretion 6 C. W. N. 72. The Sessions Judge might withdraw a charge which he himself has framed and added to those already sent up by the committing Magistrate, 12 A. 531. Or the omission on the part of the Magistrate to frame a charge so as to contain a separate head for each offence may be remedied by the Sessions Judge, 7 W. R. 8; but not after delivery of the verdict, 5 B. H. C. R. 249. He could also substitute charge of abetment for the substantive offence, 11 B. H. C. R. 278. See also 2 C. W. N. 10 C. L. R. 421 as to the circumstances under which the Sessions Judge could amend the charge.

227. (1) Any Court may alter or add to any charge at any time before the charge is pronounced, or, in the case of trials before the Court of Sessions, before the Court before the verdict of the jury is returned or the assessor's assessor are expressed

(2) Every such alteration or addition shall be read and explained to the accused.

Notes—1 Addition of charge at the trial.—If the word 'alter' is used, the addition must be an addition to some specific charge in the nature of an amendment of a new charge 8 B. 200. Contra see 9 A. 525, where it was held, that on a trial the and 471 of the I P C, the Court had power, under this section, to add a charge under s. 113 of the I P C, upon which the prisoner had not been committed for trial. See also 3 N.-W. P. H. G. R. 337 and 8 A. 665. The conflict of decisions found in these rulings has now been removed by the words "or add." Amendment in a charge ought to be made formally and should appear on the face of the record, 9 W. R. 14 and whenever a Sessions Judge may see cause to amend a charge the reasons for such amendment, or at all events a statement that such amendment has been found to be necessary, should also form part of the record, 1 Agra 87. See also 17 B. 549 as to the alteration of a major offence (dacoity) which is extraditable into a minor offence (theft) which is not extraditable. See Note 4 to s. 226 as to the power of the Sessions Court to add a charge during the trial.

2^o Section does not warrant the striking out of a charge to cure an illegality when the mischief has been done.—Where a person was charged with and tried for four offences committed all within a year, it is not open to a Magistrate purporting to act under this section to strike out one of the charges and convict the accused on the remaining three. Although the words of this section are wide enough to warrant a Court in altering a charge by striking out one of the charges at any time before judgment yet the section does not warrant the striking out of a charge for the purpose of curing an illegality already committed and after the mischief which the Legislature intended to guard against had been done, 29 M. 569; 49 H. L. J. 93.

3. When the additional charge would prejudice the accused, it should not be added.—While the law empowers a Sessions Judge to add a charge at any time before judgment is delivered, he must in doing so exercise a sound and wise discretion. Where therefore in a Sessions trial, after the prosecution case had been closed and defence witnesses examined, the Judge suddenly added a grave charge like dacoity, proceeded with the trial without even granting an adjournment and convicted the accused on the newly added charge, held, the Judge had altogether failed to exercise a proper discretion, 6 G. W. N. 73. The accused was committed to the Court of Sessions on the specified charge that he gave false evidence in his deposition before the Sessions Judge. In the Sessions trial, the Judge added a charge of giving false evidence by reason of the alleged contradictory statements, sc. one before a Magistrate under s. 164 and another before a Sessions Judge. The trial was confined to proving in evidence the two statements alleged to be contradictory, and the accused was acquitted. Held, reversing acquittal and ordering re-trial, that the accused was prejudiced, inasmuch as he had no notice, until the new charge was added, that he would have to meet the charge of making contradictory statements and he was at an obvious disadvantage in defending himself against that charge either by cross examining the Magistrate, who was called as a witness for the Crown or by calling witnesses to show that what he said before the Magistrate had been misunderstood or had otherwise been incorrectly recorded, 1899 A. W. N. 89. Where an accused was tried twice under s. 409, I P C and the Judge in the third trial added a charge under s. 447 A, I P C. Held that he had not exceeded his powers under the law, 25 G. 580 and see Note 8 to s. 226. But where the accused was committed to the Sessions on charges under ss. 363 and 366, I P C, and at the late stage, after the prosecution case had closed and the defence evidence recorded, the Court of its own motion added a charge under s. 498, I P C, and convicted the accused on all three charges. Held, that the procedure followed by the Sessions Judge was not regular. The additional charge framed at the stage it was framed was prejudicial to the accused and therefore the conviction under s. 498, I P C, was set aside and a re-trial ordered on the other charges, 31 B. 218. See also 29 G. 415 which follows 5 A. 233. An accused would be seriously prejudiced by the addition of a charge under s. 143, I P C, to charges under ss. 486 and 451, I P C, 16 Cr. L. J. 737 (H) see 26 G. W. N. 344.

4. Application for alteration when to be made.—The application for alteration of the charge should be made immediately after the charge has been read and explained by the Magistrate, 27 G. 839 (F.B.). Such an application should be considered at once and not deferred until the conclusion of the trial before the Sessions Court, 16 B. 415.

(1) Alteration of charge after verdict—On a trial by jury the Sessions Judge has no power to alter the charge after the delivery of the verdict, 8 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 9. These words "return of verdict" mean return of the final verdict which the Judge is bound to record, 8 B. 200, nor has he power to do so after the assessors have given their opinion, 17 Cr. L. J. 434.

(2) Alteration after presentation of petition of compromise—Where a Court has drawn up a charge of an offence compoundable without sanction of Court and this charge having been read and explained to the accused has been pleaded to that Court should upon the presentation to it of a petition of composition, at once accept the petition and acquit the accused and has no power to alter the charge already drawn up, 29 P. R. 1914 = 16 Cr. L. J. 81.

5. Effect of omission to read out and explain additional charge.—When the accused is defended, and his counsel is present in Court the omission to read out and explain the additional charge is an irregularity which unless it has prejudiced the accused does not affect the result of the trial 8 B. 200. See also 7 C. 96 9 M. 81.

6. 'Alter' includes 'withdrawal' of charge.—The word 'alter' includes withdrawal by the Sessions Judge of a charge added by him to the charge on which the commitment was made, 12 A. 531. But it does not warrant the striking out of a charge for the purpose of curing an illegality which had been committed, as for instance when a person is charged with and tried for four offences committed in the same year, to strike out one of the charges and convict the accused on the remaining three, 29 M. 561.

7. Power to add charge is not limited by the terms of the certificate under s. 183.—Once a certificate has been granted the Court has power to add any charges arising out of the facts, 33 A. 514 and see Note 11 to s. 183.

8. Duty of Magistrate when altering charge.—When a Magistrate amends the charge he should not write over the original charge, but should leave it on the file for reference, if necessary and should write the new charge separately and correctly date it, 8. Bur. L. T. 17 = 16 Cr. L. J. 2.

228. If the charge framed or alteration or addition made under section 226 or section 227 is such that proceeding immediately with the trial is not likely, in the opinion of the Court, to prejudice the accused in his defence or the prosecutor in the conduct of the case, the Court may, in its discretion, after such charge or alteration or addition has been framed or made, proceed with the trial as if the new or altered charge had been the original charge.

229. If the new or altered or added charge is such that proceeding immediately with the trial is likely, in the opinion of the Court, to prejudice the accused or the prosecutor as aforesaid, the Court may either direct a new trial or adjourn the trial for such period as may be necessary.

Notes.—1. New trial may be waived.—Where the accused was not called on to plead to a new charge but his counsel on being asked did not require a new trial, it was held he was not prejudiced by the omission, 8 B. 200. See also 5 M. 20 and 11 B. H. C. R. 273, but if the trial itself is illegal, no waiver on the part of accused can cure the illegality, 20 M. L. J. (Sb. N) 1.

2. Where new trial directed, evidence at the old trial cannot be referred to unless put in.—Where a new trial has been directed under this section the Magistrate holding the new trial is not justified in referring to the former record as a whole but only to such portions of it as have been especially put in evidence before him, 7 C. L. R. 193.

3. Proceeding to trial immediately on amendment of charge.—Where the original and amended charges were so nearly related that the trial might be deemed to have been a trial on the amended charge from the commencement and where no objection was raised by the pleader of the accused as to the admissibility of the confession of a co-accused on the original charge held that the prisoner was not prejudiced, 11 B. H. C. R. 273. See also 1914 M. W. N. 332 = 15 Cr. L. J. 622. Where, however, the new charge would raise different question of law or would admit of a different defence on the facts the Court should always act under s. 229 6 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 76. See 6 C. W. N. 72 See also 31 B. 218 referred to in Note 3 to s. 227.

Stay of proceedings if prosecution of offence in altered charge require previous sanction.

230. If the offence stated in the new or altered or added charge is one for the prosecution of which previous sanction is necessary, the case shall not be proceeded with until such sanction is obtained unless sanction has been already obtained for a prosecution on the same facts as those on which the new or altered charge is founded.

Note.—No fresh sanction necessary for a different offence on the same facts.—This section incorporates, 11 B. H. C. R. 34 The expression "on the same facts" is important. Thus where prosecution of a Sub-Registrar was sanctioned for offence under ss. 468 and 417, I P. C., and the Sub-Registrar was convicted under ss. 468 and 109 of the abetment of forgery for the purpose of cheating, and it was contended that the conviction cannot stand as there was no sanction for the abetment. Held, that the original sanction covered the new charge as the charge of abetment was based on the same facts for which sanction had been granted 30 C. 905

231. Whenever a charge is altered or added to by Court after the commencement of trial, the prosecutor and the accused shall be allowed to recall or re-summon, and examine with reference to such alteration or addition any witness who may have been examined, and also to call any further witness whom the Court may think to be material.

Charge altered after commencement of trial—accused not allowed to re-examine effect of.—Held that where after the evidence of the prosecution a charge was framed and after the evidence for the defence was concluded, the Magistrate altered the charge without giving an opportunity to re-examine the witnesses or to produce further evidence for the defence, it was entirely illegal on the part of the Magistrate to order commitment under the circumstances and it was set aside by the High Court, 23 A. L. J. 333.

232. (1) If any Appellate Court, or the High Court in the exercise of its powers of revision or of its powers under Chapter XXVII, is of opinion that any person convicted of an offence was misled in his defence by the absence of a charge, or by an error in the charge, it shall direct a new trial to be had upon a charge framed in whatever manner it thinks fit

(2) If the Court is of opinion that the facts of the case are such that no valid charge could be preferred against the accused in respect of the facts proved it shall quash the conviction

Illustration

A is convicted of an offence under s 186 of the Indian Penal Code, upon a charge which omits to state that he knew the evidence which he corruptly used or attempted to use as true or genuine was false or fabricated. If the Court thinks it probable that A had such knowledge and that he was misled in his defence by the omission from the charge of the statement that he had it, it shall direct a new trial upon an amended charge but if it appears probable from the proceedings that A had no such knowledge, it shall quash the conviction

Notes 1 Scope of the section.—Apart from the general powers given to an Appellate Court to order a re-trial under s 423 (1) (b) this section gives an Appellate Court or High Court power to direct a re-trial on the ground that the accused has been misled in his defence by the absence of a charge or a defect in the charge. Where certain owners of land were convicted under ss. 154 and 155 I P C., for acts or omission on the part of their agents but the charges framed by the Magistrate referred only to the knowledge or belief and acts or omissions of the accused themselves and not of their agents, and on appeal the Sessions Judge was of opinion that by reason of the omission to insert the word "or their Agents or Managers" in the charges, the accused had been seriously prejudiced in their defence, held he was competent to set aside the conviction and order a re-trial under this section 7 G. W. N 301 See also 29 G. 431

2. Conviction for an entirely different offence when there is no charge framed for it is bad—A complaint was lodged against one G for offences under ss 499 and 471, I P C. At the trial evidence was directed principally to the charge under s 471, and at the close of the trial the Magistrate suddenly turned round and convicted the accused under s 499 although there was no charge of that offence before him. On appeal the Sessions Judge not finding sufficient evidence to establish that offence ordered under s. 423 (1) (b) a new trial. Held on revision, that this section rather than s 423 (1) (b) applied and the order of the Judge for new trial was proper. But as there was nothing on the record to show that any valid charge could be preferred against the accused, further proceedings in the matter should be stopped, 28 G 62. On appeal the Appellate Court has, under this section, power to order a new trial of a case. The accused was charged with criminal breach of trust under s 406 I P C., in respect of amount deposited with him as security. The Magistrate found that the accused misappropriated the security money and convicted him both under s 406 and 420 I P C. held, that the conviction under s. 420 I P C to which the accused was not called on to plead was illegal, 9 Cr. L J 405 (M). Where a Magistrate charged and convicted the accused of robbing the Sessions Judge on appeal acquitted them on this charge, but convicted them of house-trespass and hurt

Held, the conviction was wrong, as the offences were distinct and should have formed the subject of separate charges and the accused had been materially prejudiced by the omission of those charges, 30 C. 233. When a Court draws up a charge under s. 325 read with s. 149 I P C. it clearly intimates to the accused persons that they did not themselves cause grievous hurt to anybody, but that they are guilty by implication of such offence inasmuch as somebody else in prosecution of the common object of the riot in which they were engaged did cause such grievous hurt. Therefore when these accused persons are acquitted of rioting obviously all the offences which they are said to have committed by implication disappear and the defence cannot be called upon to answer to the specific offence of causing grievous hurt simply because it may have appeared in the evidence 18 C. W. N. 1077 = 13 Cr. L. J. 803. See also 18 C. W. N. 1276 = 13 Cr. L. J. 704; 18 C. W. N. 1774 = 18 Cr. L. J. 42 and 41 C. 682.

3. Accused prejudiced.—In 8 C. 211 the charge being defective and in exact as regards the second and third clauses of the definition of murder s. 300 I P C., the High Court set aside the conviction and sentence for murder but convicted the prisoner on his own confession and the evidence of two other persons under s. 326, I P C. See also 30 C. 233 and 7 C. W. N. 74. But where the accused had been convicted of an offence under s. 211, I P C., instead of the abatement of that offence the High Court in revision refused to interfere, as there was no prejudice, 7 C. W. N. 836.

4. Vagueness in charge of perjury—In a case where a conviction for perjury was set aside on account of the vagueness of the charge see 10 C. W. N. 1099 = 4 C. L. J. 558 = 4 Cr. L. J. 277. See Note 2 under s. 223.

5. Charge of one offence and conviction for another is bad.—The accused was summoned to answer a charge of storing wool but on his godown being inspected at his request, some loose cotton was found there. He was convicted for storing cotton contrary to the Act. Held reversing the conviction and sentence that the accused had no proper notice, and no proper opportunity of answering the charge of storing cotton Ratanlal 529. When two accused were charged under s. 324 I P C. and one charge was framed against them that they voluntarily cause hurt to B S and L by a dao a cutting instrument and one of the accused was convicted of using a lathi against two of the persons the conviction was set aside 17 C. W. N. 419 = 14 Cr. L. J. 312. and see Notes 1 and 3 under s. 225.

Joinder of Charges

233. For every distinct offence of which any person is accused there shall be a separate charge, and every such charge shall be tried separately except in the cases mentioned in sections 234 235 236 and 239.

Illustration

A is accused of a theft on one occasion and of causing grievous hurt on another occasion. A must be separately charged and separately tried for the theft and causing grievous hurt.

OBJECT OF SECTION

Notes.—1. Necessity for separate charge for each offence.—This section contains the general law at p 177. Per PETHERAM C J The charge says JACKSON J in 21 W. R. 72 at p 82. I take to be first a notice to the prisoner of the matter whereof he is accused and it must convey to him with sufficient clearness and certainty that which the prosecution intends to prove against him and of which he will have to clear himself. It is an information to the Court which is to try the accused of the matters to which evidence is to be given. —in the first place to give an accused person notice of the charge that he is not embarrassed by having to meet charges in no other way. J, in 19 C. W. N. 972. The rule is 'separate trials. Joint trial is only by virtue of the exceptions quoted in s. 233. The basis of the rule is that the accused should not be prejudiced by being accused of several things at once 15 B. 491. See also 23 M. 61, as to the necessity for this salutary rule.

APPLICATION OF SECTION

2. Section does not apply to preliminary inquiries—Sections 232 and 239 relating to joinder of charges refer to the trial of the accused. The Privy Council Ruling in 23 M. 61 = 23 I. A. 257 cannot be extended to preliminary inquiries held by committing Magistrates so as to render the commitment itself illegal, because there was misjoinder of offences or offenders in the preliminary inquiry. See 33 M. L. J. 239. It is open to the Sessions Judge to frame separate charges and try separately as if there had been two commitments, 26 M 592; 17 Cr. L. J. 359; 7 Bom. L. R. 457, but this procedure is not calculated to advance justice. Per SRSHAGIRI AYYAR, J, in 29 M. L. J. 101 = 18 M. L. T. 93 = 16 Cr. L. J. 893 (F.B.) See Note 7 to s. 215 and Note 7 to s. 229.

3. Does the section apply to security proceedings under Chapter VIII?—The law as to joinder of charges against a person accused of definite offences has no application to an inquiry under s. 110, 11 G. W. N. 789 = 6 Cr. L. J. 1; 11 Bom. L. R. 740 = 10 Cr. L. J. 375, but see Notes 39–41 under Heading VI to s. 123.

4. Section applies to summons-cases where no charge is framed.—The accused were tried and convicted for an encroachment on a grazing ground. It was found that each of the accused cultivated a separate piece of land and that they did not all join together to cultivate the same piece in common. The question being raised as to whether the section applied to a summons-case in which no formal charge was necessary, held, that a charge is an essential element in any trial and if the provisions as to joinder of charges do not apply to summons-cases, there are no other provisions of law to guide Magistrates, 3 L. B. R. 52 = 2 Cr. L. J. 739 (F. B.) In a summons-case, it is not necessary to have a charge embodied in writing but nonetheless this section applies to summons-cases also, so also when an accused is charged with a summons-case and a warrant-case, 3 L. B. R. 113 = 3 Cr. L. J. 350. The fact that the trial has taken place in a summons-case does not exclude the application of s. 233, 41 G. 694 following 3 L. B. R. 52 (F. B.) = 2 Cr. L. J. 739. See also (1912) 1 M. W. N. 89 = 13 Cr. L. J. 124, where it was held that each levy of excess toll constitutes a separate offence which should be tried separately.

5. Section does not affect simultaneous trial of cross-cases.—See 8 C. W. N. 344 where 25 M. 61 (P. C.) and 13 C. L. R. 275, are distinguished and Notes under Heading VI to s. 537 and Note 9 to s. 239.

SEPARATE CHARGE FOR EACH DISTINCT OFFENCE.

6. What is a distinct offence?—"I understand, when two offences have been committed and each of these two offences has no connection with each other they are distinct offences. The section does not say 'for every offence' but 'for every distinct offence' The illustration to the section indicates the meaning of 'distinct offence'. In the illustration, the two offences were committed on two different occasions, one was theft and the other was grievous hurt. Per SHARFUDDIN, J, in 19 C. W. N. 972 = 16 Cr. L. J. 641. See also Notes under Heading III to s. 36.

7. Separate offences ought not to be lumped together in a single charge.—Three separate offences not of head o
so as one charge of two distinct offences (two acts of extortion), though arising out of the same transaction is an illegality fatal to the trial. 10 C. W. N. 53 = 3 Cr. L. J. 141. Two distinct offences of criminal breach of trust (s. 409 I P C.) ought not to be included in one charge, 17 C. W. N. 147. See also 10 C. W. N. 320 = 2 C. L. J. 618 = 3 Cr. L. J. 111 where distinguishing 27 B. 135, a joinder in one charge of two attempts to cheat committed on two different dates, one following the other was held to vitiate the whole trial, and so also though offences committed on the same date. In 6 C. L. J. 757 = 6 Cr. L. J. 442 two persons were charged in one charge for misappropriation of three sums of money collected in accordance with their duty from three persons and convicted, the conviction was set aside though the Judges disapproved of the length to which the rule in the 25 M. 61 (P. C.) was carried, as the accused had in fact been prejudiced. So, too, where theft and escape from lawful custody are joined, because none of the sections referred to in this section will cover such a case, 3 L. B. R. 221 = 4 Cr. L. J. 369, 1 L. B. R. 361. In 13 C. W. N. 1067 = 10 Cr. L. J. 469 the accused was charged with cheating and one charge alleging delivery of property on three different dates was framed and held to be bad and the conviction was set aside. In 40 C. 846 the trial of the accused on one charge with misappropriating a sum of money made up of two sums collected on different dates was held to be an illegality. See also 18 C. W. N. 133. Where, however, under an agreement made with the concurrence of their pleaders, the accused were tried for three offences committed against three different persons on the same date and forming part of the same transaction and one charge was framed against them instead of three and it ran thus—"That you on or about the 3rd day of July at B committed theft of paddy from the fields of (a) S. D., (b) J. P., (c) L. P. and thereby committed an offence under s. 379 I P C. etc.' Held that although strictly speaking, three separate charges should have been drawn up in identical terms for the three offences under s. 379, 1 P. C., yet as in the one charge framed, the three offences had been kept separate and were distinguished by the letters (a), (b) (c), the error in framing one charge was an error in form rather than in substance and as such did not amount to an illegality but was a mere irregularity curable under s. 537 unless it was shown that the accused had been prejudiced or that a failure of justice had been occasioned in consequence thereof, 11 C. W. N. 84 = 4 Cr. L. J. 615, where 10 C. W. N. 85 = 3 Cr. L. J. 141 and 25 C. 292 are distinguished. See also 1907 A. W. N. 255 = 6 Cr. L. J. 215. Three separate but similar complaints of cheating were laid against the accused by three persons, but only one charge was framed setting out only one offence of cheating in respect of all the three complaints and the accused was convicted. Held that the Magistrate should have drawn up three charges and if he had done so there was no obstacle to the disposal of all three cases at one trial. As, however, the accused had not been prejudiced the error was cured by s. 537. The defect was one of duplicity, not of misjoinder and the case was not covered by 21 M. 61 (P. C.), 41 C. 68. Only one charge was framed in respect of the hurt caused to two persons and the accused convicted, but it was held (1 LUTHER, J., dissenting) that the irregularity was cured by s. 537 and that the case of 25 M. 61 (P. C.) was not an authority for the proposition that failure to observe the first part of s. 233 is fatal to the trial, 19 C. W. N. 972 = 15 Cr. L. J. 641. There is no doubt that according to the general principle, a duplicity of the charge is not allowed. The indictment must not be doubted, that is to say, no one count of the indictment should charge the accused with having committed two or more offences, for instance, with having committed murder and robbery or the like. But where the offence charged, whether felony or misdemeanour, is one single act, it may be made the subject of a single count. So the indictment may charge the prisoner in the same count with felonious acts with respect to several persons, as in robbery with having assaulted A and B and stolen from A one shilling and from B two shillings, if it was all in one transaction (see Archbold's 1910, p. 75). Per SHARFUDDIN, J., in 19 C. W. N. 972 = 16 Cr. L. J. 641. Reference was also made R v Giddins, (1812) Car. and Mar. 634 R. v J. A. Thompson, (1910) 2 K. B. 89.

JOINDER OF CHARGES.

B. Though any two out of three charges may stand together, it does not follow that all the three may be tried together.—Although the first (s. 409 1, P. C.) and the second (s. 477 A) charges could properly be tried together as forming part of the same transaction under s. 235 (i), and the second and third charges (s. 477 A) could likewise be tried at one trial under s. 234 non constat that all the three are triable simultaneously. The joinder of three must be brought within the scope of ss. 234, 235, 236 or 239 and when there is nothing to justify the joinder of the third charge with the first, ergo the first charge cannot be tried along with the third and either the first or the third must go and the whole trial is invalid, 40 C. 318.

B. What offence cannot be jointly charged against the same person —

(i) A substantive offence and abetment thereof cannot be jointly charged against the same individual—An accused can no more be charged as an abettor as well as a perpetrator of the offence abetted, not in the alternative but cumulatively, than he can be charged with an attempt to commit an offence and the commission of that very offence, 24 M. 523 at p. 547. See also judgment of DAVIES, J., in 25 M. 61 and 42 C. 857.

(ii) A thief cannot be charged with theft and disposal of stolen property—The real thief cannot be charged with offences under ss. 379 and 215, 1 P. C., 14 Bar. L. R. 67; 12 Cr. L. J. 72 (Slid).

(iii) A murderer cannot be charged with causing evidence to disappear by concealing the corpse, s. 201, 1 P. C.—7 W. R. 52; 8 Bom. H. C. R. 126; 2 A. 713; 6 C. 789; 7 A. 749 8 A. 232, 22 C. 633; 27 M. 271; 8 Bom. L. R. 538 = 4 Cr. L. J. 89.

10. What are not distinct offences.—The mere fact that only a single act was committed does not necessarily mean that only one offence has been committed.

(i) Making number of false statements in one deposition is one offence—The making of any number of false statements in the same deposition is one aggregate case of giving false evidence, and that charges of false evidence cannot be multiplied according to the number of false statements contained in the deposition, 36 C. 803 following 6 Mad. H. C. 21.

(ii) Making three forged documents simultaneously is one using—When three forged receipts are filed at one time with a written statement in three different cases, on three different occasions, and there was nothing to show that any of the documents had been used at any other time, held that it is one using only, and it is not necessary to frame three separate charges in respect of each receipt, 20 C. 413. See, however, 14 C. L. J. 632 = 13 Cr. L. J. 62.

(iii) Receiving bribes in one lump—See Note 13 below

(iv) Receiving of properties stolen from different persons—When a person is charged with receiving on one occasion various items of stolen property, the result of several distinct thefts, he ought to be convicted of only one offence under s. 411, I P C, 3 Bom. L. R. 187; unless it appears that articles for possession of which the accused is charged came into his possession at different times, the trial is not irregular on account of the fact that the articles were stolen from several persons at different times, 36 P. L. R. 1910. See, however, 13 C. W. N. 418 = 9 Cr. L. J. 277 where following 11 C. W. N. 1423 it was held that one trial for having been found in possession of stolen property belonging to two different persons and stolen at two different times is illegal. The case in 9 C. 371 was held to have been overruled by 25 M. 61.

(v) Misappropriation of several sums of money—See 29 M. 558; 7 A. L. J. 897 = 11 Cr. L. J. 442 and Note 9 under s. 234. Embezzlement of two separate sums on two different occasions in regard to the same individual is really only one offence, 14 C. 128. A Kyandangry having no authority to collect capitation tax collected the tax from three separate tax payers leading him to believe that he had authority from the thugyi to collect. After collection he paid over to the thugyi only a portion of his collection from each tax payer and dishonestly misappropriated the remainder. Held that he could not be punished for three separate offences of criminal breach of trust under s. 406, I P C, in the absence of any evidence to show that there were three separate and distinct acts of misappropriation, 1 Bur. S. L. 492.

(vi) Misappropriating several books of account is but one offence—When an executor in charge of an estate for several years was charged with having committed offences under s. 405, I P C, in respect of large number of account books of the estate which were found locked up in two boxes and it was contended that there was a separate offence in respect of each book and that the accused could not be tried for more than three of such offences held, such contention was untenable. They formed one set of books and may be regarded as one item of property which the accused was dealing in one way, 17 C. W. N. 479 = 14 Cr. L. J. 219.

(vii) Stealing several articles at one time—The stealing of several bullocks from the same herdsmen at the same time is one offence, (1881) A. W. N. 154. See Note 6 (ii) and (iii) to s. 235.

(viii) Receiving a bribe partly on one day and partly another is but one offence—5 C. W. N. 332

(ix) Separate acts committed under the Bombay District Municipalities Act constitute one offence only—In 4 Bom. L. R. 952, accused owned a shop which was divided into four compartments, three of which were occupied by himself and the fourth by his tenant. To all these compartments was attached one continuous board which projected into the public street. The accused was charged and convicted under the Bombay District Municipalities Act of two offences, one for affixing a board to the portion in his own occupation and the other for affixing a board to the portion let out. Held, there was only one offence as there was only one board and the conviction was accordingly set aside and the case sent back for re-trial.

(x) False information against several persons—False information in one statement to the Police that property would be found in the houses of two persons is one false statement and the accused could be charged and convicted for only one offence, 13 C. 270.

(xi) Cheating a number of persons—See 10 C. W. N. 520

(xii) Making a number of false entries to cover one defalcation—See 41 C. 722

11. Several dacoities cannot be charged and tried together.—Where the accused is alleged to have committed three if not four dacoities in the course of the same night and the charge against him was to the effect that they on or about the 12th of December committed dacoity at Dabri and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 395, I P C, held that the conviction was unsustainable as the charge ought to have specified each alleged dacoity separately and the omission cannot be said to be a mere irregularity, even if the dacoities were all so connected together as to form part of the same transaction, 26 A. 195. Accused cannot be charged at one time with more than three dacoities in all and the dacoities must be particularly specified, 1912 M. W. N. 49 = 13 Cr. L. J. 123. See also 14 A. 502, and 28 M. L. J. 351 = 16 Cr. L. J. 298. In 7 P. R. 1901, three accused were charged with three dacoities committed in a course of a single day and in addition one of them was charged with rescuing a prisoner from Police custody, with the murder of a constable and with taking part in the dacoity in which the constable was murdered, held, that the joint trial was a mere irregularity curable by s. 537. This was before the Privy Council decision in 25 M. 61. See later Rulings in 5 P. R. 1900; 17 P. R. 1903 and 18 P. R. 1902.

12. Alternative charge for making contradictory statements but one offence.—Conviction for intentionally giving false evidence may be had upon an alternative charge though the false statement had been made in one deposition. This section does not affect the matter. Per WILSON and TOTTENHAM, J (NORRIS, J, dissenting), 10 C. 937. An alternative charge is not a charge of two offences, but of one, 13 B. L. R. 324 = 21 W. R. 72. Now see s. 236 and Note 17 thereto.

13. Jolander of charge in cases of bribery—s. 161, I. P. C.—Each distinct act of receiving an illegal gratification must form the subject of a separate charge except in cases falling under ss. 234 and 235, see 23 M. 61. It is illegal to try in one and the same trial, eight distinct charges of offences under s. 161, I. P. C. 7 A. L. J. 19 = 11 Cr. L. J. 51. Where a bribe was collected from certain inhabitants of a village by subscription and handed over to the recipient in a lump sum, it was held the recipient could not be charged under s. 161 I. P. C., with the receipt of the whole sum collected, but that he must be charged in respect of not more than three separate items constituting the total collection and that the ruling in 28 M. 61 applied 1906 A. W. N. 223. Again, where an accused person attempts to cheat a whole body of villagers and speaks to them in a body and not to each individual villager for the purpose, it was held he may be tried in one charge for each attempt to get money from them, 10 G. W. N. 520 = 2 C. L. J. 618 = 3 Cr. L. J. 111.

Where, however, certain sums of money were collected from landholders of various villages and where paid in the case of each village in a lump sum by the persons who collected them to the accused, a Zilladar in the Irrigation Department, with the object of inducing the accused to show favour in his official capacity to each village as a whole and the accused was charged and convicted in respect of such a lump sum under s. 161, I. P. C., and it was contended that the offence under s. 162, I. P. C., was in respect of every item of money contributed by various persons and the actual charge against him of having received a certain lump sum of money from the landholders of a village so and so is illegal on two grounds, (1) that it ignores the fact that the offence was the doing of something in his official capacity for the benefit of each individual landholder who subscribed to the fund and (2) that the Court had thereby joined a number of perfectly distinct offences into one general charge, held that the charge as framed was legal and correct, as the motive of the petitioner was to obtain sums of money from each village by promising to show favour to inhabitants of those villages generally, (1904) A. W. N. 223 discussed, 11 P. R. 1911 = 143 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 217. The question in each case is one of fact. Where, therefore, a Sub-Registrar was convicted on a charge that he attempted to obtain Rs. 2 from one S and six others as a motive for registering seven sale-deeds executed in their favour by R and it was contended that since R sold portions of his land to seven different persons by seven different sale-deeds and though they were presented for registration at the same time, and the accused refused to register them unless he was paid in the aggregate a sum of Rs. 14 at a rate of Rs. 2 for each sale-deed and this amounted to seven offences and having regard to s. 235 the accused could not be tried with respect to all of them at one trial, held that whether the allegation in the charge amounted to seven offences is one of fact. If the accused attempted to obtain Rs. 2 separately from each of the seven purchasers and was willing to register any one purchaser's sale-deed if that purchaser paid him Rs. 2 then the contention of the accused should prevail. But if on the other hand the Registrar treated this as one transaction and was not willing to register any one of the documents until all the seven purchasers have paid Rs. 2 each, that would be one offence and no question of misjoinder would arise, 13 C. W. N. 1062 = 10 Cr. L. J. 463. See also 10 G. W. N. 520 = 2 C. L. J. 618 = 3 Cr. L. J. 111.

14. What are distinct offences that cannot be tried together.—The following offences have been held to be distinct offences for which there should be separate charges and separate trials.—

(a) Ss 167 and 466, I. P. C., 8 C. 430 = 10 C. L. R. 421

(b) Ss 411 and 413, I. P. C., 8 C. 634 = 10 C. L. R. 466

(c) Ss 380 and 411, I. P. C., 1 G. W. N. 35; 6 C. L. R. 245; 28 C. 10, 3 P. R. 1905, or ss 380 and 414, I. P. C., 6 Bom. L. R. 725, or ss 395 and 412, I. P. C., 11 C. L. J. 182 = 11 Cr. L. J. 244

(d) Ss. 272 and 273, I. P. C., 12 M. 273

(e) Ss. 380 and 224, I. P. C., 3 L. B. R. 221 = 4 Cr. L. J. 359, 11 M. 441.

(f) Ss. 411 and 480, I. P. C. 6 C. W. N. 550

(g) Ss 409 and 479-A. Three distinct criminal breaches of trust and three distinct falsification of account, 30 M. 325; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 536 = 13 Cr. L. J. 21, and so also three distinct acts of criminal misappropriation and two distinct offences of forgery to conceal the two acts of criminal misappropriation, 30 A. 351 = 32 A. 219

(g 1) Distinct acts of misappropriation—The accused was charged and convicted at one trial of offences under ss. 403 and 426, I P C., in respect of a large number of trees cut by him between March 1909 to April 1910, the evidence showed that the feelings took place on some eight or nine occasions and the charge did not allege that the various fellings so connected together as to form one transaction under s. 235, held that the conviction must be set aside even though no objection was taken at the trial, as the charge was framed contrary to the rule laid down by s. 233, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 467 = 12 Cr. L. J. 567.

(h) Three men F, M and J were sent up for trial under s. 392 I P C. Some stolen property was found in the possession of F and M. Soon after dacoity, other property such as locks and ball cartridges, which had no connection with the dacoity, was found in the possession of J, for which he was convicted under s. 379, I P C., and the Arms Act. Held, that the trial was irregular, and the defect was not cured by s. 537, 5 P. R. 1900.

(i) B, M, K and R were jointly tried, B for receiving stolen property under s. 411, I P C., and the others for theft, held, that the joinder of charges was illegal and the conviction bad, 1 C. W. N. 35, 3 P. R. 1905.

(j) Where fourteen persons charged with distinct offences under ss. 290 and 291, I P C., and were tried together, held, that it was an irregularity calculated to prejudice the accused, 5 M. 20.

(k) False evidence—separate charge against each accus d—In prosecutions for giving false evidence under s. 193, I P C., even arising out of the same case, the case of each person accused should be separately inquired into, and if committed for trial should be separately tried. It is wholly erroneous to include them in one joint charge, 8 A. 17; 6 M. 232; 10 C. 403, Ratanulal 31; 4 A. 293, 4 Bom. L. R. 83 and 83; 39 P. R. 1935. The false evidence given by one witness is a transaction complete in itself and not connected with false evidence given by another witness even though in the same case and on the same point 58 L. W. N. 550.

SCOPE OF SECTION AND EXCEPTIONS

17 When resort must be had to the rules laid down by s. 233 and when to the exceptions.—This Code requires that for every distinct offence of which any person is accused there should be a separate charge and that every charge should be tried separately. This is a broad rule and applies to all trials for offences under the criminal law. In section 233 this rule is made subject to four exceptions. But a Court cannot and ought not to treat a case before it as an exception to the general rule unless it is satisfied that in the case before it the charge should be brought within one of the four exceptions and it would be safer if the Magistrate or the Sessions Judge showed in the charge-sheet or in his judgment that he had reason for bringing the case before him under one of these separate sections 11 A L J 155—16 Cr L J 116. But the Legislature having specially empowered the Courts with large powers as regards joinder of persons and joinder of charges resort must be had to those powers. The object was clearly to avoid the necessity of the same witnesses giving the same evidence two or three times over in different trials and to join in one trial those offences with regard to which the evidence would overlap 18 L R 73—8 Cr L J 191. However even where several criminal acts can be included in the same transaction no joinder of charges of trials should be permitted which will result in bewildering any of the accused ibid. If in any case either the accused are likely to be bewildered in their defence by having to meet many disconnected charges or the prospect of a fair trial is likely to be endangered by the production of a mass of evidence leading by its mere accumulation to induce an undue suspicion against the accused, the propriety of combining the charges may well be questioned 15 B 491.

18 Ss. 234 to 239 do not bar separate trial for each single offence.—The exceptions embodied in s. 234 etc. although authorizing the combination of three charges at one trial does not bar the separate trial of the accused for each separate offence. So when the prosecution has made its election under s. 222 cl. (2) and the proviso thereto by choosing some out of the different amount misappropriated during the periods they are not stopped by the provisions of s. 403 from instituting any further prosecution in respect of any fresh items covering the same period 12 Bom L R 226—11 Cr L J 337; 16 Cr L J 717 (M); 8 C 431. See Note 1 to s. 234 and Note 2 to s. 239 and Note 2 to s. 235.

19 Are the exceptions mutually exclusive?—The words of this section do not favour the view that the exceptions mentioned are mutually exclusive. If it had been intended that section 235 (2) or s. 236 could not be made use of in co-operation with s. 234 this intention could have been easily expressed. If the exceptions are mutually exclusive the provisions of s. 236 or s. 237 could never be invoked to prevent the miscarriage of justice arising from a failure to make good all the details of a charge joined with two other charges under s. 234. It is difficult to believe that the Legislature intended that a joint trial of three offences under s. 234 should prevent the prosecution from establishing at the same trial the minor or alternative degrees of criminality involved in the acts complained of. For these reasons the exceptions are not necessarily exclusive and ss. 235 (2) and 236 may be resorted to in framing additional charges where the trial is of three offences of the same kind committed within the year. Where the exercise by the Court of the permissive powers conferred by these sections may produce embarrassment the Court may decline to avail itself of its full powers. In this case a charge was framed against the accused for an offence under s. 124 A I P C., in respect of an article in his newspaper and also two other charges for offence under ss. 124 A and 153-A I P C. with regard to another article of a different date in the same paper were framed and the accused was tried at one trial and convicted and sentenced under each of the charges. It was contended that the trial was bad on the ground of his joinder of charges as none of the exceptions taken singly applied to the case and that the exceptions should be taken singly and not cumulatively held, that there was no irregularity in the trial on the ground of misjoinder of charges (33 B 77 approved); 33 B 221. In 32 A 219, however the decision in 33 B 221 was criticised and it was laid down that s. 235 (1) and s. 234 are mutually exclusive and that it would be straining the language of s. 234 beyond all bounds to hold that it covered all offences committed in the course of three similar but separate transactions when the number of offences was more than three. The facts of the case were that the accused was charged and tried at one and the same trial for three offences of criminal breach of trust under s. 408 I P C. and three offences of forgery under s. 467 I P C., committed within a period of one year. The accused was convicted and sentenced in respect of all the six offences. It was contended in support of the conviction that s. 235 (1) must be read with s. 234 and that the three offences mentioned in the latter section must be deemed to include all the offences in three similar transactions such as are contemplated by s. 235 (1) but it was held following 23 M 61 (P L) that the trial was of kidnapping together and s 235 would allow the trial of kidnapping with respect to one girl and cheating with respect to the same girl in one trial but the operations of two sections could not be combined because they are mutually exclusive and therefore the whole trial was vitiated by illegality 24 A. L. J. 239,

EFFECT OF MISJOINDER.

20. Joint trial of distinct offences not falling within the exceptions illegal.—Privy Council view in N. A. Subrahmanya Aiyar's Case.—An accused person was tried for several distinct offences covering a period beyond 12 months from first to last at one trial. The Full Bench of the High Court considered this an irregularity curable by s. 537, but on appeal to the Privy Council it was laid down that (a) the disobedience to an express provision of law as to a mode of trial is not a mere irregularity which could be cured by s. 537 (b) Such a phrase as "irregularity" is not appropriate to the illegality of trying an accused person for many different offences at the same time and those offences being spread over a longer period than by law (s. 234) could have been joined in one indictment. (c) Nor could such an illegal procedure be amended by arranging afterwards what might or might not have been properly submitted to the jury. To allow this would be to leave to the Court the functions of the jury and the accused would never have been really tried at all upon the charge arranged afterwards by the Court. (d) Nor can the trial be made good by confining the verdict of guilty given by the jury to such part of the charge as might have been legally joined, 25 M. 61—25 I. A. 237 which renders 16 C. 128 and 395 and 22 C. 176 good, while overruling 27 C. 839 and 29 C. 7 and 10 and Ratnaal 212. Five persons were charged with having committed the offence of noting on the 5th December, four out of those persons and one F were charged with having committed the offence of criminal trespass on the 9th December. These two cases were taken up and tried together in one trial, and were decided by one judgment. Held, that the trial was absolutely illegal, it having been a trial which is prohibited by the terms of this section, 14 C. 395. See 11 M. 441 and 20 C. 827. This decision was disapproved of in 27 C. 839 (F. B.). But the Privy Council pronouncement in 25 M. 61 renders obsolete the Calcutta Full Bench view. A Magistrate framed two separate charges and numbered them as distinct cases, but when the witnesses came to be cross-examined, he lost sight of the necessity for keeping the two trials separate and allowed the witnesses to be cross-examined promiscuously in respect of both the charges and both cases were disposed of by one judgment. Held that there was only one trial and the joint trial offended against the provisions of s. 233 and the illegality could not be cured, by s. 537, 29 M. L. J. 101 = 18 M. L. T. 95 = 16 Cr. L. J. 593 (F. B.); 29 C. 395 and 41 C. 722 referred to. See also, 19 C. L. J. 633 = 15 Cr. L. J. 472.

21. Fact accused did not object to misjoinder, will not validate trial.—Where, in one trial the accused was charged with (i) abetting the falsification of a document s. 471A, I P. C., (ii) fraudulent destruction of a document and the fraudulent secretion of other documents, s. 477, I P. C., and (iii) abetting criminal breach of trust, s. 485 and it was urged on behalf of the prosecution that the different offences were alleged in the charge to have been committed at or about the same time and place and that the objection of misjoinder was not taken before the Sessions Judge. Held, that the conviction must be set aside, as the offences charged do not form parts of the same transaction, 26 M. 125. See also 3 M. L. T. 407 = 18 M. L. J. 330 = 8 Cr. L. J. 152; 28 M. L. J. 397 = 17 M. L. T. 242 = 16 Cr. L. J. 323. In any case it is open to question whether consent of pleaders could validate a trial which was illegally constituted, per BEACHCROFT, J., 19 C. W. N. 972 = 16 Cr. L. J. 641.

22. When the conviction need not be set aside.—

(i) If accused has pleaded guilty.—If the accused has pleaded guilty and not applied to set aside the conviction and no injustice has resulted the conviction need not be set aside, 4 L. B. R. 315 = 8 Cr. L. J. 15. (F. B.) See also 4 L. B. R. 49 and 5 P. R. 1906, 35 C. 161; 1907 A. W. N. 203 = 6 Cr. L. J. 215; 7 L. B. R. 273 = 16 Cr. L. J. 44. But in 3 M. L. T. 407 = 18 M. L. J. 330 = 8 Cr. L. J. 152, it was held that an accused person cannot waive the benefit of the legal provision relating to the trial and where there has been a misjoinder, the conviction must be set aside. See 26 M. 125; 4 P. L. R. 1905 = 2 Cr. L. J. 30.

(ii) If the failure has only been to observe the first part of s 233.—I failure to observe the first part of s 233 is only a defect in the form of charge which is covered by ss 535 and 537. The defect is one of duplicity not of misjoinder, 41 C. 65. What their Lordships of the Privy Council in 25 M. 61 have prohibited is if law expressly provides a particular mode of trial, disobedience of that law vitiates the whole trial. It is doubtful if the framing of charges is a mode of trial but joint trial of charges as to distinct offences would be a mode of trial. Omission to frame two charges instead of one is an irregularity covered by s 537, 19 C. W. N. 972 = 16 Cr. L. J. 641 (FLITCHER, J., dissenting).

(iii) See also the opinion of SIR HENRY PRYSE, 5 P. R. 1906, the opinion of NAPIER, J., in 29 M. L. J. 101 = 16 Cr. L. J. 593 and the opinion of the majority in 19 C. W. N. 972 = 16 Cr. L. J. 641 as to the construction of 25 M. 61 (P. C.).

23. Illegality is not cured by failure of or striking out additional charges.—The defect cannot be cured by merely striking out the additional charges after the mischief which the Legislature intended to remedy had been done 29 M 569. Even if some of the charges illegally joined have failed and the accused have been acquitted of those charges, still if the joinder of those charges was in violation of the law the accused must have been considerably embarrassed in their defence on the remaining charges and their acquittal on the charges which the prosecution failed to prove cannot make void the trial if it was illegal ab initio and the conviction on the remaining charges must be set aside 83 M 502.

234. (1) When a person is accused of more offences than one of the same kind committed within the space of twelve months from the first to the last of such offences* whether in respect of the same person or not he may be charged with and tried at one trial for any number of them not exceeding three.

(2) Offences are of the same kind when they are punishable with the same amount of punishment under the same section of the Indian Penal Code or of any special or local law.

† Provided that for the purpose of this section an offence punishable under s 379 of the Indian Penal Code shall be deemed to be an offence the same kind as an offence punishable under s 380 of the said Code and that an offence punishable under any section of the Indian Penal Code or of any special or local law shall be deemed to be an offence of the same kind as an attempt to commit such offence when such an attempt is an offence.

Note.—1 Scope of the section.—S 234 does not say that at most a trial must be limited to three charges. It says it must be limited to three offences and that the offences must be of the same kind. The "offence" as defined by the Code itself is the act or omission made punishable. The offences in this case were two in number namely the publication of two articles on two different dates. This two offences were, as charged punishable under the same section of the Indian Penal Code and were therefore offences of the same kind. The word "section" in the above section is not invariably to be read as singular. It is not the intention of the Code either express or implied to exclude from the operation of s 234 an offence because it is made the subject of more than one charge. Charging one act or series of acts under more than one section of the Indian Penal Code is a proceeding provided for in s 235 (cl 2) and in s 236 and is also provided for in s 71 I P C. The Court may charge an offence twice over under two different sections but by so doing it cannot increase the sentence which may be imposed. That principle is not offended by trying together separate offences for each of which there is more than one charge.—Per HEATON J. S 234 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not apply to a single charge under s 401 I P C or belonging to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft. The charge relates to one offence though based on evidence of several offences of theft. The gist of the offence under s 401 is association for the purpose of habitually committing theft or robbery 47 C 154.

There is nothing in the Code which directs that where an accused person is alleged to have done two or more acts each of which may fall within the definition of an offence under one or another section of the Indian Penal Code the section or sections in either case being the same the joinder of the charges under those sections is illegal. Substantially the acts amount in such a case to offences punishable under the same sections of the Indian Penal Code and therefore they are offences of the same kind.—Per CHANDANNAKAR J 33 B 77 and see also 33 B 221.

2 Section applies only to the trial of a single accused.—See Note 3 to s 239. Two persons accused of offences under ss 379 and 380 I P C for committing theft of the same complainant's property in a building and of his paddy in a field on two successive days cannot be charged with and tried at one trial under s 234 for both the offences 20 C W N 672 = 17 Cr L J 224. But see 20 M L T 234, 17 P R. (1917) Cr. But as under the new amendment an offence under s 379 and s 380 I P C are to be deemed to be offences of the same kind, it is submitted that 20 C W N 672 is no longer good law. See also cl (c) of section 239 46 A 54.

* The words "whether in respect of the same person or not" were inserted by Act XI of 1923.

† The proviso was added by Act XVIII of 1923.

3. Object of section to provide statutory limit to number of charges at single trial.—This section modifies s. 233 which requires a separate charge and a separate trial for every distinct offence, by allowing three charges of three distinct offences of the same kind and committed within one year of each other to be tried at the same time, but this does not mean that, if at one time or within one year a man commits fifty distinct offences of the same kind, he shall not in one day be prosecuted for more than three of such offences. This is clear from illustration (d), s. 233. This section simply places a statutory limit on the number of charges which may legally form part of a single trial. There is nothing in the section, however, to prevent an accused from being separately charged and tried on the same day for any number of distinct offences of the same kind committed within the year, 3 C. 540 = 1 C. L. R. 478.

4. "Offences of the same kind" may be in respect of different persons.—This is a novel definition 9 C. 371 = 11 C. L. R. 522, where it was held dissenting from 4 L. 147 and 1833 A. W. N. at pp. 12 and 39, that the words "offences of the same kind," are not limited to offences against the same person. Where a public servant dishonestly misappropriated sums of moneys placed in his hands by three different persons on three different occasions in one year, held, that the offences of which such person is accused being the dishonest misappropriation of public moneys (for they lost their private character on coming to the hands of the accused) such offences were "of the same kind," and that such person might be charged with and tried at one trial for all the offences, 7 A. 174 (F.B.); 17 Cr. L. J. 479. S. 234 is not limited to cases where the offences have been committed against the same person, 3 Pat. L. J. 209. It applies where the complainants are different persons, but must be used cautiously, 19 C. W. N. 557. See also Ratanlal 331, where it was held that an accused charged with two offences of the same kind within the definition of sub-sec. (2) of this section, was rightly tried for both the offences at one trial, although the offences were committed against different persons. See also 9 C. L. J. 149 = 13 C. W. N. 807, 41 C. 66; 43 C. 13; 33 A. 437; 38 A. 438 where 4 A. 147 was overruled. But, see 11 C. W. N. 1118, where it was held that the joint trial of three distinct complaints of three distinct complainants though against the same is illegal, and also 13 C. W. N. 418 = 9 Cr. L. J. 277.

5. Offences not of the same kind.—Charges of adultery and bigamy are not of the same kind and being distinct offences, cannot be tried at one trial, Ratanlal 4. Murder and voluntarily causing hurt are not of the same kind, 11 A. L. J. 188 = 14 Cr. L. J. 116 and so offences under ss. 167 and 468, I P C., are not of the kind 8 C. 480. Falsification of accounts, s. 477 A, I P C., is not of the same kind as a criminal breach of trust, s. 409, I P C., 30 M. 328. Where at the same trial an accused person was charged with two offences under s. 178, I P C., and two offences under s. 179, I P C., held, the case was not governed by this section and there was no I P C., 80 M. 328. Where at the same trial an accused person was charged with two offences under s. 178, I P C. misjoinder, 85 C. 161. See also 13 C. W. N. 804 = 9 Cr. L. J. 147. See Note 14 to s. 233 at p. 648 and 649 or other examples. As to theft and subsequent retention by another not being offences of the same kind, see 31 C. W. N. 111. See also 10 E. L. R. 192.

6. Where charge bad for multiplicity—offences unconnected with each other.—Where the accused was charged with threatening more than three persons with injury if they did not pay him bribes or with instigating the obtaining of bribes from more than three persons and was tried at one trial on such charge Held, the charge was bad for multiplicity and that the trial was in contravention of this section, Wain II, 299; 11 C. W. N. 1128. The joinder of six charges—one under s. 201, I P C., and two under s. 193 I P C. relating to a report and evidence about the death of one person, and similarly three charges relating to a report and evidence about the death of another person—is illegal, 14 Bar. L. R. 242 (F.B.) = 4 L. B. R. 294 = 8 Cr. L. J. 497. A woman being a member of the dancing girl caste, obtained possession of a minor and employed her for the purpose of prostitution, she subsequently obtained in adoption another minor girl from her parents, who belonged to the same caste. She and the parents of the second girl were charged together under ss. 372 and 373 of the Penal Code. The charges related to both girls. Held that the two charges should not have been joined together, 12 M. 273; 11 C. W. N. 274. See also 30 A. 351; 4 L. B. R. 315 (F. B.). Where M was charged with three separate acts of criminal breach of trust and B with abetment of those acts and also in the alternative under ss. 411 and 380, I P C., in respect of a document said to have been found in his house which had no connection whatever with the charge of criminal breach of trust and M made a full confession implicating B therein, and it was consequently taken into consideration against him held that the joint trial of the 2nd accused was bad and that it prejudiced the case against B on the second charge as the confession of M was used against him and treated as a very substantial part of the evidence in support of the second charge, 5 C. W. N. 294. The accused persons were tried upon twenty-seven charges, comprising the offences of theft abetment of theft, and receiving stolen property in 1872-73 similar offences in 1873-74 and 1874-75 the giving and receiving of gratifications to and by public servants in 1874-75, and

Finally the fabrication and statement of false evidence in 1878. One of the accused was convicted on two heads of charge and the rest acquitted. Held, on appeal, that the trial was irregular under s 452 Act X of 1872; and so would be the hearing of the appeal. The High Court, however, heard the appeal in respect of offences in 1874-75 only the charge in respect of which was as follows (That you between the 31st October, 1874 and 30th October, 1875, did commit theft of certain property, viz. 27,524 khandis of wood, or thereabouts, being the property of Government, from the Government forests of the villages, etc., in the Koliba Collectorate, and have thereby committed in offence punishable under s 379 I P.C.), it appearing that this course did not prejudice the accused persons who had been fully and fairly tried for those offences, 1 B 610. See also 8 C. 459 and 634, and now see 25 M. 61 (P.C.). In 4 Bom. L. R. 440 L was tried at one trial on a charge under s 471 I P.C., in respect of one document, a charge under s 464, I P.C., in respect of another and one charge under s 477 A. Held, that the trial was illegal. The last mentioned offence not being of the same kind as these mentioned in the other two charges, ought to have been tried separately. See 44 P. R. 1917 Cr.

Several accused persons were tried at one trial for offences under s. 197 and 325 I P.C., committed on 24th January, and for offences under s. 147, 323 and 342 I P.C., committed on the 25th of January; held that the whole trial was invalid and must be set aside because ss. 234 and 239 of the Criminal Procedure Code cannot be combined, 45 A. 84.

7. Whether more than three falsifications of account can be joined together in one charge and tried?—Each act of falsification of a book of account amounts to a separate offence s 477, I P.C., and an accused person can only be charged with and tried at one trial for any number of offences of the same kind not exceeding three committed within the space of one year. The explanation appended to s 477 A, does not purport to override this section, 26 C. 560. When a person who was sent up for trial under s. 477-A, I P.C. was charged with having wilfully altered and mutilated certain accounts between the years 1907 and 1909 and the evidence showed that the subject matter of the charge was practically the series of entries in certain sets of books. Held the charge was bad for misjoinder, 32 A. 57; but if the several false entries are made in the course of one transaction a count charging six separate falsifications of account is illegal, (1912) M. W. N. 545 = 13 Cr. L. J. 251. See also 40 C. 318. A series of alterations in accounts made to cover a defalcation might all be charged in one charge and they are not distinct offences committed by an accused person merely by reason of the fact that he makes more than one false entry to cover one defalcation. But the false entries in that case can only relate to one defalcation. It is impossible to take a series of false entries referring to three different defalcations in one charge, or to try a whole series of falsified accounts in one charge, 41 C. 722.

8. Falsification of account and breach of trust are distinct offences.—When a person is tried for criminal breach of trust in respect of seventeen sums of moneys received by him between 16th March, 1901 and 8th May, 1901, and he was also charged with seventeen falsifications of account under s 477 A. Held, the trial was illegal and the conviction was quashed. 4 Bom. L. R. 433, 2 P. R. 1905; 25 C. 560, 30 M. 323, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 538 = 13 Cr. L. J. 21, 30 A. 351, 32 A. 57; 16 Cr. L. J. 313 (A); 12 Bom. L. R. 226 = 11 Cr. L. J. 337, 33 A. 58 and see Note 11 to s 222. See 27 Bom. C. R. 1343.

9. Effect of s 222 on this section.—This section must be read subject to the special provision of subsec. (2) to s 222. See 27 A. 69, 26 A. 234, 33 A. 36 but see 12 Bom. L. R. 226 = 11 Cr. L. J. 337. Where there have been defalcations in the course of twelve months in respect of different items, then the Court can try a man in respect of three offences by selecting different items, combining these items into one lump sum, and making the selection so as to get at three sums, the appropriation of each constituting an offence by itself. S 222 (2) modifies the general rule, that at a trial certain particulars must be given in the charge as to charges of criminal breach of trust, but does not restrict in any way the scope and object of s 234. 12 Bom. L. R. 226 = 11 Cr. L. J. 337. See Notes under s 403.

10. Embezzlement of a gross sum is only one offence within the meaning of this section.—See Notes 9 and 10 to s 222.

11. Single charge sufficient in cases of embezzlement.—See Notes 8 and 9 to s 222.

12. The word 'offences' not to be extended to mean three separate series of offences each set forming a single transaction.—Where the accused was charged and convicted at one trial for (a) forging (s. 467), three cheques on three different dates, (b) cheating (s. 420) the bank, by cashing the cheques on the said dates, and (c) falsifying account books (s. 477 A) in the course of the commission of the said forgeries and it was contended that s. 235 must be read with this section and under their combined effect, the three forgeries and the acts closely connected with each of the forgeries could be rightly tried at one trial. Held following 25 M. 61 (P.C.) that the trial was bad. The word offence in this section cannot be held to mean not only the three

3. Object of section to provide statutory limit to number of charges at single trial.—This section modifies s. 233 which requires a separate charge and a separate trial for every distinct offence, by allowing three charges of three distinct offences of the same kind and committed within one year of each other to be tried at the same time, but this does not mean that, if at one time or within one year a man commits fifty distinct offences of the same kind, he shall not in one day be prosecuted for more than three of such offences. This is clear from illustration (d), s. 235. This section simply places a statutory limit on the number of charges which may legally form part of a single trial. There is nothing in the section, however, to prevent an accused from being separately charged and tried on the same day for any number of distinct offences of the same kind committed within the year, 3 C. 540 = 1 C. L. R. 478.

4. "Offences of the same kind" may be in respect of different persons.—This is a novel definition 9 C. 371 = 11 C. L. R. 522, where it was held dissenting from 4 A. 147 and 1833 A. W. N. at pp. 12 and 39, that the words "offences of the same kind," are not limited to offences against the same person. Where a public servant dishonestly misappropriated sums of moneys placed in his hands by three different persons on three different occasions in one year, held, that the offences of which such person is accused being the dishonest misappropriation of public moneys (for they lost their private character on coming to the hands of the accused) such offences were "of the same kind," and that such person might be charged with and tried at one trial for all the offences, 7 A. 174 (F.B.); 17 Cr. L. J. 479. S. 234 is not limited to cases where the offences have been committed against the same person, 3 Pat. L. J. 209. It applies where the complainants are different persons, but must be used cautiously, 19 C. W. N. 557. See also Ratanlal 331, where it was held that an accused charged with two offences of the same kind within the definition of sub-sec. (2) of this section, was rightly tried for both the offences at one trial, although the offences were committed against different persons. See also 9 C. L. J. 149 = 13 C. W. N. 507; 41 C. 66; 43 C. 13; 35 A. 457; 38 A. 458 where 4 A. 147 was overruled. But see 11 C. W. N. 1123, where it was held that the joint trial of three distinct complaints of three distinct complainants though against the same is illegal, and also 13 C. W. N. 418 = 9 Cr. L. J. 377.

5. Offences not of the same kind.—Charges of adultery and bigamy are not of the same kind and being distinct offences, cannot be tried at one trial, Ratanlal 4. Murder and voluntarily causing hurt are not of the same kind, 11 A. L. J. 188 = 14 Cr. L. J. 116 and so offences under ss. 167 and 464, I P C., are not of the same kind 8 C. 450. Falsification of accounts, s. 477 A, I P C., is not of the same kind as a criminal breach of trust, s. 409, I P C., 30 M. 325. Where at the same trial an accused person was charged with two offences under s. 178, I P C., and two offences under s. 179, I P C., held, the case was not governed by this section and there was no I P C., 80 M. 328. Where at the same trial an accused person was charged with two offences under s. 178, I P C. misnomer, 35 C. 181. See also 13 C. W. N. 804 = 9 Cr. L. J. 147. See Note 14 to s. 233 at p. 648 and 649 or other examples. As to theft and subsequent retention by another not being offences of the same kind, see 21 C. W. N. 111. See also 10 A. L. R. 192.

6. Where charge bad for multiplicity—offences unconnected with each other.—Where the accused was charged with threatening more than three persons with injury if they did not pay him bribes or with instigating the obtaining of bribes from more than three persons and was tried at one trial on such charge held, the charge was bad for multiplicity and that the trial was in contravention of this section, Weir II, 299; 11 C. W. N. 1123. The joinder of six charges,—one under s. 201, I P C., and two under s. 193, I P C. relating to a report and evidence about the death of one person, and similarly three charges relating to a report and evidence about the death of another person—is illegal, 14 Bar. L. R. 242 (F.B.) = 4 L. B. R. 294 = 8 Cr. L. J. 497. A woman being a member of the dancing girl caste, obtained possession of a minor and employed her for the purpose of prostitution, she subsequently obtained in adoption another minor girl from her parents, who belonged to the same caste. She and the parents of the second girl were charged together under ss. 372 and 373 of the Penal Code. The charges related to both girls. held that the two charges should not have been tried together, 12 M. 273; 11 C. W. N. 274. See also 30 A. 351; 4 L. B. R. 315 (F. B.). Where M was charged with three separate acts of criminal breach of trust and B with abetment of those acts and also in the alternative under ss. 411 and 380, I P C., in respect of a document said to have been found in his house which had no connection whatever with the charge of criminal breach of trust and M made a full confession implicating B therein, and it was consequently taken into consideration against him, held that the joint trial of the 2nd accused was bad and that it prejudiced the case against B on the second charge as the confession of M was used against him and treated as a very substantial part of the evidence in support of the second charge, 9 C. W. N. 294. The accused persons were tried upon twenty-seven charges, comprising the offences of their abetment of theft, and receiving stolen property in 1872-73 similar offences in 1873-74 and 1874-75 the giving and receiving of gratifications to and by public servants in 1874-75, and finally the fabrication and abetment of false evidence in 1878. One of the accused was convicted on two heads of charge and the rest acquitted. Held on appeal that the trial was irregular under s. 452 Act X of 1872 and so would be the hearing of the appeal. The High Court however heard the appeal in respect of offences in 1874-75 only the charge in respect of which was as follows: (That you between the 31st October 1874 and 30th October 1875 did commit theft of certain property viz., 27,524 handis of wood or thereabouts, being the property of Government from the Government forests of the villages etc. in the Kolaba Collectorate, and have thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 379 I P C.) it appearing that this course did not prejudice the accused persons who had been fully and fairly tried for those offences, 1 B 610. See also 8 C. 450 and 634, and now see 25 M 81 (P.C.). In 4 Bom L R 440 L was tried at one trial on a charge under s. 471 I P C., in respect of one document a charge under s. 469 I P C. in respect of another and one charge under s. 477 A. Held that the trial was illegal. The last mentioned offence not being of the same kind as those mentioned in the other two charges ought to have been tried separately. See 46 P. R. 1917 Cr.

Several accused persons were tried at one trial for offences under s. 197 and 325 I P C. committed on 24th January and for offences under s. 147 323 and 342 I P C. committed on the 25th of January. held that the whole trial was invalid and must be set aside because ss. 234 and 239 of the Criminal Procedure Code cannot be combined, 46 A. 84.

7 Whether more than three falsifications of account can be joined together in one charge and tried?—Each act of falsification of a book of account amounts to a separate offence s. 477 I P C. and an accused person can only be charged with and tried at one trial for any number of offences of the same kind not exceeding three committed within the space of one year. The explanation appended to s. 477 A does not purport to override this section 28 C 580. When a person who was sent up for trial under s. 477 A I P C. was charged with having wilfully altered and mutilated certain accounts between the years 1907 and 1909 and the evidence showed that the subject matter of the charge was practically the series of entries in certain sets of books. Held the charge was bad for misjoinder 32 A 57; but if the several false entries are made in the course of one transaction a count charging six separate falsifications of account is illegal (1912) M W N 845 = 13 Cr. L J 251. See also 40 C. 318. A series of alterations in accounts made to cover a defalcation might all be charged in one charge and they are not distinct offences committed by an accused person merely by reason of the fact that he makes more than one false entry to cover one defalcation. But the false entries in that case can only relate to one defalcation. It is impossible to take a series of false entries referring to three different defalcations in one charge or to try a whole series of falsified accounts in one charge. 41 C 722.

8 Falsification of account and breach of trust are distinct offences.—When a person is tried for criminal breach of trust in respect of seventeen sums of moneys received by him between 16th March 1901 and 9th May 1901 and he was also charged with seventeen falsifications of account under s. 477 A. Held the trial was illegal and the conviction was quashed 4 Bom L R 433, 2 P. R. 1905, 28 C 580, 30 M 328, (1911) 2 M. W N 838 = 13 Cr. L J 21, 30 A 351; 32 A 57 16 Cr. L J 315 (A); 12 Bom L R 226 = 11 Cr. L J 337; 33 A 36 and see Note 11 to s. 22. See 21 Bom C. R 1343.

9 Effect of s. 223 on this section.—This section must be read subject to the special provision of sub sec. (2) to s. 222. See 27 A 89 24 A 254, 33 A 36 but see 12 Bom L R 226 = 11 Cr. L J 337. Where there have been defalcations in the course of twelve months in respect of different items then the Court can try a man in respect of three offences by selecting different items combining these items into one lump sum and making the selection so as to get at three sums the appropriation of each constituting an offence by itself. S. 222 (2) modifies the general rule that at a trial certain particulars must be given in the charge as to charges of criminal breach of trust but does not restrict in any way the scope and object of s. 234 12 Bom L R 226 = 11 Cr. L J 337. See Notes under s. 403.

10 Embezzlement of a gross sum is only one offence within the meaning of this section.—See Notes 9 and 10 to s. 222.

11 Single charge sufficient in cases of embezzlement.—See Notes 8 and 9 to s. 222.

12 The word 'offences' not to be extended to mean three separate series of offences each set forming a single transaction.—Where the accused was charged and convicted at one trial for (a) forging (s. 467) three cheques on three different dates (b) cheating (s. 420) the bank by cashing the cheques on the said dates and (c) falsifying account books (s. 477 A) in the course of the commission of the said forgeries and it was contended that s. 235 must be read with this section and under their combined effect the three forgeries and the acts closely connected with each of the forgeries could be rightly tried at one trial. Held so holding 25 M 61, P. C.) that the trial was bad. The word offence in this section cannot be held to mean not only the illegal offences mentioned there, but also every act in itself an offence, which is so connected with each of those offences as to form part of the same transaction as each offence, 2 P. R. 1905 followed in 30 M. 325; 32 A 219. See also 4 Bom L. R. 433 and Note 19 to s. 233

13. Four charges in respect of two offences under ss. 124-A, and 153-A, I. P. C.—The accused was convicted of offences under ss. 124 A and 153-A of the Indian Penal Code in respect of each of two articles that appeared in his newspaper. The Magistrate, who tried the case, had framed a charge, with two heads—one bearing on each article, and each head mentioned that the accused was punishable under ss. 124 A and 153-A for publishing the article. It was contended on behalf of the accused that the trial of four offences at one trial was illegal. Held, that the trial was not bad as there had been no misjoinder of charges. Per CHANDAVARKAR, J.—‘It is true that the Magistrate framed two charges, one with respect to each of the two articles. But in each charge the offences are mentioned as being those punishable under ss. 124 A and 153-A, I. P. C., so that the accused had distinct notice of the charges he had to answer, and he could hardly have been prejudiced by the somewhat informal mode in which the charges were drawn up. The defect, if any, was no more than a mere irregularity, cured by the provisions of s. 225, 33, B 77; 33 B. 221 and see Notes 1 and 19, to s. 223’

14. Procedure—when offences similar it is undesirable that each should be tried separately.—An accused person committed thirteen offences in the course of two months. The Magistrate, who tried him summarily, convicted him and sentenced him to two months rigorous imprisonment for each offence. The High Court pointed out this course, though not illegal, to be undesirable, and suggested that the accused might have been tried and convicted in one trial of any three of these offences, and sentence of six months’ imprisonment passed for each of those offences, such sentences running concurrently.—Mad H C Pro, 19th August 1886. See Note 2 to s. 235

- 235. (1) If, in one series of acts so connected together as to form the same transaction, more offences than one are committed by the same person he may be charged with and tried at one trial for, every such offence.
- (2) If the acts alleged constitute an offence falling within two or more separate definitions of any law in force for the time being by which offences are defined or punished the person accused of them may be charged with and tried at one trial for each of such offences.
- (3) If several acts of which one or more than one would by itself or themselves constitute an offence, constitute when combined a different offence, the person accused of them may be charged with, and tried at one trial for the offence constituted by such acts when combined, and for any offence constituted by any one, or more, of such acts.
- (4) Nothing contained in this section shall affect the Indian Penal Code, section 71

to sub-section (1)—

(a) A rescues B, a person in lawful custody, and in so doing causes grievous hurt to C a constable in whose custody B was. A may be charged with and convicted of offences under ss. 225 and 233 of the Indian Penal Code. (See also 31 M. 43 for joint trial of offences under ss. 183 186 355 and 323, I. P. C.)

(b) A commits house-breaking by day with intent to commit adultery, and commits in the house so entered, adultery with B’s wife. A may be separately charged with and convicted of, offences under ss. 454 and 497 of the Indian Penal Code.

(c) A entices J, the wife of C, away from C with intent to commit adultery with B, and then commits adultery with her. A may be separately charged with and convicted of offences under ss. 498 and 497 of the Indian Penal Code.

(d) A has in his possession several seals knowing them to be counterfeit and intending to use them for the purpose of committing several forgeries punishable under s. 466 of the Indian Penal Code. A may be separately charged with and convicted of, the possession of each seal under s. 473 of the Indian Penal Code.

(e) With intent to cause injury to B, A institutes criminal proceeding against him, knowing that there is no just or lawful ground for such proceeding and also falsely accuses B of having committed an offence knowing that there is no just or lawful ground for such charge. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of two offences under s. 211 of the Indian Penal Code

(f) A with intent to cause injury to B, falsely accuses him of having committed an offence knowing that there is no just or lawful ground for such charge. On the trial A gives false evidence against B, intending thereby to cause B to be convicted of a capital offence. A may be separately charged with and convicted of, offences under ss. 211 and 194 of the Indian Penal Code (7 W R 89; 8 C 718; 10 B 254).

(g) A, with six others commits the offences of rioting, grievous hurt and assaulting a public servant endeavouring in the discharge of his duty as such to suppress the riot. A may be separately charged with and convicted of offences under ss. 147, 325 and 152 of the Indian Penal Code.

(h) A threatens B, C and D at the same time with injury to their persons with intent to cause alarm to them. A may be separately charged with and convicted of, each of the three offences under s. 506 of the Indian Penal Code.

The separate charges referred to in illustrations (a) to (h), respectively may be tried at the same time to sub-section (3)—

(i) A wrongfully strikes B with a cane. A may be separately charged with and convicted of offences under ss. 332 and 323 of the Indian Penal Code

(j) Several stolen sacks of corn are made over to A and B, who know they are stolen property, for the purpose of concealing them. A and B thereupon voluntarily assist each other to conceal the sacks at the bottom of a grain pit. A and B may be separately charged with and convicted of offences under ss. 411 and 414 of the Indian Penal Code.

(k) A exposes her child with the knowledge that she is thereby likely to cause its death. The child dies in consequence of such exposure. A may be separately charged with and convicted of offences under ss. 317 and 304 of the Indian Penal Code

(l) A dishonestly uses a forged document as genuine evidence, in order to convict B, a public servant of an offence under s. 167 of Indian Penal Code. A may be separately charged with and convicted of offences under ss. 471 (read with s. 468) and 196 of the same Code.

to sub-section (3)—

(m) A commands robbery on B, and in doing so voluntarily causes hurt to him. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of offences under ss. 323, 392 and 394 of the Indian Penal Code

Notes.—S. 71, I P C., is as follows:—

Limit of punishment of offence made up of several offences—Where anything which is an offence is made up of parts any of which parts is itself an offence the offender shall not be punished with the punishment of more than one of such of his offences unless it be so expressly provided.

Where anything is an offence falling within two or more separate definitions of any Law in force for the time being by which offences are defined or punished or where several acts of which one or more than one would by itself or themselves constitute an offence constitute when combined, a different offence

the offender shall not be punished with a more severe punishment than the Court which tries him could award for any one of such offences

(a) A gives Z fifty strokes with a stick. Here A may have committed the offence of voluntarily causing hurt to Z by the whole beating and also by each of the blows which make up the whole beating. If A were liable to punishment for every blow, he might be imprisoned for 50 years one for each blow. But he is liable only to one punishment for the whole beating

(b) But if, while A is beating Z, Y interferes and A intentionally strikes Y here, as the blow given to Y is no part of the act, whereby A voluntarily causes hurt to Z, A is liable to one punishment for voluntarily causing hurt to Z and to another for the blow given to Y

1 Scope of the section as compared with ss. 35 and 71, I P C.—This section should be read with ss. 35 and 71, I P C. Clause (1) of this section corresponds to the first clause and cl. (2) to the first part of cl. (3) to the second part of the second clause of s. 71 I P C. While this section prescribes rules for pleading and the procedure to be followed in the trial of offences falling within its provisions, ss 35 and 71, I P C, deal with the assessment of punishment of those offences. The application of sub-sec. (1) to this section and of para 1 of s. 71, I P C, is illustrated by the case in 16 C. 432, which approves of 8 A. 121 and overrule 11 C. 349. See also 8 C. W. N. 344; 9 W. R. 33; 10 W. R. 63; 13 W. R. 42, 7 A. 414 (F.B.); 12 C. 493; 23 C. 174; 17 B. 260 and 23 B. 706. Sub-secs. (1) and (2) deal with 'one series of acts so connected together as to form the same transaction,' while sub-sec. (3) deals with 'several acts.' It is very easy to raise confusion and difficulty by raising quibbles which are made possible by the infiniteness of language. S. 235 must be interpreted in a broad and commonsense way when reading the section with s. 71 we get a fourfold result. Firstly—A repetition in the same transaction of several criminal acts of exactly the same character may constitute one crime e.g., a number of blows on one person, etc., that is a case covered by s. 71, I P C. Secondly—A single transaction may give rise to either—(1) several offences of a different character each complete in itself and distinct from the other e.g., criminal breach of trust accompanied by falsification of account—(2) several offences of the same character but affecting different persons, e.g., a gunshot which injures two or more persons. Such cases come under the first sub-sec. of s. 235. Separate sentences must follow, 38 C. 432. Thirdly—The same series of acts may constitute different offences. A may be charged for all, but only one offence can be regarded as committed for the purpose of inflicting punishment, e.g., a person who sets fire to a warehouse commits offence under ss 432 and 438, I P C. This falls under s. 235 (2) and 71, I P C. Fourthly—An act in itself an offence may become either an aggravated form of that offence, or a different offence when combined with some other acts innocent or criminal. Here we have a combined offence which as well as its component minor offence may be charged under s. 235 (3) and again s. 71 controls the punishment. These provisions of law must not be confused with the provisions laid down in s. 35. Separable offences which come under s. 71, I P C., and may be charged under s. 235 (2) and (3) are not distinct offences within the purview of s. 35 while s. 235 (1) seems to refer to distinct offences which are separately punishable. See Notes to s. 35.

2. The provisions of this section are not imperative, but enabling—The accused were charged with the offence of house-breaking in order to the commission of an offence and convicted under s. 454, I P C., though the facts showed, that they also committed theft in a dwelling house punishable under s. 390, I P C. Held, that the accused could have been tried under two heads of a charge, Ratanlal 307. It is not illegal to try an accused for different offences separately 8 C. 491, 8 A. 121, 12 Bom. L. R. 326, 31 M. 43. The prosecution is entitled to ask the Court to go into the whole matter at a single trial, provided it takes upon itself the burden of proving that all the facts alleged against the accused forms part of one transaction or otherwise triable at a single trial under the provisions of ss 235 and 236, 18 Cr. L. J. 793 (A). See Note 14 to s. 234, and Notes 17 and 18 to s. 233 and Note to s. 239.

3. Application and object of s. 235 (1)—Sub-sec. (1) applies to cases where on some of the facts so connected together as to form the same transaction one offence may be charged against an accused person and on other facts forming part of the series of acts another offence may be charged against him. See ill. (b) to s. 409. The subsection is inapplicable when the accused is sought to be charged with another offence on the identical facts on which he was charged before with one offence, 36 M. 308. Further, it may be noted that this section provides for (1) plurality of acts, (2) plurality of aspects, and (3) organic connection of acts with a result differing from the elements. Illustrations (a) to (h) treat of plurality of acts committed in the course of one transaction where, though the goal is one, different acts committed in the course of reaching it, form by themselves or in combination with others, different offences, while in illustrations (i) to (f) though the act is one, yet when seen through different aspects it constitutes more offences than one. Illustration (m) affords an instance where, although there is organic connection between the elements which constitute the offence of robbery, the result of their combination is neither the one nor the other, i.e., it differs from its component parts, so in such a case it is necessary to charge the accused separately with the elements as well as with the offence resulting from their combination. The object of this section is that when different acts or different parts of the same act constitute an offence, the accused should be charged separately for each of such offences, so that if he is guilty of any one of them he should not go unpunished because he was not charged with it (Mad H C Pro, 30th March, 1863). When one act or series of acts forming part of the same transaction constitutes one or more offences and the accused is charged with one offence only, and it is proved in evidence that he was guilty of another offence, he would go unpunished if the offence is not of a cognate nature, e.g., a complaint was lodged against one G, under ss 499 and 471 I P C, i.e., for the offences of defamation and of dishonestly using as genuine of forged document. The alleged forgery consisted in affixing a false signature to a letter on which the charge of defamation proceeded. At the trial he was charged under s. 471, I P C., but the Magistrate suddenly changed his mind and convicted him under s. 499 although he was not charged with that offence, 4 C. W. N. 129. This irregularity would have been avoided if there had been a charge also under s. 499, I P C.

4 Significance of the phrase, 'same transaction'—The expression 'same transaction' used in ss. 235 and 239, is an expression which from its very nature is incapable of exact definition, and must have been advisedly used because it had this quality. In 15 B. 491, BIRDWOOD, J., deduced from the illustration to ss. 235 and 237 the following tests for the sameness of a transaction viz., that the offences (1) formed part of a continuous series of acts. Illustrations (a), (b), (c) to s. 235 or (2) were committed at the same time. Illustrations (d) (e) (f), (3) were connected with the same specific criminal intent. Illustrations (e) (f) or (4) are connected by the fact that one was committed in the course of the commission of the other, see illustrations (b) and (c) to s. 239, and held that s. 239 cannot be applied to several different thefts committed on different dates and at different places by different members of a gang of thieves who were all out on the same marauding expedition. In 27 B. 133, it was held, the real and substantial test for determining whether several offences are connected together so as to form the same transaction depends upon whether they are so related to one another in point of purpose or as to cause and effect or as principal and subsidiary acts, as to constitute, one continuous action. A mere interval of time between the commission of one offence and another does not by itself necessarily import want of continuity, though the length of the interval may be an important element in determining the question of the connection between the two. Where therefore, the accused was charged at one trial (i) under s. 486, I P C., for having sold on the 7th October a number of articles with a counterfeit trade-mark (ii) under s. 486, I P C., for having in his possession on the 9th October for sale a number of articles of the same description and (iii) under s. 484 I P C., for being in possession of instruments for counterfeiting trade-marks, on the 9th October. Held, there was no illegality in the trial as there was a community and also continuity of purpose in the possession and sale, the possession of the instruments was the cause the possession of the articles and their sale, the effect and both the possession and the sale had one intention and aimed at one result, of deceiving a buyer into purchasing what was not the genuine article. 29 B. 449 followed the above rulings and imposed the further limitation that 'the persons to be jointly tried must have been associated from the first in the series of acts which form the transaction' and in 30 B. 49 it was held as follows: "According to its etymological meaning the word transaction means carrying through and suggests not necessarily proximity in time, so much as continuity of action and purpose, a series of acts separated by intervals of time are not excluded, provided that those jointly tried have been directed throughout to one and the same objective. If the accused started together for the same goal, this suffices to justify the joint trial even if incidentally one of those jointly tried has done an act for which the other may not be responsible. The foundation for the procedure is the association of two persons concurring from start to finish to attain the same end. Where, therefore two persons who were jointly in charge of a trust fund, carried out their scheme of breach of trust by successive acts done at intervals alternately taking the benefits, this circumstance did not prevent the unity or project from constituting the series of acts one transaction, i.e. carrying through of the same object which both had from the first act to the last. 30 B. 49 was followed in 18 P. W. R. 1903 = 8 Cr. L. J. 75. If a series of acts are so connected together by proximity of time, community or criminal intent, continuity of action and purpose or by the relation of cause and effect as to constitute, in the opinion of the Court one transaction, then the accused may be charged with and tried at one trial for every offence committed in such series of acts. It would also include such subsidiary acts as would make the co-accused particeps criminis or an accessory after the fact. If more persons than one are accused of different offences in a series of acts so connected, they may be tried together, 18 L. R. 73 = 8 Cr. L. J. 191. The word transaction in sub-sec. (1) suggests not necessarily proximity in time, so much as continuity of action and purpose (30 B. 49 at p. 54), i.e. it is not necessary that the act should have been committed all on the same occasion but it is sufficient that though separated by a distinct interval of time they are closely connected by continuity of purpose or progressive action towards a single object. Thus where the prisoner, for the removal of a cart he had stolen broke into the cattle-shed of a neighbour of the cart-owner, took out two bullocks and drove off the cart to a certain place for selling the same, held the two thefts constituted parts of one transaction within the meaning of this section and the circumstances of the theft of the bullocks prefaced by house-breaking, essential to the perpetration of the entire offence, could make no difference and that the two offences were therefore rightly tried together as unmistakably forming parts of one single transaction, 2 N. L. R. 167 = 4 Cr. L. J. 420 (where 27 B. 133; 15 B. 491; 16 B. 414; 25 M. 61 and 15 C. P. L. R. 53, are referred to). Where the accusation against the accused persons is that they carried out a single scheme by successive acts done at intervals, but there was complete unity of project and the whole series of acts were so linked together by one motive and design as to constitute one transaction within the meaning of s. 239, a joint trial is not only legal but is demanded in the interests of public time and convenience, 14 Bom. L. R. 972 = 1 Bom. Cr. Ca. 216 = 13 Cr. L. J. 833. Proximity of time between acts does not necessarily constitute such acts parts of the same transaction, 5 Bar. L. T. 101 = 13 Cr. L. J. 485. In 33 M. 502, ABDUR RAHIM, J., discussed the meaning of the phrase 'same transaction'. 'The idea conveyed by the words 'same transaction' seems to be obvious enough and it may be doubted whether it can be compendiously expressed in simpler and clearer language, and generally speaking there can be very little difficulty in arriving at a proper conclusion in a concrete case. For instance in this case what is said to connect the different acts charged into one transaction is the allegation that these acts were committed by the six accused in pursuance of a systematic scheme for defrauding those members of the public who joined the fund. If this contention were sound then if the company was carried on for 10 or 20 years and a hundred acts of embezzlement were committed during that period, the accused would be liable to be tried for all the offences. Obviously this cannot be the scope of s. 235. No doubt proximity of time any more than unity of place is neither a necessary nor decisive test of what constitutes the same transaction, though such proximity often furnishes good evidence of the connection which unites several acts into one transaction (see 26 M. 125). I think, the effect of the decisions in 27 B. 135; 30 B. 49; 15 B. 491; 16 B. 414 is that community of purpose or design and continuity of action are essential elements of the connection necessary to link together different acts into one and the same transaction. In such cases the acts alleged to be connected with each other must have been done in pursuance of a particular end in view and as accessory thereto or perhaps as suggested by the circumstances in which the acts in pursuance of the original design were done and in close proximity of time to those acts. But mere community of purpose is not sufficient, there must also be continuity of action. For it may happen that an act is done with a particular objective in view but the final aim is abandoned for some time and pursued afterwards. For instance supposing a man forges a document with a view to cheat a certain individual and then foregoes his intention for two years and afterwards reverts to his original intention and uses the document for the original purpose he had in mind when he committed forgery, it would be difficult to say in such a case that the offences of forgery and of cheating by means of the forged document were committed in the course of the same transaction. As regards the community of purpose it would be going far to lay down that the mere existence of some general purpose or design such as making money at the expense of the public is sufficient to make all acts done with that view part of the same transaction. If that were so the results would be startling, for instance supposing it is alleged that A for the sake of gain has for the last 10 years been committing a particular form of depredation on the public viz, house-breaking and theft in accordance with one consistent systematic plan it is hardly conceivable that he could be tried at one trial for all the burglaries he committed in the 10 years. The purpose in view must be something particular and definite such as where a man with the object of misappropriating a particular sum of money or of cheating a particular individual of certain amount falsifies books of account or forges a number of documents'. In this case six accused were charged as Directors of a Provident Fund with having committed breaches of trust in respect of three sums of money alleged to belong to the Company, viz, Rs. 679 between 30th September, 1905 and 25th March, 1906, Rs. 4,639 between 25th March, 1906 and 25th March, 1907, and Rs. 5,226 between 25th March, 1907 and 18th September, 1907, the misappropriations thus covering a period of nearly two years. The 4th and 6th accused were also charged with having falsified accounts by making two false entries on two dates and these two and the 1st accused with having falsified another document on another date. The 6th accused was further charged with cheating two persons once on the 6th March and the other on the 20th March. Those among the six who were not charged with the substantive offences of falsifications of accounts and cheating were charged with having abetted the commission of those offences. All the accused were acquitted of all charges relating to falsifications of account and cheating, but were convicted of the offences of criminal breaches of trust. The joinder of charges was attempted to be justified that the Provident Fund was a bogus concern and the object with which it was set on foot by its promoters, the six accused was to defraud the public, various offences charged against them came within the purview of s. 235 (1). Held the trial was void "ab initio," 33 M. 502. Mere interval of days will not disturb the oneness of the transaction nor necessarily the fact that different sets of persons were engaged on different occasions. But if the aim of the accused on the different occasions is directed towards effecting different purposes, the transactions are different, 28 M. L. J. 297 = 16 Cr. L. J. 324. In deciding whether offences are so connected as to form one and the same transaction, the determining factor is not so much proximity in time as continuity and community of purpose and object, 19 C. W. N. 672 = 21 C. L. J. 195 = 16 Cr. L. J. 3. See also 17 O. C. 276 = 15 Cr. L. J. 643; 19 A. L. J. 392. See 48 M. L. J. 308 = 49 M. 74.

(a) Whether the acts alleged constitute the same transaction as a question of fact—In each case it is a question of fact whether the acts are so connected together as to form part of the same transaction and the word transaction should be read in the ordinary sense of a completed act, 7 M. L. T. 367 = 1910 M. W. N. 541 = 11 Cr. L. J. 293. A comprehensive formula of universal application cannot be framed regarding the question whether two or more acts constitute the "same transaction;" the circumstances which must bear on its determination in each individual case are proximity of time, unity or proximity of place, continuity of action, and community of purpose or design, 42 C. 957.

5. Cases where facts held not to form one transaction.—(a) Where several accused more than five in number obstructed the execution of a Civil Court decree and after holding a consultation, all of them with exception of one or two proceeded to the Kutchery of the decree holder in order to beat his son and the Tahsildar and took the Tahsildar to the judgment-debtor's house where they had obstructed the execution of the decree and there assaulted the Tahsildar, held, that the two occurrences, one of obstructing the execution of the decree, and the other of assaulting the Tahsildar, did not form one transaction and that the accused could not be tried at one trial on charges arising out of both the occurrences, 13 C. W. N. 1113 = 10 Cr. L. J. 452, but compare 6 M. L. T. 17 = 11 Cr. L. J. 30. Where the accused were charged with having entered the house of the third prosecution witness with a view to coerce the deceased person and his brother to deliver certain promissory notes and receipts, and later in the evening obstructed the complainant's party when they proceeded to prefer a complaint in regard to what the accused did in the morning, held, that the accused cannot be charged together for their action in the morning and in the evening in one and the same trial. The joinder amounts to an illegality and cannot be cured by the application of s 537, 28 M. L. J. 397 = 16 Cr. L. J. 823. A joinder of charges under ss. 454 and 325, I P C. is not warranted by s. 235 especially where the offence of house-trespass is clearly distinct from a subsequent attack on the complainant while on his way to inform the Police, 2 L. B. R. 19 referred to, 5 Bur. L. T. 101 = 13 Cr. L. J. 485. See Note 8 under s 239.

(b) Misappropriation and cheating—Where an accused was directed to cash a cheque and pay the proceeds to a Railway Company for freight and take delivery of certain goods and the accused cashed the cheque and misappropriated the money and thereafter on a different day fraudulently induced the Railway Company to deliver the goods and was charged and tried in one trial under s. 408, I P C., for criminal misappropriation and under s. 420, I P C., for cheating the Railway Company. Held that the trial was bad for misjoinder, as the offences were not committed in the same transaction, 13 C. W. N. 1089 = 10 Cr. L. J. 477.

(c) Joinder of a charge under s 408, I P C (criminal misappropriation), in a trial under s 307, I P C., 4 A. L. J. 697.

(d) Ss 3 and 4 of the Gambling Act—The keeping of a gambling house (s 3 of the Gambling Act) and being present in it at the time of a Police raid cannot be said to be part of the same transaction, 35 P. R. 1914.

(e) Murder and causing disappearance of evidence of murder—Charges under ss 302 and 201, I P C., cannot be combined, Weir II, 804, where 8 A. 252 and 22 C 633 are referred to 11 P. R. 1913. But see contra 15 L. R. 73 = 8 Cr. L. J. 191, 48 L. R. 174 = 11 Cr. L. J. 731. See also 20 C. W. N. 186.

(f) Murder and grievous hurt in removing dead body—Murder and causing grievous hurt caused in removing dead body cannot be tried together, 10 P. R. 1906 = 4 Cr. L. J. 285.

(g) Kidnapping a minor, wrongful confinement and assault on mother—Where M formed an intimacy with H, a widow, who took to living openly in M's house and H's relations attacked the house of M, beat him and his brothers and carried off H and were convicted under s. 452, I P C., and two years later they were again charged under s 365, I P C., for carrying off and secretly confining H. held the previous and assault did not constitute a series of acts, so connected as to form one transaction, 25 M. 454; 27 C. 1041 (F.B.).

(h) Manufacturing, etc., and attempting to render fit for human consumption denatured spirit, Bengal Excise Act V of 1909—The acts of manufacturing the excisable articles seized and brought into Court bottling it possessing it selling from time to time various other articles not before the Court and of attempting to render denatured spirit fit for 'human consumption' do not constitute the same transaction, 41 C. 694.

(i) Preparation of balance sheets under the Companies Act, s. 282 (VII of 1913) for two years — Held to be a case of misjoinder of charges, for the preparation for the years 1912 and 1913, could not be regarded as one transaction within the meaning of this section, 21 Bom. L. R. 732.

(j) Five murders in two sets.—A triplemurder was committed by the accused in the forenoon and a double murder in the afternoon and there was no apparent connection between the two sets of murder. The accused was charged, at one and the same trial with the commission of five murders and convicted, held that the trial contravened the provisions of ss. 233, 234 and 235, and therefore, the conviction was set aside and a re-trial on charges properly framed was ordered, 17 A. L. J. 614.

6. Cases where acts held to form one transaction.—

(i) Transfer of property to several persons on one day is one transaction—Where a committing Magistrate framed a general charge under s. 206, I P C., against an accused person of several fraudulent transactions, and the Sessions Judge limited the prosecution to three or four of the case as to intention and similarity of action and in the words "same transaction," in this section, and that the accused should be tried for every such offence, 16 B. 414.

(ii) Single theft from several owners—As there appears to be a difference of practice in respect of treating thefts as single or several, if in one transaction things belonging to different owners have been stolen it is necessary to issue some instructions for the guidance of the Police when registering such cases in the Crime Register, or when sending them up for trial, and for the guidance of Magistrate when deciding whether a single trial or distinct trials are required. At the same time, nothing that is here set out can in any way control the discretion given to Magistrates by this section with regard to the framing of separate charges or the holding of separate trials, whenever it appears appropriate to do so. If the property, which it was the thief's intention (as shown by the circumstances or by his admission) to take, consisted of a number of contiguous articles, which were reached by one and the same act of trespass or which were the subject of single enterprise, the moving of each article, in the course of the removal of the whole bulk of property, cannot ordinarily be considered to be a distinct theft. The thieving project in such a case was single, although it may have been achieved in detail and the fact that the spoils taken consisted of several things whether belonging to the same or to different owners, does not necessarily break up the unity of the transaction. If on the other hand, the property taken consisted of a number of articles so distantly or diversely situated as to require a distinct act of trespass or a distinct enterprise for the removal of each the transaction must ordinarily be held to have been not single but complex and its achievement to have involved the commission of more than one separate theft.

The following examples will make the distinction clear —

(a) A thief goes to a threshing floor where the grain of four cultivators is stored, and steals a little from every heap. Unless it is shown that he had distinct designs against the several owners, it is plain that there was but one act of thieving accomplished through one and the same trespass.

(b) In a crowded place, a thief picks the pockets of A, B and C, in succession. Three thefts have been committed — C P Cr Cir, Part II, No 20. See also 28 P. R. 1889.

(iii) Stealing at the same time two bullocks of different owners is one transaction—Stealing at the same time two bullocks which belonged to two different owners, and which had been tied to the yoke of a cart, constitutes one offence of theft only, Ratnial 927; 1881 A. W. N. 154.

(iv) Receiving stolen property and assisting to conceal—Receiving some property stolen on a particular occasion (s. 411, I P C.) and assisting to conceal some other property stolen on the same occasion (s. 414, I P C.) is in course of the same transaction, 28 A. 313; 49 B. 878.

(v) Dacoity and murder may form parts of the same transaction as principal and subsidiary acts—A gang of dacoits, who were hiding in a jungle were accidentally discovered by an old woman who was set upon and murdered by some of them to prevent her raising a hue-and-cry. Subsequently they committed a dacoity in a village some distance from the scene of the murder. Held that the joint trial of all the accused for an offence under s. 395, I P C., and some of them in addition under s. 302 I P C., was perfectly legal, as the murder was committed in order to commit dacoity and the two offences formed parts of the same transaction & Bom. L. R. 789. See however 14 A. 502, where robbery and murder did not form parts of the same transaction.

(vi) Conspiracy to wage war and conceal the existence thereof, ss 121-A and 123 I P C.—When person engaged in a conspiracy within the meaning of s. 121 A, I P C, in furtherance of their object conceal the existence of their conspiracy from the authorities a charge under s. 123, I P C, may be legally joined with one under s. 121 A, I P C, 37 G. 467; 16 G. W. N. 1105 = 15 G. L. J. 517 = 13 Cr. L. J. 509.

(vii) Extortion and false personation—Offences under ss 170 (false personation of a public servant) and 380 (extortion), I P C, have been held to constitute one transaction, because but for the personation, the accused would not have been in a position to commit the act of extortion complained of, 10 A. 58. In 15 G. W. N. 732 = 12 Cr. L. J. 346, it was held following 10 A. 58, that there was no misjoinder of charges, where accused was charged with personating a Police-officer under s. 170, I P C, and thereby, in such assumed character, doing or attempting to do an act under the colour of his office, and was further charged with three acts of extortion in respect of three sums, and in the alternative, on three charges of cheating, in respect of the three sums and finally of an attempt at extortion under ss 384 and 511, I P C, these offences having been committed in the same transaction.

(viii) Defamation and using criminal force—Where the accused was in the first instance charged with defamation, but the complainant in the course of his deposition further charged him with using criminal force and the Magistrate tried for both offences jointly at one trial held that the procedure was legal, 3 Bom. L. R. 875.

(ix) Distinct offences of perjury may constitute but a single transaction—Where a witness gives false evidence before the committing Magistrate and in the Court of Session, if the statements are regarded as so connected together as to form parts of one and the same transaction, this section will apply and at one trial the accused may be charged with any number of false statements, Ratanlal 336. See also Note 10 to s. 233

(x) Grievous hurt and making false entries, ss 193, 218 and 331, I P C—Accused was charged with voluntarily causing grievous hurt to person with view of extorting information from him and was also charged with making a series of false entries so as to attribute another cause for the death of that person who died from the effects of the injuries inflicted by the accused. The accused was tried at one trial for offences under ss 193, 218, 331 and 330 I P C, and convicted of offences under ss 183, 218 and 331, I P C. It was contended that there was misjoinder of charges. Held, that there was no misjoinder as the case fell within s. 235, and illustration (f). The act of making a series of false entries so as to attribute another cause for death was in continuation and pursuance to the transaction of causing grievous hurt with a view to extort information and the two acts formed part of the same transaction, 14 Bom. L. R. 41 = 1 Bom. Cr. 72 = 13 Cr. L. J. 137.

(xi) Five accused persons A, B, C, D and E finding that a robbery had been committed and that cash and ornaments worth a very large sum had been stolen aided and abetted each other inducing a young man F whom they know to be entirely innocent of the offence for the consideration of a bribe of Rs. 180, falsely to confess to complicity in the crime and to acquiesce in being prosecuted for it, the object being to share the loot with the real thieves. To this end the accused wrongfully confined F, fabricated false evidence in order to procure his conviction knowingly instituted a false prosecution against him and in that prosecution gave false evidence in order to secure his conviction. A was charged and convicted under ss 195, 347, 211 and 195, I P C, B and C under ss 145/109 and 357/109, D under ss. 281/109 and 347/109 and E under ss 195 for the offence of giving false evidence held, that the joint trial was legal, 30 B. 49 followed.

(xii) In 35 G. 161, it was held that the trial of an accused person for two offences under s. 178, I P C, with two offences under s. 179 I P C, was not illegal.

(xiii) On the 14th December certain Mahomedans who were alleged to have slaughtered a cow were wrongfully confined by the accused who fined them and realised a certain portion of the fines and released them on their promising to pay the balance of the fine three days later, but on their failing to do so they were again confined and maltreated by the accused on the 18th December. The accused were charged under ss. 347, 352 and 352, 114, I P C. Held the occurrence that took place on 14th and the one that took place on the 18th formed part of one and the same transaction. The maltreatment after the release from the wrongful confinement was the concluding portion of the same transaction. All were confined for one purpose, namely for the purpose of extorting money, 42 G. 760 where 30 B. 49 and 27 B. 133 were followed.

(xiv) Using as genuine a forged document and the abetment of forgery—The series of acts beginning with the forgery and ending with the user of the forged document in a Civil Court to support the civil claim must be regarded as so connected together as to form the same transaction or carrying through of a single predetermined plan, 16 Cr. L. J. 761 (B).

(xv) Where an accused person was charged with cheating under s. 420 by giving the complainant base alloy as pure silver and also with theft under s. 380 by subsequently stealing the alloy to remove the evidence against him, and was tried at one trial and convicted held that though it was difficult to find that the two offences were committed in one series of acts so as to form the same transaction, the evidence for s. 380 would have been admissible as showing the conduct of the accused in the trial under s. 420, that the accused was not therefore prejudiced by the joinder of charges and that the sentences being concurrent accused was not otherwise prejudiced, 20 A. L. J. 324

7. Conspiracy and the offences to which the conspiracy was entered into form one transaction.—A and B conspire to cheat X, in pursuance of that conspiracy and in fulfilment of its object A cheats X on a specific occasion. The position may clearly be maintained that the two different offences of conspiracy to cheat committed by A and B and the offence of cheating committed by A alone have been committed in the same transaction, 19 C. W. N. 672 = 21 C. L. J. 195 = 16 Cr. L. J. 3 and 21 C. L. J. 201 = 16 Cr. L. J. 9 referred to. If A, B and C conspire to make, or have in their possession or under their control, an explosive substance within the meaning of the Explosive Substances Act, and, if in pursuance of such conspiracy A makes or has in his possession or under his control an explosive substance, they may, if the Court thinks fit, be charged and tried together under s. 120 B, I P C, and s. 4 (b) of Act VI of 1908, 42 C. 937. M M an employee of a Railway Company, D a consignor and N his gumastha were charged that they had entered into a conspiracy to defraud the Railway in respect of freight payable on goods consigned and M M was further charged with receiving an illegal gratification and in consideration of that sum and in pursuance of that conspiracy he was further charged with having understated the weight of a consignment in a consignment note and defrauded the Railway of a certain sum. The charges against M M were under ss. B, 420 and 161, I P C D and N were charged under ss. 120-B, 429 and 161/109, and all the three were jointly tried. Held the joint trial was valid as all the offences were committed in one transaction, 19 C. W. N. 672 = 21 C. L. J. 195 = 16 Cr. L. J. 3; 49 C. 373, 46 C. 712; 49 M. 74

8. Separate retention of the proceeds of the same theft or dacoity.—Duty of prosecution to make out facts justifying joinder.—Separate retainers by different persons of separate articles at different places, although the articles may have been the proceeds of one dacoity, cannot be said to be in the course of the same transaction and person charged with such retention cannot be tried jointly, 33 C. 1258. One trial for having been found in possession of stolen properties belonging to two different persons and stolen at different times is illegal 18 C. W. N. 418 = 9 Cr. L. J. 277. Similarly, where two persons were charged under s. 411, I P C, in respect of articles at different times and without any connection with one another, 29 B. 449. Where the accused in one count was charged under s. 411, I P C, with having dishonestly received or retained eight sets of cooking utensils stolen from eight different persons on eight different dates and in another count were charged with having aided and abetted one another in the commission of the said offence. Held, that in the absence of evidence that the acts of receiving were so connected together as to form one transaction the charges framed and the single trial held with respect thereto were illegal, that the mere fact that there was no evidence of separate receipt or retention did not justify the joinder of charges and that it lay upon the prosecution to establish the facts which would justify such a procedure. Further, the dishonest receipt or retention of each article constituted a separate offence and the accused could only be tried for three of such offences committed within one year, unless it were shown that the receipt or retention of all the articles were so connected as to form one transaction, 9 C. W. N. 1027. See also 6 W. R. 83; 11 C. W. N. 1128; 16 Cr. L. J. 270 (0). See Note 35 to s. 239. But under clause (e) of the amended s. 239 what is necessary for a joinder of accused persons is, that one offender should commit theft and the other receive the stolen property. It is not, now necessary that the offence of theft and the offence of the receipt of stolen property should form one and the same transaction or be the result of the same conspiracy, so the above cases, viz., 33 C. 1258, 29 B. 449; 46 C. 741 are no longer good law.

9. Joinder of charges of criminal misappropriation or criminal breach of trust and falsification of accounts.—Where the falsification of account is made to cloak an embezzlement then the two offences have been committed in the same transaction and under s. 235 (1) they can be tried together, 40 C. 318; but a charge of criminal breach of trust cannot be tried jointly with an independent falsification of account, 40 C. 318. So also three distinct criminal breaches of trust, s. 409 I P C, and three distinct falsifications of account cannot be jointly tried, 20 M. 338; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 538 = 13 Cr. L. J. 21, 41 C. 722, 43 A. L. J. 1059. See Note 10 (v) to s. 233 and Note 8 to s. 234. See 44 A. 540

10. Effect of s. 222 (2) on charges of embezzlement.—S 222 provides for a charge being framed in respect of gross sums appropriated within 12 months from the first to the last and enacts that a charge so framed shall be deemed to be a charge within the meaning of s. 234, but it does not provide that acts so charged shall be deemed to be one transaction within the meaning of s. 233, 30 Cr. 820. See also 29 Cr. 558 and Notes to s 222 at p. 549 and Note 8 to s. 234

11. Multiplicity of charges to be avoided unless intimate connection established.—In 30 Cr. 822 the accused had executed a sale-deed of lands in favour of D and was alleged to have forged the registration endorsement on the back thereof. Next he forged a mortgage-deed in favour of D of the identical lands and got it registered by making a false statement before the Registrar. Next he attempted to raise a loan from a Loan office on the forged mortgage-deed. At one trial the accused was tried for offences ss 467, 467/104, 468, 468/109, I P C., in respect of the endorsement on the sale-deed, under ss 467, 467/109 and 471, I P C., in respect of the mortgage-deed under s 82 of the Registration Act in respect of the false statement and under ss. 471 and 471/109, I. P. C., in respect of the attempt to cheat the Loan Office. Held there was misjoinder. The forgery of the endorsement on the sale-deed and the presentation of the mortgage-deed before the Loan Office were not parts of the same transaction, though it might be contended that the forgeries of the endorsement on the sale-deed and of the mortgage-deed formed part of one transaction, the object of which was to deny the genuineness of the sale-deed and also the forgery of the mortgage-deed and the presentation thereof to the Loan Office was one transaction in which the object was to cheat the Loan office. See 18 Cr. L. J. 739 where the trial of an accused in respect of four distinct offences committed at different times at different places and against different persons in one trial was held illegal. See 18 P. R. 1902; 7 P. R. 1901. But where an accused person pretending to be able to get a post for the complainant in Government service wrote letters on various pretexts obtained several sums of money and used forged documents, the various incidents extending over a period of five or six weeks and the accused was tried on seven charges three under s. 420 and the rest ss. 466, 468, 471 and 471, I P C., held the joint trial of all these charges was perfectly legal under this section, as the offence with which the accused were charged all formed one transaction, 11 Cr. W. N. 715 = 5 Cr. L. J. 494, where 30 Cr. 822 and 2 Cr. L. J. 34 are distinguished and 27 B. 133 followed. See also 18 P. W. R. 1908 = 8 Cr. L. J. 75.

12. Joint trial of offence committed by different accused against different persons at different times.—Four persons, members of the Police Force, were charged with ill treating the complainant H, his wife R and his son in law during the course of the Police investigation. They were committed for trial in two separate cases for the following offences—

(1) All the four accused persons for an offence under s 330, I P C., committed against one Hanma, the charge covering several acts of violence alleged to have been committed against Hanma during his illegal confinement which forms the subject of the second head of the charge

(2) All the accused for an offence under s 348, I P C., committed against Hanma between the 5th and 18th January, 1889

(3) Accused Nos. 1 and 3 for an offence under s. 348, I P C. committed against the deceased Ralmava wife of Hanma on the 15th January, 1889

(4) Accused No 3 for an offence under s 330 I P C., committed against the deceased Ralmava on the 14th January, 1889

(5) All the accused for an offence under s 330 committed against Yella in the interval between the 15th and 23rd January, 1889

(6) All the accused for an offence under s. 348, committed against Yella during the same period

(7) Accused Nos 1, 2 and 3 for an offence under s. 346 I P C., committed against Yella between the 8th February and 9th March, 1889

The committing Magistrate committed the accused in two separate cases which were tried together by the Court of Session under this section and s 239 as the same four persons were accused in both cases and were under this section charged with different offences committed in what was virtually one transaction viz., a Police investigation into an alleged theft at Bagadgers. On appeal to the High Court it was held that

(1) Though the members of a Police Force who had conspired to maltreat suspected persons in the course of an investigation, could under certain circumstances be dealt with under the provisions of this section and s 239, for a series of oppressive acts of which they were guilty in the prosecution of their common object still it would be necessary to consider carefully whether the alleged acts were, as a matter of fact, so connected together in one series as to form essentially and strictly the same transaction.

(2) If in any case either the accused are likely to be bewildered in their defence by having to meet many disconnected charges or the prospect of a fair trial is likely to be endangered by the production of a mass of evidence directed to many different matters and tending by its mere accumulation to induce an undue suspicion against the accused, then, the propriety of combining the charges may well be questioned.

(3) All the several acts of violence alleged to have been committed against Hanma during his illegal confinement could be rightly regarded as constituting a single transaction. But the act of violence said to have been committed against Rakmava at a different place could not be regarded as a part of that transaction. Nor was the wrongful confinement of Rakmava by the accused Nos 1 and 3 on the 15th January a part of the transaction constituted by the hurt which was caused to her by the accused No 3 on the previous day. In the same way, all acts of hurt caused to Yellia during his first period of wrongful confinement would, with the confinement be a part of the same transaction. But the second period of confinement which is said to have commenced some time after the termination of the first period of confinement, would be a separate transaction.

(4) The combination of the two cases by the Sessions Judge necessarily prejudiced the accused by making it possible for the prosecution to bring forward a mass of evidence at the trial, relating to many matters, some only remotely connected with relevant questions, which must, to some extent, have had the effect of embarrassing and confusing the accused.

(5) The omission to specify in the first head of charge the several hurts caused to Hanma and in the fifth head the several hurts caused to Yellia must also have added to the accused's difficulty in making their defence. 15 B. 491.

13 Where one offence in the same transaction not cognisable for want of sanction, trial may proceed for the others.—The accused by certain acts abetted an offence under s. 122, I P C., and by the same acts he also abetted the offence of dacoity under s. 395, I P C. Though under sub-sec. (2) of this section the accused could be tried for both of those offences, yet as this section is controlled by s. 196 its operation in this case is restricted to the minor offence for which the accused could legally be charged and tried 25 B. 90. Where offences punishable under ss. 183 and 186, I P C., were committed and in committing those, offences under ss. 355 and 323 were also committed, the latter offences may under this section be separately charged and no sanction is necessary, 31 M. 43.

14 Alternative charge in case of distinct transactions is bad.—Neither this section nor s. 236 relates to two acts which form two distinct transactions or empowers a Court to say in a charge to an accused person, "Either on one day at one place you did an act which constituted one of several offences, or on another day at another place you did a different act constituting a different offence and therefore you are guilty of some one or other of all the offences specified," 43 P. R. 1887.

PUNISHMENT.

15 When charges are for distinct offences, whether separate convictions and sentences are legal?—In 7 A. 787, where the accused in the course of robbing constructively caused hurt it was held that separate punishments for the offences of robbing and hurt were not legal, as it was found that none of the accused had individually committed any act which amounted to voluntarily causing hurt. With reference to sub-sec. (2) it may be pointed out as a general rule that when, in the same penal statute, there are two clauses applicable to the same act of an accused person, the punishments are not to be regarded as cumulative, unless it be so expressly provided, Bataulal 506. Accordingly, a prisoner cannot be at the same time punished for committing an offence by fire with intent to destroy a warehouse under s. 436 I P C., and for the offence of mischief by fire with intent to cause damage to property above the value of Rs 100 under s. 435 I P C., 11 B. H. C. R. 13. Again the application of sub-sec. (3) is exemplified in illustration (m) in which the case is put of a person committing robbery on B, and in doing so, voluntarily causing hurt to him. Here the hurt constitutes the element of force which converts theft into robbery. Lastly, it should be noted that s. 71 I P C., makes no provision for a series of acts, one part of which constitutes one offence and another part a separate offence but which when combined do not constitute a third offence. Illustration (d) to this section however shows what should be done in such cases. This class of cases is governed by this section and separate sentences may be passed for each of such offences. See 10 B. 493; 12 M. 86; 23 B. 708.

(F. B.). When the trial proceeds on two separate charges for two distinct offences and convictions are recorded on both, separate sentences ought to be passed, Ratanlal 369. The accused was convicted by a first class Magistrate of offences under ss. 467 and 380, I P C., and sentenced to one and two years' imprisonment for each of the offences. On a reference from the District Magistrate that sentences exceeded the powers of the trying Magistrate, viz., two years, held, that under cl. (1) of this section the accused could legally be tried at one trial for those offences and separate convictions were illegal [see Illustr (b)] inasmuch as though nothing contained in this section affects s. 71, I P C., still as the accused committed distinct offences, which when combined are not punishable under any single section of the I P C., s. 71 does not apply, Ratanlal 228. See also 10 B. 493. But now when read in the light of explanation to s. 35, the offences under ss. 451 and 380 are not distinct offences, therefore the offender cannot be punished with a more severe punishment than the trying Court could award for any one of such offences. Where a person was convicted under s. 457, I P C., and was also convicted in the same trial under s. 354 and received separate sentences of 12 months and 6 months' rigorous imprisonments respectively, held, that the separate sentences were not sustainable, 12 C. W. N. 187. When an accused person is convicted and punished for murder or voluntarily causing grievous hurt with a dangerous weapon, he cannot also be punished by fine for rioting when all the offence formed part of the same transaction, Ratanlal 493. See also cases under s. 33. Where the charge against the accused is founded upon one single continuous transaction, the first thing to be ascertained is what is the principal legal offence involved in the conduct of the accused which would subject him, if convicted, to the greatest amount of punishment? That being ascertained, the object of adding others is not the accumulation of punishments, but to provide against the event of the evidence failing to establish the principal charges. The most convenient course (with reference to appeals is to enter up findings on all the counts)—Mad H C Pra, 30th March, 1863.

16. Separate punishment cannot be awarded where offence is so compounded that the aim of one substantive offence is the perpetration of some other offence—This section, taken with illustrations, forbids two punishments for an offence so compounded that one substantive offence is the aim of the other, and evidentiary matter of the intent necessary to constitute that other. Therefore, a person who has been tried and convicted under s. 369, I P C., or abducting a child with the intent or dishonestly taking movable property, cannot also be punished for the theft of a part of the movable property which he intended dishonestly to take through means of abduction, 7 M. H. C. R. 375; followed in Ratanlal 159. House breaking by night with intent to commit theft and theft in the building Ratanlal 79 and 95. Kidnapping with intent to steal and theft, 1 Bar. S. R. 475, 11 W. R. 33 or riding a horse furiously and knocking down a bystander and causing hurt to him, Ratanlal 159. If in the same transaction two different offences are committed separate sentences must follow, 38 C. 453. On the question of punishment see 2 A. 101 and 644, 6 A. 121; 7 A. 29; 1 B. 214; 10 B. 493; 6 C. 718—8 C. L. R. 390; 9 A. 643, 10 A. 83 at p. 67, 10 A. 146, 32 P. R. 1855, 31 P. R. 1894, 23 B. 906; 12 C. 493, and Notes to s. 35 contra 1 Bar. 271. These decisions were given with reference to illustrations (e) and (h) of s. 454 of Act of 1872 which are not reproduced under the present section.

17. The major offence to be looked to—Prisoner was squabbling with the husband or the witness at the door of the house. Witness remonstrated and abused the prisoner when he merely entered the house for the purpose of committing an assault upon her and in carrying out that intention caused her grievous hurt. Held that his conviction for the substantive offence of grievous hurt was right, but not of house-trespass, 2 W. R. 23.

18. For offences falling within two definitions.—See 10 C. W. N. 518—3 Cr. L. J. 383 dealing with offences under ss. 201, 202 and 176, I P C., and 24 M. L. J. 463—14 Cr. L. J. 214 and Notes under s. 403.

236. If a single act or series of acts is of such a nature that it is doubtful which of several offences the facts which can be proved will constitute, the accused may be charged with having committed all or any of such offences, and any number of such charges may be tried at once, or he may be charged in the alternative with having committed some one of the said offences.

Where it is doubtful what offence has been committed

Illustrations

(a) A is accused of an act which may amount to theft, or receiving stolen property or criminal breach of trust or cheating. He may be charged with theft, receiving stolen property, criminal breach of trust and cheating, or he may be charged with having committed theft or receiving stolen property, or criminal breach of trust or cheating.

(d) A states on oath before the Magistrate that he saw B hit C with a club. Before the Sessions Court A states on oath that B never hit C. A may be charged in the alternative and convicted of intentionally giving false evidence, although it cannot be proved which of these contradictory statements was false.

Notes —1. Scope and application of section —S 236 contemplates a state of facts constituting a single offence but it is doubtful whether the act or acts involved may amount to one or other of several cognate offences, 23 C. 174—176. See also 21 C. 935; 8 M. 296 and 12 Bom. H. C. R. 1 as to construction of s. 236. See Note 19 to s. 233 as to whether the exceptions to s. 233 are mutually exclusive.

S 236 is the only section under which an alternative charge can be framed. The section provides for cumulative as well as for alternative charges and in s. 403 it is contrasted with s. 235 (1) which also provides for cumulative charges. The offences under s. 235 (1) are referred to in s. 403 as distinctive offences while that expression is not used in regard to the offences falling under s. 236. Under s. 235 (1) the offences are committed in a series of acts. They are distinct offences. Under s. 236 the offences arise out of a single act or out of a series of acts. The offences are not distinct. S 236 does not apply to distinct offences. It applies as shown by ill. (a) and (d) to s. 403 to offences of the same kind but which differ only in degree. The difference and degree depend upon some added circumstance of aggravation, e.g., that the thief was the servant of the complainant or to a difference in the intention imputed to the accused as in the case of culpable homicide amounting to murder. But both these cases are cases not for alternative charges but of cumulative charges under s. 236. An alternative charge cannot be framed in respect of distinct offences nor in respect of cognate offences when the difference is one of degree, i.e., as to the intention imputed or as to some circumstance of aggravation. An alternative charge under s. 236 can be framed only in those rare cases in which the prosecution cannot establish exclusively any one offence, but are able on the facts which can be proved, to exclude the innocence of the accused and to show that he must have committed one of two or more offences. The prosecution establish a corpus delicti on the facts which can be proved and the facts which cannot be proved are subsidiary facts important only to this extent that they decide under which penal provision the delictum falls. Offences charged in the alternative arise out of the same delictum and are therefore necessarily cognate offences. Where the facts constituting corpus delicti are doubtful no charge in the alternative can be named. Per PRATT, J., in 5 S. L. R. 16 = 12 Cr. L. J. 224. CROUCH, A. J. C., however, differed from PRATT, J. and held that there is no authority for asserting that the alternative offences must at best be offences dealt with in the same chapter of the Penal Code or 'cognate' in any other technical sense. The section is nothing more than a permissive rule of procedure. Whether it is expedient to frame a charge in the alternative or whether it will unfairly embarrass the accused in the conduct of his defence are two of the most important questions which should be answered satisfactorily, before the procedure is followed. The doubts for which s. 236 seeks to provide are doubts as to what inferences will be drawn from the evidence if believed. The doubt which of several offences the facts proved will constitute must arise from the very nature of the acts of which it is intended to offer evidence.

Ss. 226 and 237 are merely provisions against the defeat of justice on technical grounds. Where an offence is proved by the evidence but its legal definition is doubtful or has been incorrectly given in the charge then s. 226 or s. 237 may be resorted to. They really deal with particular instances which the language of s. 235 might fail to cover, 9 N. L. R. 26 = 14 Cr. L. J. 135. In 10 B. 125 the section was held not applicable to different transactions see Note 20.

2. Section applies only where the application of law to the proved facts is doubtful and not where the facts are doubtful.—This section relates not to distinct acts, but to a single act or series of acts where the facts being ascertained it is doubtful which of several sections is applicable 43 P. R. 1887. See 14 A. L. J. 587. This section applies to cases in which the law applicable to certain set of facts is doubtful by reason of the nature of the single act or series of acts done, and in which it is charged or found proved (as the case may be) that the act or series of acts constitute one or more or some one of several offences, the doubt being on a matter of law only. Therefore a person cannot be charged with murder or alternatively of culpable homicide not amounting to murder, 11 P. R. 1887. Where the doubt in the mind of the Judge was not whether on the facts which were held to be proved, the accused's act fell within the purview of s. 302 or s. 201 1 P. C., but whether there was sufficient proof that the accused had in fact committed the murder of the deceased or had merely been guilty of causing evidence of murder to disappear an alternative conviction for both the offences is not contemplated by law 11 P. R. 1915, 20 C. W. N. 166. Where the accused was charged under two heads of charge with dacoity in each of two adjacent houses, and the Sessions Judge was unable to determine into which house he entered, held that he was wrong in finding him guilty upon an alternative finding. The Code only contemplates an alternative finding when the facts are ascertained and it would follow beyond doubt that the facts proved constitute one or two offences under one section of the Penal Code, or when the evidence proves the commission of an offence falling within one of the sections of the Code, and it is doubtful which of such sections is applicable, Ratanlal 20. This section applies to cases in which the facts are not doubtful, but the application of the law to the facts is doubtful. Judgment in the alternative cannot be passed in cases in which it is doubtful of which of those offences the accused is guilty, 7 N.-W. F. H. C. R. 137. See also 12 C. W. N. 530 = 7 Cr. L. J. 362; Weir II, 301. S. 236 applies only to cases in which there is a single act or a series of acts of such a nature that it is doubtful which of several offences is constituted by the criminal act or acts. It has no application when there is no doubt as to which of several offences the accused has committed if the facts as alleged by the prosecution are established 15 C. L. J. 574 = 15 Cr. L. J. 41, 16 Cr. L. J. 761 (B); 5 S. L. R. 15 = 12 Cr. L. J. 221.

3. Alternative charge cannot be framed in respect of an offence under the Penal Code and an offence under a Special Law.—Both the provisions of the law as to judgment and punishment in the case of an alternative charge are limited to offences of the Penal Code. S. 367 (3) contains an express limitation to that effect and s. 72, I P. C., is by s. 40 limited to offences under the Penal Code. The word 'offence' in s. 236 includes offences under Special Laws and such offences may be charged cumulatively. But the limitations in s. 367 (3) and s. 72, I P. C., seem to indicate that an alternative charge cannot be framed in respect of an offence under the Penal Code and an offence under a Special Law, 5 S. L. R. 16 = 12 Cr. L. J. 224. In this case the charge was in the alternative under s. 409 I P. C., or s. 52 of the Post Office Act in that he either dishonestly converted to his own use R. 2 and A. 13 proceeds of the bearing letters entrusted to him or that he threw away the bearing letters.

4. 'Several offences' include offences under the same section.—i.e., not merely several offences (i.e., two or more) punishable under different sections, but also two or more offences punishable under the same section, whether under the same part, or under different parts of the same section, 32 P. R. 1859. The offences mentioned in this section are not in fact offences of the same kind arising out of a single act or set of acts and committed at one and the same time 9 C. 371 = 11 C. L. R. 523, but offences of different kinds.

5. Mode of framing charge in case of stolen property.—Where an accused person is found in possession of several stolen articles belonging to A and B at one and the same time, the proper course is to frame two charges, in respect of the property of A one under s. 379 and one under s. 411, I P. C., expressed either alternatively or cumulatively, and two similar charges in respect of property of B. The reason for the double charge in both cases is that the Court is not in a position to affirm positively that C has stolen the property, rather than he received it, and reason for framing distinct sets of charges as to the property of A and the property of B is that the Court is not in a position to affirm that the property of A and B, supposing that it may have been received or retained by C, and not stolen by him came into his possession by a single act of receiving. PER FLOWDEN, J., 26 P. R. 1839.

6. Alternative charge of murder and of causing disappearance of the evidence of the murder.—The joinder of charge of murder, s. 302, I P. C., and of causing disappearance of the evidence of the murder, s. 201, I P. C., in the alternative is legal, 4 S. L. R. 174 = 11 Cr. L. J. 731 following 1 S. L. R. 73. See, however, 20 C. W. N. 166. In 11 P. R. 1913 it was suggested that if in fact it was doubtful which of two offences the accused committed, the proper course would be to give the accused the benefit of doubt of the offence of murder. See Note 1 above.

7. Charge of alternative common object when allowable in rioting cases.—In a case of an unlawful assembly, if it be the opinion of the Judge that there is ground for charging the accused with a common object different from that alleged by the prosecution, he should add a separate count or counts to the charge so that a separate verdict could be taken upon it. This section only authorizes a charge in the alternative when it is doubtful which of several offences the facts which can be proved will constitute—not there may be a doubt as to the facts which constitute one of the elements of the offence, 21 C. 935.

8. Alternative charge under s. 189 or s. 211, I P. C., if good.—In 20 P. R. 1910 = 30 P. W. R. Cr. L. J. 420, it is held that offences under ss. 182 and 211 I P. C., are essentially distinct and there a charge in the alternative under these sections.

9. Alternative charges where death is caused.—A, without provocation stabbed B with a penetrated the cavity of the chest and caused B's death. The Sessions Judge found the case did not clauses 1 to 3 of s. 300, I P. C., and therefore acquitted A of the charge of murder on which she was

(b) A states on oath before the Magistrate that he saw B hit C with a club. Before the Sessions Court A states on oath that B never hit C. A may be charged in the alternative and convicted of intentionally giving false evidence, although it cannot be proved which of these contradictory statements was false.

Notes.—1. Scope and application of section.—S 236 contemplates a state of facts constituting a single offence, but it is doubtful whether the act or acts involved may amount to one or other of several cognate offences, 23 C. 174—176. See also 21 C 953; 8 M. 236 and 12 Bom. H. C. R. 1 as to construction of s 236. See Note 19 to s. 233 as to whether the exceptions to s. 233 are mutually exclusive.

S 236 is the only section under which an alternative charge can be framed. The section provides for cumulative as well as for alternative charges and in s 403 it is contrasted with s 235 (1) which also provides for cumulative charges. The offences under s 235 (1) are referred to in s 403 as distinctive offences while that expression is not used in regard to the offences falling under s 236. Under s 235 (1) the offences are committed in a series of acts. They are distinct offences. Under s 236 the offences arise out of a single act or out of a series of acts. The offences are not distinct. S 236 does not apply to distinct offences. It applies as shown by ill (a) and (d) to s. 403 to offences of the same kind, but which differ only in degree. The difference and degree depend upon some added circumstance of aggravation, e.g., that the thief was the servant of the complainant or to a difference in the intention imputed to the accused as in the case of culpable homicide amounting to murder. Offences charged in the alternative arise out of the same delictum and are therefore necessarily cognate offences. Where the facts constituting corpus delicti are doubtful no charge in the alternative can be framed. Per PRATT, J., in 5 B. L. R. 16 = 12 Cr. L. J. 224. CROUCH, A. J. C., however, differed from PRATT, J., and held that there is no authority for asserting that the alternative offences must at best be offences dealt with in the same chapter of the Penal Code or 'cognate' in any other technical sense. The section is nothing more than a permissive rule of procedure. Whether it is expedient to frame a charge in the alternative or whether it will unfairly embarrass the accused in the conduct of his defence are two of the most important questions which should be answered satisfactorily, before the procedure is followed. The doubts for which s. 236 seeks to provide are doubts as to what inferences will be drawn from the evidence if believed. The doubt which of several offences the facts proved will constitute must arise from the very nature of the acts of which it is intended to offer evidence.

Ss 236 and 237 are merely provisions against the defeat of justice on technical grounds. Where an offence is proved by the evidence but its legal definition is doubtful or has been incorrectly given in the charge then s. 236 or s. 237 may be resorted to. They really deal with particular instances which the language of s. 233 might fail to cover, 9 N. L. R. 26 = 14 Cr. L. J. 135. In 10 B. 124 the section was held not applicable to different transactions, see Note 20.

2. Section applies only where the application of law to the proved facts is doubtful and not where the facts are doubtful.—This section relates not to distinct acts, but to a single act or series of acts where the facts being ascertained it is doubtful which of several sections is applicable, 43 P. R. 1887. See 14 A. L. J. 587. This section applies to cases in which the law applicable to certain set of facts is doubtful by reason of the nature of the single act or series of acts done, and in which it is charged or found proved (as the case may be) that the act or series of acts constitute one or more or some one of several offences the doubt being on a matter of law only. Therefore a person cannot be charged with murder or alternatively of culpable homicide not amounting to murder 11 P. R. 1887. Where the doubt in the mind of the Judge was not whether on the facts which were held to be the purview of s. 302 or s. 201, I P. C., but whether there was sufficient proof of the murder of the deceased, or had merely been guilty of causing native conviction for both the offences is not contemplated by law, the accused was charged under two heads of charge with dacoity in each of two adjacent houses, and the Sessions Judge was unable to determine into which house he entered, held that he was wrong in finding.

him guilty upon an alternative finding. The Code only contemplates an alternative finding when the facts are ascertained and it would follow beyond doubt that the facts proved constitute one or two offences under one section of the Penal Code, or when the evidence proves the commission of an offence falling within one of the sections of the Code, and it is doubtful which of such sections is applicable, Ratanlal 20. This section applies to cases in which the facts are not doubtful, but the application of the law to the facts is doubtful. Judgment in the alternative cannot be pressed in cases in which it is doubtful of which of those offences the accused is guilty, 7 N.-W. F. H. C. R. 137. See also 13 C. W. N. 530 = 7 Cr. L. J. 362; Weir II, 301. S 236 applies only to cases in which there is a single act or a series of acts of such a nature that it is doubtful which of several offences is constituted by the criminal act or acts. It has no application when there is no doubt as to which of several offences the accused has committed if the facts as alleged by the prosecution are established 18 C. L. J. 574 = 15 Cr. L. J. 41; 16 Cr. L. J. 761 (B); 5 S. L. R. 15 = 12 Cr. L. J. 224.

3. Alternative charge cannot be framed in respect of an offence under the Penal Code and an offence under a Special Law.—Both the provisions of the law as to judgment and punishment in the case of an alternative charge are limited to offences of the Penal Code. S 367 (3) contains an express limitation to that effect and s. 72, I P C., is by s 40 limited to offences under the Penal Code. The word 'offence' in s 238 includes offences under Special Laws and such offences may be charged cumulatively. But the limitations in s 367 (3) and s. 72, I P C., seem to indicate that an alternative charge cannot be framed in respect of an offence under the Penal Code and an offence under a Special Law, 5 S. L. R. 16 = 12 Cr. L. J. 224. In this case the charge was in the alternative under s. 409 I P C., or s. 52 of the Post Office Act in that he either dishonestly converted to his own use Rs. 2 and As. 13 proceeds of the bearing letters entrusted to him or that he threw away the bearing letters.

4. 'Several offences' include offences under the same section—i.e., not merely several offences (i.e., two or more) punishable under different sections, but also two or more offences punishable under the same section, whether under the same part, or under different parts of the same section, 32 P. R. 1859. The offences mentioned in this section are not in fact offences of the same kind arising out of a single act or set of facts and committed at one and the same time 9 C. 371 = 11 C. L. R. 522, but offences of different kinds.

5. Mode of framing charge in case of stolen property.—Where an accused person is found in possession of several stolen articles belonging to A and B at one and the same time, the proper course is to frame two charges, in respect of the property of A one under s 379 and one under s 411, I P C., expressed either alternatively or cumulatively, and two similar charges in respect of property of B. The reason for the double charge in both cases is that the Court is not in a position to affirm positively that C has stolen the property, rather than he received it, and reason for framing distinct sets of charges as to the property of A and the property of B is that the Court is not in a position to affirm that the property of A and B supposing that it may have been received or retained by C, and not stolen by him came into his possession by a single act of receiving. Per FLOWDEN, J. 26 P. R. 1889.

6. Alternative charge of murder and of causing disappearance of the evidence of the murder.—The joinder of charge of murder, s 302, I P C., and of causing disappearance of the evidence of the murder, s 201, I P C., in the alternative is legal, 4 S. L. R. 174 = 11 Cr. L. J. 731 following 1 S. L. R. 73. See however, 20 C. W. N. 166. In 11 P. R. 1913 it was suggested that if in fact it was doubtful which of two offences the accused committed, the proper course would be to give the accused the benefit of doubt of the offence of murder. See Note 1 above.

7. Charge of alternative common object when allowable in rioting cases.—In a case of an unlawful assembly, if it be the opinion of the Judge that there is ground for charging the accused with a common object different from that alleged by the prosecution he should add a separate count or counts to the charge, so that a separate verdict could be taken upon it. This section only authorizes a charge in the alternative when it is doubtful which is several offences the facts which can be proved will constitute—not when there may be a doubt as to the facts which constitute one of the elements of the offence, 21 C. 955.

8. Alternative charge under s. 189 or s. 211, I P C., if good.—In 20 P. R. 1910 = 30 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 420, it is held that offences under ss 182 and 211 I P C., are essentially distinct and there could not be a charge in the alternative under these sections.

9. Alternative charges where death is caused.—A, without provocation stabbed B with a knife which penetrated the cavity of the chest and caused B's death. The Sessions Judge found the case did not fall within clauses 1 to 3 of s. 300, I P C., and therefore acquitted A of the charge of murder on which she was committed, but convicted her under s. 326 of voluntarily causing grievous hurt with an instrument used for stabbing. Held that A should have been charged alternatively under ss. 302, 394 and 326, and that if the Judge found the case did not fall within any of the four clauses of s. 300, and that the exceptions to that section did not apply, he should then have considered the charge under s. 303, and found whether or not A knew she was likely to cause death, the charge of causing grievous hurt being altogether inapplicable to cases which a person causes death by an unlawful act which he knows likely to cause death., 1 Bar. R. R. 300.

10 Effect of conviction or acquittal after a trial on a charge under this section.—This section contemplates a state of facts constituting a single offence, but where it is doubtful whether the acts or act involved may amount to one or another of several cognate offences. Where that is the case, the accused may be simultaneously charged with and tried for the commission of all or any of such offences, and after acquittal or conviction cannot again be tried on the same facts, either for the specific offence or offences for which he has already been tried, or for any other offences for which he might then have been tried under the provisions of the section, 23 C. 174 at p. 178, 28 Bom. L. R. 440.

11. The reversal of verdict sets free all the charges.—Where an accused person is charged with and tried for various offences arising out of single act or series of acts, it being doubtful which of those offences the act or acts constitute and where he has been acquitted by a jury of some of those offences and convicted of others, but the Appellate Court reverses the verdict and orders a re-trial without specifying the charges on which the re-trial is to be held, then such re-trial must be taken to be on all the charges as originally framed and the acquittal by the jury at the previous trial on some of such charges is no bar to the accused being tried on them again 22 C. 377; 23 C. 975.

12. Definite finding on each count should be given.—Where accused is charged on the same facts in the alternative on a graver and on a less serious count, the Court should record a definite finding on each count, 1 Bar. R. R. 374.

13. Powers of Appellate Court—It is not competent to a Judge in appeal to alter a charge under s. 378, I P. C. into one under s. 366, I P. C., because a charge under the latter section involves different elements and different questions of facts from one under s. 378, I P. C., 8 Bom. L. R. 120 = 3 Cr. L. J. 240.

ALTERNATIVE CHARGES IN CASES OF PERJURY.

14. Law as to contradictory statements.—Illustration (b) which is new is proposed to settle the law that contradictory statements by a witness which are irreconcilable constitute the offence of intentionally giving false evidence, though it cannot be proved which of the two statements is false. Statement of Objects and Reasons See Ratanlal 26. The illustration adopts the Full Bench view in 21 W. R. 72 (F.B.) Scope of illustration (b) In 15 K. L. R. 148 = 2 Cr. L. J. 590, it is laid down that this illustration must be strictly confined to the case of two contradictory statements of the same kind and cannot be applied to statements falling under the two different parts of s. 193 I P. C. Therefore the accused making a false statement in an investigation under s. 175, and a contradictory statement before a Magistrate could not be convicted in the alternative, 18 B. 377 and 28 B. 533 relied on. This view, however, seems to be erroneous. See 5 M. L. T. 356; 22 A. 115, 1908 A. W. N. 73.

15. Effect of change of the Law.—In a charge under s. 193, I P. C., it is not necessary to allege which of two contradictory statements upon oath is false, but it is sufficient (unless some satisfactory explanation of the contradiction should be established) to warrant a conviction of the offence of giving false evidence to show that an accused person has made one statement upon oath at one time and a directly contradictory statement at another, 7 A. 44.

The cases in Ratanlal 518 and 336 and 18 B. 377 are now superseded to this extent.

16. Form of charge under this section.—Form XXVIII (u) 4 is referable to this section and is intended to be exemplar of a charge in the alternative under this section, 32 P. R. 1885.

17 Alternative charge in cases of contradictory statements—Prosecution on alternative charges of persons who make contradictory statements to the Police and to a Court has its conveniences, but it has also its drawbacks. It is not a prosecution to be encouraged and is justifiable only when the prosecution is unable to prove which of the contradictory statements was false, 27 P. R. 1890; 11 Cr. L. J. 734 (Buzma); 3 L. B. R. 204 = 4 Cr. L. J. 469. The accused must have been under a legal obligation to speak, the truth on both the occasions, 4 C. W. N. 249; 10 B. 124; 11 B. 702, 18 B. 377; 27 C. 455. It must be remembered that the accused might have made two statements, in perfect good faith, and yet quite irreconcilable, 28 B. 533. Where a person was convicted of giving false evidence upon an alternative charge, held by the majority of the Court (JACKSON and PHEAR, JJ., dissenting), that the conviction was good, notwithstanding the jury had not distinctly found which of the two statements charged was false 21 W. R. 72 = 13 B. L. R. 324 (F. B.). But an accused should never be called upon to plead in the alternative, but separately to each of the heads of a charge, Ratanlal 377. Two distinct charges ought to be framed, one relating to each statement and such evidence as is procurable should be adduced to prove the falsity of one or the other of the statements, Weir II, 299; Ratanlal 386. It is only when it is found impossible to say which of the conflicting statements was false and the two could not be reconciled, the prisoner should be convicted in the alternative on a charge framed under this section Weir II, 300, which follows 18 B. 377. See also Ratanlal 386. If each of the statements is found to be false, then conviction should follow on both heads of the charge. See Note 13 to s. 233 at pp 647 and 648

Although a statement which is made in the course of a Police investigation under s 164 of this Code is not evidence in a stage of judicial proceedings but comes within the words "evidence in any other case" in s 193 I P C., yet it can be linked with a statement which is in evidence in a stage of the judicial proceeding following on the investigation, so that the two can be said to be a series of acts on which an alternative charge can be framed under this section of intentionally giving false evidence under s. 193, I P C Held, by MACLEOD, C. J., PRATT FANCETT and SETALVAD, J (SHAH, J., dissenting), 18 B. 377 (F.B.) overruled 33 Bom. L. R. 1 (F.B.).

18. Accused should have an opportunity of explaining contradictory statements.—Where there is a trial on a charge of giving false evidence by reason of contradictory statements is of the first importance (1) that there should be clearest and most precise evidence of what the statements alleged to be contradictory really are, and (2) that accused should have every possible opportunity of explaining the statements in question and of showing that the alleged contradiction does not really exist. Where the accused had not such opportunity, the High Court ordered a re-trial, Per STRACHEY, C J., 1899 A. W. N. 39. Extreme care has to be taken that the accused person really understands the nature of the case against him and the circumstances which he is asked to explain. Per KNOX, J., ibid Every presumption in favour of the possible reconciliation of the statements must be made, 10 B. 126; 7 A. 463 C. W. N. 81. See Notes 130-132 to s 195

19. The two contradictory statements might have been in the course of the same deposition.—The fully satisfied that the statements are from every point of view irreconcilable and it is the duty of the Court to see whether the statements can be reconciled or not. Per CHANDAVARKAR J 28 B 533

20. Charge in alternative of two different offences under two different sections of the Penal Code is bad in law.—The accused was charged in the alternative, by the trying Magistrate as follows —

"I, W W DREW, Magistrate of the first class hereby charge you Ramji Sajabarao as follows — That you on or about the 13th day of October 1882 at Nandarpada stated that you had seen Vishnu Vaman and Mahadu Lakshman carrying teakwood from Gohe Forest to Narayan Ramachandra, Range Forest Officer, and on 14th February, 1885 you stated on oath before the first-class Magistrate at Pen, at the trial of these persons, that you did not see where they had brought the wood from, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s 182 or s 193 of the I P C, and within my cognizance, and I hereby direct that you Ramji Sajabarao, be tried by the said Court on the said charge

At the trial the accused asserted the truth of the former of these two statements and denied having made the other. The Magistrate was unable to find which of them was false, and convicted the accused, in the alternative either under s 182 or s. 193 of the I P C Held, that the charge was bad in law, being an alternative charge in a form forbidden by s 233 which directs that, for every distinct offence of which any person is charged, there shall be a separate charge. Nor could the accused be tried upon a charge framed in the alternative as in the Form XXVIII, Sch. V of the Code. For, upon the facts alleged, there was no way of charging him with one distinct offence on the ground of self-contradiction. He could not successfully be charged under s 193 I P C., on contradictory statements, because he only made one deposition in which there were no discrepancies, and, similarly, he could not be charged under s 182 of the I P C., for he only once gave information to a public servant. Held, also, that having regard to ss 225, 232 and 537 of the Code, the accused, convicted upon a such a charge, must be held to have been misled in his defence, and his conviction and sentences were set aside 10 B. 124. See 15 B 491 and 14 A. 502.

237. (1) If in the case mentioned in section 236, the accused is charged with one offence, and it appears in evidence that he committed a different offence for which he might have been charged under the provisions of that section he may be convicted of the offence which he is shown to have committed although he was not charged with it

When a person is charged with one offence he can be convicted of another

Note—Sub-section (2) of this section has been omitted by Act XVIII of 1923 But it is re-enacted as sub-section (2A) to s 238

Illustration

A is charged with theft. It appears that he committed the offence of criminal breach of trust or that of receiving stolen goods. He may be convicted of criminal breach of trust or of receiving stolen goods (as the case may be) though he was not charged with such offence. (See 17 M L J 219 = 5 Cr L J 479).

Note—1 The effect of the removal of sub-sec. (2) from this section—section 403 (1) refers to s 236 does no longer apply For this see Note

2 Can a person be convicted of the abetment of an offence when charged with the principal offence only?—Ordinarily the facts required to prove the abetment would not be included in the facts constituting the principal offence. The abetment would precede the commission of the principal offence itself where it consists of the abettor being a party to a conspiracy in or investigating the principal offence or help in the commission of it. Therefore when the charge is of the principal offence only it cannot be said that he has to meet facts which occurred before the principal offence. West J in 11 Bom H C R. 240 held that it is not open to a Court to find a man guilty of the abetment of offence on a charge of that offence itself. When a man is accused of murder he may not be conscious that he will have to meet an imputation of collateral circumstances constituting an abetment of it which may be quite distinct from the circumstances constituting the murder itself. A charge of the offence simply as such gives no intimation of a trial to be held for the abetment. In 33 M 264 the Court held that when a person has been charged with a certain offence (ss 467 and 468 I P C.) and has been convicted of that offence the Appellate Court cannot on finding the conviction is not sustainable convict the accused of the abetment of that offence. See also 13 Cr L J, 203 (M). In 23 M L J 723 = 13 Cr L J 453 SUNDARA IYER J after referring to the above cases stated as follows— I do not think that 23 M 264 intended to lay down a universal rule that in no case can a conviction for abetment be possible where the charge was only of the principal offence. The question is what the facts charged were. If on those facts two charges could be framed namely the commission of the principal offence and the abetment thereof by virtue of provisions of s 237 the accused may be convicted of the offence of the abetment though it was not separately charged against him. The Code lays down no specific provision with respect to the question decided here but the principle is laid down in ss 236 and 237. Applying that principle I come to the conclusion that in this case the accused may be convicted of the abetment of criminal breach of trust. In 16 Cr L J 676 (Burma) the Full Bench was of opinion that it would not in all cases be illegal to convict a person of the abetment of an offence when the charge is for the offence itself. In that case the verdict of a jury convicting a person of the abetment of robbery on a charge of dacoity was upheld. See also 25 Cr L J 207 where a conviction under s 467/114 was held to be improper and the conviction was changed to s 467/109 I P C.

3. Conviction for substantive offence when charged with abetment only—Four persons were charged under ss 232 and 233 I P C for coming false rupees not for the purpose of making gain by passing them off on the public as good rupees but for the purpose of getting them secretly into the house of the corner's house enemies against whom they were making a charge of theft to the Police accompanied by a request for search and the accused were convicted under ss 235 and 196/107 I P C. The High Court while acquitting the accused under s 235 I P C, altered the conviction under s 196/107 I P C to one under 195 I P C. The course was justified under this section. There can be no doubt that the accused might have been charged under s 195 on strength of s 236 for the whole story of the plot to fabricate false evidence which plot I have found proved was detailed in the case for possession and formed an integral part of that case. The accused were aware that this was a part of the case against them all through and through and they have suffered no prejudice. 43 P L R. 1912 = 17 P W R. 1912 = 13 Cr L J 252

4. Conviction for offence not charged is legal, if the facts which accused would have to meet on such an offence, be the same as on the offence charged.—(i) Breach of trust and cheating.—Where a person was charged with (1) attempting to commit criminal breach of trust, (2) framing as a public servant an incorrect document to cause an injury, (3) framing as such public servant an incorrect document to save a person from punishment, and was acquitted on the ground that he was not a public servant though the Judge found that he had framed the document with a fraudulent intent, held, that he ought to have been convicted of attempting to cheat, as the facts he would have had to meet on that charge were the same as he had to meet on the charge of criminal breach of trust 12 B. H. C. R. 1. See also 8 B. 200 and 17 B. 369. (ii) Receiving stolen property and theft. A person charged and tried under s. 441 I. P. C., may without altering the charge be convicted of an offence under s. 379, I. P. C., though the proper course would be to alter the charge under s. 227, 1883 A. W. N. 116. See also 17 M. L. J. 219 = 3 Cr. L. J. 479. (iii) Charges under s. 124 A, conviction under s. 153-A, I. P. C.—An accused tried and charged with an offence under s. 127 A in respect of an article in a newspaper may be convicted under s. 153 A in respect of the same article even though not charged with it 38 B. 77 and see also 33 B. 221. See the same cases noted under s. 234.

5. Operation of section limited to cognate offences.—Where charges are not ejusdem generis, i.e., of the same nature, a Magistrate should not amend them at the last stage of the inquiry. The powers given by ss. 236 and 237, do not justify such amendment so as to prejudice the case for the prosecution. PER RANADE, J., 19 B. 51 at p. 71. (i) Murder and theft.—This section and s. 236 refer to cognate offences, but do not relate to offences of so distinct a character as murder and theft. Where, therefore, a person charged with murder, was acquitted of that offence, but convicted of theft with reference to the provisions of this section, held the conviction was altogether unwarranted, 1883 A. W. N. 95.—(ii) Rape and Kidnapping. A person charged with rape cannot be convicted of kidnapping, 8 Bom. L. R. 120 = 3 Cr. L. J. 240. (iii) St. 193 and 211, I. P. C.—Unconnected offences.—A person charged with dacoity, cannot be convicted of dishonestly receiving stolen property (s. 412, I. P. C.) which had not been shown to be a part of the property taken in the dacoity, Ratanlal 34. See 95 P. L. R. 1904, 5 C. 871; 8 B. 200; 22 C. 1006. In the trial on a charge of abetment of forgery under s. 467 I. P. C. read with s. 109 I. P. C., the accused cannot be convicted of using a forged document under s. 471, I. P. C., ss. 236 and 237 of the Code do not warrant such a conviction, the offence of abetment of forgery is complete when the document is written and signed but the user is a distinct and separate offence, 30 C. W. N. 432.

6. Where offences are distinct, trial should be separate.—(i) Two sets of accused.—Two acts of abduction, separate and distinct, on one and the same girl were alleged to have been committed by two sets of persons of different dates. There were also charges against members of both the sets of having concealed the kidnapped girl and the charges were all tried together. The jury returned a verdict of 'not guilty' against one person and they found the others to have abducted the girl from the guardianship of her parents and that it was not proved that the girl was below 16 years in age. Held that the trial of these distinct offences by separate sets of persons was illegal and must be set aside and the re-trial of each of the offence with which the accused were charged was ordered 1 C. L. J. 455 = 2 Cr. L. J. 393. See also 23 C. 104. (ii) Distinct offences against two persons.—Where the accused was charged with assaulting a public servant, s. 112, a Police constable, and in the trial a witness deposed he was assaulted by the accused and the accused was found not guilty of having assaulted the constable, he cannot be convicted of having assaulted the witness without any complaint by the witness. Section 190 (c) does not authorise the Magistrate to convict him or such an offence, as in that case further proceedings must be taken under s. 191 before conviction, 6 C. W. N. 203.

7. Charge under s. 323 read with s. 149, I. P. C.—Conviction under s. 323, I. P. C.—A person charged for offences under s. 147 and for offences ss. 304, 325 and 323 read with s. 149 I. P. C., cannot in the event of the charge not being made out, be convicted of an offence under s. 323, I. P. C., 34 C. 698, 6 C. W. N. 98, 17 C. W. N. 63; 16 C. W. N. 1077 = 13 Cr. L. J. 502. In 15 C. W. N. 244, a conviction was upheld on the ground that in the circumstances of that case the offence under s. 326 was included in the constructive offence under s. 326/149 and see Note 10 to s. 238. See Note 2 to s. 232 and Notes 5 and 6 to s. 227 and also 41 C. 682.

8. Charge under s. 141, I. P. C.—Conviction for common object different from that set out in the charge.—See 36 C. 555, 6 M. L. T. 17 = 11 Cr. L. J. 30; 40 C. 168; Note 1 under s. 225 and Note 13 under s. 239.

9. In a case tried with assessors their opinion must be obtained in respect of the offence not charged.—It is very doubtful if this section applies to a case in which the true nature of the offence is not open to reasonable doubt, Weir II, 301. In this case it was further ruled that a person cannot be convicted of an offence with which he has not been charged, but which the evidence shows he has committed in a case tried with the aid of assessors, when the opinion of the assessors has not been taken with regard to such offence. But see Notes to s. 236.

10. Effect of ss. 237 and 238 on powers of Appellate Court.—The powers of the Appellate Court under s. 423 (a) are not qualified by ss. 237 and 238. The finding which an Appellate Court may alter under s. 423 (b) may relate either to an offence with which the accused was separately charged in the Lower Court or to one of which he might be convicted without a distinct charge. In cases not falling under ss. 237 and 238 no doubt the Appellate Court cannot convict a person of an offence which he was not charged in the first Court but where he has been charged and the first Court has recorded a finding on the charge there is no reason for holding that the Appellate Court cannot alter the finding because the offence of which he was acquitted by the Lower Court was not an offence which did not fall under ss. 237 and 238, 23 Cal 975; 27 C. 172 followed, 21 M. L. J. 805 = (1911) 2 M. W. N. 106 = 10 M. L. T. 66 = 12 Cr. L. J. 269. See s. 423. Where the prosecution has established the necessary facts the Appellate Court may alter charge or finding, without directing a new trial provided the accused be not prejudiced, 25 B. 863. In 41 C. 337, the High Court on revision quashed the conviction under ss. 46 and 52 of the Bengal Excise Act and convicted the accused under s. 61 of the same with which he was not charged, holding that was a case to which ss. 236 and 237 applied. See also 33 M. 264; 18 C. W. N. 1276 = 15 Cr. L. J. 704.

238. (1) When a person is charged with an offence consisting of several particulars, a combination of some only of which constitutes a complete minor offence, and
 When offence proved included in offence charged such combination is proved, but the remaining particulars are not proved, he may be convicted of the minor offence, though he was not charged with it.

(2) When a person is charged with an offence and facts are proved which reduce it to a minor offence, he may be convicted of the minor offence, although he is not charged with it.

* (2A) When a person is charged with an offence, he may be convicted of an attempt to commit such offence although the attempt is not separately charged.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise a conviction of any offence referred to in section 198 or section 199 when no complaint has been made as required by that section.

Illustrations

(a) A is charged under s. 487 of the Indian Penal Code, with criminal breach of trust in respect of property entrusted to him as a carrier. It appears that he did commit criminal breach of trust under s. 406 in respect of the property, but that it was not entrusted to him as a carrier. He may be convicted of criminal breach of trust under s. 406.

(b) A is charged, under s. 325 of the Indian Penal Code, with causing grievous hurt. He proves that he acted on grave and sudden provocation. He may be convicted under s. 335 of that Code.

Notes.—1. Scope of the section.—This section applies to cases in which the charge is of an offence which consists of several particulars, a combination of some only of which constitutes a complete minor offence. The graver charge in such a case gives to the accused notice of all the circumstances going to constitute the minor one of which he may be convicted. The latter is arrived by mere subtraction from the former. But when this is not the case, when the circumstances embodied in the major charge do not necessarily and according to the definition of the offence imputed by that charge constitute the minor offence also the principle no longer applies, because notice of the former does not necessarily involve notice of all that constitutes the latter. The section is not intended to apply to a collateral offence. It is not open to a Court to find a man guilty of the abetment of an offence on a charge of the offence itself, 11 Bom. H. G. R. 240. Though an accused may be charged in the alternative with either of two offences under s. 236 or may be convicted under s. 237 of the second offence when charged with the other, the two sections must be read along with s. 238, 911 U. B. R. 98 = 15 Cr. L. J. 429. But this is merely an enabling section. Its provisions are not imperative and therefore where the accused was charged and convicted under s. 454, I P C., the conviction was held good, though the facts disclosed also an offence under s. 380, I P C., and the accused should have been tried for charges under both the sections, Ratanlal 307, 25 Bom. L. R. 323. But see 3 Rang 11 (contra).

Note.—1 A. The effect of the insertion of sub-sec. (2) (A) relating to the charge of an attempt.—For this see Note 32 A to s. 403 and 43 M. 774.

2. "Minor offence"—These words are not defined by law. They are to be taken not in any technical sense but in their ordinary sense. Therefore, where the accused was charged under ss. 366 and 378, I P C., held that he could be convicted under s. 385, I P C., 22 C. 1006. On a charge under s. 457, I P C., a man may be convicted of an offence under s. 456, I P C., 20 C. W. N. 1075.

3. Conviction for major offence not allowed on a charge of minor offence—There is no provision of law which allows a conviction of a major offence on a charge of minor offence, 1 Bom. L. R. 813

4. Offences not falling within the scope of the section —

(i) House-breaking by night and theft in a dwelling house are not included in the offence of robbery or ss. 397, I P C.—The accused were charged with and tried by the Sessions Court under s. 397, I P C. for committing robbery and using a deadly weapon (sword) at the time of committing and the jury returned a verdict of not guilty of the offence charged, but found No 1 guilty of house-breaking by night and theft in a dwelling house, and No 2 guilty of abetting those offences. Held, that the verdict was bad and should be reversed, as the accused were not charged with those offences, and that as all the particulars constituting the minor offences were not included within that under s. 397, I P C., or within the definition of robbery, the accused could not be convicted under this section, Ratanlal 211. But see 1 B. 60.

(ii) Murder and Kidnapping—Where the accused was charged with murder, but the evidence established the offence of kidnapping from lawful guardianship with which he was, however, not charged, held that the latter offence was not a minor offence within the meaning of this section of which he could be convicted Welz II, 302

(iii) Criminal trespass and dacoity or riot—The offence of criminal trespass is no part of the offence of dacoity or riot and therefore without a specific charge of that offence a person under trial for dacoity and riot cannot be properly convicted of criminal trespass, 23 W. R. 39. See also 18 Cr. L. J. 860.

(iv) Extortion and theft—It is wholly illegal to convict and punish a man for a grave offence as extortion, s. 384, I P C., involving many totally different ingredients on a charge of theft under s. 379, I P C., only 13 Cr. L. J. 597 (G).

(v) Sections 201 and 202, I P C—Where a person charged under s. 201, I P C., for giving false information as to the cause of a death was acquitted of that charge, but was convicted of an offence under s. 202, I P C., without a charge being framed, held that an offence under s. 202, I P C., could not be treated as a minor offence included in the offence under s. 201, I P C., as the essential ingredient of the offence under s. 202 is the legal duty of the accused to give information and this is no part of the offence under ss. 201 and 228 of this Code does not apply and the conviction is bad 5 B. L. R. 123 = 13 Cr. L. J. 18

(vi) Sections 392 and 458 I P C—Where a person has been charged under s. 392 I P C., he cannot be convicted of the offence under s. 458 I P C. 1911 U. B. R. I 98 = 13 Cr. L. J. 429. See also 1 L. B. R. 47,

(vii) Rape and adultery—An offence under s. 498 is not a minor offence or offences under ss. 363 and 366, I P C., and therefore even the formal addition of a fresh charge under s. 498, at a late stage of the trial, is opposed to the spirit of this section, when the trial has commenced on charges under s. 366 only, 31 B. 218. See also 20 A. 166. A person charged with rape committed on a married woman cannot be alternatively charged with committing adultery with the same woman and on the same facts, 5 A. 233 followed in 27 M. 61. See 29 G. 415.

(viii) Ss. 376 and 366 I P C—It is not competent for a Judge in appeal to alter a conviction under s. 376 into one under s. 366, because a charge under the latter section would involve very different elements and different questions of fact from a charge under s. 376, I P C., 8 Bom. L. R. 120 = 3 Cr. L. J. 240.

(ix) Sections 211 and 182, I P C—Can a Magistrate convict a person under s. 211, I P C., when he is only charged with an offence under s. 182, I P C.? FAWCETT, J.C., referring to 5 C. 184 and 32 G. 180; held that an offence under s. 211 includes an offence under s. 182, I P C., while COUCH, A.J.C., stated that he was not prepared to accept that as a general rule of universal application, 8 B. L. R. 179 = 15 Cr. L. J. 206. See also Note 8 to s. 236

(x) Sections 147 and 447 I P C—A person who is charged for rioting under s. 147, I P C., with common object of taking forcible possession of his neighbour's land and of assaulting him cannot be con- of criminal trespass under s. 447 without a charge being framed, as it is not a minor offence within the of subsec. (2). If the common object was to commit criminal trespass, then a conviction under s. 18 C. W. N. 992 = 15 Cr. L. J. 183. See Note 7 to s. 237 and Note 10

5. When offence is composite, the accused may be convicted on any element of it.—The accused was charged and convicted under s. 457, I P. C. On appeal the Appellate Court altered the conviction to one under s. 414, I P. C. Held, that the offence under s. 417 being composite, the Appellate Court could record a new finding and sentence on any element of the composite offence, Ratanlal 293. A person charged under ss. 304 and 325, I P. C., may be convicted under s. 323 though not charged, 34 C. 325. So also dishonestly retaining of property in British India acquired by dacoity committed in a foreign State being included in the more comprehensive charge of dacoity the accused could be convicted under s. 412, I P. C., when the conviction for dacoity had to be set aside for want of jurisdiction, 1 B. 50. Where the offence of rioting is not proved the accused may be convicted of assault, 7 M. 454. Certain subjects of the Gaekwar who had committed a crime within British territory were extradited for trial before the Sessions Court on a charge of dacoity. They were acquitted of dacoity and the Sessions Judge was of opinion that the evidence proved the accused guilty of theft, but that he had no power to try or convict the accused on any charge but that mentioned in the extradition proceedings. Held, that the Judge's view of the law was wrong, and that this Code was applicable as lex fori and that he ought to have charged and convicted the accused of the minor offence which the evidence had established, 17 B. 369.

6. Conviction for adultery without complaint.—In sub-sec. (3) the word complaint means a complaint as defined in s. 4 (h), 30 C 910 (F.B.). It was held at one time that where the accused was charged by the husband of a woman under s. 366, I P. C., a conviction under s. 498, I P. C., may properly be had if the evidence be such as to justify a conviction for the minor offence and yet insufficient for a conviction for the graver offence, 20 C 483. But this case has been doubted in 22 C. 1006 and disapproved in 27 M. 61 following 5 A. 233. See Notes 2 and 3 to s. 199.

8 A. Conviction for minor offence for which complaint is necessary under s. 195 (1) (A), when such offence is included in the major offence charged.—Sub-sec. (3) of s. 233 mentions two cases of complaints under ss. 198 and 199 of the Criminal Procedure Code, in which a conviction for offences mentioned in those sections is illegal when the offence charged includes the offence for which conviction is made, but for which complaint is necessary under ss. 196 and 198, the specific mention of ss. 193 and 199 raises the question, whether section 238 authorises a conviction of minor offences, for which there ought to be a complaint on sanction under sections 195, 196 or 197 but for which no such sanction or complaint is given or made, and which are included in the offences charged for which no sanction or complaint is necessary. But now it is held, that the provisions of s. 193 of the Code cannot be evaded by the device of charging a person with an offence to which that section does not apply and then convicting him of an offence to which it does, upon the ground that such latter offence is a minor offence of the same character, 47 A. 114.

7. Charge under s. 149, I P. C., conviction for the common object.—See Note 7 to s. 237, and Notes 4 (1) and 10.

8. Competency of jury to return verdict on offence proved though not independently charged.—The accused were charged under s. 142, coupled with s. 325 of the I P. C., with, while being members of an unlawful assembly, committing grievous hurt. The jury disbelieved the evidence as to the unlawful assembly, but unanimously found two of the accused guilty of grievous hurt under s. 325. Held, that such verdict was legally sustainable although that offence did not form the subject of a separate charge. This section enables a verdict to be given on some of the facts which are a component part of the original charge, provided that those facts constitute a minor offence, 5 C. 871—6 C. L. R. 349. See also 20 B. 215 and 3 C. 169, where it was held that when the jury acquitted the prisoners on the charges framed, but found certain facts which amounted to another offence and omitted to convict the prisoners of that offence as provided by this section, the High Court could, on the case coming to it under s. 307, find the prisoners guilty of such offence. See, however, 12 C. W. N. 930—7 Cr. L. J. 362. There an accused person was charged with committing offences under ss. 304 and 326, I P. C., and tried before a jury and the latter found him not guilty under s. 304, but returned a verdict of guilty but not voluntarily under s. 326, and the Judge without asking the jury to explain the verdict discharged them and then convicted and sentenced the accused under s. 833 of the Penal Code. Held that the Judge was wrong in doing so, as the verdict amounted to one of not guilty. So also in 41 C. 662 it was held following 34 C. 698 and 18 C. W. N. 1077 that it was not open to a jury to convict under s. 326, I P. C., when the offence charged is under s. 325 with s. 149 I P. C. See Note 10 below and Notes to s. 301. 28 Bom. C. R. 610.

9 Power of jury to return verdict on minor offence not triable by jury.—Sub-sec. (1) of this section invests a jury empanelled to try an offence triable by a jury to find as an incident that the only facts proved amount to a minor offence and return a verdict of guilty or not guilty of such offence though such offence may not be triable by jury, Sessions Judges in such case should specially draw the attention of the jury to such power, 23 M. 213; see also 21 M. 15, 21 M. 661; 13 Cr. L. J. 739 (M.), 16 Cr. L. J. 676 (M.).

✓ 10. Conviction for minor offence where evidence insufficient to prove graver offence.—If the accused are charged under ss. 304 and 325, 1 P. C., they may be convicted under s. 323, 1 P. C., though no charge under that section has been drawn up against them 34 G. 325. But when they are charged under ss. 304 and 325 read with s. 149 1 P. C., in respect of an offence alleged to have been committed by another person and the commission of the riot is disbelieved they should not be convicted under s. 323 in respect of their individual acts with which they are not charged and which are not imputed to them in the Judge's charge to the jury, 34 G. 325. It is now settled law that when a person is charged by implication under s. 149, he cannot be convicted of the offence, 18 G. W. N. 1077 = 13 Cr. L. J. 502; 41 G. 662. See also 34 G. 698, 17 G. W. N. 63 where it was held following 6 G. W. N. 93 that under no reasonable construction of this section or ss. 236 and 237 could causing grievous hurt be regarded as minor to or included in a charge under s. 325/149, 1 P. C. See, however, 5 G. 871 and Note 7 to s. 237 and Note 4 (x). When an accused was tried on a charge under s. 304 1 P. C., he can be convicted of an offence under s. 304 A, 1 P. C. if the facts disclose that offence, 17 Bom. L. R. 217 and 26 Bom. L. R. 810, when an accused is tried under s. 302 1 P. C., he may be found guilty of an offence under s. 304 A, 1 P. C., if the evidence is justifying such a conviction, 29 G. W. N. 842.

What persons may be charged jointly 239. The following persons may be charged and tried together, namely —

(a) persons accused of the same offence committed in the course of the same transaction,
(b) persons accused of an offence and persons accused of abetment, or of an attempt to commit such offence,

(c) persons accused of more than one offence of the same kind within the meaning of section 234 committed by them jointly within the period of twelve months,

(d) persons accused of different offences committed in the course of the same transaction,

(e) persons accused¹ of an offence which includes theft, extortion or criminal misappropriation, and persons accused of receiving or retaining, or assisting in the disposal or concealment of, property possession of which is alleged to have been transferred by any such offence committed by the first named persons, or of abetment of or attempting to commit any such last named offence,

(f) persons accused of offences under sections 411 and 414 of the Indian Penal Code or either of those sections in respect of stolen property the possession of which has been transferred by one offence, and

(g) persons accused of any offence under Chapter XIII of the Indian Penal Code relating to counterfeit coin, and persons accused of any other offence under the said Chapter relating to the same coin or of abetment of or attempting to commit any such offence, and the provisions contained in the former part of this Chapter shall so far as may be, apply to all such charges.¹

Note.—S. 239 is thoroughly re-drafted. The actual changes made by the new amendment are the addition of clauses (c), (e), (f) and (g). Under the old Code, s. 234 applied only to the case of one accused person committing several offences of the same kind within a year, but where several persons committed several offences of the same kind such persons could not be tried jointly under the old law. Under the new section several dacoits jointly committing three dacoities on three different dates within a year and at separate places may be now charged and tried together under clause (c) of s. 239. So cases like 19 A. L. J. 786 holding to the contrary are, it is submitted, not good law now.

Note.—1 Same transaction. See Notes 3 and 6 under s. 235.

CONSTRUCTION OF SECTION.

2. Section 239 is merely an enabling section.—Section 239 is merely an enabling section and does not in any way trammel the discretion of the Court, 21 G. L. J. 195 = 19 G. W. N. 672 = 16 Cr. L. J. 3.

5 When offence is composite, the accused may be convicted on any element of it.—The accused was charged and convicted under s 457, I P C. On appeal the Appellate Court altered the conviction to one under s 414, I P C. Held, that the offence under s 417 being composite, the Appellate Court could record a new finding and sentence on any element of the composite offence, Ratanlal 293. A person charged under ss 304 and 325, I P C., may be convicted under s 323 though not charged, 34 C. 323. So also dishonestly retaining of property in British India acquired by dacoity committed in a foreign State being included in the more comprehensive charge of dacoity the accused could be convicted under s 412, I P C., when the conviction for dacoity had to be set aside for want of jurisdiction, 1 B. 50. Where the offence of rioting is not proved the accused may be convicted of assault, 7 M. 454. Certain subjects of the Gakwar who had committed a crime within British territory were extradited for trial before the Sessions Court on a charge of dacoity. They were acquitted of dacoity and the Sessions Judge was of opinion that the evidence proved the accused guilty of theft, but that he had no power to try or convict the accused on any charge but that mentioned in the extradition proceedings. Held, that the Judge's view of the law was wrong, and that this Code was applicable as lex fori and that he ought to have charged and convicted the accused of the minor offence which the evidence had established, 17 B. 369.

6. Conviction for adultery without complaint—In sub-sec. (3) the word complaint means a complaint as defined in s 4 (h), 30 C. 910 (F.B.). It was held at one time that where the accused was charged by the husband of a woman under s 496, I P C., a conviction under s 498, I P C., may properly be had if the evidence be such as to justify a conviction for the minor offence and yet insufficient for a conviction for the graver offence, 20 C. 483. But this case has been doubted in 22 C. 1006 and disapproved in 27 M. 51 following 5 A. 233. See Notes 2 and 3 to s 199.

6-A. Conviction for minor offence for which complaint is necessary under s. 195 (1) (A), when such offence is included in the major offence charged.—Sub-sec. (3) of s 233 mentions two cases of complaints under ss 198 and 199 of the Criminal Procedure Code, in which a conviction for offences mentioned in those sections is illegal when the offence charged includes the offence for which conviction is made, but for which complaint is necessary under ss 198

authorises a conviction

195, 196 or 197 but for offences charged for which no sanction or complaint is necessary. But now it is held, that the provisions of s 195 of the Code cannot be evaded by the device of charging a person with an offence to which that section does not apply and then convicting him of an offence to which it does, upon the ground that such latter offence is a minor offence of the same character, 47 A. 115.

7. Charge under s 149, I. P. C., conviction for the common object—See Note 7 to s 237, and Notes 4 (1) and 10

8. Competency of jury to return verdict on offence proved though not independently charged—The accused were charged under s 149, coupled with s 325 of the I P C., with, while being members of an unlawful assembly, committing grievous hurt. The jury disbelieved the evidence as to the unlawful assembly, yes

Held, that such verdict was legally large. This section enables a verdict on a charge, provided that those facts constitute a minor offence, 5 C. 871 = 6 C. L. R. 349. See also 20 B. 215 and 3 C. 169, where it was held that when the jury acquitted the prisoners on the charges framed, but found certain facts which amounted to another offence, and omitted to convict the prisoners of that offence as provided by this section, the High Court could, on the case coming to it under s 307, find the prisoners guilty of such offence. See, however, 12 C. W. N. 530 = 7 Cr. L. J. 352. There an accused person was charged with committing offences under ss 304 and 325 I P C., and tried before a jury and the latter found him not guilty under s 304, but returned a verdict of "guilty but not voluntarily" under s 325 and the Judge without asking the jury to explain the verdict discharged them and then convicted and sentenced the accused under s 833 of the Penal Code. Held, that the Judge was wrong in doing so as the verdict amounted to one of not guilty. So also in 41 C. 662 it was held following 34 C. 698 and 18 C. W. N. 1077 that it was not open to a jury to convict under s 325, I P C., when the offence charged is under s 325 with s 149, I P C. See Note 10 below and Notes to s 301. 28 Bom. C. R. 610.

9 Power of jury to return verdict on minor offence not triable by jury—Sub-sec (1) of this section invests a jury empowered to try an offence triable by a jury to find as an incident that the only facts proved amount to a minor offence and return a verdict of guilty or not guilty of such offence though such offence may not be triable by jury, Sessions Judges in such case should specially draw the attention of the jury to such power, 23 M. 213; see also 21 M. 15; 21 M. 611; 13 Cr. L. J. 739 (M.), 16 Cr. L. J. 876 (M.).

✓ 10. Conviction for minor offence where evidence insufficient to prove graver offence.—If the accused are charged under ss. 304 and 325, 1 P. C., they may be convicted under s. 323, 1 P. C., though no charge under that section has been drawn up against them 35 C. 325. But when they are charged under ss. 304 and 325 read with s. 149, 1 P. C., in respect of an offence alleged to have been committed by another person and the commission of the riot is disbelieved they should not be convicted under s. 323 in respect of their individual acts with which they are not charged and which are not imputed to them in the judge's charge to the jury, 34 C. 325. It is now settled law that when a person is charged by implication under s. 149, he cannot be convicted of the offence, 16 C. W. N. 1077 = 13 Cr. L. J. 502; 41 C. 662. See also 34 C. 698; 17 C. W. N. 63 where it was held following 6 C. W. N. 93 that under no reasonable construction of this section or ss. 236 and 237 could causing grievous hurt be regarded as minor to or included in a charge under s. 325/149, 1 P. C. See, however, 8 C. 871 and Note 7 to s. 237 and Note 4 (x). When an accused was tried on a charge under s. 304, 1 P. C., he can be convicted of an offence under s. 303 A, 1 P. C., if the facts disclose that offence, 17 Bom. L. R. 217 and 28 Bom. L. R. 810, when an accused is tried under s. 302, 1 P. C., he may be found guilty of an offence under s. 304 A, 1 P. C., if the evidence is justifying such conviction, 29 C. W. N. 862.

What persons may be charged jointly + 239. The following persons may be charged and tried together, namely —

(a) persons accused of the same offence committed in the course of the same transaction,
(b) persons accused of an offence and persons accused of abetment, or of an attempt to commit such offence,

(c) persons accused of more than one offence of the same kind within the meaning of section 234 committed by them jointly within the period of twelve months,

(d) persons accused of different offences committed in the course of the same transaction,

(e) persons accused¹ of an offence which includes theft, extortion or criminal misappropriation, and persons accused of receiving or retaining, or assisting in the disposal or concealment of, property possession of which is alleged to have been transferred by any such offence committed by the first named persons, or of abetment of or attempting to commit any such last named offence,

(f) persons accused of offences under sections 411 and 414 of the Indian Penal Code or either of those sections in respect of stolen property, the possession of which has been transferred by one offence, and

(g) persons accused of any offence under Chapter XII of the Indian Penal Code relating to counterfeit coin, and persons accused of any other offence under the said Chapter relating to the same coin or of abetment or attempting to commit any such offence, and the provisions contained in the former part of this Chapter shall, so far as may be, apply to all such charges."

Note.—S. 239 is thoroughly re-drafted. The actual changes made by the new amendment are the addition of clauses (c), (e), (f) and (g). Under the old Code, s. 234 applied only to the case of one accused person committing several offences of the same kind within a year, but where several persons committed several offences of the same kind such persons could not be tried jointly under the old law. Under the new section several dacoits jointly committing three dacoities on three different dates within a year and at separate places may be now charged and tried together under clause (c) of s. 239. In cases like 10 A. L. J. 790 holding to the contrary are, it is submitted, not good law now.

Note.—1. Same transaction. See Notes 3, 4 and 6 under s. 235

It is open to the Court even when the names of all the conspirators are known and are even mentioned in the charge to place the conspirators on their trial separately, the trial of some without the others is not vitiated, 43 C. 957, where reference is made to Russell on Crimes (1909) 149, 180 and other authorities. See Note 18 to s 233 and Note 2 to s 235

3. First two clauses are not mutually exclusive. Two accused may be jointly charged with the same offence and one with a different offences in the same transaction.—The opinion of Mr MAYNE in the Criminal Law, 2nd edn, p 941, that, "In order to enable several persons to be tried together under the second clause of s 239, it is necessary to show that they were engaged in the same transaction with such a common intention as would make each person liable for the acts of the other under s 34, I P. C." does not seem to be warranted by the section. See ill (b). The two clauses of s 239 are not mutually exclusive. If A induced B to cheat and B attempted to cheat in consequence, A and B may clearly be tried together for abetment of, and attempted to cheat respectively. If, in the course of the same transaction, A committed the separate offence of criminal breach of trust in furtherance of the conspiracy to cheat, A may clearly be charged with that offence at the same trial, 38 C. 453. See illustrations (b) and (c). Accused who was a ticket-collector in the East Indian Railway at Sheoraphuli was charged with criminal breach of trust under s. 408, I P. C., for having handed over used tickets to the second accused, who was his friend, and with abetment of cheating under s. 420 read with s. 109, I. P. C., for employing the second accused, to claim a refund on those tickets at Hanpal, the station where these tickets were issued, by representing that they were purchased in the morning and had not been used, and was tried jointly, with the second accused, who was charged with attempt at cheating under s. 420, I P. C., read with s. 311. It was contended that there had been misjoinder of charges, held, that the transaction was clearly one and fell within the purview of s 239, 38 C. 453. See also 42 C. 957; 19 C. W. N. 121. Although s. 239 is the only section which refers to the joinder of two accused in one trial, yet even in that case charges against each accused may be combined under the proceeding sections subject only to the condition imposed by s 239, that the offences charged arise out of the same transaction or that the one offence was the attempt to commit or abetment of the other.—Per PRATT, J.—Two accused could be tried together when charges in the alternative were combined against one of them, provided the offences occurred in the same transaction as the offence charged against the other accused, 1 B. L. R. 73 = 8 Cr. L. J. 11; 19 C. W. N. 121. See 46 A. 54.

5. What provisions in the former part of this Chapter apply to this section.—Does s. 234 apply.—See Note 2 to s 234. This section does not apply to a charge against several persons accused of several offences, unless the acts constituting these offences form the same transaction in respect of all these persons, 33 C. 292. Here the events of two different dates were not parts of the same transaction and that the trial was bad for misjoinder, 33 C. 292. Section 234 does not apply when more persons than one are tried jointly under s 239, 168 P. L. R. 1918 = 37 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 266, 123 P. L. R. 1911 = 28 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 208; 7 L. B. R. 272 = 15 Cr. L. J. 44. See also 33 C. 1746. In such cases the Magistrate must decide whether he will make use of s 234 or s. 239, but for that would necessarily express any opinion to enable more persons than one to be charged and tried together for more offences than one, the offences must all form part of the same transaction. S 233 lays down the general rule. Ss 234 to 238 apply to cases where one person may be dealt with at one trial for more than one offence. S 239 applies to the trial of more persons than one jointly. The last words of s 239, viz., and the provisions contained in the former part of the Chapter, etc., do not mean that ss 239 and 234 are to be read together. They only refer to the part headed "Form of charges" ss. 221 to 232 inclusive, 7 L. B. R. 272 = 15 Cr. L. J. 44. Contra, s. 239 has this limitation attached to it that the provisions contained in the former part of this Chapter apply to all charges falling under s 239. Thus s 239 is in turn governed by s 234 and s 235, 11 A. L. J. 155 = 14 Cr. L. J. 118. But under the present amendment it appears that sections 234, 235 and 239 must be read together, that is to say, the operation of the provisions of sections is governed in turn by the other. This is apparent from the enumeration of the different cases under which persons may be charged and tried together, being given in subsecs (a) to (g) to s 239 by the Legislature. See 11 A. L. J. 155.

8. For persons to be jointly tried, the association need not be continuous from start to finish.—In 29 B. 449 and 30 B. 49, PRATT, J. laid down that the accused should have been jointly associated in the series of acts constituting the transaction from first to last but there is no warrant for this limitation in s 239. See 1 B. L. R.

73 = 8 Cr. L. J. 91; 33 M. 502 and 10 M. L. T. 23 = (1911) 2 M. W. N. 189 = 12 Cr. L. J. 268. Where the first accused seized a woman with the intention of forcibly having sexual intercourse with her and was attacked by her husband and the second and third accused thereupon appeared and assaulted the husband, held that in the absence of proof that the three accused were acting for a common purpose in execution of a common design, a joint trial in which the first accused was charged under s. 354 of the Penal Code and the second and third accused under s. 323 was illegal. 5 Pat. L. J. 11.

In 23 A. L. J. 5 where several people were tried together for committing different offences all committed on their own account it was held that they could not be tried jointly. Further held that the accused not having acted in the course of the same transaction (because having no intention in common) could not be tried jointly.

6. The words 'accused for the same offence' imply that all accused should have acted in concert.—The words imply that all the accused should have acted in concert or association. They do not apply to a case in which the allegations against the accused are mutually exclusive. Where two accused were tried together on a charge of having caused grievous hurt to a person and the allegation was that either one or the other committed the crime, and the Magistrate discharged one of the two accused and convicted the other, held that the joint trial was bad. The two men should have been separately tried, 7 L. B. R. 68 = 6 Bur. L. T. 191 = 14 Cr. L. J. 563. See Note 30.

APPLICATION OF SECTION.

7. Section does not apply to preliminary inquiries.—This section does not deal with joint inquiries. There can be no objection to proceedings prior to commitment being joint, 7 Bom. L. R. 457. Ss 239 to 239 of the Code apply to the trial of the accused and not to preliminary inquiries and commitment. The Sessions Court is competent to try separately prisoners who have been committed together as if there had been two or more commitments, 26 M. 592; Ratanlal 915; 11 W. R. 16; (1900) A. W. N. 206. See Note 22 to s. 233, see 42 M. 561.

8. Section has been applied to security proceedings—Chap. VIII.—The provisions of this section are applicable to cases under s. 107, 9 A. 452; 8 C. W. N. 160. Where more persons than one are called upon to show cause why they should not execute bonds for good behaviour each person arraigned should be tried separately, Ratanlal 585; 14 C. 358. Where two persons were brought before a first-class Magistrate under s. 109 and they were tried together and discharged under s. 119, held, that the said two persons should not have been tried together, Ratanlal 558. See Notes at p. 171, under Heading VI.

9. Section does not apply to trial of cross-cases.—But where two cross noting cases were instituted before the same Magistrate and tried, almost simultaneously, a few witnesses in each case being examined every day, held the trial was not bad, 31 C. L. R. 275; 8 C. W. N. 344, where 25 M. 61 (P.C.) is distinguished. See also 6 C. 68; 1881 A. W. N. 23; 12 C. W. N. 153; 9 A. 432—437.

9-A. Trial with the aid of assessors of an offence triable with the aid of assessors—Accused found guilty of a minor offence triable by jury—Conviction for minor offence valid.—On the trial of an accused by a Sessions Judge with the aid of assessors for an offence so triable, it is competent to the Judge to convict the accused of a minor offence, though the minor offence is triable only by a jury, 45 B. 619 = 22 Bom. L. R. 1241.

EFFECT OF MISJOINDER.

10. Misjoinder renders the trial illegal.—The joint trial of several accused renders the trial invalid except in the cases falling under s. 239, 4 N. L. R. 71 = 8 Cr. L. J. 11. A trial which takes place in defiance of the express provisions of s. 239 must be held to be a void trial, 15 Cr. L. J. 420 (O). The disregard of a plain direction cast by law cannot be condoned with reference to s. 537, 28 M. L. J. 381 = 16 Cr. L. J. 298. See also 25 M. 21 (P.C.) and Notes under s. 233. There can be no waiver, 6 C. 95; 4 Bom. L. R. 53; 26 M. 125. See also 21 Cr. W. N. 65 = 7 M. L. T. 299 = 11 Cr. L. J. 258; 11 A. L. J. 185 = 4 Cr. L. J. 116.

12. The trial to be separate not only in form but in substance.—Where four persons were charged with having given false evidence in the same proceeding and the Sessions Judge while proceeding to try them accused separately, heard the witnesses only once, held, that this was substantially a joint trial.

together, and was an improper mode of procedure, 10 C. 405; 15 B. 491; 3 M. H. C. R. Appx. XXXII; Weir II, 304; Ratanlal 31. See 29 M. L. J. 101 = 18 M. L. T. 95 = 16 Cr. L. J. 593 (F.R.) and Note 20 to s 233

CASES WHERE JOINT TRIAL HELD VALID.

13 Joint trial of persons taking part in a riot with different common objects.—In a case of riot, one set of accused were charged under ss. 141 and 142, I P C, for taking part in the riot with the common object of setting fire to public buildings and another accused was charged with being member of the unlawful assembly with the common object of closing by force a college and all the accused were jointly tried and convicted. It was contended that the trial was illegal on account of misjoinder and as there was a difference in the common object the transaction was not the same, held by BENSON and MUNRO, JJ that the proceedings of the mob consisting of several minor transactions from first to last showed such continuity of purpose and of action, and were united in such proximity in time as to form one transaction within the meaning of ss 234 and 239 of the Code so as to render all the noters liable to be tried at the same trial for the acts done by each of them SANKARAN NAIR, J Contra—That the closing of the college and setting fire to public buildings were different common objects and did not form the same transaction and the conviction should be quashed, 6 M. L. T. 17 = 11 Cr. L. J. 30 and see also 1883 A. W. N. 28.

14 Joint trial of principal and agent—principal and abettor.—S 239 clearly allows an agent to be tried in the same trial as the principal. A licensed vendor who is punishable by implication under s 56 of the Bengal Excise Act 1909 may be tried together with his agent who commits the offence. The case is one of abetment by implication, 13 C. L. J. 592 = 13 Cr. L. J. 255. Where a person who had a license for the sale of opium allowed another who had no license to sell the drug, their joint trial and conviction under s 9 of the Opium Act was held good, the transaction in respect of which the accused were convicted being the same, 113 P. L. R. 1906 = 4 Cr. L. J. 178.

15. Paying bribe through another.—Where an illegal gratification was given to accused No 2 and accepted by accused No 1 and they were charged under ss 162 and 161, I P C, respectively, held the joint trial was good as the offences formed part of the same transaction, 7 Bom. L. R. 637.

16. Joint trial of the keeper of a gaming-house and a player therein.—The offences of the keeper of a gaming house and a player therein arise out of facts so inseparably connected together as to form a single transaction and, therefore, the housekeeper who commits one offence in that transaction and his customer who commits another are clearly within the purview of s 239 and may be jointly tried, 9 N. L. R. 68 = 14 Cr. L. J. 293 where 5 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 211 was dissented from Contra—The keeping of a gaming house and being present in it at the time of a Police raid cannot be said to form part of the same transaction. The joint trial of a person or keeping a gambling house under s 3 of the Gaming Act, 1867, with others under s 4 for frequenting it is illegal 35 P. R. 1914 = 16 Cr. L. J. 220; 5 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 211.

17. Joint trial of thief and receiver of stolen property.—Where two persons are charged, the one with theft and the other with receiving the stolen property knowing it to be stolen, they may be tried together under this section, 6 C. L. R. 245; 6 Bom. L. R. 361. Twenty-five persons were charged with dacoity—s 395, I P C, and two more for abetting the same, s 395/109, and there were further alternative charges under ss 411 and 412, I P C, against three of the accused for having dishonestly retained articles stolen in the dacoity and all the 27 were jointly tried and convicted, held, that the fact that three of the accused were also charged under ss 411 and 412 on the strength of an incident which is part of the evidence against them on the charge under s 395 could not vitiate the trial 11 C. L. J. 182 = 11 Cr. L. J. 244. Similarly, the joint trial of a person who commits a criminal breach of trust and of the persons who the proceeds of the breach of trust, is good. The receiver's knowledge through the tainted channel of theft or criminal breach of trust so as to make him a particeps criminis and that connection is sufficient to constitute both the theft or criminal breach of trust and the receipt one transaction whether the two acts take place simultaneously or not 6 Bom. L. R. 517, which is followed in 29 B. 449. Ordinarily theft and the disposal of the proceeds would be parts of the same transaction, and is proximity of time between two acts does not necessarily constitute them parts of the same transaction an appreciable interval of time between the two acts, otherwise connected, does not prevent them from continuing to be parts of the same series of connected events, and hence it is not necessary to show that the theft and disposal occurred within a few hours or even a few days of each other 1907 U. B. R. 5 = 14 Bur. L. R. 38 = 6 Cr. L. J. 29; 4 Bur. L. T. 263 = 13 Cr. L. J. 39. See also Note 37. It is stated in 35 A. 331 that the practice in that province is the same as prevails in Bombay, namely, that when practical the thief and the person who receives the stolen property are tried together and such trial does not contravene the provisions of s 239, 44 A. 276.

Contra—For joint trial, receipt should be immediately after theft. The offence of dishonestly receiving stolen property from a person who has stolen that property cannot be regarded as an offence committed in the same transaction as the theft itself unless it be in a case where simultaneously with the offence of theft the offence of receiving stolen property is committed 1 C. W. N 35; 28 C. 40; 29 M. L. J. 331 = 16 Cr. L. J. 298; 27 C. 839; 23 C. 7. Where five persons were jointly tried four of them on a charge of theft and the fifth for receiving stolen property the act of receipt not being simultaneous with the theft, held that the offences of stealing and receiving stolen property were not parts of the same transaction and that the joint trial was illegal 3 P. R. 1905 = 21 P. L. R. 1905 = 21 Cr. L. J. 37; 1914 M. W. N. 352 = 15 Cr. L. J. 256. See also the foot note under 3 P. R. 1905; 5 P. R. 1900; 7 P. R. 1903. See also 17 Cr. L. J. 477. But under the present amendment it will be seen that the receipt of stolen property and theft though not parts of the same transaction may be joined together in one trial under clause (e) of s 239. Therefore the above cases holding to the contrary have become obsolete.

18. Joint trial of disposer and receiver of stolen property.—The offences under ss 412 (criminally disposing of stolen articles) and 411, I P C., may be jointly tried, the offences forming part of the same transaction and having occurred at the same time and places, 6 Bom. L. R. 381. Thus where two persons were jointly tried and convicted under ss. 411 and 414, I P C., both of them being charged in respect of a currency note for Rs 500 and also each of them in respect of a different note for Rs. 100 held that though in respect of the note for Rs. 500, the accused might be tried together, the other charges in respect of the two notes for Rs. 100 each could not be tried together as the transactions were separate and distinct. The conviction was therefore annulled for misjoinder of parties and re-trial ordered 23 C. 104. See also 4 A. 147, 14 C. 395 and 15 B. 491. But now under cl. (f) of this section 23 C. 104 and 49 C. 565 are no longer good law.

For the joint trial of persons charged with dacoity and persons charged with the receipt of property stolen in the dacoity. See 45 A. 223.

19. Joint trial for possession and delivery of counterfeit coin.—C who was in possession of 104 counterfeit coins, delivered 50 of them to P to pass off for him. At one trial C was tried under s 240, I P C., and s 235, s. 243, I P C., held, that the joint trial was perfectly valid under this section read with sub-sec (1) of s 235, supra inasmuch as P received the coins with the deliberate intention of fraudulently passing them off as genuine, 31 C. 1007. See cl (g) of s 239.

20. Murder and causing disappearance of evidence.—Accused 1 to 3 were charged under s. 302 for murder and accused 3 was further charged in the alternative under s. 201, I P C. for helping accused 1 and 2 in disposing of the corpses with the intention of screening the offenders, held the trial was not illegal for misjoinder of persons, 1 B. L. R. 73 = 8 Cr. L. J. 191.

21. Joint trial of persons habitually associated for the purpose of dacoity—s 400, I. P. C.—Fourteen persons were tried at one trial and convicted of an offence under s. 400 for having formed a gang for the purpose of habitually committing dacoity between 7th March, 1908 and 15th December 1909, four serious dacoities, having been committed at four different places and the accused it was alleged and proved took part in one or more of those dacoities, held that the joint trial of all the accused though not illegal, was improper, 68 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 280.

22. Joint trial in cases of conspiracies—See Note 7 to s 235

(i) Sections 121 A, 121 and 126, I P C.—Where about twenty accused were all alleged to have been members of a secret society, with its headquarters in Manicktolla in the suburbs and its places of meeting in Calcutta and elsewhere, and to have joined in the unlawful enterprise, and with others known and unknown to have conspired to wage war or to deprive the King of the sovereignty of British India and to have collected arms and ammunition with such intent and to have actually waged war. Held that joint trial of the accused on charges under ss. 121, 121 A, 122 and 123 I P C., was not bad for misjoinder of persons or charges 27 C. 467; 16 C. W. N 1105 = 15 C. L. J. 517 = 13 Cr. L. J. 609; 11 P. W. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 354.

(ii) It is legal to try together charges of conspiracy and offences committed in carrying out the objects of the conspiracy. The transaction is not completed as soon as the offence is committed. It is clear that so long as the conspiracy continued, the transaction which began with the forming of the common intention continued and the offences committed in the course of the same transaction, 16 Cr. L. J. 19 = 19 C. W. N 706 = 21 C. L. J. 201.

(iii) But it should be observed that if a conspiracy is entered into in district A and acts are committed in pursuance of the conspiracy in district B, the Magistrate of district A can try the offence of conspiracy, but cannot try the accused in the same trial for offences committed outside his district. S 239 of the Code cannot give jurisdiction to a Magistrate who has no jurisdiction to try the offence under the provisions of Chapter XV of the Code, 23 C. W. N. 975.

(iv) See 16 A. 88.

(v) Perjury—See Notes 28 and 29

CASES WHERE JOINT TRIAL HELD ILLEGAL.

23. Fight between contending parties not one transaction—In case of a fight between two opposing parties, the law as contained in this section is that opposing parties cannot regularly be charged in one and the same trial, 20 C. 537. Where the members of opposing factions are charged with rioting each party must be tried separately, 6 C. 96 = 6 C. L. R. 521; 1881 A. W. N 28; 8 W. R. 47; 9 W. R. 33; 12 W. R. 75; 22 and 25 P. R. 1881; 5 P. R. 1906 = 4 Cr. L. J. 75. Where two parties are arraigned against each other in a riot, it cannot be said that the offence of rioting was committed by both the parties in the same transaction within the meaning of this section so as to justify a joint trial of the persons on both sides. The offence of rioting committed by each side, forms a separate transaction, 15 P. R. 1882, 5 P. R. 1906 = 4 Cr. L. J. 75; 14 C. 358.

24. Conversion of counter-cases of assault into a single case of affray.—Where complaints and cross-complaints of hurt or assault are instituted (the complainant in the one case being the accused in the other and vice versa) and after taking in each case the evidence in support of the prosecution, the Magistrate is of opinion that the accused have jointly committed an affray, he cannot convict them of that offence on the evidence so recorded. He may call upon them to show cause why they should not be convicted of affray, but should they deny the commission of the offence, then it must be proved in the regular way, and without reference to the evidence previously recorded.—C P Cr Cr., Part I, No 5

25. Defamation and publication thereof.—A, B and C passed certain resolutions defamatory of the complainant and published those resolutions and D transmitted the resolutions to a newspaper. All the four persons were tried together and convicted. But it was not shown that A, B, C instigated D to write the letter to the paper or that they had any common purpose nor was it shown that the offences were committed in one and the same transaction, Acid the trial was bad, 7 M. L. T. 127 = 11 Cr. L. J. 135.

25-A. Joint trial for offences under ss 500 and 501 of the I.P.C.—A joint trial of the author of a book under s 500, I P C, and of the printer is illegal when there is no evidence to show that there was conspiracy between them. 50 C. 139.

26. Distinct offences of contempt of Court—It is illegal to try conjointly in one trial several persons accused of distinct substantive offences of contempt of Court. Such procedure is obviously prejudicial to the accused, for they are precluded from calling each other as witnesses in support of their various and distinct pleas of not guilty. 1888 A. W. N. 23.

27. Joint trial for giving false information bad.—Where a Deputy Collector, acting under the Land Acquisition Acts, laid a charge against the lessor and lessees of certain lands that they had given false information in certain written statements, held that though the complaint was laid against the parties jointly, any offence committed by each is a distinct and separate offence and should be tried separately, 27 C. 883. But where a false charge of stealing goats was made by one accused on one day, and by the other accused on the following day and they were both convicted in a joint trial, the Madras High Court held that they were properly tried together as the offence, viz., a false charge that certain persons stole certain goats was the same, 27 M. 127.

23. Joint trial of several accused for perjury.—Where two persons are severally charged with giving against him or be the subject of a prosecution on that account, 7 B. L. R. Appx. LXVI — 16 W. R. 47. Not even the consent of the accused can, having regard to 25 M 81 (P.Q.), legalise such a joint trial: 4 Bom. L. R. 53. But where there was one sustained and continuous plot for a certain purpose, viz., of exposing an innocent man in a false charge and to secure this end various means had to be resorted to and one of such was two persons giving false evidence held they could be jointly tried, 14 Bom. L. R. 972 = 1 Bom. Cr. Ca. 216 = 13 Cr. L. J. 833.

29. Mere allegation of conspiracy will not validate joint trial for perjury.—Where the accused were convicted at one trial of giving false evidence in a case of dacoity on the ground that they had conspired to give such false evidence and they were neither charged with nor convicted of so conspiring, held that the joinder of accused was illegal, since the words the same transaction in this section cannot embrace the examination of all the witnesses throughout a trial but could apply only to the examination of each witness as such separately, 3 L. B. R. 231 = 4 Cr. L. J. 439, where 25 M. 593 and 1 L. B. R. 269 are referred to. Similarly, where two persons were jointly tried one on a charge under s 471, I P C, and the other for giving false evidence in the suit in which the forged document was used the trial was held bad for misjoinder of accused, 1883 A. W. N. 188. But where several persons jointly filed a written statement signed by all and one of them gave evidence in support thereof it was held the joint commitment of them all, the deponent under s. 193, I P C and the others under s. 193 207, I P C, was good, 1884 A. W. N. 52.

30. Joint trial of two accused not desirable when each tries to throw blame and responsibility upon the other.—Two persons A and B were jointly tried under s. 408, I P C, for criminal breach of trust and each tried to throw responsibility upon the other and charges were framed against both. The cross-examination on behalf of A was conducted first and then it was conducted on behalf of B, and on what was elicited at this latter examination B was acquitted without being called to enter upon his defence, and the statements so elicited in this latter cross-examination were used against A without his having had an opportunity of explaining them, or further cross-examining the same witness on those new points, held, that though it cannot be said that the accused were not properly tried in one case, still in the circumstances of the particular case A had been prejudiced at this trial held jointly with another, 3 C. W. N. 377. See Note 6. Such trials are not necessarily illegal, 188 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 266.

31. Sameness of charge cannot justify joint trial of several accused.—(i) Where fifteen persons were jointly tried and convicted of distinct offences of committing nuisance, held that the conviction was illegal as the accused must have been prejudiced in their defence, 5 M. 20; 33 C. 292.

(ii) Where there was no joint action on the part of the accused and each acted independently of the rest and made different defence, held, that the joinder of a number (viz., 64) of charges against 62 persons in one charge was a material irregularity which rendered necessary the setting aside of the conviction, Weir II, 803. But where the charges involve a conspiracy between the several accused, they may all be jointly tried 16 A. 89.

(iii) Where the complaint was that the coolies in a colliery had decamped with the tools supplied to them and they were all jointly tried under s 408 I P C held that the trial was bad, 13 C. W. N. 151. See also 13 C. W. N. 151.

31-A. Joint trial of persons with joinder of charges.—Where all the accused were charged in one count with the murder of seven persons, to support which there was no evidence against any of them, in two counts with the murder of two others, committed only by two of them, respectively, and in another count with mischief by fire caused by another accused only. Held even though ss 235 and 239 of the Code justify joinder it should not be resorted to if there is risk of embarrassment charges of murder of several persons and of arson must embarrass the accused in their defence and confuse the jury, 52 G. 253 = 29 C. W. N. 173.

32. Joint trial of an offender and those that rescue him from custody.—Where the offence of each of the accused is separate and there is no common offence in which all join, it is quite irregular to try all the accused together. A person charged with the offence of theft and another charged with rescuing him from lawful custody, cannot be tried together in one trial, 11 M. 461. To enable the Court in the same trial, to try wrongfully confining the complainant and rescuing the first accused from custody was held illegal, 12 C. W. N. 15. Where one of the accused caught in the act of theft was rescued by others while being taken to the thana by the complainant and some of the rescuers snatched away some clothes from the person of the complainant, and the Magistrate tried all the accused jointly, two of them on charges under ss 225 and 379, 1 P C, and two on a charge under s 379 1 P C, and two on a charge under s 225, 1 P C, held, that the trial was bad for misjoinder of charges and two trials were directed one for the original theft and the other for rescuing and theft committed in course of the rescuing, 13 C. W. N. 804 = 9 Cr. L. J. 147. It is illegal to try a person for grazing cattle in a reserved forest with others for rescuing the cattle soon after they were impounded ? M. L. T. 367 = 11 Cr. L. J. 293. See also 30 C. 822; 6 Bom. L. R. 725, 13 C. W. N. 1113. See also 19 C. L. J. 633 = 13 Cr. L. J. 472

33. If each offence is a completed act and there is no continuity, joint trial bad.—Where the appellant obtained in August certain currency notes by committing offences under ss 420, 471 and 408, 1 P C, and in January following he in conjunction with another tried to obtain goods in exchange for one of the notes and two were jointly tried, the appellant for the offence committed in August and his co-accused for the offences committed in January, held that the transactions of August and January did not form part of one and the same transaction, and therefore the joint trial was bad in law, though they ought to have been tried jointly for the offences committed in January 31 C. 1053. On the commitment of four persons on a charge of murder the Sessions Judge framed another charge against them of causing grievous hurt to one W, on the act that some time after the alleged murder, three of the accused tried to convey off the body of the victim and when W objected, caused grievous hurt to him. At the conclusion of the trial all of them were acquitted of murder, but three of them were convicted of causing grievous hurt to W held the whole trial was vitiated by misjoinder of charges, since the murder might have been committed by one set of men with one object, and the attempt to carry off the body might have been made and the grievous hurt caused therein by another set of men with a different object and the two offences were not such as must have been committed in the same transaction with the meaning of this section so as to be charged and tried at one trial 10 P. R. 1906 = 4 Cr. L. J. 285, where 30 B. 49 is referred to. Where two accused persons were jointly tried in respect of an offence committed on a particular day in which both were concerned and one was also charged at the same trial with another offence committed on another day with which his co-accused had no concern, the joint trial was held bad, 31 C. 1053. Similarly, where several accused persons were jointly tried for having on two separate dates, committed two offences of the same kind viz, looting linseed crops in one field and cotton crops in another, but not forming parts of the same transaction, the trial was held illegal 33 C. 292, joint trial of four accused for two offences of dacoity committed on two different dates and not forming part of same transaction is illegal 8 M. L. T. 288 = 11 Cr. L. J. 476, 13 C. W. N. 1067 = 10 Cr. L. J. 469. So also where each offence is a completed act in itself and the original design was accomplished so far as that act was concerned before the next offence was embarked upon, then there is no community, 33 M. 502, 122 P. L. R. 1911 = 28 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 208. In this case the acts of cheating were held to be wholly distinct. See also 13 C. W. N. 1067 = 10 Cr. L. J. 469; 10 C. W. N. 83 and 820.

34. If offences are distinct and separate, joint trial illegal.—Where four persons were tried together at one trial two of them being convicted under s 188, 1 P C, read with s 3 of the Epidemic Diseases Act while the remaining two were convicted under s 419, 1 P C, for attempting to cheat by personation, an entirely distinct offence not at all connected with the former, held that the trial was illegal, 3 L. B. R. 214 = 4 Cr. L. J. 479. But where A, B and C were jointly tried for having committed three dacoities on the same day and A was further tried for an offence under s 302, 1 P C and for rescuing a prisoner from Police custody, the charges being kept separate and the opinion of the assessors separately recorded on the charges which affected A only is distinct from the charges which affected all of them held, that the trial was illegal but the illegality was cured by s. 537 as the accused were not prejudiced, 7 P. R. 1901, where 14 M. 302 is followed. This was before 23 M. 61 (P.C.) A Magistrate held a joint investigation in the case of four accused persons who were charged with different offences and committed them all for trial on charges under ss 211, 114, 465 and 193, 1 P C. On quashing the commitment, the High Court considered the Magistrate's action to be illegal and prejudicial to the accused, and directed him to make fresh inquiry, remarking that the charges against all the accused being under ss 211 and 114 can only form the subject of a joint trial while in the other cases the trial must be separate Ratanlal 925. In one charge two persons were charged with causing hurt to three others with a dao, but there was no case of hurt by one of the accused and he was convicted under s 352 1 P C, for using a lathi against two of the complainants held that the charge was improper and must have prejudiced the accused, 17 C. W. N. 419 = 14 Cr. L. J. 212. The act of a trespasser in entering into a factory and on being ejected therefrom, his act in assembling the same transaction 15 C. 111 = 15 Cr. L. J. 338. (4 of the Gambling Act) 1

Joint Sessions Judge on the following charges —All the accused on a charge under s. 401, accused Nos. 3 and 4 on joint charges under ss 328 and 380 No 4 on two separate charges under s. 411, No 1 on charges under ss. 23 and 380, Nos. 1 and 2 on two joint charges under ss 328 and 380 of the I P C The Judge tried all these charges together, as s. 235 seemed to him to favour such a course Held (1) that the trial of all the accused on all the heads of the charge was opposed to this section (2) but that, though it was unnecessary for the Judge to try the accused on the separate heads of charge under ss 328 380 and 411 of the I P C, it was not only permissible, but even necessary to record evidence under those heads in order to prove the charge under s. 401, I P C Ratanlal 809, 46 C. 712 Where five dacoities were committed by several persons and persons implicated in one dacoity were not in the other and the dacoities did not amount to the same transaction Held, that they could not be tried jointly, 19 A. L. J. 610. So where two persons were tried jointly one for murder under s. 302 and the other for omission to give information in respect of the same murder it was held that the joint trial was illegal as the two offences were not committed in the same transaction, 19 A. L. J. 915

So also, three persons each of whom is found in separate possession of some article or other of property stolen during a certain burglary, none of the articles being in their joint possession cannot be tried together at one trial under s. 411, I P C, 49 A. L. J. 815.

35. Joint trial of several receivers of stolen property from different persons at different times and places illegal —Where the 1st accused received stolen property from certain thieves and delivered over to the 2nd accused a portion of the same in satisfaction of a debt and accused No 2 was found in possession of other property identified to be stolen, but there was nothing to show when and from whom he received it and the three accused were jointly tried at one trial on charges under s. 411 I P C held per BATTY and RUSSELL, JJ (ASTON, J, dissenting), that the three offences charged against the three accused were distinct offences, which could not be regarded as forming parts of the same transaction within the meaning of this section and that the joint trial of the three accused was illegal being in contravention of this section and s. 233, 29 B. 449, where 6 Bom. L. R. 351 is distinguished and 15 B. 491 is followed. See also 28 C. 104; 2 C. 23, 3 B. L. R. 20 Where the case for the prosecution was not that the persons charged with possession of stolen property had actually taken part in the commission of the burglary but only that each of them was in possession of same property stolen during the commission of the burglary, and it was possible that disposals were separate and unconnected with each other, held the joint trial was illegal 16 Cr. L. J. 270 (O). See also 33 C. 1256 where it was also held per HARRINGTON and STEPHEN, JJ (BRETT J, dissenting), that separate retention by different persons of separate articles at different places, although the articles might have been the proceeds of the same dacoity cannot be said to be in the course of the same transaction and that persons charged with such retention cannot be tried jointly The Madras High Court held that where all the accused are charged jointly with theft and in the alternative with receiving stolen property and are tried together the trial cannot be said to be illegal having regard to s. 237 and even if there be any defect s. 531 would cure it 17 M. L. J. 219 = 35 Cr. L. J. 479 In 4 Bar. L. T. 263 = 13 Cr. L. J. 59 where four persons were tried together P under s. 380 M under ss. 396 411, I P C and K and T under ss. 411, and 414, I P C, and it was contended on the authority of 29 B. 449 that the conviction of P and M was bad for misjoinder, held that in this case all the stolen property for receiving or disposing of which the four accused were charged had been tried to the possession of 1st accused and that the possession by the 1st accused P as stolen property not long after the theft took place and the disposal of it by the agency of M to K and T were parts of one and the same transaction and 14 Bar. L. R. 38 = 6 Cr. L. J. 28 was followed See Notes 8 to s. 235 In 3 C. L. R. 16 = 6 Cr. L. J. 411, the joint trial of three accused for the retention of one item of stolen property and of two of the accused for retention of another item of stolen property to another occasion was held to be bad See also Note 17 But now under the recent amendment the two offences of theft and receiving stolen property need not be committed in the same transaction or as a result of one concerted action, It is enough under cl. (e) that one offender should commit theft and the other should have received the stolen property for charging and trying them jointly So it is submitted that the above rulings have become obsolete

36. Receiving stolen property and lurking house trespass —Two persons were charged by the Police under s. 458, I P C, and tried jointly, one of them being convicted under s. 411, I P C, and other under s. 458, I P C, held that the joint trial was illegal and that when the Magistrate found that s. 458 was not applicable to one of the accused, he should have tried the two separately, 31 P. R. 1905 = 183 P. L. R. 1905 = 3 Cr. L. J. 76. Again, where the petitioner and four others were jointly tried under s. 454, I P C, the other four convicted of an offence under that section and the petitioner of the abetment of that offence, but on appeal, the conviction of the petitioner was altered to one under s. 411 and 414, I P C, held that the conviction could not be sustained because the petitioner could not have been tried under ss. 411 and 414, I P C, jointly with four others charged

Joint Sessions Judge on the following charges—All the accused on a charge under s. 401, accused Nos. 3 and 4 on joint charges under ss 328 and 380 No 4 on two separate charges under s. 411, No 1 on charges under ss. 23, and 380, Nos. 1 and 2 on two joint charges under ss 328 and 380 of the I P C. The Judge tried all these charges together, as s 235 seemed to him to favour such a course. Held, (1) that the trial of all the accused on all the heads of the charge was opposed to this section, (2) but that, though it was unnecessary for the Judge to try the accused on the separate heads of charge under ss 328 380 and 411 of the I P C, it was not only permissible, but even necessary to record evidence under those heads in order to prove the charge under s. 401, I P C, Ratanlal 509; 48 C. 712. Where five dacoities were committed by several persons and persons implicated in one dacoity were not in the other and the dacoities did not amount to the same transaction. Held, that they could not be tried jointly, 19 A. L. J. 610. So where two persons were tried jointly one for murder under s. 302 and the other for omission to give information in respect of the same murder it was held that the joint trial was illegal as the two offences were not committed in the same transaction, 19 A. L. J. 915.

So also, three persons, each of whom is found in separate possession of some article or other of property stolen during a certain burglary, none of the articles being in their joint possession cannot be tried together at one trial under s. 411, I P C, 19 A. L. J. 815.

35. Joint trial of several receivers of stolen property from different persons at different times and places illegal—Where the 1st accused received stolen property from certain thieves and delivered over to the 2nd accused a portion of the same in satisfaction of a debt and accused No 2 was found in possession of other property identified to be stolen, but there was nothing to show when and from whom he received it and the three accused were jointly tried at one trial on charges under s 411 I P C, held per RATTY and RUSSELL, JJ (ASTON, J, dissenting), that the three offences charged against the three accused were distinct offences, which could not be regarded as forming parts of the same transaction within the meaning of this section and that the joint trial of the three accused was illegal being in contravention of this section and s 233, 29 B. 449, where 6 Bom. L. R. 361 is distinguished and 15 B. 491 is followed. See also 23 C. 104; 2 C. 23; 3 B. L. R. 20. Where the case for the prosecution was not that the persons charged with possession of stolen property had actually taken part in the commission of the burglary but only that each of them was in possession of same property stolen during the commission of the burglary, and it was possible that disposals were separate and unconnected with each other, held the joint trial was illegal, 16 Cr. L. J. 270 (O.). See also 33 C. 1256 where it was also held per HARRINGTON and STREPHEN, JJ (BRETT, J, dissenting), that separate retention by different persons of separate articles at different places, although the articles might have been the proceeds of the same dacoity cannot be said to be in the course of the same transaction and that persons charged with such retention cannot be tried jointly. The Madras High Court held that where all the accused are charged jointly with theft and in the alternative with receiving stolen property and are tried together the trial cannot be said to be illegal having regard to s 237 and even if there be any defect, s 531 would cure it, 17 M. L. J. 219 = 5 Cr. L. J. 479 In 4 Bur. L. T. 263 = 13 Cr. L. J. 59 where four persons were tried together Punder s 380 under ss 386 411, I P C and K and T under ss 411, and 414, I P C, and it was contended on the authority of 29 B. 449 that the conviction of P and M was had for misjoinder, held that in this case all the stolen property for receiving or disposing of which the four accused were charged had been traced to the possession of 1st accused and that the possession by the 1st accused P as stolen property not long after the theft took place and the disposal of it by the agency of M to K and T were parts of one and the same transaction and 14 Bur. L. R. 38 = 6 Cr. L. J. 28 was followed. See Notes 8 to s 235 In 3 C. L. R. 16 = 6 Cr. L. J. 411, the joint trial of three accused for the retention of one item of stolen property and of two of the accused for retention of another item of stolen property to another occasion was held to be bad. See also Note 17 But now under the recent amendment the two offences of theft and receiving stolen property need not be committed in the same transaction or as a result of one concerted action, It is enough under cl. (e) that one offender should commit theft and the other should have received the stolen property for charging and trying them jointly. So it is submitted that the above rulings have become obsolete.

36. Receiving stolen property and larking house trespass.—Two persons were charged by the Police under s. 458, I P C, and tried jointly, one of them being convicted under s 411, I P C., and other under s 458, I P C, held, that the joint trial was illegal and that when the Magistrate found that s 458 was not applicable to one of the accused, he should have tried the two separately, 51 P. R. 1905 = 163 P. L. R. 1905 = 3 Cr. L. J. 76. Again, where the petitioner and four others were jointly tried under s. 454, I P C, the other four convicted of an offence under that section and the petitioner of the abetment of that offence, but on appeal, the conviction of the petitioner was altered to one under ss. 411 and 414, I P C, held that the conviction could not be sustained because the petitioner could not have been tried under ss. 411 and 414, I P C., jointly with four others charged under s. 454, 1 P C, and the power conferred on Appellate Courts by s. 423 (1) (b) of altering the finding while maintaining the sentence, does not empower it to act in contravention of the provisions of this section 83 P. R. 1905 = 115 P. L. R. 1905 = 2 Cr. L. J. 894; but see 15 Cr. L. J. 880 (W) as to the powers of Appellate Court

MISCELLANEOUS.

37. Charge need not set out that the transaction is one and the same.—It is not necessary that the charge should contain the statement as to unity of transaction. It is sufficient for the purpose of justifying a joint trial, that the accusation alleges that the offences committed by each accused to have been committed in the same transaction. It is the tenor of the accusation and not the wording of the charge that must be considered as a test, 30 B. 49

38. Where joint trial involves questions of jurisdiction as to same.—Questions of jurisdiction might arise when several persons are charged in the same proceedings for having committed different various offences in the same transaction and some of such cases may be covered by Chapter XV. If the charges can properly be made in the same proceedings, the irregularity as to jurisdiction might be within s. 531 or s. 532, 18 A. 250

39. Charge where several persons are suspected of a single act of misappropriation or breach of trust.—Where the charge is one for criminal misappropriation this section has no application, because the misappropriation of the actual money must be the act of a single person. To be tried under this section the charges against the two persons must be of misappropriation in the case of one and of abetment in the other, and it is open to the Court to frame charges in the alternative, z.e. of misappropriation or if abetment, 16 C. W. N. 600 = 18 Cr. L. J. 506, see Notes to s. 222

40. Misjoinder of parties to be carefully avoided where one of the accused makes a confessional statement which would be evidence against his co-accused.—A was charged with three separate acts of criminal breach of trust and B with the abetment of those acts and also in the alternative under ss. 411 and 380 1 P C, in respect of a document said to have been found in his house and which had no connection whatever with the charge of criminal breach of trust. Both the accused were jointly tried and A made a full confession implicating B and it was consequently taken into consideration against him, held that the joint trial of the two accused was bad and that it prejudiced the case against B on the second charge as the confession of A was used against him and seems to have been treated as a very substantial part of the evidence in support of the second charge, 5 C. W. N. 294.

41. Joint trial of approver and other accused.—An approver whose pardon was forfeited may be tried along with the other accused, 5 A. L. J. 691 = 1908 A. W. N. 259 = 2 Cr. L. J. 445. But see Notes under s. 339

42. Judgment in cases of joint trial.—The judgment must show on the face of it that the case of each accused has been taken into consideration and should state reasons as far as may be necessary to show, that the Court has devoted judicial attention to case of each accused, 34 C. 138

240. When a charge containing more heads than one is framed against the same person and when a conviction has been had on one or more of them, the complainant, or the officer conducting the prosecution, may with the consent of the Court withdraw the remaining charge or charges, or the Court of its own accord may stay the inquiry into, or trial of such charge or charges

Such withdrawal shall have the effect of an acquittal on such charge or charges, unless the conviction be set aside, in which case the said Court (subject to the order of the Court setting aside the conviction) may proceed with the inquiry into or trial of the charge or charges so withdrawn

Notes.—1. Scope of the section.—This section applies only to charges formally framed under Chapter XIX of this Code 10 C P 1. This section applies to a case where a person is accused of several offences and not to a case where several formal charges have been drawn up by the Court against him. It may also apply to a case when there are charges of several distinct offences constituted by separate acts or series of acts e.g. charges falling under s. 234 or s. 235 sub-sec (1). But it does not apply when there are several formal charges founded upon the same act or series of acts regarded in different aspects as, e.g. charges under s. 235, sub-sec. (2) and (3) or s. 236. In the two former instances, z.e., under ss. 234 and 235, sub-sec. (1) the charges really are distinct and are capable of being tried separately in the latter instances, z.e., under s. 235, sub-secs. (1) and (2) and s. 233 there is really but one charge with several distinct heads of charge collected under it, either cumulatively or in the alternative, and there can be but one trial. In the first head of cases each charge depends upon different evidence, in the latter the evidence is the same. Therefore, where any accused person was charged under ss. 204 and 409, I P C., and the Magistrate upon a conviction of the former offence considered the proceedings under the latter as withdrawn, held that the Magistrate having convicted the accused under s. 204, I P C., it was open to him to convict or acquit under s. 409 according as he considered the offence under that section proved or not proved, but there was no proper occasion for taking action under this section, 24 P. R. 1889. The authorities responsible for carrying out the prosecution of offenders should not be compelled by the Court to revive a prosecution which they may not consider it expedient to revive or to carry it out in a particular way, 4 N. L. R. 71 = 8 Cr. L. J. 11.

2. Permission of withdrawal is allowable in the same case only.—The permission to withdraw one of several charges against an accused person allowed by this section only applies to charges against an accused in the same case and not to separate charges of distinct offences in different cases. Therefore, where an accused person was tried by the Sessions Judge and was sentenced to three years rigorous imprisonment under ss. 380 and 75, I P C., and the Public Prosecutor with the consent of the Court withdrew another charge under ss. 511 and 457, I P C. against the same accused in another case, the order was reversed Ratanlal 362; and therefore it is illegal for a Court to stay the trial in a case, pending appeal against the conviction in another case, 6 M. L. T. 90 = 9 Cr. L. J. 495. Accused was sent up for trial by the Police on eight distinct charges, three of which were for an attempt to rob or extort when armed with a deadly weapon, and five for robbery, the accused being in each case armed with deadly weapon. The first class Magistrate inquired into two of the latter cases, convicted the accused of two offences under s. 392 I P C., and stayed the inquiry into the other six cases purporting to act under this section, held, that this section only applied to charges in the same case and had no application to separate cases, Ratanlal 977. As to necessity for consent by the Court for withdrawing charges, see 19 P. R. 1888.

3. Charge cannot be withdrawn after verdict is given.—Where the accused were found guilty by the jury of offences under ss. 366, 380 and 323 I P C., and the Judge passed sentence on them under s. 366 only, the other charges being withdrawn held that the charges under the other sections could not properly be withdrawn after the accused had been found guilty on those charges. Concurrent sentences would have been proper in such a case, Ratanlal 288.

4. Charge ought not to be withdrawn from jury after taking evidence and hearing pleaders.—This section applies to cases where more charges than one are made against an accused person. If he is convicted on one of those charges before the other charges are tried such other charges may be withdrawn. But when the evidence on all the charges is recorded and the pleaders heard the Sessions Judge must under s. 297, sum up the whole of the evidence, and the jury should then be required, under s. 303 to return a verdict on all the charges, Ratanlal 286.

5. Best course to convict on all heads and pass concurrent sentences.—When a Court considers the evidence sufficient to convict an accused person under more than one head of the charge, and considers a certain term of imprisonment adequate to meet the offence under each head, it should not record a formal conviction under the first head and drop the others, but its best procedure is to convict on each head of the charge and pass concurrent sentences, Ratanlal 19. But concurrent sentences are opposed to s. 397 when the trials are separate, though held on the same day, 15 G. P. R. 57.

6. High Court may on appeal direct withdrawal.—Where the accused was charged with ten offences of the same nature under s. 408, I P C., and was tried and convicted for only three of them. On appeal the High Court confirmed the conviction and directed that no proceedings against the accused in any criminal Court in respect of the offences be taken, 9 G. L. J. 257 = 10 Cr. L. J. 492.

CHAPTER XX.

OF THE TRIAL OF SUMMONS-CASES BY MAGISTRATES

241. The following procedure shall be observed by Magistrates in the trial of summons-cases.

Notes.—1. Summons-cases not to be committed to Court of Session.—In 1906 A. W. N. 26, it was held that the commitment to the Court of Session of a summons-case under ss. 352 and 447, I P C., shou be quashed, first, because there is no warrant for such commitment, it being a summons-case, and, secondly because the Magistrate can adequately punish the offender

2 Chapter not applicable when warrant case and summons-case are jointly tried—In the investigation of a complaint which forms the subject of two distinct charges arising out of the same transaction, one of which is a summons case and the other a warrant-case the procedure should be that for warrant-cases 11 G. 91; 3 L. B. R. 113 = 3 Cr. L. J. 350. A warrant-case being a graver offence cannot be tried under this Chapter, as it deals with the trial of summons-cases only 7 M. 454. See Note 4 to s. 251

Effect of trying a warrant case under this Chapter—See Note 4 to s. 251

3. Chapter is applicable when warrant case is added without any foundation—See 1885 A. W. N. 43; 22 W. R. 40 and also 7 M. 454.

4 Accused not to be prejudiced by application of this Chapter when trial begun as a warrant case—Where an inquiry commenced is in a warrant case and the accused curtailed their cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses under the impression that they could have a further opportunity of cross-examining them, but no offence triable as a warrant-case having been disclosed, the Magistrate closed the case and convicted the accused held that it was the duty of the Magistrate to allow the accused an opportunity of completing their cross-examination before proceeding with the case 18 Cr. L. J. 250 (M). Where a Magistrate while trying a summons-case and a warrant-case against certain accused in one trial dismissed the complaint in respect of the warrant-case and proceeded with the complaint in respect of the summons-case and where on being requested by the accused to recall the prosecution witnesses for their further cross-examination refused to do so held that refusal was illegal and that the accused must certainly have been prejudiced by the same. held further that the privilege conferred by s. 256 was a substantial one and when denied it was for the prosecution to show that there was no prejudice 18 M. L. T. 92 = 16 Cr. L. J. 540

242. When the accused appears or is brought before the Magistrate the particulars of the offences of which he is accused shall be stated to him and he shall be asked if he has any cause to show why he should be convicted, but it shall not be necessary to frame a formal charge

Substance of accusation to be stated

Notes.—1 Points necessary to be explained to the accused—It is very often urged in appeal that the accused did not understand what he was required to disprove or was not asked what evidence he could give to rebut the case for the prosecution. These points should be as clearly explained to persons accused of criminal offences as are the issues to the parties in a civil suit and all Magistrates should devote particular attention to this matter in future—Pun. Cr. p. 241. It is necessary that the accused should have a clear statement made to him (a) that he is about to be put on his trial and (b) as to the offence or facts constituting the offence with the commission of which he is accused. Where certain persons had been brought before the Magistrate for other purposes while he was in camp and these circumstances were not made known to them, their conviction was quashed as improper 3 G. L. R. 87

2 Substance of accusation to be explained to accused—When an accused person is called upon to make his defence if such accused person is unaided by competent counsel, the trying officer should explain the strong points against him, and ascertain whether he fully comprehends them in order to give him a fair opportunity of rebutting or denying the charge.—Oudh Cr. Dig., p. 11

3. Rules as to joinder of charges to be observed in the trial of summons cases also—The provisions of s. 233 as to joinder of charges apply to summons-cases as well because a charge is an essential element in any trial and although no formal charge need be framed in writing if the provisions as to joinder of charges do not apply to summons-cases there are no other provisions of law to guide the Magistrate, 3 L. B. R. 52 (F. B.). See Note 3 to s. 233 and 19 G. L. J. 53.

4 Charge for summons-case necessary to be reduced to writing, if tried jointly with a warrant-case.—When a warrant-case is being tried if it is intended to proceed against the accused also for an offence triable as a summons-case that offence should also form part of the charge. Where therefore, the accused who were summoned for offences under ss. 143 and 379, I. P. C., were tried on a charge drawn up only for the offence under 179 but were convicted only of the offence under 143 the conviction was set aside as bad as the accused misled their defence by the absence of a charge under s. 143 29 G. L. J. 431. See also Note 12 to s. 235

5. Charge must be framed when accused is an European British Subject. See s. 451 (4).

6 Section applies to summary proceedings under s. 117—The procedure laid down in this section should be followed in proceedings under s. 117. See Note 30 at pp. 186-187

Conviction on admission of truth of accusation

243. If the accused admits that he has committed the offence of which he is accused his admission shall be recorded as nearly as possible in the words used by him and if he shows no sufficient cause why he should not be convicted the Magistrate* may convict him accordingly

Notes—1 Compare cases under ss. 255 and 271 for 'plea of guilty'

2 Magistrate bound to convict on plea of guilty.—Where the accused pleads guilty and there is nothing to show that the plea was not an unreserved and voluntary one the accused must be convicted 8 S. L. R 213=16 Cr L J 238

2 A. Plea of guilty by a pleader or estate agent.—Where the Court dispenses with the personal attendance of the accused and permits him to appear by a pleader under s 205 of the code. It can act upon a plea given by his pleader in a case falling under ss 242 and 243 of the Code. Where the personal appearance of the accused is dispensed with and he appears by his pleader or by his estate agent the fact of such appearance should be taken note of by the Court. Under the new amendment of the definition of pleader by Act XXXV of 1923 it is competent to an accused person to appoint his estate manager to appear in his stead and to plead and do other acts on his behalf in the case against him. It is equally open to the Court to permit an estate manager to represent the accused as a pleader provided that such fact is clearly noted on the record 50 B 250

3. Admission by accused must be recorded at the time of the trial.—The admissions of the accused should be recorded at once at the time of the trial and not afterwards from rough notes nor from Magistrate's memory 15 M 83 When a written defence is tendered in a case tried under this Chapter the Magistrate is not bound to take down the defence of the accused by personally examining him 15 W R 53, 2 P R 1890

4. Importance of taking down accused's statement in his own words.—It is of the utmost importance that the terms of this section shall be most strictly complied with because the accused's right of appeal depends on whether he has truly pleaded guilty or not. See s 412. It was no doubt for that reason that the Legislature required that the exact words used by the accused in his plea should as nearly as possible be recorded 1899 A W N 81 When an accused person makes an exculpatory statement before the framing of a charge Magistrates would do well to take down the plea of guilty in the form of question and answer and in the exact words used by the accused in answer to the charge. It is desirable that the plea of guilty should be so recorded as far as possible to avoid all misapprehension and mistake 5 Bom L R 999, 2 P R 1890

5 Section not applicable to a warrant case.—When a Magistrate tried a warrant case (under s 9 of the Opium Act I of 1878) without recording any evidence in support of the prosecution as required by s. 252 and merely calling upon the accused to plead to the charge committed him on his own admission as under s 243 without even framing a formal charge held that the procedure adopted was more than a mere irregularity and the conviction was set aside on the ground that it had occasioned a failure of justice to the accused 29 M 372 See also 17 P R 1887

6. Willingness of person directed to furnish security to be duly recorded.—An admission by a person required to furnish security under Chapter VIII expressing willingness to furnish security should be duly recorded under this section 17 M L J 433=6 Cr L J 332 See Note 44 to s. 123 at p 190

244. (1)† If the Magistrate does not convict the accused under the preceding section or if the accused does not make such admission the Magistrate shall proceed to hear the complainant (if any) and take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution and also to hear the accused and take all such evidence as he produces in his defence

Procedure when no such admission is made

† Provided that the Magistrate shall not be bound to hear any person as complainant in any case in which the complaint has been made by a Court

(2) The Magistrate may if he thinks fit on the application of the complainant or accused issue a summons to any witness directing him to attend or to produce any document or other thing

(3) The Magistrate may, before summoning any witness on such application require that his reasonable expenses, incurred in attending for the purposes of the trial, be deposited in Court.

This section does not make the examination of the complainant in a summons-case absolutely necessary, 24 C. W. N. 139.

Notes.—Magistrate must examine complainant and his witnesses.—When a case has not been disposed of under s 203 and the complainant's witnesses have been summoned, the Magistrate is bound to examine the witnesses tendered by the complainant and is not entitled to acquit the accused on a consideration of complainant's statement alone, 20 M. 339. It is not open to a Magistrate under this section, to dispense with any witness whom a complainant may wish to examine, Weir II, 302. The acquittal of the accused without examining the complainant and his witnesses is illegal, Ratanlal 533; 2 B. L. R. (S.N.) 15; 18 A. 221.

2. Dismissal of complaint on failure to pay process-fee.—When a complainant fails to pay fee for summoning witnesses the Magistrate must deal with the case on such evidence as he may have before him. He cannot dismiss it for default, 8 M. 160.

3. Duty of complainant to prove his case.—Where an accused person denies the truth of the complaint made against him, the Magistrate ought, under this section, to hear the complainant and his witnesses in support of the complaint and also the accused and his witnesses in his defence, 6 W. R. 75.

Prosecution must examine all persons having knowledge of the offence.—It is prima facie the duty of the prosecution to call all the witnesses who prove their connection with the transaction connected with the prosecution and who must be able to give important information. If such witnesses are not called without sufficient reason being given, the Court may properly draw an inference adverse to prosecution, 8 C. 121; 14 A. 521, 14 C. 245; 15 A. 6. No corresponding inference can be drawn against the accused, 7 A. 904; 8 C. 121. In conducting a case for prosecution all the persons who are alleged or known to have knowledge of the facts ought to be brought before the Court and examined, 10 C. 1070, unless they are known to be false witnesses, 16 A. 84.

4. Magistrate must examine defence witnesses.—A Magistrate is bound to examine all the witnesses whom an accused person may produce for his defence, 13 W. R. 63. See also 18 A. 221; 4 M. H. C. R. Appx. XXIX. Where a Magistrate refused to allow the examination of a witness, who had been tendered on behalf of the accused Held that the conviction was bad and must be set aside, 4 B. L. R. Appx. LXXVII = 12 W. R. 77.

5. Magistrate has ample discretion as to issuing process.—A complainant in a case who mentioned the names of several witnesses on his behalf was required to produce them on a certain date. But he produced only two witnesses and they were examined. Held, that the Magistrate was not wrong in law in deciding the case only on the evidence of the two witnesses, 15 W. R. 87. He is not bound to issue process to the other witnesses, 4 M. H. C. R. Appx. XXIX. It is the duty of the accused to produce his witnesses on the day of trial. If he requires process for their attendance he should apply beforehand, so that the witnesses may be present on that day. The law leaves it to the discretion of a Magistrate to issue a process or not, 14 W. R. 76. See also 26 A. 13. The Magistrate must either grant or refuse the application and not merely "file" it, 6 C. W. N. 543. There is no provision of law obliging a party to a case to make a written application for the summoning of witnesses or to put in a written list of witnesses, L. B. Ct. Manual (1905), O. 167.

6. No such discretion as to compelling the attendance of witnesses already summoned.—This section does not give a discretionary power to refuse to compel the attendance of a witness upon whom the Court has already issued process, 30 C. 121. The party at whose instance the process was originally issued has a right to call upon the Court to compel their attendance, 6 C. W. N. 543.

7. Power of making accused pay for processes to his witnesses to be exercised with caution and discretion.—An order by a District Magistrate refusing to summon witnesses for the defence without their expenses being paid by the accused, although legal, should be passed very sparingly, and it is an improper order in a case where the accused is unable or unwilling to deposit the money, and the result is, he is convicted without his witnesses being heard, especially if the case is one in which a severe sentence is inflicted, 7 B. R. 1278.

8. When accused to be allowed opportunity to summon absent witnesses.—The accused is primarily responsible for the production of his evidence on the day of hearing, but the Court should, as a matter of precaution at the conclusion of the case for the prosecution, ascertain from the accused whether he has any witness, and not refuse to give him a further opportunity of bringing or summoning witnesses who may not be present in Court, unless it appears that they are not material or that the accused has been wilfully negligent in the matter. In every summons-case in which no witnesses are produced for the defence, the Court should record either that the accused does not wish to call witnesses or that for reasons stated he has been refused an opportunity of doing so—Punj Cr., p 231. But where there was nothing on the record to show that any inquiry was made from the accused as to whether they had evidence to produce the Chief Court set aside the conviction and directed the Magistrate to take defence evidence, 7 P. R. 1833.

9. Evidence of seemingly perjuring witness to be taken at length.—When, during the investigation of a complaint it may appear to the Magistrate that a witness is giving false evidence, so that criminal proceedings against such witness are likely to be necessary the Magistrate will exercise a sound discretion in taking down under s. 359 at least the evidence of this particular witness at length in the manner prescribed in ss. 356, 357 and 360—Wills, 112.

10. Statements made out of Court are not to be relied upon.—It is extremely improper for a Magistrate in disposing of a case, to rely in any way on statements made to him out of Court, 14 B. 372.

11. Power to require payment of the expenses of citing witnesses is confined to summons-cases only.—See 8 N. L. R. 65 = 13 Cr. L. J. 554, and Note under s. 256.

245. (1) If the Magistrate upon taking the evidence referred to in section 244 and such further evidence (if any) as he may of his own motion, cause to be produced, and (if he thinks fit) examining the accused finds the accused not guilty he shall record an order of acquittal.

(2) * Where the Magistrate does not proceed in accordance with the provisions of section 349 or section 562 he shall, if he finds the accused guilty, pass sentence upon him according to law.

Notes.—1. See Form XXIV, Schedule V for form of a warrant of commitment, s. 250 for compensation.

2. No discharge in summons-case.—In a summons-case, a Magistrate is bound to proceed under this section 245 G. 429. If a Magistrate does not find the accused guilty he must record an order of acquittal. No order of discharge can be passed in a case coming under this section, 19 P. R. 1900.

3. Discharge in summons case tried as a warrant-case amounts to acquittal.—If a Magistrate trying a summons case whatever the procedure he adopts finds no case made out against the accused and lets him go unconditionally he acquits him though he may style his order of acquittal an order of discharge and tack on to it the number of section of the Code which deals with discharges. The accused is nonetheless in law acquitted for the Code contemplates no other order in summons-cases. That being so the Sessions Judge has no power to take action under s. 437 against a person alleged to be discharged 8 M. L. T. 78 = 11 Cr. L. J. 355.

4. Order of acquittal under this section cannot affect a warrant-case.—An order of acquittal, passed under this section cannot operate in regard to an offence which is triable only as a warrant case 1835 A. W. N. 260.

5. Further inquiry under s. 437 cannot be directed in case of an order under this section.—Powers of High Court.—See Notes to s. 437 and as to the powers of the High Court to revise orders of acquittal see Notes to s. 439.

6. Award of Court fee to complainant upon conviction of accused.—Under the provisions of s. 31 of the Court Fees Act if a person is convicted of an offence other than an offence for which Police-officers may arrest, without warrant, the Court must order him to repay the fee paid by the complainant on his petition or on reduction of his examination into writing as the case may be as well as the fee, if any, paid by the complainant for service of process.—Oudh Cr. Dig. p 11 1 Bur. B. R. 409. A general order to pay costs in addition to fine is bad. The precise amount should be specified, 1 Bur. B. R. 618.

7. On conviction the Magistrate must pass some sentence.—When a Magistrate convicts the accused he is bound to pass some sentence if only a nominal one 4 M. H. C. R. Appx. LXVI; 2 Bom. L. R. 511. This is no longer the invariable rule now, see s. 562 and proposed amendment.

8. Order of acquittal cannot be passed without taking evidence for prosecution.—Where a Magistrate passed an order of acquittal without examining the complainant and his witnesses, the High Court reversed the order of acquittal and directed the Magistrate to inquire into the case according to law, Ratanisi 539. See Note 2 at seq to s. 243

* This subsection was substituted by Act XVIII of 1953

9. Procedure on conviction of certain classes of Government servants, etc.—Where any Government officer is judicially convicted of an offence, a copy of the decision should be sent to the Head of the Department in which he is employed in order that such action as may be deemed proper may be taken at once—Government of India, 7th August 1863

Whenever any officer, enlisted soldier or sepoy is sentenced in any Criminal Court to a fine of Rs. 200 or upwards or to imprisonment, otherwise than in default of paying a fine not amounting to Rs. 200, the Court should pro prio motu send a copy of its final order to the superior of the person convicted—Government of India, 3rd October, 1871

If a recruit of the Native Army is sentenced by any Criminal Court to imprisonment for any term exceeding three months, a report should be sent to the Officer Commanding the Reserve Centre—Government of India 6th July, 1895

246. A Magistrate may, under section 243 or section 245 convict the accused of any offence triable under this Chapter which from the facts admitted or proved he appears to have committed, whatever may be the nature of the complaint or summons

Notes.—1. Scope of this section—This section enables the Magistrate to proceed in regard to any other offence, prima facie established by the evidence for the prosecution. But if the Magistrate in the exercise of his discretion thinks fit to do so he must proceed as set out in s. 242 and state to the accused the particulars of such offence, so as to enable him to make out his defence, if any See 22 W. R. 30.

2. Magistrate may convict of other offence forthwith without re-opening trial—It is open to a Magistrate to convict the accused of the offences of assault (s. 352, I P C), and mischief (s. 426, I P C), although they had been summoned to answer a charge of criminal trespass only (s. 447, I P C). The Magistrate is not bound, when he thinks that other offences have been proved, to re-open the trial and follow the procedure of ss. 243 and 244. Such a view would necessitate a re-hearing of all the evidence in the same trial, and is clearly opposed to the manifest intention of the Legislature, 36 C. 669. PRINSEP'S view to the contrary, stated in his commentary, was not approved See also 28 Bom. L. R. 291.

247. If the summons has been issued on complaint, and upon the day appointed for the appearance of the accused, or any day subsequent thereto to which the hearing may be adjourned, the complainant does not appear the Magistrate shall notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, acquit the accused, unless for some reason he thinks proper to adjourn the hearing of the case to some other day

Non appearance of complainant
Provided that, where the complainant is a public servant and his personal attendance is not required, the Magistrate may dispense with his attendance, and proceed with the case

Notes.—1. Magistrate ought to reasonably exercise his discretion in adjourning cases—In a case where the complainant is prevented from attending by circumstances beyond his control, as for instance by a heavy flood, the Magistrate ought to exercise his discretion and postpone the hearing 28 W. R. 54; 5 W. R. 51; 1889 A. W. N. 229. In a trial under this Chapter it is not an irregularity to adjourn a trial for the purpose of allowing the accused to secure the attendance of his witnesses 16 W. R. 21. But if it is refused, the High Court may not interfere, 10 W. R. 35.

2. On non-appearance of complainant complaint must be dismissed—The section is peremptory. On non-appearance of complainant, the Magistrate ought to acquit the accused, he is not entitled to record the order "struck off," 10 Bom. L. R. 628 = 8 Cr. L. J. 139. Nor should he adjourn the hearing unless for some reason he thinks proper to adjourn the hearing to another date. The fact that the accused has been guilty of the contempt of the process of the Court is no good reason for proceeding with the case, 17 C. W. N. 159.

3. "Struck off" does not amount to disposal—A summons-case was, owing to the absence of the complainant ordered to be struck off by the Magistrate under s. 247 of the Cr. P. C. A fresh complaint was filed but the Magistrate acceded to the argument that he could not entertain it as he had already once passed an order under s. 247 in the case, and acquitted and discharged the accused, held, that neither order was correct in form. The Magistrate was not entitled under s. 247 to record the order "struck off" nor was he in a case which he had not tried, entitled to record the order of acquittal on the second complaint. The most he could do would be to record an order of discharge, 10 Bom. L. R. 625 = 8 Cr. L. J. 139.

4. Must the accused be acquitted on death of complainant?—On a complaint made by a servant for maiming his master's elephant the Magistrate without inquiring whether the animal had been actually maimed or not issued process under s. 426, I P C., and when the case came up for disposal, dismissed the complaint and acquitted the accused though he knew the complainant was dead. A fresh complaint was made on the same facts by another servant, held, the order of acquittal was wholly without jurisdiction and did not operate as a bar to the trial of the accused on the second complaint 18 C. W. N. 1211 = 15 Cr. L. J. 726. In 19 C. W. N. 334 = 16 Cr. L. J. 323, however, it was held that where a complainant of an offence under s. 352, I P C., died, the Magistrate ought to have dismissed the complaint under this section even though some one had applied to be brought on the record in place of the deceased. In 20 C. W. N. 862 it was doubted whether s. 247 applied to a case where the complainant was dead.

The death of a complainant in a non-cognizable case eg under ss. 143 and 426, I P C., does not put an end to the prosecution the trying Magistrate has a discretion in a proper case to allow the complaint to continue by a proper and fit complainant if the latter is willing 28 Bom. L. R. 288.

5. Dismissal of complaint in the absence of parties on an adjourned date of which they had no notice is improper.—When the order of adjournment is not made in the presence and hearing of the parties, held that the order of dismissal of complaint is illegal, 8 M. H. G. R. Appx. V. Where a case was adjourned sine die and in consequence of the absence of the complainant on the day on which it was resumed the accused was acquitted under this section the order of acquittal was set aside as illegal 16 W. R. 59. An order of dismissal passed on a date which was not fixed for the hearing and on which date the complainant is necessarily absent is no order at all, Weir II, 307; when such an order is entered by mistake, the Magistrate may disregard the order and proceed with the trial, 18 C. W. N. 1180 = 16 Cr. L. J. 143.

6. Adjournment for the production of defence witnesses is not irregular.—In a trial under this Chapter it is not an irregularity to adjourn the trial for the purpose of allowing the accused to secure the attendance of his witnesses, 16 W. R. 21.

7. Is the complainant bound to be present at every adjourned hearing?—Where a complainant failed to appear on a date to which a trial had been adjourned to secure the attendance of defence witnesses and the Magistrate dismissed the complaint, it was held that the discretion vested in the Magistrate by the section had been misapplied. Where a complainant has done all that is necessary for him to do to establish his case, the complaint ought not to be dismissed in default of his attendance unless the Magistrate had specially required his attendance on the adjourned date Weir II, 306. A Magistrate may dismiss the complaint if the complainant does not appear on the day to which the hearing has been duly adjourned even though the complainant and his witnesses have been examined and their further attendance seems unnecessary, 22 W. R. 40, and this case was followed in 19 C. W. N. 834 = 15 Cr. L. J. 163 where the case was adjourned merely for argument and the High Court refused to set aside the acquittal, though it was pointed that there was no provision in the Code for the hearing of argument in summons-cases.

8. Appearance by Vakil.—Unless the Court has otherwise specially allowed the same, the appearance of the complainant's Vakil is not equivalent to the appearance of the complainant within the meaning of this section, Weir II, 309.

9. Dismissal of complaint when complainant is present in Court.—A case having been transferred plaintiff having been present in the Court house, the provisions of this section had been improperly applied, 13 C. L. R. 303. See also 24 C. L. J. 444 and 47 C. 147.

10. Dismissal of complaint for failure to pay process-fee.—See s. 204 and Note 3 to s. 244.

11. Dismissal improper when summons not served on accused.—When summons has not been served on the accused, a complaint cannot be dismissed on the ground that the complainant has not appeared on the day fixed for the hearing Weir II, 307, and see also 36 M. 315. See, however, Note 5 above.

order of acquittal and directed the Magistrate to inquire into the case according to law, Ratanlal 539. See Notes et seq to s. 247

9. Procedure on conviction of certain classes of Government servants, etc.—Where any Government officer is judicially convicted of an offence a copy of the decision should be sent to the Head of the Department in which he is employed in order that such action as may be deemed proper may be taken at once—Government of India, 7th August, 1863

Whenever any officer, enlisted soldier or sepoy is sentenced in any Criminal Court to a fine of Rs. 200 or upwards or to imprisonment, otherwise than in default of paying a fine not amounting to Rs. 200, the Court should pro prio motu send a copy of its final order to the superior of the person convicted—Government of India, 3rd October, 1871

If a recruit of the Native Army is sentenced by any Criminal Court to imprisonment for any term exceeding three months, a report should be sent to the Officer Commanding the Reserve Centre—Government of India, 6th July, 1895

246. A Magistrate may, under section 243 or section 245, convict the accused of any offence triable under this Chapter which from the facts admitted or proved he appears to have committed, whatever may be the nature of the complaint or summons

Finding not limited by complaint or summons

Notes.—1. Scope of this section.—This section enables the Magistrate to proceed in regard to any other offence, prima facie established by the evidence for the prosecution. But if the Magistrate in the exercise of his discretion thinks fit to do so he must proceed as set out in s. 242 and state to the accused the particulars of such offence, so as to enable him to make out his defence, if any. See 22 W. R. 40.

2. Magistrate may convict of other offence forthwith without re-opening trial.—It is open to a Magistrate to convict the accused of the offences of assault (s. 352, I P C), and mischief (s. 426, I P C), although they had been summoned to answer a charge of criminal trespass only (s. 447, I P C). The Magistrate is not bound, when he thinks that other offences have been proved, to re-open the trial and follow the procedure of ss. 243 and 244. Such a view would necessitate a re-hearing of all the evidence in the same trial, and is clearly opposed to the manifest intention of the Legislature, 36 C. 869. PRINSEP'S view to the contrary, stated in his commentary, was not approved. See also 29 Bom. L. R. 291.

247. If the summons has been issued on complaint, and upon the day appointed for the appearance of the accused, or any day subsequent thereto to which the hearing may be adjourned, the complainant does not appear, the Magistrate shall notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, acquit the accused, unless for some reason he thinks proper to adjourn the hearing of the case to some other day

Provided that, where the complainant is a public servant and his personal attendance is not required, the Magistrate may dispense with his attendance, and proceed with the case.

Notes.—1. Magistrate ought to reasonably exercise his discretion in adjourning cases.—In a case where the complainant is prevented from attending by circumstances beyond his control, as for instance by a heavy flood, the Magistrate ought to exercise his discretion and postpone the hearing, 24 W. R. 64; 5 W. R. 51; 1887 A. W. N. 229. In a trial under this Chapter it is not an irregularity to adjourn a trial for the purpose of allowing the accused to secure the attendance of his witnesses, 26 W. R. 21. But if it is refused, the High Court may not interfere, 10 W. R. 36.

2. On non-appearance of complainant complaint must be dismissed.—The section is peremptory. On non-appearance of complainant, the Magistrate ought to acquit the accused; he is not entitled to record the order "struck off," 10 Bom. L. R. 628 = 8 Cr. L. J. 139. Nor should he adjourn the hearing unless for some reason he thinks proper to adjourn the hearing to another date. The fact that the accused has been guilty of the contempt of the processes of the Court is no good reason for proceeding with the case, 17 C. W. N. 139.

3. "Struck off" does not amount to disposal.—A summons-case was, owing to the absence of the complainant ordered to be struck off by the Magistrate, under s. 247 of the Cr. P. C. A fresh complaint was filed but the Magistrate acceded to the argument that he could not entertain it as he had already once passed an order under s. 247 in the case, and acquitted and discharged the accused, held, that neither order was correct in form. The Magistrate was not entitled under s. 247 to record the order "struck off" nor was he in a case which he had not tried, entitled to record the order of acquittal on the second complaint. The most he could do would be to record an order of discharge, 10 Bom. L. R. 528 = 8 Cr. L. J. 139.

4. Must the accused be acquitted on death of complainant?—On a complaint made by a servant for maiming his master's elephant the Magistrate without inquiring whether the animal had been actually maimed or not issued process under s. 426, I P. C., and when the case came up for disposal, dismissed the complaint and acquitted the accused though he knew the complainant was dead. A fresh complaint was made on the same facts by another servant, held the order of acquittal was wholly without jurisdiction and did not operate as a bar to the trial of the accused on the second complaint 18 C. W. N. 1211 = 15 Cr. L. J. 726. In 19 C. W. N. 334 = 16 Cr. L. J. 323, however, it was held that where a complainant of an offence under s. 352, I P. C., died, the Magistrate ought to have dismissed the complaint under this section even though some one had applied to be brought on the record in place of the deceased. In 20 C. W. N. 852 it was doubted whether s. 247 applied to a case where the complainant was dead.

The death of a complainant in a non-cognizable case e.g. under ss. 143 and 426, I P. C., does not put an end to the prosecution the trying Magistrate has a discretion in a proper case to allow the complaint to continue by a proper and fit complainant if the latter is willing 28 Bom. L. R. 288.

5. Dismissal of complaint in the absence of parties on an adjourned date of which they had no notice is improper.—When the order of adjournment is not made in the presence and hearing of the parties, held that the order of dismissal of complaint is illegal, 8 M. H. C. R. Appx. Y. Where a case was adjourned sine die and in consequence of the absence of the complainant on the day on which it was resumed the accused was acquitted under this section the order of acquittal was set aside as illegal 16 W. R. 53. An order of dismissal passed on a date which was not fixed for the hearing and on which date the complainant is necessarily absent is no order at all, Weir II, 307; when such an order is entered by mistake, the Magistrate may disregard the order and proceed with the trial, 18 C. W. N. 1180 = 16 Cr. L. J. 143.

6. Adjournment for the production of defence witnesses is not irregular.—In a trial under this Chapter it is not an irregularity to adjourn the trial for the purpose of allowing the accused to secure the attendance of his witnesses, 16 W. R. 21.

7. Is the complainant bound to be present at every adjourned hearing?—Where a complainant failed to appear on a date to which a trial had been adjourned to secure the attendance of defence witnesses and the Magistrate dismissed the complaint, it was held that the discretion vested in the Magistrate by the relevant had been misapplied. Where a complainant has done all that is necessary for him to do to establish his case, if a complaint ought not to be dismissed in default of his attendance unless the Magistrate had specially required a attendance on the adjourned date Weir II, 306. A Magistrate may dismiss the complaint, if the complainant does not appear on the day to which the hearing has been duly adjourned even though the complainant and his witnesses have been examined and their further attendance seems unnecessary 22 W. R. 40, and this case was followed in 18 C. W. N. 834 = 15 Cr. L. J. 163 where the case was adjourned merely for argument and the Magistrate refused to set aside the acquittal, though it was pointed that there was no provision in the Code for the hearing of argument in summons-cases.

8. Appearance by Vakil.—Unless the Court has otherwise specially allowed the same, the appearance of the complainant's Vakil is not equivalent to the appearance of the complainant within the meaning of this section, Weir II, 309.

9. Dismissal of complaint when complainant is 'present in Court.'—A case having been transferred from the file of one Magistrate to that of another, was on the day fixed called on for hearing but the complainant not appearing, the case was dismissed under this section. It appeared that the complainant and his witnesses, though not in attendance in the Magistrate's Court, were present in another Court in the same Court house, being under the impression that the case had been transferred to the Magistrate of that Court, held, that this complainant having been present in the Court house, the provisions of this section had been improperly applied, 13 C. L. R. 303. See also 25 C. L. J. 444 and 47 C. 147.

10. Dismissal of complaint for failure to pay process-fee.—See s. 204 and Note 3 to s. 244.

11. Dismissal improper when summons not served on accused.—When summons has not been served on the accused, a complaint cannot be dismissed on the ground that the complainant has not appeared on the day fixed for the hearing, Weir II, 307, and see also 36 M. 313. See, however, Note 3 above.

12. Power of acquittal for default of prosecution may be exercised at any stage.—The fact that a Magistrate might have disposed of a case at the first hearing, does not deprive him of his power to acquit the accused under this section, if at the adjourned hearing the complainant again fails to appear, Weir II, 303.

13. Magistrate not bound to wait for complainant.—In case of complainant's default a Magistrate is not bound to wait until Court is about to close for the day, 7 M. 336.

14. Cases under s. 195 cannot be dismissed.—The direction as to dismissal of a complaint on the non-appearance of the complainant is not applicable to cases instituted under s. 195, Ratanlal 137.

15. Procedure in composite cases.—In the investigation of a complaint, which forms the subject of two distinct charges arising out of the same transaction, one of which is a summons and the other a warrant-case, the procedure should be that prescribed for warrant-cases. Therefore in such a case, if the complainant be absent the Magistrate ought to pass an order of discharge under s. 253 and not of acquittal, 11 C. 91; 41 M. 727.

16. Compensation for vexatious complaints after hearing the whole evidence of complainant.—Section 250 authorizes the payment of compensation in cases where the accused had been acquitted under section 245, after the whole evidence in the case had been recorded, 10 B. 199 following 5 M. 381. See also 6 C. 581; 14 P. R. 3836; 6 B. L. R. 295=15 W. R. 9 and 30 C. 123 (F.B.) But see 44 M. 81 which held that an order for compensation under s. 250 without hearing all the evidence was not illegal but one that should only be made under very exceptional circumstances 39 M. L. J. 484.

16-A. Absence of complainant on the day to which case adjourned for delivery of judgment.—Such a case does not fall within the provision of this section, 35 C. L. J. 387; 56 C. 867.

EFFECT OF ACQUITTAL.

17. Acquittal under this section bars trial on the same facts.—When the accused appears and answers to the charge according to s. 242, he is said to be tried, although the case may be dismissed for non-appearance of the complainant, and the result is that he cannot be tried again upon the same facts and for the same offence at the complaint of another person.—M H C Pro, 27th March, 1888, 1885 A. W. N. 43. The dismissal of a complaint under this section is a bar to a subsequent trial on the same facts, even if good cause is shown for non-appearance of the complainant, as where such non-appearance has been procured by the fraud on the accused. The Code does not permit the Court which made the order to vacate it on proof of fraud, 25 M. L. J. 160=15 Cr. L. J. 236. But a dismissal of the complaint when the proceedings have been substantially so irregular as to amount to no trial, will not operate by virtue of this section as an acquittal, Weir II, 307, so as to bar a revival of the proceedings, Ratanlal 59. Where, however, the case is called on a date not fixed for hearing and dismissed such an order is no order and may be ignored, 18 C. W. N. 1180; 50 M. 976.

It is that an acquittal under s. 247 of the Code bars further proceedings by virtue of s. 403 of the Code, 45 A. 58.

18. Effect of order of dismissal on revival of proceedings.—Where a Magistrate dismisses a summons case on account of non-appearance of complainant under s. 203, the effect of the order of dismissal is to bar all subsequent proceeding on the same complainant or based on the same facts until the order of dismissal is set aside by a competent authority, 3 C. W. N. 760. But where an application under s. 1 of the Workmen's Breach of Contract Act 1859, is dismissed for default before an order is passed under s. 2 of the Act, the dismissal does not amount to an acquittal as no offence has yet been committed and does not bar further proceeding, 7 L. B. R. 35=14 Cr. L. J. 404. See Note 20 below.

19. District Magistrate has no power to set aside acquittal by Subordinate Magistrate.—Where under s. 423 (1) (a) a District Magistrate entertained an appeal from an order of acquittal under this section by a second-class Magistrate, reversed it and directed a re-hearing on the ground that the complainant and his rakul had appeared before the Court shortly after the cases had been dismissed by the second-class Magistrate. Held that the order of the District Magistrate was illegal 7 M. 213. Similarly, in Weir II, 308 it was held that the District Magistrate had no power to order the entertainment of a complaint dismissed for the non-appearance of the complainant by a Subordinate Magistrate.

20. Misapplication of procedure—Dismissing complaint for default in warrant-case.—A case under s. 420 (1) C cannot be dismissed for default, as by so doing the Magistrate applies to a warrant-case the procedure prescribed for summons-case only, 4 C. W. N. 26; Ratanlal 18 and 23. Such an order is illegal and a Presidency Magistrate who passes such an order can revive the complaint at the instance of the complainant 29 C. 859 (F.B.) which follows 23 C. 211 and 1 C. W. N. 49.

21. Effect of order of dismissal for default when the accused is also absent.—Section 403 bars a fresh trial of an accused who has been acquitted under this section even if he was absent though served with the summons. Dismissal of a case resulting in the acquittal of one of the two accused under this section, on the ground of complainant's absence and purporting to be a termination of all proceedings relating to that matter, will operate also against a co-accused whose attendance could not be obtained and against whom the trial did not proceed, 4 C. W. N. 348. There is nothing in the language of this section limiting the effect of an acquittal only to cases in which the accused appeared in answer to the summons when the case has been dismissed under this section, 34 M. 233. See also 7 C. W. N. 711 and 493.

22. Effect of order of dismissal of complaint on charges not tried.—Where a Magistrate issued processes against and summoned accused persons for one of several offences alleged against them and acquitted them of the offence for which they were summoned no fresh process could in view of s. 403, cl (1) be issued against them in respect of all the offences alleged against them on the previous occasion including the one for which they were summoned and acquitted, 2 C. L. J. 622—3 Cr. L. J. 119, where 5 C. W. N. 633 and 15 C. 608 are distinguished. See Note 15 above.

248. If a complainant, at any time before a final order is passed in any case under this complaint.

Chapter, satisfies the Magistrate that there are sufficient grounds for permitting him to withdraw his complaint, the Magistrate may permit him to withdraw the same, and shall thereupon acquit the accused.

Notes.—1. Section applies only to summons-cases.—The only sections of the Code which contemplate the termination of a criminal prosecution by private arrangement are ss. 248 and 345. S. 248 is confined to Chapter XX which deals with summons-cases only, 37 B. 369. Therefore where the offence charged is a warrant-case and not a summons-case, a Magistrate ought to proceed with the inquiry or trial in spite of the withdrawal of the complaint if he finds the elements of an offence, on the facts set forth in the complaint, 8 C. W. N. 548 and 322; 6 M. 316.

2. Complaint cannot be withdrawn in warrant-case.—Magistrate is bound to proceed with the case.—One Manekbai being arrested on a complaint of theft was brought before a Magistrate, who allowed the complaint against her to be withdrawn and made her a witness against one Liladhar Oodhowjee, a co-accused in the same case. Held, that the offence with which Manekbai was charged not being one in which pardon could be tendered (s. 397) or in which the Magistrate could permit the withdrawal of the complaint under this section her evidence was not legally admissible, Ratanlal 461. This section applies only to a summons-case. Where the offence charged is a warrant-case, a Magistrate ought to proceed with the inquiry or trial in spite of the withdrawal of the complaint, if he finds the element of an offence on the facts set forth in the complaint, 13 B. 600. It is not competent to him to enter an order of acquittal, 37 B. 369, where Ratanlal 380 and 1. B. 84 are explained and distinguished.

3. Does the section apply to a withdrawal before process issues to the accused?—Having regard to the language of s. 242, the words 'at any time before any final order is passed' do not apply to a time before the accused has been ordered to appear. An order of acquittal passed on a withdrawal application before issue of process is unmeaning and of no avail, 36 M. 315.

4. Complainant alone can withdraw.—In cases of contempt of the lawful authority of a public servant, the complainant referred to in this section is the public servant whose authority has been resisted, and without whose sanction no criminal proceedings can be instituted against the offender, and not the person injured by the resistance, 2 B. 653. Where a Municipal Secretary authorized under s. 280 of the Madras District Municipalities Act of 1884, instituted a complaint, held the Municipal Council was not competent to withdraw the same, 27 M. L. J. 817 = 13 Cr. L. J. 299.

5. Withdrawal of complaint by person setting the Police in motion.—Having regard to the next section, it is certain that this section is to be limited to cases instituted upon complaints in the strict sense. Where a Magistrate took cognizance of a complaint upon Police Report made in consequence of information supplied to the Police by one R and passed an order under this section permitting the complaint to be withdrawn on the application of R, it was held that the order allowing withdrawal was bad, for the reason that there was no complaint in the case as defined in s. 4 (A) and consequently the Magistrate in purporting to act under this section, acted in excess of his powers. 23 M. 826.

6. District Magistrate cannot revive a withdrawn complaint.—Where a Deputy Magistrate allowed a complaint to be withdrawn, a District Magistrate has no jurisdiction to revive the case against the accused, 25 W. R. 64, see also 10 C. 551. The same principle applies when the case has been compounded under s. 345. An order of discharge under this section amounts to an acquittal. See 25 B. 412.

7. Where Magistrate had no jurisdiction, withdrawal of complaint no bar to re-entertainment of fresh complaint.—Where a Magistrate took cognizance of complaint without previous sanction, when such sanction was required, and discharged the accused, held he was competent after sanction had been obtained, to re-entertain the complaint and that the previous order of discharge did not operate as an acquittal, 25 B. 711.

8. Award of compensation on withdrawal of a complaint.—Formerly compensation could not be awarded to an accused person acquitted under this section upon a withdrawal of the complaint, Ratanlal 462. See, however, s. 250 which does not limit the award of compensation (like the repealed s. 250 of Act X of 1832) to acquittals, under s. 245 or s. 247, therefore this ruling will not now prevail, and a Magistrate can now award compensation even if the acquittal takes place by withdrawal of complaint. See also 56 P. R. 1337; 19 P. R. 1853 and 30 P. R. 1910.

9. Withdrawal of complaint and composition of offence compared.—The withdrawal of a complaint ought to be distinguished from the compounding of offences. A withdrawal must be by intimation to the Magistrate holding the trial and is permissible only in a summons-case, 21 C. 103. Withdrawal of complaint is the act of only one party to the proceeding, viz. the complainant, whereas the composition of an offence obviously requires the co-operation of both parties, for a person is said to compound an offence when he forbears to prosecute the offender in consideration of some reward or advantage for his forbearance. It is quite intelligible, therefore, why in the former case, viz., the withdrawal of a complaint, the Legislature should have imposed the necessity of obtaining the permission of the Magistrate. Had such a restriction not been imposed, a person might be harassed by a perfectly vexatious criminal proceeding from which the complainant having put the accused to as much inconvenience and degradation as he could, might then calmly withdraw. To prevent the processes of Criminal Courts from being thus abused, and at the same time of placing a ready means of summary redress in the hands of the Magistrate trying the case, the Legislature enacted ss. 248 and 250, the provisions of which contain a reasonable protection for accused persons.

But the case of "composition" stands on totally different grounds. The Legislature having determined to allow certain offences which principally concerned the injured person as an individual and not the public at large, to be compounded, the composition as the act of both parties concerned works its own end, and there is no such abuse of process to be guarded against as in the case of simple withdrawal. As soon as a composition (where permissible) is voluntarily effected it operates (vide s. 345) as an acquittal of the accused, and the Magistrate has no power to do any further with the case. But an acquittal under s. 345 is a very different thing from an acquittal under either s. 245 or s. 247, and it is only in acquittals under one or other of the sections last mentioned that the Magistrate has been empowered to award compensation. An acquittal under s. 245 or s. 247 is the result of a purely magisterial act, but an acquittal under s. 345 results by an operation of law upon the act of composition, and is thus quite irrespective of any magisterial decision. PER RATTIGAN, J., in 19 P. R. 1886. See also 30 C. W. N. 1209.

10. Magistrate alone competent to authorize withdrawal.—This section does not empower any Police-officer to entertain an application for the withdrawal of a complaint. The permitting of a complainant to withdraw is a judicial act, the exercise of which is vested in the Magistrate by this section and the Police have no authority to interfere in such matters, Ratanlal 91.

Under s. 248 of the Code a Magistrate alone is competent to authorize withdrawal and can even refuse application for withdrawal filed by the complainant so it was held in 30 C. W. N. 593 that no absolute power of withdrawal is given to the Calcutta Corporation under s. 537 of the Calcutta Municipal Act unless the withdrawal is permitted by the Magistrate.

11. Accused against whom case is withdrawn, competent witness against co-accused.—See 25 B. 422.

12. Whether withdrawal of complaint against one amounts to a withdrawal of the complaint against all.—Where the complainant withdrew his complaint against one of the five accused and the Magistrate proceeded against the other four held in revision by the High Court that though the complainant used the phrase "withdraw the complaint" he in fact meant that the offence had been compounded with the accused concerned. Further held that under cl. (6) of s. 345 of the Code as amended a composition has the effect of an acquittal of the accused with whom the offence has been compounded, but does not affect the case as against the other accused. 9 Lah. 239.

- 249. In any case instituted otherwise than upon complaint a Presidency Magistrate a Magistrate of the first class or with the previous sanction of the District Magistrate any other Magistrate may for reasons to be recorded by him stop the proceedings at any stage without pronouncing any judgment either of acquittal or conviction and may thereupon release the accused Power to stop proceedings when no complainant.

Notes—1 Scope of section—This section applies only to cases instituted otherwise than on a complaint 9 P R 1913 = 8 P W R, 1913 = 13 Cr L J 860 The section though occurring in Chapter XX seems to be applicable to warrant-cases also But see 5 Patna 243 which holds that the section does not apply to warrant cases and that an order under s. 249 in a warrant case would be quite illegal and void.

2 Stop order does not bar re trial—The order under this section is specifically excluded by the explanation to s. 403 from being an acquittal and further proceedings in accordance with law are not barred 9 P R, 1913 = 13 Cr L J 360

3. No further inquiry under s. 437 in case of a stop order—As an order under this section does not amount to a dismissal of a complaint or a discharge no order under s. 437 can be passed directing further inquiry 9 P R 1913 = 13 Cr L J 860

Frivolous Accusations in Summons and Warrant-cases

- 250. *(1) If any case instituted upon complaint or upon information given to a Police-officer or to a Magistrate one or more persons is or are accused before a Magistrate of any offence triable by a Magistrate and the Magistrate by whom the case is heard discharges or acquits all or any of the accused and is of opinion that the accusation against them or any of them was false and False frivolous or vexatious accusations.

either frivolous or vexatious the Magistrate may by his order of discharge or acquittal if the person upon whose complaint or information the accusation was made is present call upon him forthwith to show cause why he should not pay compensation to such accused or to each or any of such accused when there are more than one or if such person is not present direct the issue of a summons to him to appear and show cause as aforesaid

(2) The Magistrate shall record and consider any cause which such complainant or informant may show and if he is satisfied that the accusation was false and either frivolous or vexatious may for reasons to be recorded direct that compensation to such an amount not exceeding one hundred rupees or if the Magistrate is a Magistrate of the third class not exceeding fifty rupees as he may determine be paid by such complainant or informant to the accused or to each or any of them

(2 A) The Magistrate may by the order directing payment of the compensation under sub-sec (2) further order that in default of payment the person ordered to pay such compensation shall suffer simple imprisonment for a period not exceeding thirty days

(2 B) When any person is imprisoned under sub-sec (2 A) the provisions of sections 68 and 69 of the Indian Penal Code shall so far as may be apply

(2 C) No person who has been directed to pay compensation under this section shall by reason of such order, be exempted from any civil or criminal liability in respect of the complaint made or information given by him

Provided that any amount paid to an accused person under this section shall be taken into account in awarding compensation to such person in any subsequent civil suit relating to the same matter

* Sub-sections (1) to (2C) have been substituted for old sub-secs. (1) and (2) by the Cr. Pro. (Amendment) Act of 1921

(3) A complainant or informant who has been ordered under * "sub-sec (2)" by a Magistrate of the second or third class to pay compensation † "or has been so ordered by any other Magistrate to pay compensation exceeding fifty rupees" may appeal from the order, in so far as the order relates to the payment of the compensation, as if such complainant or informant had been convicted on a trial held by such Magistrate

(4) When an order for payment of compensation to an accused person is made in a case which is subject to appeal under sub-section (3), the compensation shall not be paid to him before the period allowed for the presentation of the appeal has elapsed, or, if an appeal is presented, before the appeal has been decided and, where such order is made in a case which is not so subject to appeal, the compensation shall not be paid before the expiration of one month from the date of the order.

Note.—Referring to the amendment of this section the Select Committee say —

"We think that the words 'or to a Magistrate' near the beginning of this clause were left out on the ground that information to a Magistrate from any person other than a Police-officer must be a complaint. We think that this view overlooks the words 'with a view to his taking action under this Code,' which occur in the definition of 'complaint.' We also think that there is some force in the fact pointed out by the Calcutta High Court that s 190 (1) (c) seems to draw a distinction between information received and a complaint. We have, therefore, restored the words 'or to a Magistrate' "

"Sub sec (1) as re-drafted does not provide for the case where the complainant is absent at the time judgment is delivered and we think power should be given in such a case to summon him to appear and show cause"

' We think that there is some anomaly in enabling a Magistrate who cannot impose a fine of more than Rs. 50 to award compensation up to Rs. 100 and we have, therefore, proposed to reduce the amount of compensation which third-class Magistrates can award to Rs. 50 "

"In view of s 547 we do not see any necessity to provide in the new sub-sec. (2 A) that compensation should be recoverable as if it were a fine"

"We have re-drafted the proposed addition to sub-sec. (4) to make the intention clearer"

"We discussed at some length the various merits of the phrases—"frivolous or vexatious" as in the present Code, "false and either frivolous or vexatious" as in the Bill and 'false or vexatious, to the knowledge of the party' as in Act IX of 1922 recently passed to provide for compensatory costs in respect of false claims and defences. On the whole, we are in favour of the Bill as drafted. We do not think that the procedure of s. 250 should be used in every false case unless the case is also either frivolous or vexatious. In more serious cases it is desirable that the Magistrate should act under s. 476 with a view to the institution of a prosecution."

Notes.—1. See s 545 as to payment of expenses and also compensation in cases not provided for by this section, and s 547 for power to enforce refund of compensation.

2. History of section.—This section which was originally s. 250 in the Code of 1882 was repealed and replaced by Act IV of 1891, s. 2 as s. 560 in the 1882 Code. It is now retransferred to its old place capped with the present heading. The section which originally applied to Sessions cases was made applicable to all cases except such as are triable exclusively by a Court of Session of High Court. In the present Code "heard" has been substituted for the word "tried" and the heading is new. In the 1861 Code the words were "involous and veracious."

OBJECT OF SECTION.

3. Object of section not punitive—Compensation not fine—The object of this section is not to punish the complainant but to award by a summary order some compensation to the person against whom a frivolous or vexatious complaint is brought, leaving it to him to obtain further redress against the complainant by a regular civil suit or criminal prosecution"—Per BANERJEE, J., in 30 C. 123 at p. 129 (F.B.) An order of compensation is not a fine and if passed by a Magistrate of the first class is not appealable, whatever the amount awarded. Such an order passed in the form of a sentence of fine, the amount of which was to be paid as compensation to the accused, was held to be legal in substance though illegal in form 8 C. P. Cr. 13. The compensation which the Court is empowered to award is not a fine, but is in the nature of damages for malicious prosecution although it is made recoverable in a summary manner as if it were a fine, 25 M. 127. A Magistrate cannot award compensation by way of fine, 2 N.-W. P. H. C. R. 430; though the amount is recoverable in the same way as fine, 13 A. 96; A. 112. In awarding compensation the Magistrate must be strictly guided by the loss or inconvenience which the accused person has obtained, 1831 A. W. N. 167.

AT WHAT STAGE COMPENSATION MAY BE ORDERED.

4. No compensation where case dismissed before issue of process.—Compensation cannot be awarded in cases in which complaint is dismissed without issue of process for compelling the attendance of the accused. It is a condition precedent to the grant of compensation under this section that the case shall have been heard by the Magistrate and that he shall have discharged or acquitted the accused, 8 and 14 P. R. 1897; 29 A. 137. Compensation can be awarded only where there had been a discharge or acquittal after a frivolous or vexatious charge had been heard. Where a complaint was dismissed under s. 203, the fact that the accused was present with a pleader at the inquiry under s. 202 will not enable the Magistrate to award compensation, 3 P. R. 1906 = 84 P. L. R. 1906 = 4 Cr. L. J. 36.

5. Complete discharge or acquittal necessary to grant compensation.—When the accused is charged with offences, e.g., ss 352 and 379, I P C., and one only of them is proved, compensation cannot be given to the accused as the complaint was at any rate partly true. In order to enable a Magistrate to pass an order for compensation, there must be complete discharge or acquittal, 25 C. 53. But a complaint may be well founded as regards some of the accused and frivolous or vexatious as regards the others so as to render the complainant liable to make compensation to those others, 5 M. 381; 15 P. R. 1877. But the substitution of the word "heard" for "tried" renders a complete trial no longer necessary. An order under this section may be made after hearing only part of a case, but evidence must be heard 10 W. R. 61. See Note 16 to s. 247, 44 M. 31; 40 A. 610.

6. Framing of charge no bar to compensation.—The fact that a Magistrate has framed a charge under s. 254 against an accused person does not of itself prevent him from holding, after full inquiry, that the charge is frivolous and vexatious under this section, Ratanlal 736. But when a Magistrate considers evidence sufficient to justify the framing of a charge and subsequently changes his opinion, he must give reasons for so changing. Compensation for a frivolous and vexatious complaint may be awarded after the evidence for the defence had been heard, because it is quite possible that the Magistrate might not be able to detect the frivolous or vexatious nature of the complaint until the defendant has had an opportunity of explaining the real circumstances in making his defence Weir 11, 316, 10 B. 199.

7. Compensation may be directed on acquittal.—An order for compensation against a complainant may be made on an order of acquittal, 6 C. 381. The fact that the accused was tried and acquitted is no bar to the award of compensation, 5 M. 381. This case was followed in 10 B. 199. See also 6 C. 531; 14 P. R. 1884; 4 B. L. R. 296 = 15 W. R. 9 and 30 C. 123.

Compensation on withdrawal of complaint—See Notes 8 and 9 to s. 248

Compensation when acquittal owing to absence of complaint—See 1831 A. W. N. 113, 1891 A. W. N. 120, 63; 14 P. R. 1888

8. Award of compensation illegal when acquittal results from composition.—Though the composition of an offence under this section has the effect of an acquittal yet it is not such an acquittal, as brings the case within the provisions of this section. Therefore, where on an offence under s. 323, I P C., being compounded the trying Magistrate ordered the complainant to pay one of the accused Rs. 25 as compensation, his order was reversed as illegal, Ratanlal 957; 19 P. R. 1893; 30 P. R. 1910 = 41 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 638. Where the conduct of the accused has not been straightforward throughout, the order awarding compensation is liable to be set aside, 65 P. L. R. 1901. Where an offence is compounded under s. 345, compensation under this section cannot be awarded, as there is neither a discharge nor an acquittal but only a composition. This section does not apply so as to enable the Magistrate to award compensation to the accused, 7 C. P. 2 and Ratanlal 957 and 700, and 10 Bom. L. R. 1056.

9. Compensation may be awarded in cases tried summarily.—S 262 renders applicable, in the case of summons-cases tried summarily, all the provisions of s 250 and it is open to a Magistrate to award compensation in all cases whether tried summarily or not in which he acquits and his opinion that the complaint was frivolous or vexatious, 11 M. 142

IN RESPECT OF WHAT CASES COMPENSATION MAY BE ORDERED

10 In cases either frivolous or vexatious.—It is sufficient to support an order under this section that the complaint is either frivolous or vexatious and whether it is the one or the other is a question of fact. Thus, where a complainant not satisfied with the conviction and punishment by a Village Magistrate of the person complained against, complained to a second-class Magistrate in the same matter, it was held that the compensation was rightly awarded inasmuch as the complaint whether frivolous or not, was certainly vexatious and improper, Weir II, 319. But under the new amendment s 250 is applicable to cases which must be false and either frivolous or vexatious also

In 23 A. L. J. 1054 it appears to have been held that for the application of s 250 as amended the complaint should be false, frivolous or vexatious.

But in a later decision in 24 L. J. 161 it was held that under the alteration made in the old Code in respect of s. 250 it is now necessary for the award of compensation under the new section it is necessary that the complaint should be false and either frivolous or vexatious

11. Accusation must be the committing of an "offence."—See definition of complaint s 4 at pp. 6–10 and 36 A. 378; 45 A. 363.

(i) No compensation for false information under ss 107 and 110.—To justify the application of this section, a person must be accused before a Magistrate of an offence triable by a Magistrate which an institution or proceedings under s 107 for taking security to keep the peace, is not, 25 B. 43 which follows 15 A. 365; 4 P. R. 1898; 37 P. R. 1884; 16 P. R. 1893, 33 P. R. 1902. See also 7 A. L. J. 743 = 11 Cr. L. J. 446 and 36 A. 382 and Note 149 at p 216, 20 A. L. J. 824; 21 A. L. J. 207.

(ii) No compensation where application is for maintenance under Chapter XXXVI.—An application for maintenance is not a complaint of an offence or an accusation of an offence and no order for payment of compensation can be made under this section, 6 M. L. T. 261 = 11 Cr. L. J. 156 and see also Heading I to s 488.

(iii) No compensation where complaint is as to the use of a house as a brothel.—Section 41 of the Bombay District Police Act does not make the use of a house as a brothel an offence, so in a case where such a complaint is made and dismissed no compensation can be awarded, 6 S. L. R. 254 = 14 Cr. L. J. 320.

(iv) No compensation for cases under Act XIII of 1839.—Compensation cannot be awarded under this section to a person against whom a complaint has been made under cl (1) of s 2, Act XIII of 1839, for, as neglect or refusal to perform work according to a contract is not made punishable by that clause a complaint of such neglect or refusal is not a complaint of an offence under s. 4 (4) and this section Ratanlal 617; 4 C. W. N. 233, 4 M. 234; 17 A. L. J. 163.

12 Compensation may be granted only in cases ordinarily triable by a Magistrate and not in Sessions Cases.—The words triable by a Magistrate mean triable under s 26 and the provisions of this section are confined to cases specified in the 8th column of Schedule II as triable by a Magistrate Hence a Magistrate who is specially empowered under s. 30 is not competent to make an order for compensation under this section in a case triable by a Court of Session as specified in column 8, Schedule II, 26 P. R. 1902, 1 P. R. 1919 (Cr.) and 15 P. R. 1919 (Cr.) Similarly, even where a Magistrate discharges the accused in a case triable exclusively by the Court of Session, he has no power to order the complainant to pay compensation, Weir II, 315 Although a first-class Magistrate discharges the accused under this section on account of the charge being vexatious, yet if the offence charged be triable exclusively by the Court of Session the Magistrate cannot award compensation under this section to the accused Ratanlal 961, 14 P. R. 1902; 91 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 395, 19 Bom. L. R. 60; 18 A. L. J. 466; 20 A. L. J. 433 = 40 A. 615 But see 45 M. 29 where a Magistrate tried an accused person for an offence under a less serious section of I P C, when really the offence fell under a more serious section which was beyond his competence his proceedings were not illegal and an award of compensation under s 250, Cr P C, was not illegal although the offence was really exclusively triable by a Court of Session = 41 M. L. J. 393; 43 A. 168 = 26 A. L. J. 1056.

13. Compensation may be ordered for false complaint of wrongful seizure of cattle.—It was formerly held that on the dismissal of a complaint of wrongful seizure of cattle, it is not competent to a Court to act under this section and award compensation to the person against whom complaint is made, 18 A. 353; 23 C. 218; 9 M. 102 and 374. These cases were decided under the Code of 1882. Now the definition of the word 'offence' is made to "include any act in respect of which a complaint may be made under s. 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act, 1871," therefore, dismissal of a complaint of wrongful seizure of cattle is equivalent to discharge or acquittal and consequently it seems compensation is now awardable. The distinction should, however, be kept in mind between compensation under this section and under s. 22 of the Cattle Trespass Act, under this section compensation is to the accused, while under s. 22 it is to the complainant and an appeal lies under s. 407. From an order under this section, there is no appeal under s. 407, 29 M. 817.

13-A. When there were two charges and there was conviction as to one and acquittal as to another, held, that to order compensation to be paid in respect of the charge as to which there was an acquittal is illegal, 16 A. L. J. 499.

14. No compensation for cases instituted on Police report.—The operation of this section is restricted to cases instituted by complaint as defined in the Code or upon information given to a Police-officer or Magistrate, or on information given by ¶ 142 and 6 A. 96. But where information given to a Police-dealt with under s. 250, 14 C.

W. N. 326 = 11 Cr. L. J. 201. No compensation can be ordered against a person whose statement is an inquiry instituted by the Police formed the basis of the further proceedings 1 Patna L. J. 106 = 17 Cr. L. J. 338.

15. No compensation for cases instituted under s. 476—Where a case is sent for trial under s. 476 to a Magistrate, the Magistrate cannot pass an order under this section directing the person at whose instance the case was sent to pay compensation as no case was instituted either by complaint or by information given to a Police-officer or to a Magistrate 14 Bom. L. R. 118 = 1 Bom. Cr. Ca. 337 = 14 Cr. L. J. 1.

15-A. Compensation can be awarded in a case originated by a complaint before a Village Magistrate—1917 M. W. N. 156.

15-B. A complaint under s. 28 of the Bombay Public Conveyances Act, 1883, is not a complaint in respect of an offence within the meaning of s. 230 Cr P C. The Court has therefore no power to make an order under s. 250; 44 B 462.

WHO MAY BE MADE TO PAY COMPENSATION.

16. Compensation for information given subsequent to complaint.—The accusation against the accused was not made on the information on which the case was instituted but the arrest of the accused was due to clues subsequently furnished by the complainant or other persons interested in the case, and it was argued that it was only the accusations in the first information that could be dealt with under this section. Held, that though the original complainant may not be liable for all accusations made by others interested in the case in its course, yet where the original complainant himself is the author of the subsequent accusations he may be dealt with under s. 250, 14 C. W. N. 326 = 11 Cr. L. J. 201.

17. Person giving information to Village Magistrate, which the Village Magistrate is bound to pass on to Police—A man who complains to a Village Magistrate of a non bailable offence, knowing that the latter must in the ordinary course of his duty report the substance of the complaint to the Police gives information to the

See Note 14 45 M. L. J. 255

18. A person who institutes a complaint under the orders of a superior officer cannot be ordered to pay compensation.—A Magistrate can order compensation to be paid by a person to the accused only when the prosecution of the accused was on the complaint of that person or on information given by that person to a Police-officer or to a Magistrate within the meaning of this section. (i) A Karkun or a process server on the establishment of a Civil Court, entrusted with the execution of a writ, reported to the Court that a particular person

30. Whether order for payment of compensation must form part of the order of discharge or acquittal

—It should be noted carefully that under the newly amended s 250 it is only the order calling upon the complainant to show cause why he should not pay compensation which has to be contained in the order of discharge and not the order for payment of compensation which has necessarily to be a subsequent order. So now the order for the payment of compensation cannot form part of the order of discharge or acquittal, 7 Lah 421. One of the two accused was discharged and the case was against the other accused was adjourned when he was acquitted and the Magistrate called upon the complainant to show cause against an order for compensation being passed and directed the complainant to pay compensation to each of the accused that under s 250 as now amended the procedure adopted was now illegal. The case against the accused who was discharged was at an end when the order of discharge was made and the order to show cause under s 250 so far as payment of compensation to him was concerned should have been made along with the order of discharge. 23 C. W. N. 127. In view of the latest amendment as the order for the payment of compensation cannot form part of the order of discharge or acquittal, the following cases have lost much of their force.

A Magistrate in making an order under this section must do so in passing the order of discharge or acquittal. Where a Magistrate happened to make an order by way of separate proceedings on a date subsequent to the date of the discharge of the accused held that the order was made without jurisdiction, as there is nothing in the Code which authorizes the Magistrate to hold an inquiry on a subsequent date and make an order under this section. 25 A. 315, 34 A. 354. An order of compensation passed not at the time of the discharge of the accused but days after, at the time when the co-accused was acquitted, is made without jurisdiction, 10 N. L. R. 8 = 15 Cr. L. J. 290. Where a Magistrate discharged the accused in the absence of the complainant and at a subsequent date after that the order was ill the case without discharge.

1905 = 3 Cr. L. J. 123, 11 A. 1100 = 11 F. L. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 48. See also 23 M. L. J. 54. N. 21. A Magistrate in the same order discharged the accused and called on the complainant to show cause why he should not pay compensation of Rs 20 and subsequently after hearing him made an order for payment of Rs 10, held though the procedure seemed to be perfectly fair and reasonable it did not fulfil the requirements of s 250. What that section evidently contemplates and expressly requires is that, before a Magistrate makes it the ground for discharging a person complained against, on a ground that the complaint was frivolous or vexatious he shall hear the complainant on that aspect of the case and unless he does this the whole proceeding is void, 33 C. 302. Where however, a Magistrate by the same order discharging the accused declared the case to be vexatious and directed the complainant to pay a compensation of Rs. 50 to the accused subject to any cause to be shown by him and on the following day made the order absolute held distinguishing 33 C. 302, that the requirements of s 250 has been strictly complied with. The provisions of this section are complied with if the Magistrate fixed the compensation in his order of discharge. If the complainant was not in Court at the time the order of discharge is passed, the Magistrate would not be justified in keeping the accused in custody with the charge hanging over him while the complainant is being fetched to show cause. It might be that the complainant could not be procured for a month. The proviso to the section contemplates that the direction in the first paragraph of the section is conditional or in the nature of a rule and that the rule shall not be made absolute until the complainant has shown cause. 18 C. W. N. 702 = 15 Cr. L. J. 130.

It is enough if the order for compensation is substantially a continuation of the order of discharge or acquittal and part of the same proceedings. —The trying Magistrate signed and dated his order of discharge, then recorded an order calling on the complainant to show cause why he should not be directed to pay compensation, recorded and considered the complainant's objections and at once passed an order that compensation should be paid. The entire proceedings followed one another on the same date, held that the order for payment of compensation was substantially incorporated in and made a part of the order of discharge, 8 Bom. L. R. 847 = 4 Cr. L. J. 423. The trying Magistrate incorporated in his order of discharge an order directing the complainant to show cause, then adjourned the proceedings and after considering the complainant's representation passed an order directing compensation, the order of discharge having been passed four days previously, held that even though the proceedings were irregular, there had been a substantial compliance, 36 A. 152. The intention of the Legislature in including the words "by his order of acquittal" was not so much to secure that the Magistrate should pronounce the order of acquittal and compensation in one breath as might be supposed from the cases cited as to make it clear that the order of compensation should be passed in the same proceedings and not in further independent proceedings involving the recalling and re-examination of witnesses and in fact all the labours of a fresh trial. The result of following the cases in 25 A. 315; 34 A. 354 and 38 C. 302 would be

13. Compensation may be ordered for false complaint of wrongful seizure of cattle.—It was formerly held that on the dismissal of a complaint of wrongful seizure of cattle, it is not competent to a Court to act under this section and award compensation to the person against whom complaint is made 18 A. 333; 23 C. 248; 9 M. 102 and 374. These cases were decided under the Code of 1882. Now the definition of the word 'offence' is made to 'include any act in respect of which a complaint may be made under s. 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act, 1871,' therefore dismissal of a complaint of wrongful seizure of cattle is equivalent to discharge or acquittal and consequently it seems compensation is now awardable. The distinction should, however, be kept in mind between compensation under this section and under s. 22 of the Cattle Trespass Act, under this section compensation is to the accused, while under s. 22 it is to the complainant and an appeal lies under s. 407 from an order under this section, there is no appeal under s. 407, 29 M. 517.

13-A. When there were two charges and there was conviction as to one and acquittal as to another, held, that to order compensation to be paid in respect of the charge as to which there was an acquittal is illegal, 15 A. L. J. 499.

14. No compensation for cases instituted on Police report.—The operation of this section is restricted to cases instituted by complaint as defined in the Code or upon information given to a Police-officer or Magistrate, and consequently it has no application to a case instituted on a Police report, or on information given by a Police-officer, 21 C. 979; 5 C. W. N. 370; 7 C. W. N. 206; 7 M. 563 and 1901 A. W. N. 162 and 6 A. 98. But where a case is ultimately instituted upon a Police report, but is originally based on information given to a Police-officer, held that the person who gave the information to the Police-officer may be dealt with under s. 250, 14 C. W. N. 326 = 11 Cr. L. J. 201. No compensation can be ordered against a person whose statement is an inquiry instituted by the Police formed the basis of the further proceedings, 1 Patna L. J. 106 = 17 Cr. L. J. 836.

15. No compensation for cases instituted under s. 476—Where a case is sent for trial under s. 476 to a Magistrate, the Magistrate cannot pass an order under this section directing the person at whose instance the case was sent to pay compensation as no case was instituted either by complaint or by information given to a Police-officer or to a Magistrate 15 Bom. L. R. 118 = 1 Bom. Cr. Ca. 237 = 14 Cr. L. J. 1.

15-A. Compensation can be awarded in a case originated by a complaint before a Village Magistrate.—1917 M. W. N. 158.

15-B. A complaint under s. 28 of the Bombay Public Conveyances Act, 1883, is not a complaint in respect of an offence within the meaning of s. 230, Cr. P. C. The Court has therefore no power to make an order under s. 250; 44 B. 463.

WHO MAY BE MADE TO PAY COMPENSATION.

16. Compensation for information given subsequent to complaint.—The accusation against the accused was not made on the information on which the case was instituted but the arrest of the accused was due to clues subsequently furnished by the complainant or other persons interested in the case, and it was argued that it was only the accusations in the first information that could be dealt with under this section. Held, that though the original complainant may not be liable for all accusations made by others interested in the case in its course, yet where the original complainant himself is the author of the subsequent accusations he may be dealt with under s. 250, 14 C. W. N. 326 = 11 Cr. L. J. 201.

17. Person giving information to Village Magistrate, which the Village Magistrate is bound to pass on to Police—A man who complains to a Village Magistrate of a non bailable offence, knowing that the latter must in the ordinary course of his duty report the substance of the complaint to the Police, gives information to the Police just as effectively as if he went in person to the Police-station and if the Police charge the case, it is a case instituted on information given to a Police-officer within the meaning of s. 250. The case would be different if the information was not a matter which the village headman is bound to pass on, 27 M. L. J. 37 = 1918 M. W. N. 804 = 15 Cr. L. J. 431 where 25 M. 667; 23 M. L. J. 138 = 10 M. L. T. 850 = 13 Cr. L. J. 29 and Cr. P. C. 827 of 1913 were distinguished from on the authority of 32 M. 255 (F.B.). See also 16 Cr. L. J. 243 (M.), 17 Cr. L. J. 503; 22 M. L. J. 72. See Note 14 45 M. L. J. 255.

18. A person who institutes a complaint under the orders of a superior officer cannot be ordered to pay compensation.—A Magistrate can order compensation to be paid by a person to the accused only when the prosecution of the accused is on the complaint of that person or on information given by that person to a Police-officer or to a Magistrate within the meaning of this section. (i) A Karkun or a process server on the command of a Civil Court, entrusted with the execution of a writ, reported to the Court that a person obstructed him in attaching property as commanded by the writ, and a report was thereupon made by the Court to a Magistrate, with a view to proceedings being taken against the obstructor. The Magistrate acquitted the accused and ordered the karkun to pay the accused compensation under this section. Held, that such last mentioned order was wrong, the karkun not being a complainant within the meaning of this section. In such a case as the above the Subordinate Judge should be regarded as the complainant, and he having acted judicially, was not liable to the penalty provided in the section, 1 B. 175; 20 C. 481; 26 A. 183, where 20 C. 481 is followed, 25 P. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 831; Weir 11, 318. (ii) Where on the sanction of an Assistant Superintendent of Police to prosecute for an offence, a Station House Officer prepared a charge-sheet which was presented to the Magistrate by a constable, and the Magistrate while discharging the woman made an order under this section directing the constable to pay compensation, held, that the order was illegal. The constable was not in such circumstances "the person upon whose complaint or information the accusation was made," 1 B. 115 referred to 21 M. L. J. 844 = 10 M. L. T. 191 = 12 Cr. L. J. 432.

19. Person complaining under the authority of an executive body may be made to pay compensation—The accused was charged by a municipal peon under the sanction of the municipality with the offence of easing herself within municipal limits of S. The trying Magistrate acquitted the accused, and ordered the peon to pay one rupee as compensation to the accused. The District Magistrate referred the case to the High Court on the authority of the case in 1 B. 175 for reversal of the order of compensation. Held, that this case differed from the one cited, as there the complaint was preferred by a Judge acting judicially. An executive body cannot authorize a servant to prefer a wrongful complaint and so screen the complainant from the legal penalty, Ratanlal 309. But this section was held inapplicable where a Municipal jamadar arrested a person whom he considered to be committing in his presence an offence, the person arrested having been sent up for trial in the usual manner by the Police and having been acquitted, 1901 A. W. N. 182.

20. Judicial officer acting as such cannot be ordered to pay compensation.—See Note 18 above

21. Liability of Public officers to pay compensation—Public officers are not exempted from liability to make compensation for vexatious and frivolous complaints, Weir II, 317. But where a public servant only gave evidence as a witness where the proceedings were instituted on the information of his official superior, an order directing the public servant who gave evidence to pay compensation was held bad, Weir II, 318. As to Police officers, see Note 14 above

22. Police-officers may be made to pay compensation—Where a Police-officer is not permitted by this Code to make a report e.g. in a non cognizable case, he may initiate proceedings by laying information before the Magistrate just as any other complainant might do. Such information will be a complaint within the meaning of this section and compensation may be awarded if the complaint is vexatious, 26 B. 180 (F.B.) which overrules 22 B. 934. Following this case it was held that where a Police-officer lays information under s. 68 (1) of the Bombay District Police Act, it is a complaint and a Magistrate has jurisdiction to grant compensation if he decides that the case was frivolous or vexatious, 6 S. L. R. 82 = 13 Cr. L. J. 752. See, however, Note 14

23. Can a servant be made to pay compensation?—Where a servant complained on behalf of his master, it was held that the servant was not liable to pay compensation under this section, 17 P. R. 1879 and 24 P. R. 1869, but it would be different now. See 14 C. W. N. 326 = 11 Cr. N. J. 601, where it was held that the question whether a servant can be held responsible for information lodged on behalf of his master was a question on fact and depended on the question whether the servant is merely the mouthpiece of the master and is merely giving expression to his master's accusation or whether he joins personally in the accusation himself.

24. Guardian of minor cannot be made to pay compensation—A guardian or next friend of a minor complainant cannot be ordered to pay compensation to the accused, 1 P. W. R. 1912 = 63 P. L. R. 1912 = 13 Cr. L. J. 136.

24-A. Where a person gives information to another to the effect that a certain constable has committed extortion intending that a complaint should be made on his behalf and the complaint is dismissed as frivolous, held that such a person is liable to make compensation to the accused, the fact that he employed another in giving the information being immaterial, 151 A. L. J. 879; 40 A. 79.

WHO MAY ORDER COMPENSATION.

25. It is only the Magistrate that hears the case that can award compensation.—When a Magistrate acquitted the accused and was of opinion that compensation should be awarded subject to complainant showing cause and was transferred before passing final orders and his successor awarded compensation, held the order was bad as the successor had not heard the case. 1892 A. W. N. 58

25-A.—Magistrate by whom the case is heard.—Whether Magistrate who decided the case, but has not heard whole of the evidence can order compensation? Where part of the evidence was heard by one Magistrate and then the case was made over to another Magistrate under s. 34b Cr P C., the latter Magistrate heard the rest of the evidence and decided the case, held that such Magistrate was competent to order compensation under s. 250, 19 A. L. J. 631.

26. Appellate Court cannot award compensation.—The special provisions of this section are applicable only to original trials. "The Magistrate by whom the case is heard" does not include the Court of Appeal. Therefore a District Magistrate cannot on appeal while setting aside the order of the Subordinate Magistrate convicting the accused, direct the complainant to pay compensation 3 Bom. L. R. 841; 7 Bom. L. R. 999 = 3 Cr. L. J. 88; 8 M. H. G. R. Appx. VII. The Appellate Court in reversing a conviction is not competent to make an order under this section. In view of the express terms "Magistrate by whom the case is heard," s. 423 (1) (d) cannot be taken to confer such power on the Appellate Court. The order for compensation must therefore be made by the Original Court 1892 A. W. N. 58; 28 A. 623; contra 14 C. W. N. 212 = 11 Cr. L. J. 46. But the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court (JEJINUS, C.J., dissenting) reconsidered the decision in 14 C. W. N. 212, and overruling it, held that this section, being confined by its terms to the Courts of Magistrates trying cases in the first instance, does not confer on the Appellate Court the power to order compensation to accused. It is not an order "consequential or incidental" to an order under this section but is a special power given to an original Magistrate alone, 39 C. 137 (F.B.); 46 A. 80; 7 Lah. 152.

PROCEDURE IN SECTION TO BE STRICTLY FOLLOWED.

27. Complainant must be called on to show cause and his objections recorded.—In a proceeding under this section, the procedure provided by cls. (a) and (b) should be strictly followed. An order directing payment of compensation ought not to be made without calling on the complainant to show cause against it as required by cl. (a) of this section, and the Magistrate should record and consider any objection which the complainant may urge against the making of the direction, Ratanlal 726; 3 Bom. L. R. 556 and 777; Weir II, 310; 5 C. W. N. 214; 11 C. W. N. 62, 9 A. L. J. 170 = 13 Cr. L. J. 268; 38 C. 302. The provisions relating to summary do not justify a Magistrate in omitting to record the complainant's objections to his order directing payment of compensation under this section and the omission to comply with the proviso to this section is more than a mere irregularity which could be cured by s. 537, 1906 U. B. R. Cr. Pro. 51 = 5 Cr. L. J. 298; 2 S. L. R. 4 and 14 = 10 Cr. L. J. 220 and 229. See also 8 S. L. R. 25 = 15 Cr. L. J. 666. Where owing to the absence of the complainant, the Magistrate made the order absolute stating "complainant is absent. His brother verbally shows cause which is insufficient," held, the order was bad as the complainant was in fact given no opportunity of showing cause 18 C. W. N. 1277 = 15 Cr. L. J. 707, 24 Bom. L. R. 805; but see 20 A. L. J. 369 (contra).

It is not a condition precedent to the making of an order for compensation under s. 250 of the Code that the Magistrate should issue a formal notice to the complainant to show cause (9 A. L. J. 170 distinguished) 45 A. 474.

But where the Magistrate believing that the complainant has deliberately absented himself on the day judgment was delivered ordered the complainant to pay compensation under s. 250 without giving him an opportunity to show cause against the order, held that the order was illegal and must be set aside, 24 A. L. J. 170.

28. Magistrate bound to record his reasons.—A Magistrate in ordering a complainant to pay compensation under this section should state his reasons why he deems the complaint to be vexatious and should also state in his judgment the facts of the case with a criticism of the incidents involved in it. The statement in his opinion the prosecution evidence is highly unsatisfactory and that upon the evidence and the written statement and documents he has no hesitation in saying the case is vexatious, is not sufficient 10 C. W. N. 211; 3 Cr. L. J. 390. The reasons must be contained in the same order discharging or acquitting the accused 18 C. W. N. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 43. As to what would be a sufficient compliance with the law as regards the reasons (b) of the proviso, see 8 Bom. L. R. 847 = 4 C. L. J. 423.

29. Complainant cannot adduce further evidence nor is he entitled to an adjournment.—"consider any objection which complainant may urge" do not entitle the complainant to adduce further evidence to prove that the charge was a true one. The direction to pay compensation should be made in the same order of discharge or acquittal. This clearly shows that there is not to be a separate inquiry and it is not required that a separate proceeding should be held and further evidence taken, 1896 F. T. 11. The intention of the Legislature that a complainant should be entitled to an adjournment to produce further evidence much less to an opportunity of producing further evidence 36 A. 192. See also 15 Cr. L. J. 504.

30. Whether order for payment of compensation must form part of the order of discharge or acquittal.

—It should be noted carefully that under the newly amended s 250 it is only the order calling upon the complainant to show cause why he should not pay compensation which has to be contained in the order of discharge, and not the order for payment of compensation which has necessarily to be a subsequent order. So now the order for the payment of compensation cannot form part of the order of discharge or acquittal, 7 Lab. 121. One of the two accused was discharged and the case was against the other accused was adjourned when he was acquitted and the Magistrate called upon the complainant to show cause against an order for compensation being passed and directed the complainant to pay compensation to each of the accused that under s. 250 as now amended the procedure adopted was now illegal. The case against the accused who was discharged was at an end when the order of discharge was made and the order to show cause under s 250 so far as payment of compensation to him was concerned should have been made along with the order of discharge 29 C. W. N. 127. In view of the latest amendment as the order for the payment of compensation cannot form part of the order of discharge or acquittal, the following cases have lost much of their force

A Magistrate in making an order under this section must do so in passing the order of discharge or acquittal. Where a Magistrate happened to make an order by way of separate proceedings on a date subsequent to the date of the discharge of the accused held that the order was made without jurisdiction, as there is nothing in the Code which authorizes the Magistrate to hold an inquiry on a subsequent date and make an order under this section, 25 A. 315; 34 A. 354. An order of compensation passed not at the time of the discharge of the accused but days after, at the time when the co-accused was acquitted, is made without jurisdiction 10 N. L. R. 8 = 15 Cr. L. J. 290. Where a Magistrate discharged the accused in the absence of the complainants and on a subsequent date after procuring their attendance made an order under this section awarding compensation, held that the order was illegal and that the proper course would have been for the Magistrate simply to adjourn the case without discharging the accused, with a view to secure the attendance of the complainant, 57 P. R. 1905 = 3 Cr. L. J. 123; 16 P. W. R. 1913 = 99 P. L. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 49. See also 23 M. L. J. 58. N 21. A Magistrate in the same order discharged the accused and called on the complainant to show cause why he should not pay compensation of Rs 20 and subsequently after hearing him made an order for payment of Rs 10, held though the procedure seemed to be perfectly fair and reasonable it did not fulfil the requirements of s 250. What that section evidently contemplates and expressly requires is that, before a Magistrate makes it the ground for discharging a person complained against, on a ground that the complaint was frivolous or vexatious he shall hear the complainant on that aspect of the case and unless he does this the whole proceeding is void, 38 C. 302. Where, however, a Magistrate by the same order discharging the accused, declared the case to be vexatious and directed the complainant to pay a compensation of Rs 50 to the accused, subject to any cause to be shown by him and on the following day made the order absolute, held distinguishing 38 C. 302, that the requirements of s 250 has been strictly complied with. The provisions of this section are complied with if the Magistrate fixed the compensation in his order of discharge. If the complainant was not in Court at the time the order of discharge is passed the Magistrate would not be justified in keeping the accused in custody with the charge hanging over him while the complainant is being fetched to show cause. It might be that the complainant could not be procured for a month. The proviso to the section contemplates that the direction in the first paragraph of the section is conditional or in the nature of a rule and that the rule shall not be made absolute until the complainant has shown cause 18 C. W. N. 702 = 15 Cr. L. J. 150.

It is enough if the order for compensation is substantially a continuation of the order of discharge or acquittal and part of the same proceedings—The trying Magistrate signed and dated his order of discharge, then recorded an order calling on the complainant to show cause why he should not be directed to pay complainant to show cause, then adjourned the proceedings and after considering the complainant's representation passed an order directing compensation, the order of discharge having been passed four days previously, held that even though the proceedings were irregular, there had been a substantial compliance, 35 A. 132. The intention of the Legislature in including the words 'by his order of acquittal' was not so much to secure that the Magistrate should pronounce the order of acquittal and compensation in one breath as might be supposed from the cases cited as to make it clear that the order of compensation should be passed in the same proceedings and not in further independent proceedings involving the recalling and re-examination of witnesses and in fact all the labours of a fresh trial. The result of following the cases in 25 A. 315; 34 A. 354 and 38 C. 302 would be that the trial would have to be indefinitely protracted if the complainant either could not or would not appear on the day fixed for judgment. Where, therefore the complainant was absent owing to illness on 14th June when the case came to a conclusion and the accused was acquitted and in the order of acquittal it was stated that the case was frivolous and notice was ordered to the complainant why compensation should not be directed and on the 23rd June the final order directing payment of compensation was passed, held following 8 Bom. L.R. 847 = 4 Cr. L.R. 423, that s. 250 had been substantially complied with, 7 B. L.R. 123 = 15 Cr. L.J. 504. See 18 C. W. N. 702 = 15 Cr. L.J. 150 alone. An order of discharge in which was incorporated an order calling on the complainant to show cause, was followed by an adjournment the complainant showed cause but did not impugn the jurisdiction of the Court and finally an order for compensation was passed held that in spite of the adjournment there had been in substance one single proceeding, 1903 A. W. N. 214 = 2 Cr. L.J. 522. See also (1916) 2 M. W. N. 159 = 4 L. W. 32 = 12 Cr. L.J. 314; 22 Bom. L.R. 184.

31. Imprisonment in default of the payment of Compensation.—Under the old law it was held that the order for imprisonment in default of payment of compensation could not be made until some attempt was made to recover the compensation. But under the new amendment by the addition of sub-sec. (2)(A) the Magistrate is empowered to further order that in default of payment of compensation the person ordered shall suffer simple imprisonment not exceeding thirty days and this can be done now by the order directing payment of compensation under sub-sec. (2). So the following cases holding that imprisonment in default cannot be awarded in the order for payment of compensation have become obsolete, 22 C. 596, 23 C. 231, 19 A. 73, 14 P.R. 1902, 22 C. 139 at p. 163, 18 P.R. 1903, Ratanlal 611.

31-A. Whether term of Imprisonment to be undergone in the whole or in respect of each accused.—Where under the provisions of s. 250 (2) of the Code the Court orders the complainant to pay compensation to each of the several accused persons separately and in default to suffer imprisonment, imprisonment may be awarded for default of each such separate payment as ordered. 3 Rang. 93.

32. Warrant of distress to precede order for Imprisonment.—A Magistrate in making an order for compensation is ordinarily bound if the amount be not paid, to proceed to the recovery of it by distress and sale of the moveables of the person ordered to pay. It was formerly held that if such person admits that he has no goods and thereby waives the right to have the amount levied by distress, the Magistrate may proceed, to imprison him in jail, and the imprisonment will run out the term ordered, unless the sum be sooner paid, see, unless the imprisoned person pays it. But the warrant of distress cannot have currency simultaneously with the imprisonment, because the alternative permitted in case of failure to realise has already been adopted, 23 W. R. 64. But it has now been ruled that even if the person ordered to pay, pleads inability the issue of a warrant under s. 386 is a condition precedent to the making of the order for imprisonment, 28 M. 127. This section construed with s. 388 (2) makes the issue of a warrant for the levy of the amount of the compensation by distress and sale of the moveable property of the complainant a condition precedent to the carrying out of the sentence of imprisonment, 3 L. B. R. 32. See also 28 C. 164.

APPEAL AND REVISION.

33. Are appeals under this section governed by Chap XXXI?—S. 250 (3) does not declare what the powers of the Appellate Court are in disposing of appeals, it is therefore necessary to invoke the aid of s. 423 for this purpose. S. 250 is not self-contained, 28 M. L.J. 204 = 16 Cr. L.J. 128. A Sessions Judge is not competent to set aside in appeal the order granting compensation passed by a first-class Magistrate under this section, 1 Bom. L.R. 350.

33-A. Scope of sub-sec. (3) of s. 250.—Sub-sec. (3) of s. 250 of the Code means that whenever a complainant or Informant has been ordered under sub-sec. (2) to pay compensation exceeding Rs. 50 the right of appeal is given, whether the compensation has been awarded only to one accused or has to be distributed amongst a number of accused in sums not exceeding Rs. 50. 26 Bom. L.R. 1243 = 49 B. 450, see also 24 A. L.J. 167.

34. On appeal, notice should go to accused and Public Prosecutor.—See s. 422. Though there is no express provision of law that notice should be given to the accused in an appeal from an order of compensation under s. 150, it is desirable that notice should go to the accused as he will be the party prejudiced, 29 M. 187; but the order on appeal will not be set aside merely because no notice is given to the accused, 33 M. 89. But on general principles 'audi alteram partem' it would be improper to make an order without notice to the accused, 28 M. L.J. 204 = 16 Cr. L.J. 123. It is, however, imperative that notice of the appeal should be given to the Crown under s. 422, 29 M. 187. In 27 M. L.J. 629 = 16 M. L.T. 426 = 15 Cr. L.J. 643, it was pointed out that under the rules of practice notice should go to the District Magistrate but the Court declined to interfere with an order passed without such notice as no one had been prejudiced. When a complainant has been ordered to pay compensation to a person accused by him but acquitted such latter person is not the accused within the meaning of cl. (2) of s 422 and has no right to be heard in a proceeding relating merely to the order for compensation. It is rather the complainant who is the accused within the meaning of that clause he being virtually accused that is convicted and sentenced for making a frivolous or vexatious complaint. He is the person who has to make a defence in such a proceeding and not the person who though once accused has been acquitted and whose acquittal is not in question 14 P R 1838, 41 M L J 472

35 Revisional jurisdiction of the High Court.—An order under this section made by a first-class Magistrate may be revised by the High Court under ss 435 and 439 and when compensation ordered has been paid the amount paid may be recovered under s 547 if the High Court sets aside the order 29 P R 1903, 12 P R 1833 and see also 10 Cr L J 569 (M)

36 Death of accused or complainant pending revision of order.—When a Magistrate awarded compensation under this section to an accused who afterwards died and the complainant in revision applied to the High Court to call for and revise the records it was held that as the accused was dead no order could be made because none could be passed to the prejudice of a person who could not be served with a notice, Ratanlal 634 In a similar case where pending revision against the order awarding compensation the complainant petitioner dies the application does not abate but can be prosecuted by his legal representatives 24 P R 1908 = 9 Cr L J 403.

MISCELLANEOUS.

37 Award of compensation followed by granting of sanction to prosecute the complainant is not bad.—In acquitting the accused on a charge of theft which the Magistrate found to be false and malicious he awarded compensation to be paid to each of them by complainant. Subsequently one of the accused applied for and obtained sanction to prosecute complainant under s 211 I P C and it was granted. Held that the order was not illegal 21 M, 237 following 6 B L R 296 = 15 W R 9, Weir II, 311. The passing of the order of compensation does not prevent the Magistrate from granting a sanction to prosecute the complainant under s 211 I P C 37 B 376, where 21 M 237 is followed and 26 C, 181 is dissented from

38 The grant of sanction no bar to granting compensation.—A Magistrate by granting or by expressing in intention to grant sanction to prosecute the complainant under s. 211 I P C is not precluded from awarding under this section reasonable compensation to the accused 30 P W R 1907. In 21 M 237 the Court dissented from the case in 22 C 586, and remarked: "We do not think that there is anything in s 220 to justify the conclusion that a Magistrate who grants sanction to prosecute for offence punishable under ss 211 and 193 I P C, ipso facto debarred from also granting compensation under that section to the person falsely accused. The sanction to prosecute for making a false charge is granted on the grounds of public policy for an offence against public justice. The compensation is granted partly in order to deter a complainant from making vexatious and frivolous complaints and partly in order to compensate the accused for trouble and expense to which he has been put by the complainant. We can see no ground in law or reason why compensation should not be granted in a case in which the Magistrate also directs prosecution for making a false charge. The case in 6 B L R 296 = 15 W R 9 appears to be an authority directly opposed to their conclusion." followed 18 P R 1901. There is nothing in the Code which makes it illegal for a Magistrate who takes proceeding under s 47b to award compensation under this section 7 B L R 10 = 14 Cr L J, 437, 10 S L R 162. See also 6 P R 1904. Failure to make an order under this section does not preclude the Magistrate from directing the prosecution of the complainant 4 Bur L T 246 = 12 Cr L J 321

39 Discretionary with the Magistrate what course to adopt in any case.—The question whether the discretion given by this section has been rightly exercised must always depend upon the facts of the particular case. If the false charge is of such a nature that a prosecution is necessary on grounds of public policy it may well be that a Magistrate would exercise his discretion wrongly if instead of sanction a prosecution he awarded compensation. If the false charge is one which does not render it necessary on grounds of public policy that a prosecution should be sanctioned a Magistrate who makes an order for compensation cannot be said to exercise his discretion wrongly 27 M 59. In 1 S. L. R. 23 (F B) = 9 Cr L J 268, it was held following 27 M 59, and overruling 1 S. L. R. 12 = 9 Cr L J 235 that in every case it must in the first instance be left to the discretion of the Magistrate to decide whether a charge which is found to be false is also vexatious so as to authorize him to award compensation. The words frivolous or vexatious used in this section are not used ejusdem generis. They are applied to the accusation and not to the offence which it alleges. See 37 B 376. See also 29 C 479, where the order under this section was set aside on the ground that the complaint was of a serious offence, without prejudice to the Magistrate granting sanction for a prosecution under s 211, I P C.

40 Calcutta view—Sanction to prosecute and award of compensation cannot be made at one time.—It was never intended that recourse should be had to the provisions of this section in a case in which the trying Magistrate is of opinion that the complaint is wilfully and maliciously false, and that the complainant should be prosecuted for an offence under s 211, I P C. To sanction or direct a prosecution and also to proceed to award compensation is an improper use of discretion, 26 C 181. By such action the Magistrate, in fact, prejudices the issue of the charge which he was submitting for trial, 22 C 536. Also 13 P. R. 1896. But this view has not been generally accepted elsewhere. See Notes 38 and 39.

41. The total amount of compensation to be paid under this section.—Under s 250 sub-sec. (2) all that is prohibited is that compensation to the accused or each of them where there are more than one should not exceed Rs 100 in amount. The section does not mean that if there are a number of accused persons the total amount awarded to them must not exceed the maximum. 24 A. L. J. 221.

CHAPTER XXI.

OF THE TRIAL OF WARRANT-CASES BY MAGISTRATES

Magistrates must follow the Code and not any usage of their own.—The provisions of the Code have to be followed and Magistrates are not at liberty to substitute for the procedure of the Code a procedure which has arisen by usage, however convenient the latter may be. A trial conducted in a mode materially different from that prescribed by law is not a proper trial, 17 Bom L R. 490 = 3 Bom Cr. Ca. 39 = 16 Cr. L. J. 538.

Procedure in 251. The following procedure shall be observed by Magistrates in the warrant-cases. trial of warrant cases

Notes.—1. Procedure to be observed by Presidency Magistrates—A warrant-case must be tried by a Presidency Magistrate in the manner provided by this Chapter, subject only to the special provisions of s. 362 as to the mode of taking down the evidence, Ratanlal 539.

2. Procedure—Combination of summons and warrant-cases.—Two charges were made against the accused arising out of exactly the same state of facts and under the same circumstances. One charge was of voluntarily causing hurt and the other of theft. In such a case when no order is made for a separate trial, it is plain that the mode of trial applicable to such a case is that which is applicable to the greater of the two charges, i.e., the procedure should be that prescribed for warrant-cases, 11 C. 91, 18 M. L. T. 92 = 16 Cr. L. J. 540, 3 L. B. R. 113 = 3 Cr. L. J. 350. See also 29 C. 491 and Note 2 to s. 241.

3. Trial of summons-case commented as warrant case.—See 18 Cr. L. J. 250 (M.) and 18 M. L. T. 92 = 1915 M. W. N. 546 = 16 Cr. L. J. 840 and Note 4 to s. 241.

4. Trial of a warrant-case as a summons-case illegal—Where a Magistrate tried a warrant-case (under s. 9 of the Opium Act I of 1878) without recording any evidence in support of the prosecution as required by s. 252 and merely calling upon the accused to plead to the charge, convicted him on his own admission as under section 243 without even framing a formal charge, held that the procedure adopted was more than a mere irregularity and the conviction was set aside on the ground it had occasioned a failure of justice to the accused 29 M. 372. See also 17 P. R. 1887. If a Magistrate tries a warrant-case as a summons-case and professes to deal with it as a summons case, his procedure is wholly irregular and in such trial, if he passes an order of acquittal under s. 245, such order can at best be regarded only as one of discharge under s. 253 and may be dealt with as such under s. 437, 1885 A. W. N. 96 and 260. The mere fact that a summons instead of a warrant had been issued in a case falling under this Chapter will not justify the procedure as in summons-case, 10 W. R. 31, see also 5 M. L. T. 205, 7 M. 454.

4. Trial—When commences.—In one case seven persons were charged by the Police with theft in a building, of dishonest receipt and disposal of stolen property. The Magistrate took evidence against all the seven, discharged two and having come to the conclusion that the disposals of property by the appellant and the remaining accused did not form one transaction, he framed separate charges and tried the appellant separately from the other accused, but without re-hearing the evidence for the prosecution separately, although portion of the evidence which were relevant against the remaining accused, had no connection with the case of the appellant Held, that the word "trial" includes the taking of evidence in support of the prosecution, as also the whole of the subsequent procedure laid down in Chap XXI of the Code for the trial of warrant-cases and that the appellant should be tried de novo. The words "claims to be tried" in s 256 no doubt give colour to the argument that no trial commences until after the accused refuses to plead or does not plead or claims to be tried, but the words do not really raise any doubt that a trial under Chap XXI commences when the accused appears or is brought before a Magistrate under s 252, 3 L. B. R. 280 = 5 Cr. L. J. 417. But see Note (2) under s 4 (4) at p 12, 38 M. 585 and 29 F. R. 1914 = 16 Cr. L. J. 81.

252. (1) When the accused appears or is brought before a Magistrate such Magistrate shall proceed to hear the complainant (if any) and take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution

* Provided that the Magistrate shall not be bound to hear any person as complainant in any case in which the complaint has been made by a Court

(2) The Magistrate shall ascertain, from the complainant or otherwise, the names of any person likely to be acquainted with the facts of the case and to be able to give evidence for the prosecution, and shall summon to give evidence before himself such of them as he thinks necessary

Notes.—1. Magistrate may issue summons or dispense with the appearance of the accused.—A Magistrate has under s 204 discretion in warrant cases to issue a summons instead of a warrant for the attendance of the accused. See also 6 S. L. R. 206 = 14 Cr. L. J. 272

2. Magistrate not competent to examine how accused "is brought before the Court."—There is no provision of law which requires the Magistrate to examine the question as to how the accused came into the hands of the Police. Therefore, where a foreigner after committing an offence in British Indian territory, fled to his country and was pursued and arrested there by British Police and brought before the Court and convicted held that the conviction was legal and valid 6 P. R. 1899, 7 Bar. L. R. 66 at p. 68. See Note 15 at p 84 and Note 1 at p 441

3. Accused cannot be remanded to custody unless there be sworn testimony.—See ss 167 and 344 and Notes thereunder. A prisoner arrested under a warrant should be brought promptly before a Magistrate, who has then no authority to detain him further in custody or to remand him to prison without some reason being made manifest to him either in the shape of sworn testimony given before him, or in some other form which can be put upon the record and which is sufficient to justify him in sending the prisoner to prison, and there to be detained for a limited period for further examination, a period which is never in any case to exceed fifteen days 11 B. L. R. Appx VIII = 20 W. R. 23, 6 M. 69, 36 C. 174, and Notes thereunder

4. Evidence against accused to be recorded as early as practicable.—An accused person has a right to have the evidence against him recorded at as early a period as possible, and the fact that there is or may be a great body of evidence forthcoming against him is not a ground for detention for inordinate period 6 M. 63

5. Accused entitled to inspection of documents filed as exhibits but cannot call for fresh documents.—In a case of criminal breach of trust complainant produced several documents as evidence against the accused and they were admitted as exhibits. The Magistrate refused their inspection by the accused, though he allowed him to take certified copies thereof held that the accused was entitled to inspection of all documents filed as exhibits in the case, 1 Bom. L. R. 433. After the examination in-chief of the witnesses for the prosecution had concluded and before any charge was framed, the Magistrate at the instance of the accused made an order requiring the complainant to produce certain records, held, the Magistrate was wrong in making such an order at that stage of the case. The accused's right to call evidence, either witnesses or documents does not arise until after the charge has been framed. The right is given to him by s 257 and is subject to the limitations enjoined by that section 8 S. L. R. 267 = 16 Cr. L. J. 245. See Note 3 to s 257

6. Warrant-case cannot be dismissed for non-payment of process fee.—The dismissal of a complaint for non-payment of process-fee is illegal, Weir II, 323. A complainant in a warrant-case is not bound to produce his own witnesses.

7. Right of accused to cross-examine witnesses before framing of charge.—Opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution should be given to the accused if they should so desire even though the charge may not be framed, 8 C. W. N. 833. See Note 5 to s 256

* The proviso to subsec (1) has been added by Act XV of 1923

8. Duty of prosecution to come fully prepared to prove their case.—Under s. 252 the prosecutor is given full opportunity of substantiating the whole case. But it is expected, and the expectation is a right and proper one, that the prosecutors should come to Court with their case fully prepared and thought out. After the witnesses produced in support of the prosecution are heard, it is the duty of the Magistrate to see that the prosecutors are not allowed to set the Court on to a roaming inquiry, summoning persons in the hope that something may be elicited which would help their case and cases which ought to be heard within a fortnight are spoken out to a period of six weeks and more to the inconvenience of all concerned. There is no section in Code which authorizes a complainant to file a fresh list of prosecution witnesses, 12 A. L. J. 15 = 14 Cr. L. J. 682, but see 11 Bom. L. R. 1153 = 10 Cr. L. J. 830.

9. Magistrate bound to examine all witnesses tendered by the prosecutor.—See Note 2 to s. 253

10. Duty of prosecution in criminal trials.—Although it is for the accused in a criminal trial to establish in his defence any exception on which he relies, it is nevertheless the duty of the prosecution to throw all the light in its power upon all controverted facts relevant to the main issue, 1 P. R. 1884; 14 A. 521; 14 C. 255, 13 A. 6; 16 A. 84; 3 B. L. R. 200 = 11 Cr. L. J. 410. No adverse inference can be drawn against the accused for not having called any particular witness. See Notes 1 and 2 under s. 243

✓ 11. Magistrate must examine complainant.—See Note 3 under s. 253

✓ 12. Magistrate bound to compel attendance of witnesses summoned—complainant not bound to pay process-fees.—If, at the instance of one of the parties, a witness has been summoned as a witness and served with process, he has a right to call upon the Court to compel his attendance, 6 C. W. N. 545. Where a Magistrate has once issued summonses for the attendance of witnesses, he is bound to have the processes enforced before disposing of the case. See 35 C. 1093; 4 M. 329; 10 C. 931. There is nothing in this Code which enables a Magistrate to demand even from a complainant the expenses to be incurred by his witnesses though such a power is conferred by s. 244 (3) in a summons-case, 8 N. L. R. 65 = 13 Cr. L. J. 275.

13. No power to issue a warrant against a witness before issuing summons.—There is no legal sanction for a Magistrate taking cognizance of a complaint under s. 494, 1 P. C., to issue a warrant to compel the complainant's wife to attend as a witness, without first requiring her to attend by a summons as laid down by this section and it is only when the summons is neglected that severe measures can be taken. 22 F. W. B. 1907 = 6 Cr. L. J. 275.

14. Duty of Magistrate before summoning witnesses—witnesses not to be unnecessarily summoned.—On the 10th December, the complainant produced certain witnesses who were examined. On the 28th December, the complainant of his own accord filed a fresh list mentioning the names of 30 witnesses for the prosecution all of whom were summoned but not one was examined. The Magistrate ruled on s. 540 as justifying his action in summoning witnesses. KNOX J. while strongly condemning the action of the Magistrate observed that it is the duty of the Magistrate to ascertain from the complainant or otherwise the names of the persons likely to be acquainted with the facts of the case and to be able to give evidence for the prosecution. The Magistrate must exercise his discretion in selecting out of such witnesses those who seem to be necessary and those who seem to be unnecessary. "A witness is not an inanimate being and is not to be moved about as if he were a stick or stone. He is a living person who has his work to do and whose convenience has to be considered. For a Magistrate to send for any person whom the complainant names in a supplementary list is a thoughtless act and in some cases causes very serious inconvenience to persons who ought not to be subjected to such inconvenience." Under s. 540 it was not intended that the Magistrate should exercise his powers at the bidding of any person but the powers are given to prevent any danger of miscarriage of justice just because some particular witness has not been called. 12 A. L. J. 15 = 14 Cr. L. J. 682 where 28 A. 302, 19 A. 502, 21 W. R. 61 and 2 C. W. N. 702 referred to

253. (1) If, upon taking all the evidence referred to in section 252, and making such

Discharge of accused examination (if any) of the accused as the Magistrate thinks necessary, he finds that no case against the accused has been made out which, if un rebutted would warrant his conviction, the Magistrate shall discharge him

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prevent a Magistrate from discharging the accused at any previous stage of the case if, for reasons to be recorded by such Magistrate, he considers the charge to be groundless

Notes.—See Notes to s. 208 as to the duty of a Magistrate in Sessions cases, 340 for examination of accused, s. 259 when complainant is absent.

1. Magistrate has discretion to summon witnesses, but he is bound to examine those present.—It is not incumbent on the Magistrate to summon every person named as a witness by the complainant. This section must be read with s 252 which vests a discretionary power in the Magistrate, 23 W. R. 9. But he is not justified in discharging an accused person under this section without examining all the witnesses for the prosecution who were present and ready to give evidence, 11 C. W. N. 83. A person accused under s 408, I P C, cannot be discharged on the sole ground that the complaint was a mere matter of account.

2. Order of discharge not to be ordinarily made until all the prosecution evidence is taken.—An Order of discharge cannot ordinarily be passed until the evidence of all the witnesses named for the prosecution has been taken, 4 M. 329, 20 W. R. 67, 22 W. R. 25; Ratanlal 21, 3 P. W. R. 1908—7 Cr. L. J. 272 In (1911) 1 M. W. N. 149 = 99 M. L. T. 302 = 12 Cr. L. J. 105 it was held that 4 M. 329 was passed at a time when the Code had no provision similar to sub-sec. (2) and therefore a Magistrate does not act illegally in discharging the accused without examining all the prosecution witnesses. A Magistrate however, should not refuse to examine witnesses simply because their evidence will be to the same effect as that already taken for the prosecution, 3 C. 389, 2 A. 447. But this section and s. 209 (2) relieve the Magistrate from the necessity of going on with an inquiry or trial when he is reasonably convinced on what has already been deposed that a criminal charge cannot be sustained, Ratanlal 201, 24 A. L. J. 512.

3. Order without hearing complainant that accused should not be proceeded against is illegal—On the acquittal of a co accused, the other accused against whom warrants had been issued surrendered before the Deputy Magistrate who had acquitted the co accused the Deputy Magistrate passed an order at once directing that the accused should not be proceeded against and that the warrant should be withdrawn, held that this order of the Magistrate was bad in law and should be set aside. The proper course for him was to send a notice to the complainant requiring him to proceed with the case and then dispose of the case according to law, 12 C. W. N. 88 = 6 Cr L J. 367.

4 Discharge after full inquiry not desirable — Where there is a body of evidence which if believed justifies conviction, it is far better as a rule to draw up a charge and dispose of the case finally, 18 P. W. R 1909 = 11 Cr. L. J. 110 See 8 A. L. J. 707 = 12 Cr. L. J. 471, where KNOX, J., characterizes the procedure of delaying to frame a charge till all the evidence has been recorded as old fashioned and exploded See Note 3 to s 254

5. Not proceeding further against accused after issue of warrant amounts to a discharge.—Where after the issue of warrant of arrest against certain persons the Magistrate does not think it proper to proceed further held that the termination of proceedings against them is in effect an order of discharge, 4 C. W. N. 242

6 Discharge without considering the evidence on record is illegal.—Where a Deputy Magistrate with drew to his own file a case which had been sent by him for trial to a Bench of Magistrates who had already recorded some evidence and on the day of hearing no evidence being produced, the Deputy Magistrate dis charged the accused without taking into consideration the evidence already adduced, held the discharge was illegal as he should have disposed of the case on the evidence already on record, 33 C. 825.

7. In cases of doubt, discharge under this section would be the proper course—Section 254 requires a charge to be framed only when the Magistrate is of opinion that there is ground for presuming that the accused has committed the offence. But if the evidence recorded does not raise any such presumption, but merely leads to a doubt, the Magistrate ought to discharge under this section and if he framed a charge in the circumstances he would be acting contrary to the spirit of s. 254. 2 P. R. 1906 = 27 P. L. R. 1906 = 3 Cr. L. J. 343

8. What are not proper grounds for discharge.—

(1) Absence of complainant.—See s 259. In a warrant case in which, although the complainant's witnesses and accused were present, the Magistrate discharged the accused on the report of a Police-officer, held, that this procedure was illegal, as the Magistrate was bound to take the evidence of the complainant before

4 C. W. N. 26 and 46; W. N. 87. See s. 248 and Notes thereto. See also 20 C. W. N. 693 = 17 Cr. L. J. 193.

(ii) Withdrawal of complaint.—See 13 Bom. L. R. 61 = 14 Cr. L. J. 77. See ¶ 249 and Notes 1 and 2 thereto.

(iii) Illegal arrest by Police—A Magistrate is not justified in discharging an accused person merely because he has been illegally arrested by the Police without a warrant issued on complaint for a non cognizable offence. Ratanlal 73. See also 17 P. R. 1906 = 80 P. L. R. 1907 = 5 Cr. L. J. 89, and Note 2 to ¶ 252.

(iv) Want of jurisdiction.—A Magistrate who finds he has no jurisdiction to try a case cannot discharge the accused under this section, but should proceed under s. 346 Weir II, 323.

9 When reasons for discharge to be recorded.—It is only where a Magistrate discharges without examining all the witnesses for the prosecution that he is bound under sub-sec. (2) to record his reasons for the discharge. The Legislature does not render the writing of reasons necessary where an accused person is discharged after the trying Magistrate had heard all the evidence for the prosecution. It is however, desirable that the Magistrate should record all his reasons for discharge having regard to the fact that the order is not final 9 Bom L.R. 230 = 8 Cr L.J. 235

10 Taking evidence for defence without framing charge illegal.—A Magistrate after examining the witnesses for the prosecution and the accused drew no charge but taking evidence for the defence discharged the accused under this section finding the offence not proved. Held that the Magistrate acted contrary to law and most unfairly towards the accused who therefore ought to be treated as acquitted under s. 258 29 P.R. 1853; 1891 A.W.N. 180, 1836 A.W.N. 269; 18 Cr L.J. 1006

11 Accused has no right to call for evidence until after charge has been framed.—See 8 B.L.R. 267 = 16 Cr L.J. 245, Note 5 to s. 252.

12. Further inquiry in cases of discharge.—As to powers of Sessions Judges and District Magistrates see ss. 436 and 437. As to the powers of the High Court see s. 431

13. What a District Magistrate can or cannot do.—A Magistrate of the district has power to order a Subordinate Magistrate to revive a case in which the accused has been discharged even though no additional evidence is forthcoming 32 M. 220 (F.B.) 14 M. 235, 20 W.R. 46, 18 Cr L.J. 706, though it is legal for a District Magistrate to order a retrial on the same evidence such an order is opposed to principle as it is seriously prejudicial to the accused 8 P.R. 1909, 8 P.R. 1900, 2 P.R. 1901, but he cannot pass an order of remand directing a Subordinate Magistrate to proceed with the case from the stage at which he left it 20 W.R. 47, 4 C. 647. Nor is he competent to withdraw a case adjourned by a Deputy Magistrate for the purpose of framing a charge and then discharge the accused 30 C. 693. Nor has he jurisdiction to set aside an order directing that the accused should not be proceeded against (see Note 3 supra) and direct a retrial of the accused as it was not an order dismissing a complaint or discharging the accused 12 C.W.N. 63. In exercise of the power to order further inquiry the District Magistrate cannot himself frame the charge or direct the Subordinate Magistrate to frame the charge and to try the accused 32 M. 220 (F.B.) but he may himself make the further inquiry and frame the charge.

14. Re-arrest without notice of accused discharged by another Magistrate illegal.—If after the discharge of one of the accused the case of others is simply transferred by the District Magistrate to another Magistrate such Magistrate cannot direct the re-arrest and trial of the accused who have been previously discharged as no notice was given to them 1 Bom L.R. 782

15 Issue of warrant before setting aside order of discharge is bad.—When a District Magistrate had issued notice to the accused to show cause why his case should not be further inquired into he cannot issue warrant for the arrest of the accused until the order of discharge is set aside and the case is taken on his own file 15 P.R. 1893

16 Competency of a Presidency Magistrate to revive a discharged case.—There is nothing in the Code to the effect that the dismissal of a complaint or the discharge of an accused shall be a bar to a fresh complaint being entertained so long as the order of discharge remains unreversed. Hence a commitment by a Presidency Magistrate on fresh evidence is legal although the accused might have been previously discharged by another Presidency Magistrate and the order of discharge had not been set aside 28 C. 211, where 1 C.W.N. 49 is followed, 24 C. 528 dissented from and 23 C. 983 distinguished. Semble on the same evidence no re-hearing should be made of a case which has been disposed of by an order of discharge by a Magistrate of co-ordinate jurisdiction except where there has been manifest error or miscarriage of justice 29 M. 126 (F.B.).

17 Jurisdiction of Magistrate to re-entertain fresh complaint.—A Magistrate who has discharged an accused person may re-entertain a fresh complaint on the same facts. It is not necessary to get the first order of dismissal set aside. See Note 3 to s. 437

18 Magistrate has power to revive proceedings after discharge and to commit.—There is nothing to prevent a Magistrate after he has discharged an accused person under this section from inquiring again into the case against him. A discharge not operating as an acquittal leaves the matter at large for all purposes of judicial inquiry. There is jurisdiction still vested in all Magistrates including the one who made the previous inquiry just as before. But all Magistrates and especially the one who formerly discharged the accused are bound to exercise due discretion to take that discharge into account and to avoid any such oppressive proceedings as may either expose them to punishment under s 219 or s 220 I P C. or to a civil action on the part of the accused Ratanlal 350, 7 M. 454, 31 M 543. See the remarks of PRINSEP J in 28 G. 652 at p 658. See also 29 G. 726, where 23 C. 983 and 24 C. 286 are overruled. As to similar powers of a Presidency Magistrate see 28 C. 632 (F B) GHOSE J dissenting

254. If when such evidence and examination have been taken and made or at any previous stage of the case, the Magistrate is of opinion that there is ground for presuming that the accused has committed an offence triable under this Chapter which such Magistrate is competent to try, and which, in his opinion could be adequately punished by him he shall frame in writing a charge against the accused

Charge to be framed when offence appears proved

Notes—1 Charge should be so framed as not to cast upon the prosecution any unnecessary burden.—According to the Code the duty of framing a charge in all cases where a charge is necessary rests primarily with the Court and not with the prosecutor. And the charge when properly framed upon the materials mentioned in this section while it should allege all that is necessary to constitute the offence charged and all that is requisite in order that the accused may have notice of the matter with which he is charged ought not to allege positively anything of which the allegation in a positive form is not justified by the materials before the Court. It must be remembered that while the prosecution is in all cases bound to prove so much of the matter charged as is necessary to constitute the offence charged it is not bound to prove and cannot by reason of want of care on the part of the Court in framing the charge become bound to prove more than this and may therefore very reasonably insist that the charge be so framed by the Court as not to cast upon it any unnecessary burden. Per FLOWDEN J in 26 P R 1889

2 Object of framing a charge at an early stage is to enable the accused to cross examine the prosecution witnesses on their first attendance.—The alteration in this section which enables a Court to frame a charge at any previous stage of the proceedings is intended to enable the accused to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses on their first attendance. This procedure is applicable in the trial of warrant-cases. But where one of the offences with which the accused is charged is triable exclusively by the Court of Session the proceedings would be in the nature of an inquiry under Chapter XVIII and s 208 requires that an opportunity should be given to the accused for cross-examining the witnesses for the prosecution before the stage of proceedings is reached at which it might be found necessary to draw up a charge. If after framing a charge the Magistrate finds on the cross examination of the prosecution witnesses that no case is made out he can cancel the charge under s 213 (2), 5 C. W N 110, 27 C. 370

3. When charge must be framed.—Section 254 in mandatory terms imposes on the Magistrate the duty of trying any warrant case which he is competent to try and which in his opinion can be adequately punished by him s 3. L R 23 = 15 Cr L J 884.—(1) Charge should be framed only when offence made out.—It is only when the prosecution has proved all the facts necessary to constitute the offence charged against the accused that a charge should be framed. See (1911) 3 M W N 576 = 10 M L T 506 = 12 Cr L J 583, 2 P R 1906 = 3 Cr L J 343 (2) Magistrate ought not to wait till the prosecution case is completed.—The moment the

= 12 Cr L J 471 The procedure of taking the whole case for the prosecution and then drawing up a charge is old fashioned and exploded. See 18 P W R. 1909 = 11 Cr L J 110 In a petty case under the Penal Code where the offence committed is within the Magistrate's cognizance the accused should not be committed to the Sessions on the ground that the Magistrate was a witness to the identification proceedings. 21 A L J 420

4. When charge not to be framed under the section.—(1) If he cannot adequately punish.—A Magistrate ought not to frame a charge under this section if he be of opinion that he cannot adequately punish the offence Ratanlal 439 It is not irregular for a Magistrate of the second or third class to frame a charge against an accused person in a case which he has jurisdiction to try even though at the time of framing the charge he intends if he is of opinion that the accused is guilty to submit the proceedings to the District or Sub-divisional Magistrate to pass sentence 1905 U B R. 33 = 2 Cr L J 464. But it is a Magistrate's duty to draw a charge in accordance with the offence disclosed and not to consider such consequences as whether he himself has or has no jurisdiction to try the offence or whether a particular charge will or will not require a committal to the Sessions. In drawing a charge there is one consideration and one only to be entertained and that is what is the offence disclosed 3 P R. 1901; 2 P R 1906 = 3 Cr L J 345 (i) When the Magistrate is of opinion that case ought to be committed.—See as to procedure ss. 347 and 207 This section must be taken to qualify the meaning of the words ought to be tried in ss. 207 and 347 of the Code 4 Bom L R 83; 24 C. 429 When a Magistrate is of opinion that the accused cannot be adequately punished by him he can commit him to the Court of Session although the case may be exclusively triable by the Magistrate 24 C. 429 The Magistrate has to exercise a discretion in the matter which is subject to the Appellate and Revisional Powers of Superior Courts 16 B 580 at p 555 But see 42 M 83 (contra). 3 Rang 42 dissents from 24 C. 429 and follows 42 M 83.

5 Effect of framing charge.—(i) Charge turns inquiry into trial.—So long as a case continues in the stage of inquiry the duty of the Magistrate is confined to ascertaining whether there is anything that the person accused ought to be called upon to answer but when the charge has been framed and the plea of the accused recorded the inquiry is turned into a trial and evidence in support of the charge already recorded becomes evidence on that trial subject to the right of the accused as declared in ss. 256 and 257 9 A 52 (FB) 38 M 585 (ii) Magistrate cannot dismiss the case or acquit the accused without hearing evidence.—When on examining the complainant the Magistrate frames a charge and thereby indicates that a prima facie case exists against the accused he cannot then dismiss the case and acquit the accused without hearing the evidence on behalf of the prosecution or of the defence. He is bound to proceed with the case 7 C W N 821 Where there are two distinct charges against distinct individuals a Magistrate is not entitled to pass one order so as to affect both (iii) If charge is of a compoundable offence the accused is entitled to an acquittal immediately a composition is filed 29 P R. 1914 = 16 Cr L J 81 (FB)

6 Omission to prepare a charge does not invalidate acquittal.—A Magistrate tried and acquitted a person accused of an offence without preparing in writing a charge against him. Held that such omission did not invalidate the order of acquittal of such person and render such order equivalent to an order of discharge 3 A 129

7 Charge in joint trial of warrant and summons cases.—When a case is being tried as a warrant case and a charge is drawn of an offence which is triable as a warrant-case if it is intended to proceed against the accused also for an offence triable only as a summons-case that offence should form part of the charge and if the accused had been prejudiced by the absence of such a charge the conviction is liable to be set aside 29 C. 481. Where the complainant charged the accused with defamation (a warrant case) but in her evidence charged him with using criminal force to her (a summons-case) and the Magistrate tried the accused for both the offences and convicted him of assault but acquitted him of defamation held the procedure was perfectly legal it appearing from the record that the accused understood the new charge cross-examined the witnesses with reference to it and had ample opportunity of meeting it 3 Bom L R 675 See Note 4 to s. 233

8 Court can inquire into offence different from that charged if evidence discloses it.—If on the evidence a Magistrate finds that an offence different from the one charged had been committed he has power expressly to inquire and proceed against the accused with regard to the other offence without a fresh complaint being made to him 5 B H C R Cr Ca. 100 and if the other offence is a summons-case he may proceed to try the same in the manner pointed out for the trial of summons-cases 7 M 434. If the Magistrate finds that the facts disclose an offence other than or in addition to that complained of he is bound to adjudicate on the original charge and should not dismiss it with leave to the prosecution to institute a fresh and a more comprehensive complaint 8 W R 82 Thus in 27 A 69 a complaint was laid against the accused of an offence under s. 409 I P C. and he was tried and convicted of that offence by a Magistrate of the first class It was contended on behalf of the accused that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction as the evidence disclosed an offence under s. 406 I P C triable exclusively by the Court of Session Held per Knox J that the complaint gave the Magistrate jurisdiction to try the accused for the offence complained of and if it was established to convict him and that the Magistrate was not bound to commit merely because the evidence disclosed another offence triable exclusively by a Court of Session. See also 21 A 265

9 Power of Court to examine witnesses.—A Magistrate cannot properly resort to s. 540 in order to avoid the responsibility of making up his mind as to the value of the evidence for the prosecution. The power conferred by that section upon a Court to summon a witness does not extend to witnesses named for the prosecution or for the defence 11 P R 1886

10 Duty of Police to test exculpatory statement made by accused.—It is the duty of the Police officials when an accused person makes an exculpatory statement to test the truth or falsity of such statement without delay and to lay before the Court any evidence which tends to establish its truth or falsity 1 P R. 1888

Plea.

255. (1) The charge shall then be read and explained to the accused, and he shall be asked whether he is guilty or has any defence to make

(2) If the accused pleads guilty, the Magistrate shall record the plea, and may in his discretion convict him thereon

Notes —1. Charge must be explained to the accused.—Magistrates should pay special attention to this direction of the law. Where an offence falls, e.g., within a section like s. 397, I P. C., which on account of the existence of aggravating circumstances provides a minimum punishment for the offence, the existence of such aggravating circumstances should be set forth in the charge so that the accused person may know what it is to which he pleads guilty and the full effect of such plea, or in the event of his pleading not guilty, may know what the material facts are which he is called upon to rebut. Ratanlal 55, 7 C. 96 = 8 C. L. R. 471; 5 C. 828; 9 M. 61.

2. The accused must be asked and not his pleader.—No pleader can be called upon to plead "guilty" or "not guilty" on behalf of his client and it is improper for a Magistrate to act on such plea, though made in the presence and hearing of the accused. It would be more regular in form, if the Magistrate were to call on the accused to say with his own lips whether he denies the truth of the complaint 6 Bom. L. R. 861. But when an order under s. 205 has been made it involves that the pleader may perform all acts which devolve upon the accused in the course of the trial, such as pleading or refusing to plead under this section, 6 S. L. R. 206 = 14 Cr. L. J. 372.

3. Conviction on a plea of guilty in a warrant-case.—There is nothing in the Code to preclude a Magistrate in a warrant case from convicting the accused on his own plea of "guilty" 3 L. B. R. 279 = 5 Cr. L. J. 418; but a plea guilty can be recorded only after the prosecution has made out a prima facie case and the Magistrate has drawn up a charge on the evidence on record. It is highly improper in a warrant case to convict an accused on his own admission alone, 29 M. 372, where 27 M. 235 is followed. See also 19 M. L. J. 271 = 4 M. L. T. 324 = 8 Cr. L. J. 421, where it was held that a conviction which is illegal cannot be sustained merely on the plea of guilty. The Magistrate is empowered to act under this section and record the plea only after he has followed the procedure laid down in the preceding sections of this Chapter. See also (1912) 3 M. W. N. 578 = 10 M. L. T. 505 = 12 Cr. L. J. 585 and Notes under ss. 342 and 271.

4. Mode of recording pleas.—What kind of admission amounts to a plea of "guilty"—See s. 271 and Notes thereunder. An admission which does not admit all the elements of the charge is not a plea of "guilty" to the charge 25 W. R. 23. Therefore where a person accused of murder, acknowledged having struck his victim but repudiated the intention to murder, it was held the acknowledgment cannot be accepted as a plea of guilty, 4 B. L. R. Appx. 61. In recording the plea, the Court must record the actual words used and not merely record a narrative of what occurred and of the statement of the prisoner 7 C. 96 = 8 C. L. R. 471. In trying a case under s. 143, I P. C., the Magistrate declined to take evidence, remarking 'the accused admitted facts that make them out to be members of an unlawful assembly' and convicted them of the offence. Held reversing the conviction and sentence, that an accused person may admit some or even all the facts alleged by the prosecution, but if he pleads "not guilty" the Court trying him is bound to proceed according to law, by examining the witnesses and giving an opportunity to the accused to cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution, and adduce his own evidence 9 Bom. L. R. 1346 = 6 Cr. L. J. 424. Cases have come before this Court, in which it has been recorded that the accused person pleaded guilty, and in which it appeared that the Magistrate had misapprehended the facts necessary to constitute the offence with which the accused was charged and of which he was convicted on his own plea. It is expedient that the plea of the accused should be recorded as nearly as possible in the words used by him, so that it may be shown clearly that the accused admitted the facts necessary to constitute the offence with which he was charged—C P. Cr. Cr., Part II No. 22.

5. Accused throwing himself on mercy of Court.—Where the accused did not formally plead guilty, the fact that he threw himself on the mercy of the Court ought not to prejudice him 12 C. W. N. 180 = 8 Cr. L. J. 434.

 255-A. In a case where a previous conviction is charged under the provisions of section 221, sub-section (7), and the accused does not admit that he has been previously convicted as alleged in the charge, the Magistrate may, after he has convicted the said accused under section 255 sub-section (2) or section 258, take evidence in respect of the alleged previous conviction, and shall record a finding thereon.

Note.— It was suggested to us that the new section 255-A is unnecessary on the ground that though a procedure or the proof of previous conviction is necessary in a Sessions Court to prevent the jury or the assessors from being prejudiced by anything they may hear as to the accused's previous record yet in warrant-cases the same considerations do not apply. On the whole, however we think the new section may serve a useful purpose and we have retained it. Report of the Select Committee, 1922.

256. (1) If the accused refuses to plead, or does not plead or claims to be tried he shall be required to state * at the commencement of the next hearing of the case or if the Magistrate for reasons to be recorded in writing so thinks fit forth with whether he wishes to cross-examine any, and if so which of the witnesses for the prosecution whose evidence has been taken. If he says he does so wish the witnesses named by him shall be recalled, and after cross-examination and re-examination (if any) they shall be discharged. The evidence of any remaining witnesses for the prosecution shall next be taken and after cross-examination and re-examination (if any) they also shall be discharged. The accused shall then be called upon to enter upon his defence and produce his evidence.

(2) If the accused puts in any written statement the Magistrate shall file it with the record.

Note.—1 Scope of the section.— After careful consideration we have adopted the re-draft of these clauses suggested by the Judges of the Calcutta High Court. Even under these amended clauses the right of cross-examination may be abused and witnesses unnecessarily harassed but we think on the whole that the possible abuse of the system does not justify us in making any severer restriction on the existing right of the accused. —See Com Rep. The procedure laid down in this Chapter does not govern the inquiry in cases triable by a Sessions Court. In such cases the intention of s. 208 is that as each witness is examined for the prosecution he should then and there be cross-examined and re-examined and allowed to go home. 10 A L J 144 = 13 Cr L J 443. See Note 11 at pp 598 and 599.

2. Section inapplicable to proceedings under s. 110.—This section has no application to a case under s. 110 and a person called upon to show cause under that section has no right to further cross-examine the prosecution witnesses under this section. 35 C. 243. Contra 12 Cr L J 89 (Bar) see also 1 P R 1916. See Note to s. 119.

Section not applicable to proceedings under cl. (8) of the Letters Patent as they are not in the nature of criminal proceedings in the sense that the rules of procedure applicable to a Criminal trial are applicable to them and therefore the respondents (legal practitioners) written statement could not be received. Under this special jurisdiction under cl. (8) of the Letters Patent the High Court is bound to give a proper notice and reasonable opportunity to be heard to the legal practitioner concerned. 4 Lah 271.

3. Claims to be tried.—As to the meaning of the expression claim to be tried vide 1906 U B R. 51 = 5 Cr L J 295, 3 L B R 280 = 5 Cr L J 417 noted under s. 251.

4. Right of prosecution to call fresh witnesses.—The words any remaining witnesses do not limit the witnesses only to those named under s. 252 (2). It is wide enough to include any witness who according to the prosecution is able to support its case though he has not been summoned provided he is not sprung on the defence and sufficient opportunity is given to cross-examine him. 11 Bom L R. 1153 = 10 Cr L J 530. See Note 8 to s. 252 and see also 10 A L J 383.

CROSS-EXAMINATION OF PROSECUTION WITNESSES

5. Section does not prohibit cross examination before framing of charge.—Opportunity should be given to the accused should he so desire to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses even though the charge is not framed. 8 C W N 839. This section does not prohibit cross-examination before a charge is framed it permits a further cross-examination expressly directed to the case framed and embodied in the charge and would enable an accused person if he has reserved his cross-examination to exercise his right at that time subject to a discretion given to the Magistrate by s. 257. 21 C 642. See Note 7 to s. 252 and Note 2 to s. 254.

6. Accused is entitled to have prosecution witnesses recalled after charge before commencement of defence.—Magistrate has no discretion.—On the date when charge was drawn up the accused applied to recall and cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution. The application was refused in these terms

* The words at the commencement

so that it be forth with were inserted by a T2 of Act XVIII of 1923

The prosecution witnesses have already been cross-examined at a reasonable length considering the importance of the case and it is needless in my opinion to recall them refused. Held this section gives the Magistrate no discretion in such a matter. The accused is entitled to have the witnesses recalled for purposes of cross-examination. The fact that there has been already some cross-examination before the charge has been drawn up does not affect this privilege. 27 C 370, 20 C 469, 14 Cr L J 383 = 5 Barr L T 67. In 2 Bom L R 542, a conviction without allowing the accused to further cross-examine was set aside as illegal. See also 7 C. L. J 230 = 7 Cr L J 313 and 8 M L T 367 = 11 Cr L J 520, where the conviction was set aside and a re-trial ordered by a different Magistrate.

7 Magistrate bound to ask whether accused wishes prosecution witnesses to be recalled—After a charge has been framed it is the duty of the Magistrate to require the accused to state whether he wishes to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses already examined. 27 C 370. Where a Magistrate trying a case under s. 208 I P C after framing a charge omitted to ask the accused whether he wished to have the prosecution witnesses or any of them recalled for cross-examination and rejected an application made by the accused with that object on the ground that it was too late held that it was impossible to say that by being barred from cross-examining the witnesses called against him the accused did not suffer a substantial injury. 1902 A W N 5. The claim to recall the witnesses for the prosecution is very different from the request made by the accused person to summon a witness under s. 203. 19 W R 53, and an accused is entitled to this privilege even though he does not call any witnesses of his own. Nor does the fact that there has already been some cross-examination before the charge was drawn up affect the privilege. 20 C 469, 6 Barr L T 67 = 14 Cr L J 388. The record should show whether the accused wished to cross-examine any of the witnesses for the prosecution already examined. 4 Barr L T 25 = 12 Cr L J 89.

Right of accused when summons-case is tried under this Chapter—See Note 4 to s. 241.

Effect of omission to ask the accused—It has been usually held that the omission to follow s. 206 involves remand and re-trial of the case from the point of drawing up of the charge. 11 P. R. 1914 = 15 Cr L J 146. In 16 Cr L J 5 (M) it was held that the omission was a mere irregularity and the conviction was not set aside as the accused had not been prejudiced. See 6 Lah 554.

8 Magistrate bound to recall witnesses for cross-examination and cannot call on the accused to defray expenses—It is the duty of the Magistrate to recall the prosecution witnesses which must be done presumably at the public expense. A conviction without allowing the accused a opportunity to examine the prosecution witnesses on the ground that the accused had not paid the necessary expenses for recalling the prosecution witnesses is illegal. 12 P R 1907 = 6 Cr L J 339. After a charge is drawn the accused is entitled to claim as a matter of right under this section to recall and cross-examine any witness for the prosecution although he had an opportunity of cross-examining such witness before. Where therefore a Magistrate refused to re-summon a medical officer for cross-examination unless fees for his attendance were paid the High Court set aside the conviction and sentence and directed the Magistrate to allow process to be issued for the attendance of such witness. 4 C. W N 351. The recalling of witnesses for cross-examination must be done presumably at the public expense. 12 P R 1907 = 32 P W R 1907 = 6 Cr L J 339. As a general rule a Magistrate cannot refuse to issue process for the attendance of witnesses for such purpose except on payment by the accused of the costs of their attendance. Such an order can be passed only under s. 257 when the application for recall is made after the accused has entered upon his defence. 2 C. L. J 17. Where in order to suit the convenience of the Court or for reasons connected with the discharge of other public business the witnesses for the prosecution are allowed to leave before the charge has been framed or the right conferred by this section exercised they must be required to attend again and ordinarily any expenses which may be allowed to them on this score should be paid by Government. 8 N L R 66 = 13 Cr L J 554. See also 43 M 411.

9 Right to further cross-examine when the cross-examination before charge was on the understanding that witnesses were not to be recalled—Where the cross-examination of the witnesses for the prosecution before the framing of the charge was on the distinct understanding that the accused would not require the recall of the witnesses for further cross-examination after charge and the Magistrate refused a subsequent application made in violation of this understanding, held that the Magistrate was by law bound to recall the witnesses. But in the circumstances of the case the accused were directed to pay the expenses incidental to the recall especially as they offered to pay the same. 6 C. W N 424. A Magistrate is not competent to refuse to recall the witnesses for prosecution to be cross-examined by the accused and it is not necessary for the accused that he has reasonable grounds for his application. 21 W R 29. A Magistrate cannot refuse to allow witnesses who have been allowed to be cross-examined by the accused previous to the preparation of a charge to be recalled and cross-examined after the accused has been put upon his defence under this section¹, treating them as witnesses for the prosecution, 17 W. R. 81. See also 27 C. 370.

10. Discharge of prosecution witnesses.—Procedure to be adopted on adjournment.—A Magistrate should not, of his own motion, discharge the witnesses for the prosecution until the accused person has exercised or waived the right of cross-examination given him by this section. Where it becomes necessary to adjourn the hearing, the Magistrate should in all cases, inquire of the accused if he desires to exercise his right of recalling the witnesses for the prosecution, or consents to the discharge of all or any of them. If the accused consents to their discharge, he is not entitled to have them re-summoned as a matter of right. Where it becomes necessary to adjourn the hearing and the Magistrate did not call upon the accused to exercise his right under this section, and there was no sufficient proof that the accused consented to the discharge of the witnesses for the prosecution, it was held that the accused was entitled to have the witnesses, whom he desires to cross-examine at the further hearing, re-summoned 6 N.-W. P. H. C. R. 284; 25 W. R. 43. Witnesses ought not to be unnecessarily kept on attending—The word 'recall' is very significant and does not mean re-summon, 8 A. L. J. 707 = 12 Cr. L. J. 471. The procedure contemplated by the Code in warrant-cases is that the prosecution witnesses should be examined in-chief, the accused examined the charge framed and the prosecution witnesses cross-examined alone, hearing continued, if necessary, from day to day and the said witnesses should not be discharged until the Court has ascertained whether their cross-examination after the charge will be desired, 8 N. L. R. 63 = 13 Cr. L. J. 534. See also 10 A. L. J. 144 = 13 Cr. L. J. 443.

11. Each accused entitled to cross-examine the complainant of his own right.—Where there are several accused jointly tried and some of them have cross-examined the complainant, the right of the other accused to have the complainant recalled for further cross-examination is not in any way lost, as the accused have each a right to cross-examine the complainant, 11 C. W. N. 160.

12. Accused entitled to adjournment for cross-examining prosecution witnesses.—Where an accused against whom a charge was framed without any previous intimation, stated in reply to a question put by the Magistrate under this section as follows "Time should be granted to me for engaging a Vakil on my behalf and for cross-examining witnesses. I have no question now and the Magistrate thereupon closed the case stating that 'the accused refused to say whether he wished to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses, they will not be summoned' and refused subsequently an application by the accused's Vakil for cross-examining the prosecution witnesses and convicted the accused, held that the conviction was not merely irregular, but illegal. It is not giving an accused person a reasonable opportunity to ask him immediately after the charge is framed to cross-examine the witnesses. The application for adjournment was reasonable and ought to have been granted, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 192 = 12 Cr. L. J. 543. See also 1895 A. W. N. 40; 28 C. 594. See, however, 8 A. L. J. 707 = 12 Cr. L. J. 471, where Lord, J., was of opinion, that it is a distinct mistake to give time for cross-examination. "If the pleader for the defence who had heard the evidence in-chief is not prepared to cross-examine them and thereafter the charge-sheet has been drawn up he hardly deserves the name and rank of pleader. Cross-examination is intended for testing the accuracy and credibility of the witnesses, not for building up a case for the defence, and the witnesses should then and there after cross and re-examination have been discharged and they would have been discharged with a minimum of inconvenience."

13 Right of accused to have prosecution witnesses recalled at a later stage —

(i) Right to have witnesses recalled for cross examination may be exercised at any time.—No waiver.—Section 256 merely lays down that after the plea of the accused is taken he shall be required to state whether he wishes to cross-examine any, and if so, which of the prosecution witnesses whose evidence has been taken, but it does not state at what particular time he is to be asked this question, nor up to what time he has this right. Therefore where the accused was asked the question at the time of framing the charge and he could not at that time to cross-examine the witnesses, he may apply to the Magistrate by s. 257. No doubt it is open to a Magistrate, even after a case has been closed and at any time before judgment has been pronounced to give an opportunity to the accused to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses and to examine witnesses in defence even if the accused had failed to avail himself of such opportunity which he had at an earlier stage of the proceedings. But it always depends upon the circumstances of each case whether a belated application should be granted or not, 21 M. L. J. 283 = 10 M. L. T.

84 = 1911 M. W. N. 327 = 12 Cr. L. J. 150. The accused may after the charge is drawn up and the witnesses for the defence have been examined, recall and cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution, 4 M. 130. Where the trying Magistrate charges the accused at an early stage so as to prevent the necessity for recalling the witnesses for further cross-examination, the accused has no further right to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses after the close of the prosecution case, 63 F. L. R. 1901.

(11) It is in the discretion of the Magistrate to recall the prosecution witnesses at a later stage—As a rule, the proper and convenient time for the purpose of cross-examination of the witnesses for the prosecution is at the commencement of the accused person's defence, though a Criminal Court has discretionary power to allow the accused person to recall and cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution at any period of the defence, when the Court may think such a course right and proper, 23 W. R. 44. Reading ss 253 and 256 of this Code together, it appears that, if an accused person desires to recall and cross-examine the witness for the prosecution, the time at which he should express such desire is when the charge is read over to him and he is called upon to make his defence and although it is in the discretion of the Magistrate to recall the witnesses at a subsequent stage of the case, the accused has no right to insist upon the witnesses being recalled, 7 C. 28. There is no absolute right of cross-examination which would enable the accused to recall and cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution, no matter how completely and fully they have already been examined. Where, therefore, witnesses for the prosecution were fully cross-examined and a charge framed against the accused, and the witnesses for the defence were examined and cross-examined and on the day on which judgment was to be delivered an application was made on behalf of the accused asking that process should issue for the witnesses for the prosecution to be recalled and further cross-examined held that the Magistrate was right in refusing the application if he was of opinion that it was made for the purpose of vexation, etc., 20 C. 459. Where witnesses for the prosecution were subject to a very lengthy and strict cross-examination upon the matter of the complaint and with the exception of a petition which had nothing to do with their evidence, no fresh evidence was afterwards adduced, the Magistrate, after framing a charge declined to re-summon these witnesses being of opinion that the application was not bona fide, but made "for the purpose of vexation, etc.," held, that the right to test the truthfulness of the witnesses by cross-examination must not be abused, and that under the circumstances the Magistrate was justified in declining to re-summon these witnesses, Ratanlal 930.

(12) Proper reasons must be given for refusing to recall—Slight delay not a sufficient ground—The mere fact that the witnesses for the prosecution had already been cross-examined is not a sufficient reason for refusing to re-summon them, unless the Magistrate expressly records his opinion that the application for the second cross-examination is for the purpose of vexation or delay, etc., and an order refusing to re-summon witnesses without assigning any such reasons is not proper, and the High Court will set aside the conviction and the sentence and direct the re-opening of the trial, 4 C. W. N. 241. Where a trying Magistrate, after a charge had been framed against the accused, refused to re-summon the complainant and his witnesses for cross-examination the High Court directed the Magistrate to re-open the case from the stage where he made the formal charge and to allow the accused such opportunities of calling and recalling witnesses as the law gives, Ratanlal 723; 14 C. W. N. 250. But it lies upon the party who thinks himself aggrieved to show that the ends of justice have in some way been frustrated in consequence of the refusal to recall the witnesses for the prosecution for cross-examination, 20 C. 459. When an application for re-summoning witnesses for the prosecution was made not on the day the accused were called upon to make their defence, but on the following day, held that the delay of one day was in itself no sufficient reason for refusing the application, 4 C. W. N. 241. See also Ratanlal 723, where it was held that the refusal to re-summon would render it necessary to re-open the case from the stage of the drawing up of the formal charge. See also 5 Pat. L. J. 94.

(13) Right of cross-examination may be waived when the accused fails to cross-examine when opportunity is given—The object of this section is clearly to secure to the accused the opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses for the prosecution after he has been informed as to the nature of the specific charge which he is required to answer. Until he knows this, he is not in a position to decide on what points the evidence for the prosecution is material. If this opportunity be secured, I do not apprehend that he has any further right of recalling the witnesses. If the witnesses for the defence are in attendance, they are to be examined and after that the accused shall be allowed to recall and cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution. If he refuses to exercise this right after he has entered on his defence, he cannot demand as of right the recall of the witnesses for the prosecution, if the case be adjourned because he has not produced his witnesses. He has had the opportunity intended by the section.—PER SPANKE, J., 2 A. 233 at p. 238. The accused elected to reserve the cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses till charge should be framed. After charge was framed, the application of the accused that the case should be committed to the Sessions was refused and the accused who had pleaded not guilty was called on to enter on his defence. He then declined to say anything and represented that he reserved his statement to the Court of Sessions, whereupon the Magistrate again informed the accused that the case would not be committed and called on him to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses. The accused again declined and the Magistrate closed the case and adjourned it for judgment. Before judgment was delivered, the accused applied that the case may be proceeded with in the usual course, but the Magistrate deemed the application unreasonable and vexatious and gave judgment convicting the accused, held that the accused was not entitled to recall the witnesses for cross-examination after case had been closed, 21 M. L. J. 283 = 1911 M. W. N. 327 = 12 Cr. L. J. 150; 1912 M. W. N. 1121 = 13 Cr. L. J. 828.

(1) Waiver by counsel does not prejudice the right of the accused under ss 256 and 257—Section 256, Cr. Pro. Code confers an absolute and unqualified right on the accused to recall for further cross-examination such witnesses as are still before the Court. After the charge had been framed, the accused pleaded not guilty and mentioned to the Court that he had witnesses to examine. Held, that he had entered upon his defence and an application for further cross-examination of a witness discharged from attendance must be deemed to have been made under s. 257. Waiver by counsel of further cross-examination in case a charge is framed cannot prejudice the right of the accused under ss. 256 and 257, 43 M. 411; 5 Pat. 110.

257. (1) If the accused, after he has entered upon his defence, applies to the Magistrate

Process for compelling production of evidence at instance of accused to issue any process for compelling the attendance of any witness for the purpose of examination or cross-examination, or the production of any document or other thing, the Magistrate shall issue such process unless he considers that such application should be refused on the ground that it is made for the purpose of vexation or delay or for defeating the ends of justice. Such ground shall be recorded by him in writing.

Provided that, when the accused has cross-examined or had the opportunity of cross-examining any witness after the charge is framed, the attendance of such witness shall not be compelled under this section unless the Magistrate is satisfied that it is necessary for the purposes of justice.

(2) The Magistrate may, before summoning any witness on such application require that his reasonable expenses incurred in attending for the purposes of the trial be deposited in Court.

DEFENCE EVIDENCE.

Notes.—1. Taking defence evidence without framing charge is illegal—See Note 10 to s. 253.

1-A Accused to enter upon defence after cross-examination—An accused person ought not to be called on to enter on his defence before he has cross-examined the witnesses for the prosecution, 8 N. L. R. 85 = 13 Cr. L. J. 554.

2. Accused entitled to adjournment for calling witness—Dilatoriness.—In a warrant case tried summarily, though a formal charge need not be framed the accused person cannot be called dilatory, if he delays to name his witnesses until he has heard the evidence for the prosecution and found that the Magistrate considers that evidence a substantial basis for charging him, Ratanlal 768. Under this section and the next, the accused is entitled as of right to a postponement of the case so as to allow him an opportunity of adducing evidence in support of his defence, 1 C. W. N. 313, even though the case is tried summarily under s. 262(1), 8 L. B. R. 20 = 9 Cr. L. J. 553. See Notes to s. 262.

3. Refusal to summon defence evidence, when to be exercised—It is only after the accused has entered upon his defence that the Magistrate can in his discretion refuse the application of the accused on the ground that it is made for the purpose of vexation or delay or for defeating the ends of justice, 27 C. 370. See Note 5 to s. 252.

4. Right to cross-examine witnesses—A witness called by the prosecution may be recalled by the accused for cross-examination.

conviction of the accused must be set aside, 3 A. L. 392; 1895 A. W. N. 40. It is the Magistrate's duty to summon witnesses for the accused who can speak to the facts of the case and he ought not to determine beforehand, what credit he would give to their evidence, 6 B. L. R. Appx LXXVIII. Refusal to summon on the ground that the witnesses were implicated in the charge, vitiates the trial and conviction, 6 B. L. R. Appx LXY. The language of this section is imperative. The Magistrate has no discretion to refuse to issue process to compel the attendance of any witness unless he considers that the application should be refused for any of the reasons specified in the section and which he is bound to record. The Magistrate, therefore, must issue summonses for such witnesses named in the list, unless he takes the responsibility of recording his ground for believing that any particular name is entered for the purpose of vexation or delay or for defeating the ends of justice. The case of each witness must be dealt with individually. The Magistrate has no right arbitrarily to limit the number of witnesses to be called on each point, 20 B. 418; 2 B. L. R. 5. Where an accused put in a list of 72 witnesses and the Magistrate ordered him to cite only any 12 of them, held, that the order was not only irregular, but illegal and incurable by s. 537 as it showed that the Magistrate had no objection to any 12 of the 72 of the list on the ground of its being frivolous or vexatious. The Magistrate must base his refusal in regard to any particular witness on the grounds mentioned in the section, 31 M. 131. Where a Magistrate declined to summon the defence witnesses saying that they could not give any reliable evidence one way or the other and it did not appear what means he had for forming this opinion, held, that conviction must be set aside. It is more than an irregularity, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 192 = 12 Cr. L. J. 545. Where the accused who was charged with recruiting three coolies from a district, prohibited under the Assam Emigration Labour Act applied for summonses to the coolies to prove his defence that they did not come from the prohibited area, but the Magistrate characterized the application as vexatious and convicted the accused, held, that the application should not have been refused and the conviction was set aside (1911) 2 M. W. N. 472 = 12 Cr. L. J. 566. But it is a sufficient compliance with sub-sec (1) of this section if a Magistrate while rejecting an application for summoning further defence witnesses, states facts which have led him irresistibly to the conclusion that the application was for no other purpose than that of vexation or delay or defeating the ends of justice although he does not say expressly that the application was for that purpose, 11 G. W. N. 789 = 6 Cr. L. J. 1. Once the requirements of ss 256 and 257 have been complied with and the accused refuses to state whether he wishes to cross-examine prosecution witnesses or cite defence witnesses, there is no provision requiring the Magistrate to again offer an opportunity to the accused to cite his witnesses, (1912) M. W. N. 1121 = 13 Cr. L. J. 828. Where also a Magistrate rejects an application after recording on it 'too late' held, that the Magistrate's reasons though irregularly recorded was a sufficient compliance with this section and could not be set aside as the accused has not been prejudiced, 39 C. 781; 45 M. L. J. 305; 3 Pat. 591.

5. Refusal to re-summon defence witnesses.—When a Magistrate has once granted processes for the attendance of the witnesses of the accused he cannot refuse to re-summon them on the ground that being friends of the accused they would have come to Court if the accused had desired them to do so. Having once granted the processes he was bound to assist the accused in enforcing the attendance of the absent witnesses, 10 C. 931, 6 G. W. N. 548, Ratanlal 593, 28 P. R. 1884. An adjournment beyond the day fixed by the summons issued, is however, discretionary 9 G. W. N. 229 and therefore the issue of any further summonses to witnesses not named at the time the defence is entered upon is not obligatory, 7 B. L. R. 558. When a Magistrate refuses to issue summons, he is bound to record his reasons, 4 G. W. N. 241, with respect to each witness 4 Bom. L. R. 38. Summons was ordered to be issued for the attendance of a certain defence witness on a certain day but owing to some delay the summons was not served, and consequently the witness did not attend. The Magistrate refused to re-summon the witness on the ground that in his opinion the witness was named for the purpose of delay and not in good faith. Held that the Magistrate was bound to make a further attempt—the first attempt being merely nominal—to secure the attendance of the witness, 4 A. 53. See also 35 C. 1093. Even when a witness appears after the case is closed and the Magistrate is about to deliver judgment, it is incumbent on the Magistrate to record and consider his evidence, 7 B. L. R. 558. See also 19 A. L. J. 893; 5 Pat. L. J. 94.

6. Refusal to examine defence witness.—Though it is competent to the Magistrate to decline to summon witnesses for the defence under this section, it is not competent for him to decline to examine the defence witnesses cited on the ground that their evidence is not necessary, 14 Bom. L. R. 360 = 1 Bom. Cr. C. 123 = 13 Cr. L. J. 823. Magistrate should always be chary of taking upon themselves the duty of deciding on behalf of the parties which witnesses should be examined 28 M. L. J. 134 = 16 Cr. L. J. 136. See also 35 C. 243; 3 Pat. 591.

7. Right to cross-examine when prosecution witnesses subsequently called as defence witnesses.—On a Magistrate refusing to re-summon prosecution witnesses for cross-examination, the accused cited them on his behalf and then requested the Magistrate to allow them to be cross-examined. This application was refused. Held that under the circumstances the right of accused to cross-examine these witnesses was not curtailed, 1 G. W. N. 19. See also 17 W. R. 51; 25 W. R. 32; 4 M. 130 and 28 C. 694. In the last mentioned case, when the accused were called upon to cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution they applied for an adjournment, as their counsel was absent which was refused. Subsequently on the day fixed for the defence evidence the prosecution witnesses were re-summoned but the Magistrate refused to allow them to be cross-examined on the ground that they were now summoned as defence witnesses. Held that the Magistrate was wrong and counsel for the defence was entitled to cross-examine them.

7-A. Right of accused for process for cross-examination of prosecution witnesses.—Under s. 257 of the Code the accused is entitled after he has entered upon his defence, to have the prosecution witnesses summoned for cross-examination unless the Magistrate thinks that the application is merely for purposes of vexation and delay. Omission to recall such ground is an illegality vitiating the conviction. The death of the witness does not affect the illegality of the Magistrate's order. 51 C. 1049

8 The trying Magistrate may himself be cited as a witness.—The words 'any witness' would include the trying Magistrate also. In a transfer application under s. 526 the applicants urged that the evidence of the trying Magistrate would be required by the accused touching certain matters connected with the case. Held that inasmuch as the Magistrate was bound under this section to issue a summons unless he considered that the application was made for the purpose of vexation or delay or defeating the ends of justice it was not proper to leave the decision of this point to the Magistrate whose evidence was required and the case was accordingly transferred. 28 A. 536

9 Accused entitled to examine witness present in Court.—It is not open to a Magistrate to refuse to examine a witness for the accused when the witness is present in Court. 4 Bom. L. R. 461

10 Right of accused to cross examine any witness examined by the Court.—The accused obtained process for the attendance of a witness but before the appearance of the witness the accused asked the Court to countermand the order for his attendance which the Court refused to do. When the witness attended the accused refused to examine him but the Court examined him and refused to let the accused to cross-examine him. Held that the witness could not be regarded as a witness for the defence and that the accused were entitled to cross-examine the witness. 29 C. 337. See also 1 C. W. N. 19

11 Right of accused person to cross examine the witnesses of a co accused.—One accused person may cross-examine a witness called in his defence by another accused in the same trial when the defence of one accused is adverse to that of the other. 21 C. 401, 1 C. W. N. 19, 28 C. 594. But see 12 W. R. 75

12 Procedure when it is impossible to procure the evidence of a witness.—When it is impossible to procure the evidence of a defence witness by reason of his absence out of British India the Magistrate would not be justified in acquitting the accused the proper course to be adopted being for the Magistrate to pronounce judgment on the evidence on record. 1891 A. W. N. 33

13 Accused not to be convicted on charge framed merely because he adduces no evidence.—In a warrant-case a Magistrate is not bound to convict the accused after he had pleaded to the charge and claimed to be tried merely because no evidence is adduced to rebut the evidence for the prosecution. He is bound to acquit if at the time of giving judgment he has reasonable doubt as to the guilt of the accused. Ratanlal 854. A prisoner must be convicted upon the strength of the case made against him and not in consequence of his inability to bring forward proof of his innocence. Ratanlal 5

14 Right of accused to call witnesses to rebut evidence called by the Court after conclusion of trial.—In a prosecution the case on both sides having been closed the Magistrate summoned a witness to give evidence whereupon the accused prayed to have certain witnesses summoned to rebut the evidence of the Court witness. Held that the Magistrate was bound to summon such witnesses and that the fact that the accused at the close of his case had stated that he did not wish to examine any more witnesses was no reason to refuse to summon witnesses to give evidence to rebut that of the Court witness. 6 C. 714 = 8 C. L. R. 70

15 Reserving cross examination of defence witnesses.—There is no provision in the Code which enables the cross-examination of defence witnesses to be deferred. Deferring cross-examination of defence witnesses until the examination-in-chief of other defence witnesses is wrong. 3 L. B. R. 109 = 3 Cr. L. J. 23. In 6 M. L. T. 259 = 11 Cr. L. J. 136, it was however held that a Court has discretion for sufficient reason to allow the cross-examination of defence or prosecution witnesses to be reserved until the chief examination of all of them is over there being no provision of law to the contrary but where a charge is framed the defence has the right under s. 256 to recall and cross-examine any of the prosecution witnesses.

16 Right of reply depends on what is done and not on what may be said.—So far as the trial of warrant-cases is concerned there is no provision in the Code under which the accused is asked if he means to call witnesses or not. After the charge is framed the accused is called on to enter on his defence and to produce his evidence but he is not asked whether he means to call evidence. The right of reply would seem therefore, to depend, not on what may be said, but on what is done, and if no evidence is produced, there should be no right of reply by the prosecutor, Ratanlal 938. See s 292.

17. Magistrate must be guided by judgment of Sessions Court in matters of procedure.—The Magistrate being subordinate to the Court of Session, must treat its judgments with respect, and be guided by them on such matters of procedure as arise on the section or as relate to the acts of the Magistrate himself, Ratanlal 851.

18. Construction of an accused's written statement.—There are no pleadings in a criminal case similar to those in civil proceedings which are conclusive against the party making them. The prosecution has to prove all the facts necessary to constitute the charge against the accused. Quere whether if an admission were contained in the accused's written statement, that would relieve the prosecution from the defect in letting in evidence of the facts admitted, 10 M. L. T. 306 = (1911) 2 M. W. N. 576 = 12 Cr. L. J. 335. See, however, Notes under s 342.

258. (1) If in any case under this Chapter in which a charge has been framed the Magistrate finds the accused not guilty, he shall record an order of acquittal.

(2) Where in any case under this Chapter the Magistrate does not proceed in accordance with the provisions of section 349 or section 562, he shall, if he finds the accused guilty, pass sentence upon him according to law.

Notes.—1 See s 403 for effect of acquittal and Schedule V, Form XXIX for form of sentence.

2. Order of acquittal without framing a charge.—No judgment of acquittal can be recorded unless a charge has been drawn up 22 W. R. 25, but see s 3 A. 251. A person accused of theft was acquitted by a Deputy Magistrate. The District Magistrate, at the instance of the Police, ordered the case to be retried, as the Deputy Magistrate had not framed any charge against the accused. Held, that the terms of s 460, Act X of 1872 (s 403 of this Code) barred any further trial so long as the acquittal remained in force, 3 G. L. R. 181; 9 B. H. C. R. 170.

3. Dismissal of complaint or discharge after charge amounts to acquittal.—An order dismissing a complaint after a charge is framed amounts to an acquittal, 5 G. L. R. 339. Once a charge has been framed and trial begun, the charge cannot be treated as cancelled by reason of a recommencement of the trial under s 350, the Magistrate who framed the charge having been transferred. Even if the succeeding Magistrate rehears the witnesses and discharges the accused it must be treated as an acquittal, 38 M. 585, where 14 P. R. 1903 = 175 P. L. R. 1903 is followed, 17 Cr. L. J. 1 (M.).

4. Sameness of Magistrate.—It is not necessary that the conviction or acquittal should be by the Magistrate who drew up the charge, 3 G. 495.

5. Effect of an order of acquittal on other persons charged, but not sent up for trial.—See Note 12 to s 403.

6. Passing sentence on conviction.—It was formerly held that when a Magistrate convicts the accused he is bound to pass some sentence if only a nominal one, 4 M. H. C. R. Appx. LXVI. But now see s 562. See 1 B. 218 as to the sentence to be passed when accused is convicted under two different sections of the I. P. C. See also 7 M. H. C. R. 873.

7. Conviction not obligatory if charge is framed.—Although a Magistrate has in a warrant-case thought fit to frame a charge, he is not required to convict the accused person merely because, the latter does not produce any rebutting evidence. He is bound to acquit if, at the time of giving judgment, he has reasonable doubt of the guilt of the accused, Ratanlal 854. A prisoner must be convicted upon the strength of the case made against him, and not in consequence of his inability to bring forward proof of his innocence, Ratanlal 85.

259. When the proceedings have been instituted upon complaint, and upon any day

Absence of complainant. fixed for the hearing of the case the complainant is absent, and the offence may be lawfully compounded, if "or is not a cognizable offence" the Magistrate may, in his discretion, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, at any time before the charge has been framed, discharge the accused.

* Sub-section (2) has been omitted by s 75, Act XVIII of 1915.

† The words "or is not a cognizable offence" were inserted by Act XVIII of 1915.

Notes —1 See s 345 and Sch. II col 6 for compoundable offences. A Magistrate cannot act under this section if he took cognizance on a Police report.

2 Issue of summons does not make a summons case—In a warrant-case the mere fact of a summons having been issued in this first instance instead of a warrant does not bring the case within the purview of Chapter XX and thus allow a Magistrate to dismiss the complaint on account of the non attendance of the complainant on the day fixed for hearing 10 W R 31

4 Discharge under this section a discretionary power—Before discharging under this section the Magistrate is bound to see whether there is a prima facie case. If he arbitrarily discharges for the sole reason that the complainant is absent his order is liable to be set aside 1891 A W N 116. The primary reason for the order is that the absence of the complainant raises a presumption that the complainant does not wish to proceed with the prosecution 12 Cr. L J 184 (Sindh)

4-A Discharge of accused in the absence of complainant at the hearing in a trial of both offences in one trial one being a summons-case and the other a warrant-case.—Where a complaint was preferred against a person for offences under ss 302 and 301 and the Magistrate discharged the accused owing to the absence of complainant on the day of hearing and a fresh complaint was preferred in respect of the same offences held that the procedure in such a trial must be that provided for the trial of a warrant-case and that the discharge of the accused did not amount to an acquittal under s. 302 and was not a bar to the subsequent trial for the same offence. 41 M 771 following 22 B 711

5 Dismissal of complaint in warrant-cases on absence of complainant is improper—A Magistrate is not competent to pass an order of dismissal or discharge in consequence of the absence of the complainant in warrant-cases not coming within this section except in cases coming within the last clause of s 253 10 C. 67—18 C. L. R. 408. See also 13 C. L. R. 303 for an instance of improper discharge under this section. There is no warrant in the Code for passing an order staying struck off. Such an order passed on the absence of the complainant will not amount to a discharge if the offence (s. 211 I L C.) was one which could not be lawfully compounded 17 O C 18—15 Cr L J 230

6 Magistrate not bound to wait till the end of the day—A Magistrate it has been held is not bound to wait till the Court is about to close for the day in order to give an absentee complainant an opportunity of appearing before acting under this section 7 M 356 and 213, 10 C 551

7 Procedure when complainant absent after charge has been framed—In a warrant-case when a charge is framed and a day fixed for the hearing of the case it is not legal for the Magistrate to acquit the accused or discharge him without hearing the evidence for the defence merely on the ground that the complainant did not appear to prosecute the charge on the day fixed. He ought to admit the accused to bail and enforce the attendance of the complainant and his witnesses under s. 312 Ratanlal 824 and 847 and 4 C. W. N. 20. He should not discharge the accused without considering the evidence already on record 12 Cr. L. J. 184 (Sindh)

8 Withdrawal from prosecution in a warrant-case—In a warrant-case in respect of a non-compoundable offence it is not competent to a Magistrate to enter an order of acquittal on a private complainant offering to withdraw from the prosecution 37 B 369. An order of acquittal would only be pronounced if after the framing of a charge the Magistrate is of opinion that the evidence is insufficient to justify a conviction.

9 In case of improper discharge, District Magistrate should deal with the case himself and not refer it to High Court.—A complaint not being heard on the day fixed the parties were told to come the next day on a particular hour being mentioned. The case was not taken up on that day and the parties were again told to come the next day. On the third occasion the case was called on early but neither parties being present the accused was discharged. Held on reference that the District Magistrate was competent to deal with the case under s 437 if he thought the accused was improperly discharged Ratanlal 988, 76 and 143, 32 M 220 (F B). A District Magistrate is competent to direct a further inquiry even when no fresh evidence is forthcoming 15 C. 608 (F B) 9 A 52 (F B) 14 M 334 (F B) 10 B. 131. The powers of revisional Court under s 437 are not limited to the consideration of the materials before the Magistrate of directing a further inquiry. Where a complainant was prevented from appearing by flood the order of discharge may be set aside 12 Cr. L. J. 184 (Sindh). S 369 must be read as controlled by s 437 and a Magistrate has power under the latter section to revise a complaint dismissed under this section 23 C. 102. See Notes 13 and 17 under s 253

10 Power of discharging Magistrate to re-hear without an order for further inquiry—A Magistrate who has made an order of discharge under this section has jurisdiction to re-hear the case on a fresh complaint.

The order of discharge under this section has not the effect of an order of acquittal, 25 M. 310; 25 C. 632; 29 C. 726; 4 C. W. N. 46 having been overruled. See also 26 P. W. R. 1908; 29 A. T. 8 B. L. R. 196 = 16 Cr. L. J. 174, 31 M. 543 and cases noted in Notes 13 and 17 under s. 253. A Presidency Magistrate has the same powers in this respect as a Provincial Magistrate. In the Full Bench case in 29 M. 126, WHITE C.J., and BENSON J. held that there was no distinction between the powers of re-hearing when the discharge had been under this section or under s. 203 or s. 203 while MOORE, J., declined to express any opinion on the point. See also 18 M. L. J. 551 = 4 M. L. T. 140 = 8 Cr. L. J. 208, where WHITE C.J.'s opinion was followed.

11. Revisional powers of High Court.—See 35 C. 994, Notes 30 and 31 at p. 588 and ss. 437–439 12 Cr. L. J. 184 (Sindh).

CHAPTER XXII

OF SUMMARY TRIALS

Power to try summarily

260. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in this Code —

(a) the District Magistrate,

(b) any Magistrate of the first class specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government and

(c) any Bench of Magistrates invested with the powers of a Magistrate of the first class and especially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, may, if he or they think fit try in a summary way all or any of the following offences —

(a) offence not punishable with death, transportation or imprisonment for a term exceeding six months

(b) offence relating to weights and measures under sections 264, 265 and 266 of the Indian Penal Code

(c) hurt, under section 323 of the same Code,

(d) theft under sections 371, 380 or 381 of the same Code, where the value of the property stolen does not exceed fifty rupees,

(e) dishonest misappropriation of property under section 403 of the same Code, where the value of the property misappropriated does not exceed fifty rupees,

(f) receiving or retaining stolen property under section 411 of the same Code where the value of such property does not exceed fifty rupees

(g) assisting in the concealment or disposal of stolen property under section 414 of the same Code, where the value of such property does not exceed fifty rupees,

(h) mischief under section 427 of the same Code,

(i) house trespass, under section 448 and offences under sections 451, "453" * 454, * 456 and 457 of the same Code,

(j) insult with intent to provoke a breach of the peace, under section 504, and criminal intimidation, under section 506, of the same Code,

(k) abetment of any of the foregoing offences,

(l) an attempt to commit any of the foregoing offences, when such attempt is an offence.

(m) offences, under section 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act, 1871

Provided that no case in which a Magistrate exercises the special powers conferred by section 34 shall be tried in a summary way.

* Wherever the word "453" was inserted by the Repealing and Amending Act of 1901. See Part II of the Second Schedule

(2) When in the course of a summary trial it appears to the Magistrate or Bench that the case is one which is of a character which renders it undesirable that it should be tried summarily, the Magistrate or Bench shall recall any witnesses who may have been examined and proceed to rehear the case in manner provided by this Code

Notes—1. Powers under the Chapter to be exercised with great caution.—‘The responsibility thrown on Magistrates, entrusted with summary powers, is a very great, and the responsibility of those who have to entrust them with such powers is equally great. Magistrates who are sufficiently alive to the responsibility entrusted to them will take care that the procedure and the record is not made more summary than the law has laid down.’—Per Knox, J., 21 A. 189, p. 192.

2. Any Magistrate of the first class specially empowered—In Madras every Sub-divisional first-class Magistrate has been invested with the powers under this Chapter Fort St. George Gazette, 1874, p. 1136. In the United Provinces, all Magistrates of the first class who are or have been officiating as Joint Magistrates and also all Assistant Commissioners of the first class have been similarly empowered.—Gazette, 1888, p. 83

As to powers of Magistrates in (1) Upper Burma, see the Upper Burma Criminal Justice Regulation V of 1892, Sch. s. 1, (2) in British Baluchistan see British Baluchistan Criminal Justice Regulation VIII of 1896, Sch. s. v

3. Summary procedure not applicable to Presidency Magistrates—The provisions of this Chapter do not apply to trials before Presidency Magistrates, Ratanlal 539. But all offences under the Cotton Duties Act XII of 1896, are, by virtue of s. 26 of that Act, triable summarily by a Presidency Magistrate, the special form of procedure prescribed by that Act, not being affected by the Code. The procedure of Presidency Magistrates is regulated by s. 362.

4. Proceedings of Magistrates not empowered void.—If any Magistrate, not being empowered by law in that behalf, tries a case summarily, his proceedings shall be void. S. 530, cl. (g). See Note 9 under s. 15

5. Inspection of registers of summary trial.—District Magistrates should satisfy themselves from time to time that the law regarding summary trials is properly observed and especially that Magistrates do not exceed their jurisdiction—a duty which may most conveniently be performed by an occasional and not infrequent examination of the registers of summary trials Wilkins, 113

6. Trial summary only in respect of record.—A summary trial is summary only in respect of the record of its proceedings and not in respect of the proceedings themselves which should be as complete and as carefully conducted as if they were recorded at length.—C P Cr Cir, Part II, No. 23

7. Framing of charge if necessary—misjoinder of charges.—It does not follow that because a case is tried summarily a charge is not necessary. No formal charge need be drawn up, but the accused must be called upon to answer to the particulars of the offence charged, whether the proceedings be summary or otherwise. The offence complained of must be so specified as to give the accused notice of what is charged against him. The same rules of law as apply to charges in warrant-cases must apply to the particulars set out in s. 263 in a summary record. It cannot be said that in a summary trial misjoinder of charges can be made without remedy, 16 C. W. N. 696 = 13 Cr. L. J. 224.

8. Formalities of this Chapter must be strictly observed.—It is absolutely necessary that Magistrates who act under the provisions of this Chapter should most strictly observe the scanty formalities which it provides, 22 W. R. 25. Where the Magistrate fails to ask the accused his plea, or fails to record such plea, if any, the conviction is bad, 9 C. W. N. 76. Where the procedure is of a summary nature, the length and carefulness of the record and decision does not take it out of that category, 24 W. R. 66.

9. Nature of procedure adopted, to appear on the face of the record—Whenever the procedure of summary trial is observed, it must clearly appear on the face of the conviction that the case was dealt with as one of those which come under the purview of this section. In cases of theft, the real value of the property alleged to be stolen should be stated, 20 W. R. 17.

10. Jurisdiction determined by the nature of complaint.—In a case where the accused were first charged under s. 395 I P C., and the proceedings were first conducted under this Chapter, but during the progress of the case the charge under s. 395 was lost sight of, and the accused were charged under s. 143, I P C., for being members of an unlawful assembly Held, that as the complaint was on a charge of dacoity unde

s. 395, the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to try the case summarily but should have inquired into it in a regular manner, 21 W. R. 89. Whether a case is triable summarily or not, must be determined by the complaint, not by an estimate formed by the Magistrate (e.g., of the property which the accused is charged with having stolen), after evidence has been recorded and such estimate cannot retrospectively warrant a mode of trial which was originally illegal, 25 W. R. 19. Whether a case is to be tried summarily or not must be determined by the offence complained of and not by the offence proved. In 36 C. 87 it was held that the facts stated in the petition of complaint as well as the sworn statements of the complainant must be taken into consideration in determining whether a case is triable summarily. Where accused were charged with two separate offences of theft under s. 379 in which the value of the property stolen did not exceed Rs. 50, held that it was a case within s. 260 (1) (d), 21 A. L. J. 276. See next Note.

11. Magistrate acts without jurisdiction in reducing a grave offence into a minor offence so as to try it summarily.—Where the complaint disclosed certain serious offences not triable summarily, but the Magistrate in examining the complainant recorded only certain statements and issued processes charging the accused with certain minor offences summarily and thereupon the accused were summarily tried and convicted. Held, that the conviction must be quashed as the Magistrate acted without jurisdiction. The offences complained of were not summarily triable and the examination of the complainant which was not properly recorded did not show that the offence complained of had not been committed, 29 C. 409. Similarly, where the complainant laid a complaint under s. 392 I P C (robbery with violence), and the Magistrate summarily tried and convicted the accused for an offence under s. 323, I P C, the conviction was set aside and retrial ordered on the ground that the Magistrate was not under this section competent to try the case summarily, 21 P. L. R. 1907. So, too, a first-class Magistrate cannot give himself jurisdiction to try an offence under s. 211, I P C, by treating it as an offence under s. 182, I P C, Ratanlal 670. Where a complaint is made under s. 452, I P C, and there is nothing in the complainant's examination on oath to justify the Magistrate thinking that an offence under s. 451 was committed, the Magistrate acts without justification in trying the case under this chapter, 6 Bar. L. T. 137 = 14 Cr. L. J. 462. See also 5 C. W. N. 252. The offence charged in a complaint was one under s. 325, I P C, and all the facts alleged therein and the evidence, including a medical certificate sought to be adduced, went to show that grievous hurt was actually caused. The trying Magistrate, however, treating the offence as one under s. 323 tried it in a summary way. Held that in the absence of any reason recorded by the Magistrate why he treated the offence as one under s. 313 and tried it in a summary way, or of a statement by him that he discredited any of the allegations in the complaint, he was not justified in trying the case in a summary way, and convicting the accused under s. 323. Ratanlal 988. Similarly, where the offence charged in the complaint on which process was issued was rioting and the examination of the complainant was to the effect that 17 or 18 persons attacked and bent him and the Magistrate tried the case summarily. Held that as on examination of the complainant there was no reason to believe that the complaint was exaggerated or false and process was issued the Magistrate was bound to proceed and regulate his proceedings at the trial, as for the offence made up of the facts complained of and not reduced it so as to give him jurisdiction to try the case summarily, 5 C. W. N. 110. But where a complaint alleged an offence under s. 189, I P C and it was clear from the complaint and the sworn statement of the complainant that the facts stated only amounted to an offence under s. 186 I P C. Held that the Magistrate had jurisdiction to try the case summarily, 36 C. 87 where 29 C. 409 is explained.

12. Improper to try summarily by arbitrarily reducing value of property stolen.—Where the accused was charged with having stolen a box worth annas 8 and rupees 50 in cash contained therein, held, that the Magistrate had no authority, without taking evidence as to the value of the box, to throw it out of consideration and thus assume jurisdiction to try the case summarily. Such evidence should have been taken in the same way as the evidence upon the merits of the case, and as the Magistrate failed to do this his proceedings were ultra vires 22 W. R. 65. Since a tenant is entitled to exclusive possession of the whole produce till it is divided under s. 71 of Beng. T. Act, his complaint against landlord for theft for having cut paddy worth Rs. 88 and carried it away cannot be tried under this section as the value of the property in such a case must be regulated as Rs. 88 and not Rs. 44 to which the tenant was entitled under the act. 20 C. W. N. 1212 = 1 Pat. L. J. 230 = 17 Cr. L. J. 473.

13. Magistrate not to mis-state nature of offence with a view to speedy disposal.—Where a charge of wrongful confinement (s. 342 I P C) was substantiated against certain prisoners and the Magistrate treated the case as one of unlawful assembly (s. 143 I P C), with the object of disposing of it summarily. Held that the Magistrate was not justified in trying the case summarily, 25 W. R. 21 and 46. Offences should be truly described and not mitigated merely for the purpose of introducing a different jurisdiction or a lower scale of punishment. In applying the summary mode of procedure 5 P. R. 1888.

14. Magistrate cannot split up a charge so as to give himself jurisdiction.—The powers conferred upon Magistrates by this Chapter not to have been intended to give them the power of altering a charge brought against an accused person so as to bring the case within its provision, but when a charge of a serious offence (s. 457 I P C.) one which the Magistrate is not competent to inquire into summarily, is preferred, it is the plain duty of the Magistrate to apply the procedure prescribed for such cases, and either to convict, or acquit or commit for trial the person implicated. The procedure under this Chapter is to be followed only when an offence is plainly and directly one of those specified in this section, 22 W. R. 29; 23 W. R. 31; 5 C. W. N. 252; also 2 C. L. R. 374; contra see 6 N.-W. P. H. C. R. 255. But when a Magistrate ascertains that the facts which are alleged to have taken place disclose only an offence triable summarily, he can dispose of such case summarily, and the mere fact that a complainant enumerates sections of the Penal Code relating to offences not triable summarily does not affect the jurisdiction of the Magistrate, unless the facts of which he really complains disclose such offences, 16 C. 715; 1 Bom. L. R. 683. The Bombay High Court in 13 B. 502 and the Madras High Court in 24 M. 675 have on revision refused to set aside proceedings of a Magistrate as without jurisdiction, in which he had convicted a person within his jurisdiction, although the evidence showed the commission of an offence triable only by the Court of Session. See also 2 M. L. T. 495 = 7 Cr. L. J. 215.

15. Splitting up permissible only when some of the component parts unbelievable.—No Magistrate is entitled to split up an offence into its component parts for the purpose of giving himself the summary jurisdiction. If a charge of an offence not triable summarily is laid and sworn to the Magistrate must proceed with the case accordingly, unless he is at the outset in a position to show from the deposition of the complainant that the circumstances of aggravation are really mere exaggeration and not to be believed. Therefore, a Magistrate when he has before him a person charged with having been armed with a deadly weapon, while a member of an unlawful assembly, is not at liberty to disregard that part of the charge which charges the prisoner with having been armed with a deadly weapon, and so to give himself jurisdiction to try the case summarily and then by inflicting a sentence of imprisonment not exceeding three months, to deprive the prisoner of his right of appeal, 4 C. 18 = 3 C. L. R. 46; also 1 C. L. R. 434; 2 C. L. R. 378, 27 C. 933; 11 C. 236; 23 W. R. 19, 21 W. R. 69; 5 C. W. N. 372, 6 C. W. N. 253. But if during inquiry under ss 147 and 324, I P C., the Magistrate after hearing evidence, is of opinion that an offence under s 323, i.e., one triable summarily, is committed, he may adopt the summary procedure, 22 M. 459 which dissents from 4 C. 18. See also 26 C. W. N. 831.

16. Procedure when summary offences charged with other offences.—Where an accused person is charged with offences, one of which is triable summarily, and the other not so triable, it is not open to a Magistrate to discard the latter charge and to proceed to try the case summarily, 41 C. 236. The facts that the Magistrate had jurisdiction over both offences, and the accused is not prejudiced by being tried only for the lesser offence, does not meet the objection that the prejudice lies in the different procedure which dispenses with a formal record of the evidence and a formal judgment and abridges the privilege of appeal, 5 P. R. 1889.

17. Complaint including charge not summarily triable, does not necessarily oust summary jurisdiction.—The mere circumstances of a complaint charging an accused person with offences not summarily triable along with other offences so triable, would not necessarily oust the summary jurisdiction of a Magistrate under this section. Whether a complaint affords sufficient grounds for a summary trial, or requires a trial according to the ordinary procedure, must be left in a great measure to the discretion of the Magistrate, exercised with due care according to judicial methods with reference to the circumstances of each case. Per MAHMOOD, J in 10 A. 55.

18. Offences triable summarily.—(a) Under Bengal Abkars Act—(a) An offence under s. 49 of Bengal Abkars Act XXI of 1856, can be tried summarily by a Magistrate under this section, the confiscation provided for by s. 49 is merely a consequence of the conviction, not forming part of the punishment for the offence, 3 C. 366 (F B) = 1 C. L. R. 442 overruling 22 W. R. 43 and 23 W. R. 33.

(b) Cotton Duties Act II of 1896—All offences against Cotton Duties Act (No II of 1896) may be tried summarily by a District Magistrate or Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class. These offences are mentioned in s. 25 of the said Act, and s. 26 of Act II of 1896.

(c) Offences under Municipal Acts, e.g.—Proceedings before a Magistrate for the recovery of Municipal cesses and taxes, under s. 84 of Bombay Act I of 1873 as amended by Bombay Act II of 1884, is a criminal prosecution, and must be conducted in the manner prescribed by this Chapter, 17 B. 731.

(d) The Indian Railways Act IV. of 1890, s. 121, 1902 A. W. N. 24.

(e) Indian Forest Act, 1878—See s 65 of Act VII of 1878

(f) Indian Companies Act, 1882—That the Directors of a Joint Stock Company did not file the balance sheet with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies An offence under s 74 of Act VI of 1882 may be tried summarily, 35 A. 173.

(g) Mischief combined with theft—A charge of mischief, even if combined with theft, is triable summarily under this section 25 W. R. 5.

(h) Criminal trespass and mischief—A person may be tried summarily for criminal trespass and mischief, unless there is a bona fide claim of right depriving the Magistrate of jurisdiction, 10 C. 408 following 21 W. R. 38.

(i) Stamp Act—An offence under s. 75 (a) for failure to grant a receipt for money paid, though demanded, Weir I. 906.

19. Offences not triable summarily—(a) Where there is a previous conviction—The offence of theft under s. 379, s. 380 or s. 381, I P C., when combined with a charge of a previous conviction of an offence punishable under Chap XVII I P C., is not triable summarily, Weir II, 324; 1 Bar. 8. 386. (b) Charge of an illegal demand of toll under Act XIII of 1851, 22 W. R. 76. (c) Maintenance cases under s. 488, 20 C. 351; 24 W. R. 81. (d) Breach of contract by artificers—The inquiry to be made under s. 2 of Act XIII of 1859 (punishment for breach of contract by artificer, &c) is not an inquiry into an offence as defined in this Code which may be tried summarily, 4 M. 234; 20 M. 233 at p. 238; 16 B. 368; 27 C. 131; 33 B. 22 and 33 B. 25; 6 S. L. R. 163; 14 Cr. L. J. 255; 5 P. R. 1912 = 13 Cr. L. J. 194 contra see 11 A. 262; 43 A. 261. See also 4 C. W. N. 201 and 253 where it was held that the breach is not an offence. (e) Offences under the Press Act—The offence of keeping printing press, without making the declaration prescribed by s. 4 of Act XXV of 1867 cannot be tried summarily, 9 P. R. 1889. (f) Preferring a false charge—The trial of a complainant for an offence under s. 211, I P C., in a summary manner is altogether improper and open to serious objection. The proper course is for the Magistrate to institute proceedings for an offence under s. 211, I P C. or to grant sanction under s. 195 on an application by the accused, 28 C. 251. (g) Theft of property valued at more than Rs 50 22 W. R. 65; 20 W. R. 17 and 25 W. R. 19; 14 N. L. R. 190. (h) Opium Act, 1878, s. 9—An offence under s. 9 of this act being punishable with one year's rigorous imprisonment cannot be tried summarily, 4 Bar. L. T. 271 = 13 Cr. L. J. 98. (i) Cattle lifting—This is a serious offence and ought not to be tried summarily, 6 S. L. R. 101 = 13 Cr. L. J. 780.

19-A. District Magistrate and Justice of the Peace in Bangalore cannot try European British subject summarily.—G O No 680/2 B, dated 19th March, 1912 which regulates the powers of Justices of the Peace beyond British India in regard to European British subjects does not confer power of trying European British subjects summarily on Justices of the Peace. A trial of an European British subject summarily is therefore illegal 16 Cr. L. J. 773 (M.).

20. Under what circumstances summary trial undesirable though legal—There are many cases in which though the summary procedure is strictly legal, it is inappropriate, and should therefore not be employed, such are

(a) cases which are prima facie likely in the event of a conviction to call for more severe punishment than can be awarded on summary trial as cases of cattle theft and cases against previously convicted offenders,

(b) cases which are prima facie likely to be long and complicated,

(c) cases arising out of disputes as to title,

(d) cases in which, for any particular reason, it is desirable that there should be a full record of the evidence for future reference, as cases in which Government servants of any rank are concerned as accused persons.—C P Cr. Civ. I, art II No 23

(i) Government servants—Summary procedure though legal is most inappropriate in cases in which Government servants, no matter what their rank, are concerned as accused persons 15 P. W. R. 1911 = 18 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 163. Thus, where a case is complicated and a conviction may entail further serious consequences as for instance, where the charge is under s. 202, I P C., against a person who is a Valadar Kukurni, summary trial is not the procedure which a Magistrate, in his discretion, should use, Ratanlal 776 and 784. Similarly, where a Head Constable of Police of many years' service was charged with criminal intimidation with a view to prevent a person from giving evidence against serious offenders and the District Magistrate, tried the case under this section, held, that the Magistrate did not exercise a sound discretion in trying the case summarily and depriving the accused of the privilege of an appeal, 6 M. 396.

(vi) Complicated cases.—Where a great deal of correspondence has to be gone into and the case is by no means of a simple character it is not advisable to try the case summarily, 35 A. 173. A Magistrate errs in adopting a summary procedure in case involving the decision of questions of title and production of documentary evidence especially when such a procedure has the effect of practically preventing either party from prosecuting the case on appeal, 13 Cr. L. J. 771 (Sindh).

(vii) Trial lasting long time—(six weeks) is not summary.—Where a case of theft (s. 379, I P. C.) was tried summarily, but the proceedings lasted from the 20th March to 12th June, and in the course thereof a local inquiry had to be made, and where the value of property stolen was above Rs 50, held, that this was not a case which should have been tried summarily, Ind. Jar., Nov. 1891, p. 707; 1891 A. W. N. 183; dissented from in 1892 A. W. N. 80. Summary trial implies speedy disposal of a case which can be tried and disposed of at once. See also 85 W. R. 65.

(iv) Deaf and dumb accused.—A deaf and dumb man ought not to be tried summarily, Bom. L. R. 849 = 4 Cr. L. J. 444.

21. Impropriety of summary trial where the Magistrate takes cognizance on his own personal knowledge.—The holding of a summary trial upon inadequate materials by a Magistrate who was himself a principal witness, and without allowing the accused time to consider their defence and the passing of a non-appealable sentence is illegal, 3 C. W. N. 341. In another case where the petitioner was convicted of an offence under s. 6 of Act XI of 1890, the conviction being based on the trying Magistrate's own observation of the condition of certain houses belonging to the petitioner and on no other evidence. Held, that the conviction was illegal and that the omission to follow the procedure laid down in ss. 190 (e) and 191 cannot be cured by s. 537 and that the brevity permitted in a summary trial does not mean that there should be no trial at all or that an accused can be heavily fined at a Magistrate's discretion on a personal knowledge, notwithstanding that the law gives the accused the right of demanding that the case should be tried by another Court, 1905 P. L. R. 31 = 2 Cr. L. J. 187. A District Magistrate in a private conversation with his assistant and the Police Superintendent learnt that some persons were committing acts which in their opinion endangered the safety of a large public embankment. He directed some inquiry to be made, and followed up that order by personally visiting the place next morning, and found that they had cut away a portion of the embankment for the purpose of erecting a house and extending a mango garden, and thereby committed mischief under s. 425, I P. C. He tried them summarily and sentenced them to two months' rigorous imprisonment each. Held, that as it did not appear that any information was laid by any person against the accused, and that as the case was commenced without complaint and at the instance of the Magistrate himself, he should not have dealt penally with the case and considering the important nature of the case according to the Magistrate's own view he should not have acted under the summary procedure, 24 W. R. 69. See also 1900 P. L. R. 82, where the Punjab Chief Court interfered with the severe sentence of 8 days' rigorous imprisonment awarded on a summary trial by a Cantonment Magistrate for a trivial offence. A Deputy Magistrate being also the Chairman of a Municipality, without issuing process or making a record of proceedings or dismounting from a pony on which he was riding, convicted and fined an inhabitant of a town, who admitted that he had raised the level of a road within the limits of the Municipality which was considered by the Magistrate to amount to the offence of causing an obstruction in a public way. Held, the Magistrate's procedure was illegal, and the conviction should be set aside 15 M. 83, presumably because he could not have kept the record contemplated by s. 263 while riding on a pony.

22. Record must show that charge was explained to the accused.—All Magistrates trying cases under Chapter XX must be careful not only to state the charge to the accused, but to explain it to him. The record must show that this has been done and must give the answer as nearly as possible in the words used, 1 Bur., S. R. 594.

23. Nature of re-hearing under sub-section (2).—The re-hearing must be de novo, as the proceedings hitherto are void under s. 230 (g) 23 W. R. 3.

24. Compensation is awardable in summary trials.—The provisions of s. 230 are applicable to summons-cases tried summarily, 11 M. 142.

25. Interpretation of cl. (a).—Clauses (b) to (f) of s. 200 of Act X of 1882 being precisely expressed are not to be governed by cl. (a) but may be given their full effect. Ratanlal 600.

26. Revision.—When the record does not show that any evidence was taken to prove the ingredients of the offence charged the High Court has power to set aside the conviction even in a summary trial, 35 A 136 In this case it was held that a conviction under s 188, I P C could not be set aside as it was not proved that the order of the public servant was duly promulgated

Power to invest Bench of Magistrates invested with less power

261. The Local Government may confer on any Bench of Magistrates invested with the powers of a Magistrate of the second or third class power to try summarily all or any of the following offences —

(a) offences against the Indian Penal Code sections 277, 278, 279, 285, 286, 289, 290, 292, 293, 294, 323, 334, 336, 341, 352, 426, 447 and 504, *

(b) offences against Municipal Acts and the conservancy clauses of Police Acts which are punishable only with fine or with imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month "with or without fine" †

(c) abetment of any of the foregoing

(d) an attempt to commit any of the foregoing offences when such attempt is an offence

Notes.—1 Section 277—Fouling the water of a public spring or reservoir 278—Voluntarily vitiating the atmosphere so as to make it noxious to the health of the neighbourhood 279—Rash driving or riding on a public way 285—Negligent conduct with respect to any fire or combustible matter 286—Negligent conduct with respect to any explosive substance. 289—Negligence with respect to any animal. 290—Commission of a public nuisance 292—Sale etc of obscene books 293—Having in possession obscene books for sale or exhibition. 294—Singing obscene songs to the annoyance of others 323—Voluntarily causing hurt. 334—Voluntarily causing hurt on grave provocation. 336—Rashly or negligently endangering human life or the personal safety of others. 341—Wrongful restraint. 352—Using criminal force otherwise than on grave provocation 426—Mischief 447—Criminal trespass

2 Conservancy clauses of Police Acts.—As to conservancy clauses, see the General Police Act V of 1861 s 34 and s. 61 of the Bombay Police Act No IV of 1890 Offences under s 48 of the Madras Police Act (ss 3 and 4 of the Towns Nuisances Act) are within the cognizance of a Bench of Magistrates coming under cl (b) of this section 13 M 142

3. Offences a Bench of Magistrates may try.—A Bench of Magistrates cannot try any offence except those mentioned in s 260 and this section, 21 W R. 12; 9 C. 98 They cannot take proceedings e.g., for security to keep the peace

4 Summary powers of Benches in Madras.—In Madras any Bench of Magistrates exercising powers of the first or second class has been empowered to act under this section Forl St George Gazette 1891 Pt I p 279

262. (1) In trials under this Chapter the procedure prescribed for summons-cases shall be followed in summons-cases and the procedure prescribed for warrant-cases shall be followed in warrant-cases except as hereinafter mentioned

Procedure for summons and warrant cases applicable.

Limit of imprisonment.

(2) No sentence of imprisonment for a term exceeding three months shall be passed in the case of any conviction under this Chapter

Notes.—1 Procedure in summary trial of warrant cases.—To a warrant-case tried summarily the rules about warrant-cases apply under this section. In such a case though a formal charge need not be framed the accused person cannot be called a deft if he delays to name his witnesses until he has heard the evidence for the prosecution and found that the Magistrate considers the evidence a substantial basis for charging him Ratanlal 768 In a warrant-case tried summarily the Magistrate ought to grant an adjournment if desired by the accused to enable him to summon the witnesses for the defence under s 257 unless the application is made for purposes of evasion or delay or for defeating the ends of justice. 5 L B R. 20 and 9 Cr. L 583.

2. Appeal.—An appeal lies under s 407 from a conviction by a Bench of Magistrates invested with second or third class powers 9 M 36, but not from a Bench with first-class powers 9 C. 98

3. High Court can enhance sentence up to two years.—When an accused has been summarily tried the High Court as a Revision Court can enhance the sentence up to two years sc, the limit to which a first class or Presidency Magistrate can pass sentence, Bom. H. C. Cr. R.L., 30th July, 1883 (F.B.).

4. Limit of imprisonment in summary trials.—A sentence of six months' rigorous imprisonment in a summary trial is illegal as no sentence exceeding three months can be passed in such trials, when an adequate sentence cannot be passed, the case ought not to be tried summarily 4 L. B. R. 335 = 9 Cr. L. J. 23.

5. Limit of three months applicable to substantive sentence only.—The limit of three months mentioned in the last para applies only to substantive sentences of imprisonment and not cases where simple imprisonment is ordered as a process for enforcement of fine, 6 A. 61.

6. Solitary confinement.—It is not illegal to impose solitary confinement as a part of the sentence in a case tried summarily. The section does not interfere with a Court's power to order solitary imprisonment under s. 73 I P C., or with similar powers given by s. 32 6 A. 83.

7. Security for keeping the peace.—Magistrate trying summarily is competent to require security for keeping the peace under s. 106, 1888 A. W. N. 181.

8. Fine of any amount may be imposed.—There is nothing in Chapter XXII which limits the amount of fine that may be imposed in a summary trial, 35 A. 173.

263. In cases where no appeal lies, the Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates need not record the evidence of the witnesses or frame a formal charge, but he or they shall enter in such form as the Local Government may direct the following particulars —

Records in cases where there is no appeal.

- (a) the serial number,
- (b) the date of the commission of the offence,
- (c) the date of the report or complaint,
- (d) the name of the complainant (if any),
- (e) the name, parentage and residence of the accused,
- (f) the offence complained of and the offence (if any) proved, and in cases coming under clause (d), clause (e), clause (f) or clause (g) of sub-section (1) of section 260 the value of the property in respect of which the offence has been committed
- (g) the plea of the accused and his examination (if any)
- (h) the finding and in the case of a conviction a brief statement of the reasons therefor,
- (i) the sentence or other final order, and
- (j) the date on which the proceedings terminated

Scope of the section.—Sections 263 and 355 of the Cr Pro Code must be read together. If the Magistrate is unable at the commencement of the trial to determine whether the proper sentence to be passed should be an appealable one or not he must make a memorandum of the substance of the evidence of each witness as his examination proceeds. But if he can at this stage determine that the sentence will be, in any event non-appealable he need not record the evidence. It however, he actually does so the notes of the evidence form part of the record of the case and cannot be destroyed by him. Where a Magistrate destroyed such record the High Court being unable to form an opinion of the propriety of the conviction set it aside, 48 C. 218.

Notes.—1. Record must be explicit about the nature of the offence and its ingredients.—The accused has a right to be informed of the precise nature of the offence with which he is charged. The record should state the offence clearly and distinctly and should be complete in all particulars 1882 A. W. N. 59. A bare reference to the section of the Penal Code is not sufficient. In a summary trial of a summons-case the Magistrate must be careful not only to state the charge to the accused, but to explain it to him, 1 Bur. S. R. 594. The facts found by the Magistrate must show what offence has been committed by the accused, 3 C. W. N. 381; 7 P. R.

1887; 5 P. R. 1839. Where after a summary trial the petitioner was convicted of being in possession of a bundle of clothes and there was no evidence to show he had any guilty knowledge, the conviction was quashed on the ground that the proceedings did not disclose any offence against the petitioner. Further, it was held that the Magistrate's record in summary trial however brief, must show the necessary ingredients of the offence charged. It is not necessary even where an appeal lies, for a record of evidence to be made, but under s 264, the substance of the evidence must be embodied in the judgment as well as the particulars referred to in that section, 3 L. B. R. 3 = 2 Cr. L. J. 375. Where in such a case the record omitted to show what account if any the accused at the time of his arrest gave of himself and no reason was given for considering such amount to be unsatisfactory, the conviction was set aside, 12 Cr. L. 280 (Bur.).

2. Record must be sufficiently exact and sufficiently full to enable the Judges of the Revisional Court to say whether the law has been complied with or not on the points to be recorded.—The three things required under this section to be recorded, viz., (i) the offence charged, (ii) the offence, if any, proved, and (iii) the reasons for convicting must be recorded and recorded in such a way as to enable the Court of Revision to say yes or no from within the four corners of the record itself whether the offence charged is an offence in point of law and whether the reasons for conviction are good and sufficient reasons, 10 C. W. N. 79 = 2 C. L. J. 565 = 3 Cr. L. J. 178; Ratanlal 778.

3. Brief reasons for conviction should be recorded.—Although a Magistrate is not required to record any evidence, he should in recording his reasons for the conviction, state them, so that the High Court, on revision, may judge whether there were sufficient materials before him to support the conviction. Where they were not so stated, the High Court, on motion, set aside the conviction, 6 C. 379 followed in 18 B. 97; 5 C. W. N. 251; 6 C. W. N. 40; 2 B. L. R. 3; 1899 A. W. N. 81; 10 A. L. J. 251 = 13 Cr. L. J. 708. "A Magistrate may be very well satisfied in his own mind of the guilt of a person who has been brought before him, but what he should do, and what we must take care he does, is to leave upon records some brief but intelligible reasons for the conclusions at which he has arrived, so that our superintendence of his proceedings may not be defeated"—Per STRAIGHT, J., in 1883 A. W. N. 115; 1885 A. W. N. 213; 1886 A. W. N. 185; 7 P. R. 1889; 21 A. 189; 16 O. C. 357 = 14 Cr. L. J. 695. See 31 C. 983; 3 L. B. R. 3. "I think it distinctly desirable that Magistrates should set out under the column reserved for the purpose so much of the reasons that have influenced them as to satisfy the accused that the Magistrate has considered each of the ingredients necessary in law for the conviction to which the Magistrate has proceeded and that, while this should be recorded with brevity, the brevity should not be such as to tend to obscurity. There is no question in my mind from the language used by the Legislature that the intention was that in case of this kind the procedure should be summary and the record should contain the barest particulars. I am therefore not prepared, if I find compliance with these requisites, to interfere and to lay down that facts and reasons should be set out at such length as to make the Court of Revision more or less a Court of Appeal so far as facts are concerned. The law intended the procedure to be summary, and it is not for this Court to lay down otherwise than the law has directed." Per KNOX, J., 21 A. 189 at p. 191; 9 B. L. R. 89 = 16 Cr. L. J. 713, see Note 8 to s 260. See, however, 46 M. 235.

But in 26 Bom. L. R. 1236 it is held that the mere omission to comply with the provisions of cl (A) of s 263 on the part of a Bench of Magistrates, amounts to an irregularity which can be cured under s 537, especially where the case is a non-appealable one and there is clear evidence justifying the conviction.

4. Record in appealable cases.—In case where no appeal lies, a Magistrate is bound to record a brief statement of his reasons for convicting the accused 8 C. 193. But he need not record the evidence of witnesses to justify his order, 1805 A. W. N. 143 = 2 Cr. L. J. 335, where 27 C. 450 is distinguished. But where a Magistrate of the first class passes a sentence of imprisonment for one month and fine, his order is appealable. He cannot, therefore, in such a case make up his record in the manner prescribed by this section, 2 C. L. R. 811.

4-A. Record in appealable cases.—Section 253 of the Code applies to cases in which no appeal lies and exempts the Magistrate from framing a formal charge in such cases. But there is no exemption in a case tried summarily in which an appealable sentence is passed, 27 C. W. N. 823.

5. Refusal to hear evidence is illegal.—Recording evidence is not same as hearing evidence.—This section does not excuse a Magistrate from hearing the evidence of all witnesses. It excuses him from recording the evidence of any of the witnesses. But it is an elementary point that recording evidence is not the same as hearing evidence. In all criminal cases, if the accused denies the charge, the complainant and such witnesses as he may produce must be examined and the case must be decided upon the effect of their evidence in order that a verdict made without hearing evidence offered by the complainant is clearly illegal, 39 C. 931.

6. Omission may be remedied subsequently.—An omission by a Magistrate to comply with the requirements of cl. (4) of this section, in a case in which no appeal lies may, in some cases, be remedied at a subsequent period, 6 C. L. R. 273. But where no reasons are given it was recently held in 9 C. W. N. 73 that the defect cannot be cured by the explanation of the Magistrate sent to the High Court in pursuance of a rule issued on him, 26 Bom. L. R. 1236; but see 46 M. 253.

7. Accused must be examined and plea recorded.—There must be examination of the accused under s. 342 in all warrant-cases. S. 263 does not give the Magistrate discretion whether he will examine the accused or not. The words 'if any' do not apply to warrant-cases, 41 C. 743. Where a Magistrate altogether omitted to record the plea of the accused, the conviction was set aside, 9 C. W. N. 76.

8. When deposition may be proved by oral evidence.—In a summary trial the Magistrate need not record the evidence and where no obligation is laid upon the Judge or presiding officer to reduce depositions or statements to writing, they may be proved by persons who heard them made in order to establish the fact that they were made, Ratanlal 334.

9. Record must be written by Magistrate.—The record in non-appealable cases must be written by the Magistrate. He is not authorized, in such cases, to depute that duty to a clerk nor to affix his signature to the record or judgment by a stamp, 6 M. 396; 8 A. 293.

264. (1) In every case tried summarily by a Magistrate or Bench in which an appeal lies, such Magistrate or Bench shall, before passing sentence record a judgment embodying the substance of the evidence and also the particulars mentioned in section 263

Record in appeal
able cases

(2) Such judgment shall be the only record in cases coming within this section

Notes.—1. Contents of judgment in appealable cases.—The judgment required to be drawn up in appealable cases under this section is to contain particulars mentioned in s. 263, and something more, viz., the substance of the evidence on which the conviction was held. But it is not to be entered in the Register of non-appealable cases, and is evidently intended to be in a separate form so that, when necessary, it may be submitted to the Court of Appeal, Wilkins, 113. A judgment which does not satisfy these particulars is liable to be set aside, Ratanlal 725. The substance of the evidence is a matter quite distinct from the facts which may be considered as proved by the evidence. It should also be recorded in such a way that the Court of Appeal will be able to form an opinion whether the evidence is sufficient to support a conviction. When the record does not fulfil these requirements a conviction cannot be properly upheld on appeal, 4 L. B. R. 338 = 9 C. L. J. 23.

2. Practice of mutilating registers is highly objectionable and illegal.—In appealable cases a Magistrate should not make the record required by this section as an entry in the register prescribed by s. 263 and then on the Appellate Court calling for the record of the trial, cut out and send up the portion of the register containing this entry. The practice of mutilating official registers is open to the gravest objection and is strictly prohibited. There is no warrant for it in law, Wilkins 113.

3. General substance of evidence sufficient.—A Magistrate is not bound to record the substance of every separate deposition but to state generally what is the substance of the witness's evidence 25 W. R. 6.

4. Appellate Court must quash conviction if evidence not sufficient.—When a Sessions Judge on appeal is unable, even with the aid of the Magistrate's finding to form an independent opinion as to the guilt of the prisoners, and when the evidence which came before him is not sufficient to satisfy him reasonably that the prisoners were rightly convicted held that he ought to have acquitted them, 11 B. L. R. 33 = 20 W. R. 13; contra see 1 A. 680. There, under similar circumstances it was held that the Court should not have quashed the conviction merely by reason of such defect, but it found impossible to dispose of the appeal because of such defects, it should have required the Magistrate to repair the same by recording a judgment in which the substance of the evidence should be fully embodied, and, if necessary, re-examining the witnesses for that purpose to have ordered a retrial with that view. As to when a retrial is to be ordered, see 2 P. R. 1874. See s. 537 inserted for the first time in the 1882 Code after the Rulings above.

5. Judgment must be written by Magistrate and not by clerk.—The judgment in appealable cases must be written by the Magistrate. He is not authorized to depute that duty to a clerk, nor to affix his signature to the record or judgment by a stamp, 6 M. 396.

6 Record to be made up before passing sentence.—The record should be made up at the time of the trial and not at its close from memory or from some rough note 15 M 83.

265. (1) Records made under section 263 and judgments recorded under section 264 shall be written by the presiding officer, either in English or in the language of the Court or, if the Court to which such presiding officer is immediately subordinate so directs in such officer's mother tongue.

(2) The Local Government may authorize any Bench of Magistrates empowered to try offences summarily to prepare the aforesaid record or judgment by means of an officer appointed in this behalf by the Court to which such Bench is immediately subordinate, and the record or judgment so prepared shall be signed by each member of such Bench present taking part in the proceedings.

(3) If no such authorization be given, the record prepared by a member of the Bench and signed as aforesaid shall be the proper record.

(4) If the Bench differ in opinion any dissentient member may write a separate judgment.

Note—A separate judgment may be recorded even though the sentence be unappealable.

CHAPTER XXIII

OF TRIALS BEFORE HIGH COURTS AND COURTS OF SESSION

Notes.—1 Application of Chapter to trials under Criminal Law Amendment Act.—The provisions of this Chapter are applicable to the trials held under the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act XIV of 1908. See s. 14 (2).—When holding a trial under s. 11 the special Bench shall apply the provisions of Chap XXIII with such modifications as may appear necessary to adopt those provisions to the case of a trial before the High Court without a jury. But s. 14 (1) of that Act lays down that the provisions of the Code shall not apply to proceedings thereunder in so far as they are inconsistent with the special procedure prescribed in that Act.

2 Application to Courts of Session in Burma and Baluchistan.—As to Courts of Session in (1) Upper Burma see Reg. V of 1892 Schedule 2 but as to European British subjects see s. 22 ib and in (2) British Baluchistan see Reg. VIII of 1896 Schedule, s. 3.

A—Preliminary

266. In this Chapter except in sections 276 and 307 and Chapter XVIII the expression 'High Court' means a High Court of Judicature established¹ under the Indian High Courts Act 1861,² (or the Government of India Act 1915) and includes³ (the Courts of the Judicial Commissioners of the Central Provinces, Oudh and Sind and) * 4 * 5 * 6 * 7 such other Courts as the Governor General in Council may by notification in the Gazette of India declare to be High Courts for the purposes of this Chapter * (and of Chapter XVIII).

Note.—See 4 (j) as to the meaning of High Court when used in this Code elsewhere than in this Chapter. The words in brackets were submitted for the words Court of the Recorder of Rangoon by the Lower Burma Courts Act VI of 1900 s. 47 and first Schedule.

¹ The words 'or to be established' were omitted by s. 2 and Sch. of the Amending Act 1916 (XIII of 1916).

² These words and figures were inserted by s. 2 and Sch. of the Amending Act 1916 (XIII of 1916).

³ These words have been inserted by Act XII of 1922.

⁴ The words 'the High Courts of the Punjab' were repealed by Act XV III of 1925.

⁵ The words 'the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon' were repealed by Act XI of 1923.

⁶ These words and figures were added by Act XV III of 1925.

267. All trials under this Chapter before a High Court shall be by jury, and notwithstanding anything herein contained, in all criminal cases transferred to a High Court under this Code or under the Letters Patent of any High Court established under the Indian High Court Act, 1861,* (or the Government of India Act, 1915), the trial may, if the High Court so directs, be by jury.

Notes.—1. Trial in case transferred to High Court.—Where, under s 526 or s 449, a case is transferred for trial before the High Court in its original criminal jurisdiction and no order under this section is made to the contrary the trial shall be with the aid of assessors, if that is the mode of trial in the Court from which the case is transferred.

2. No jury in trials under the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, XIV of 1903.—It is enacted by the said Act, s 11 (2) that no trial under that Act before the Special Bench of the High Court shall be by jury. See Appendix XII

Trials before Court of Session to be by jury or with assessors

268. All trials before a Court of Session shall be either by jury, or with the aid of assessors.

Notes.—1. Trial in Sessions Court ordinarily with assessors.—Under this section in the absence of any notification under s 269 a trial in a Court of Session must be with the aid of assessors 18 P. R. 1888.

2. Distinction between trial by jury and trial with assessors.—A trial by jury or with the aid of assessors begins only when the charge has been read and the accused claims to be tried, 15 B. 514. See also 25 B. 696; 21 A. 106 and 32 M. 220. In a trial by jury, the jury is the real tribunal and is aided by the Judge and in certain matters directed by the Judge. Whereas in a trial with the aid of assessors the Judge is the sole tribunal aided by each of two assessors. Though assessors do not form members of the Court, yet it is mandatory that a trial with the aid of assessors should commence with at least two assessors and at least one assessor must attend the trial throughout and give his opinion. The jury form a tribunal or body with a foreman and the verdict is the verdict of the body and when there is no unanimity among the members of the body, the opinion of the majority prevails as the verdict of the body. But in the case of a trial with the aid of assessors, the assessors do not form a body and each acts and expresses his opinion individually, and the Judge is to invite the opinion of each separately and record it. The Judge is the sole Judge of law and fact and the responsibility of the decision rests solely with him, though in the decision of the case he is expected to take into consideration the opinion of each assessor. Per BHASHYAM AYYANGAR, J in 24 M. 523 at p. 536. While the individual opinion of each assessor is taken the individual opinions of the member of a jury are never intended to be disclosed, 35 M. 585. See also 13 A. 337 and 6 C. W. N. 715.

(1) Difference in procedure—The law makes no distinction as to the procedure at the trial between a trial by a jury and one with the aid of assessors, except as to the summing up in the case of the former, and the manner in which the verdict in the former and the opinion of the assessors in the latter are respectively taken, 35 B. 423.

(2) Judge's position therein—In a trial by jury, the Sessions Judge is exactly in the same position as the jury in dealing with the evidence properly given before him and he is bound to confine his attention solely to that evidence, 27 C. 295. In a trial with assessors, the assessors are, no doubt to assist the Judge but they have no power to appreciate the evidence so as to bind the Judge. The opinion of the assessor must have, no doubt, regard paid to it but after all it is the Judge who has to decide the case on the facts as well as law. His is the final responsibility, 14 Bom. L. R. 710 = 1 Bom. Cr. G. 129 = 13 Cr. L. J. 677.

3. Evidence ought not to be taken in the absence of juror and assessors.—When evidence is taken after discharging assessors, it is recorded coram non iudice, i.e., before a tribunal which has no authority to record it and conviction based upon such evidence will be reversed, 15 A. 126; 7 Bom. L. R. 978. Section 537 does not cover such an irregularity. In only one instance is a Court of Session authorized to record evidence in the absence of jury or assessors, and that is when additional evidence is called for by the Appellate Court under s. 428 see 43 A. 225.

* The words and figures "or the Government of India Act 1915," were inserted by Act XIII of 1916

269. (1) The Local Government may, by order in the Official Gazette direct that the trial of all offences or of any particular class of offences, before any Court of Session, shall be by jury in any district, and may, with the like sanction, revoke or alter such order

Local Government may order trials before Court of Session to be by jury

(2) The Local Government, by like order, may also declare that, in the case of any district in which the trial of any offence is to be by jury, the trial of such offences shall, if the Judge, on application made to him or of his own motion, so directs, be by jurors summoned from a special jury list, and may revoke or alter such order

(3) When the accused is charged at the same trial with several offences of which some are and some are not triable by jury, he shall be tried by jury for such of those offences as are triable by jury, and by the Court of Sessions, with the aid of the jurors as assessors for such of them as are not triable by jury

Notes.—1. Trial of European British subject.—As regards European British subjects, this section must be read subject to the provisions of s 451

2. Interference with right of trial by jury is not ultra vires of the Indian Legislature.—The Code in so far as it interferes with the mode of trial by jury is not ultra vires under the proviso to s 22 of the Indian Councils Act (24 and 25 Vic c 67) King Emperor v Kartik Chandra Dutt followed, Ameer Khan, 6 B. L. R. 392 and 439 approved 37 C. 487 at pp. 493 and 516-517.

3. Particular classes of offences. notified that whereas by orders previously jury in the Tinnevely district and that stood committed for trial and others might thereafter be similarly committed in connection therewith, the Governor-in-Council with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council directed under this section that the previous orders be revoked as regards the persons referred to and that such persons should be tried with the aid of assessors and not by jury. Certain persons having been so tried for offences under ss. 148, 454, 395 and 323 I P C were convicted and sentenced and on appeal it was contended that the class of offences referred to in this section must be ascertained according to some classification recognized by the Legislature—such as is found in the Penal or Procedure Codes, e.g. offences against the State, against the person, etc. or bailable offences, cognizable offences etc. held that there was no reason shown for putting this narrow construction on the words 'class of offences' But offences might be classified according to the persons who committed them, i.e. the offenders or according to the person or property against whom or which the offences are committed or in regard to the particular occasion in connection with which they are committed. The fact of offences having been committed by old offenders or members of criminal tribes, or against women or against public property would afford reasonable ground for a classification and so would offences connected with an outbreak directed against a certain section of the community and that hence, the offences connected with the particular outbreak had been rightly treated as a 'class of offences' and that it was competent to the Madras Government to revoke the previous notification so far as it related to that class, 23 K. 632.

4. Procedure at a trial where some of the charges are triable by jury and some with aid of assessors.—The accused were tried by a jury for an offence under s. 395 I P C., and by the Judge with the aid of the same juror as assessors for offences under ss. 396 and 397, I P C. Exception was taken to the conduct of the trial in that the accused were prejudiced by the simultaneous disposal of a charge triable by a jury and of charges triable with the aid of assessors. Held the trial of all the offences charged together is contemplated by s 269 (3), 18 Cr. L. J. 717 (M.). A Sessions Judge tried by jury, an accused on two charges—one of which was and the other was not triable by jury, and dissenting from the verdict of the jury referred the whole case to the High Court. Held, that he should have first recorded the opinion of the jury as assessors regarding the charge not triable by jury and the High Court could treat the verdict on the latter charge as void, Ratanlal Bhoj. Again, where at a trial by jury for an offence under s. 397 I P C. and with the aid of assessors for an offence under s. 307, I P C. the accused were acquitted of these offences but the Judge convicted the accused of the offence of causing hurt by a dangerous weapon under s. 324 I P C. without requiring the jury as assessors to give their opinion with reference thereto and recording such opinion is required by s 309. Held, that the conviction was bad.

Weir II, 334. In 9 Bom. L. R. 1057 = 6 Cr. L. J. 236, the accused were tried by the Judge with jury on charges, under ss. 304 and 325 of the Penal Code. The jury found the accused guilty with respect to the charge under s. 325 with this verdict the Judge disagreed, and he referred the case to the High Court under s. 307. Held, that the case should be sent back to the Judge who tried it, with a direction, that he should pass orders and dispose of it as in a case tried by him with the aid of assessors on the minor charges against the accused, under s. 325. In 22 M. 15 the accused was charged with dacoity (s. 395—jury case) and murder in dacoity (s. 396—assessors case) and it appeared from a perusal of the preliminary register that the accused were either guilty under s. 396, I P. C., or not guilty at all, but the accused were nevertheless tried by the Sessions Judge and a jury and on the jury finding the accused not guilty of dacoity the Sessions Judge disagreeing with the verdict referred the case to the High Court, held, that the procedure adopted by the Judge was wrong and that he should have tried the accused with the aid of assessors. See also 23 M. 632; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 197 = 12 Cr. L. J. 433.

5. All the members of the jury are to be constituted assessors and their opinion taken.—Where the accused were tried at one trial for two offences, one of which alone was triable by jury and the Sessions Judge after taking the verdict of the jury on that charge, took the opinion of two of the jurors only as assessors on the other charge and convicted the accused on both the charges. Held, that the conviction on the latter charge must be set aside as the Sessions Judge was bound under sub-sec. (3) of this section to take the opinion of all the jurors as assessors and that his failure to do so cannot be treated as mere omission or irregularity curable under s. 537, 26 M. 598. The accused were charged under s. 395, I P. C., an offence triable by jury and also with offences under s. 147, I P. C., and other sections triable by a Judge with the aid of assessors and were jointly tried, five gentlemen were selected to form a jury and two of them were chosen to help as assessors. In respect of the latter offences the Judge differing from the two assessors convicted them of nothing, held, that the Judge was bound to constitute all the members of the jury as assessors from trying the non jury offences and the Judge not having done so, the conviction was illegal, 26 M. 598 followed, 21 M. L. J. 520 = 10 M. L. T. 22 = 12 Cr. L. J. 239. See also 13 M. 426.

6. Trial with assessors of a jury case may be valid if no objection taken.—When a jury case was tried with assessors and no objection was taken at the trial, held on appeal that the omission to take the objection at the trial before the Court of Session was fatal to the contention. Section 536 (2) applied, 23 M. 632.

7. Trial by jury of case triable with the aid of assessors is legal and valid.—When an offence triable with the aid of assessors is tried by jury such a trial is a legal and valid trial see s. 536, 5 Cr. L. R. 405. Unless the accused intervenes before the verdict is delivered and gets the procedure applicable to trial with the aid of assessors enforced, he cannot be heard to complain, 33 B. 423. See also 25 C. 555, 9 M. 42; 3 C. 765. In these cases it was held, that a Sessions Judge after he has erroneously taken the verdict of the jury on a charge of an offence not triable by jury but with the assistance of assessors cannot correct his mistake by treating the verdict as opinion delivered by assessors. See 23 B. 696; 1 Bom. L. R. 114, 26 M. 243, 6 M. L. J. 14 = 26 M. 243 (footnote). In such a case, an appeal lies only on a matter of law and not on a matter of fact 23 B. 680 (F.B.) followed in 33 B. 422. But see 24 W. R. 18 and 30; 3 C. 765, 26 M. 243 (per BENSON, J.) and 13 M. 626; 27 Bom. C. R. 1416.

8. Offence triable by jury.—(a) Bengal.—Trial by jury has been extended to the district of 24 Purnannas Hooghly, Burdwan, Moorshadabad, Nudderh, Patna and Dacca in the case of offences under Chapter VIII, XI, XVI, XVII, XVIII, Calcutta Gazette, 27th March, 1893, and to offences under Chapter XX, I P. C., abetments of and attempts to commit such offences. Ibid March, 1895. Trial by jury has been extended to the districts of Chittagong, Mymensing Rajashah and Jessore in the case of offences abovementioned.—Calcutta Gazette, 19th April 1897.

(b) Madras.—Trial by jury is extended to all Courts of Sessions in the Madras Presidency, except those in the Agencies of Ganjam, Godavari and Vizagapatam to the following offences under the I P. C., ss. 379, 380, 382, 392—395, 397—402, 411, 412, 414, 451—459 and 461. G. O. of 20th March, 1883, Fort St. George Gazette, Part I, p. 110. It is also extended to attempt to commit and abetments of offences under the abovementioned sections of the I P. C. in all the districts, except those abovementioned. Ibid, G. O. 23th September, 1894, Fort St. George Gazette, 1894, Part I, p. 1198.

(c) Bombay.—Trial by jury has been extended to the districts of Thana, Belgaum, Surat and Karachi City, in case of all offences punishable with death, transportation for life or imprisonment of ten years, while in Ahmedabad district only offences punishable with death shall be tried by jury. In Poona district all offences for which under Chapter VIII or XI or XII or XXI or XXIII or under any of the said Chapters taken in connection with s. 75, I P C the punishment available is death transportation for life or imprisonment for a period of ten years or upwards and also all abetments or attempts to commit any of the offences above described are to be tried by jury

(d) United Provinces and Oudh—Trial by jury is extended to Allahabad, Benares and Lucknow in the case of the following offences under the Indian Penal Code—(1) Kidnapping and abduction—Sections 363 to 369 (both inclusive) 372 and 373 I P C (2) Rape—Section 376 (3) Theft—Sections 379 380 381 and 382, (4) Robbery and dacoity—Sections 392 to 395 (both inclusive) 397 398 399 and 401 (5) Criminal misappropriation—Sections 403 and 404 (6) Receiving stolen property—Sections 411 to 414 (both inclusive), (7) Mischief—Sections 426 to 432 (both inclusive) 434 435 436 and 440 (8) House trespass—Sections 448 450 to 462 (both inclusive) (9) Offences relating to marriage—Sections 493 to 498 (both inclusive) (10) Abetments of and attempts to commit any of the abovementioned offences—Chapters V and VIII of the Indian Penal Code

(e) Burma—Trial by jury has been extended to Rangoon town district of the Pegu division and the Moulmein sub-division of the Amherst district. See Burma Gazette, 1900 Part I p 321 for notification issued for the Tenasserim Division

(f) Assam—See Assam Gazette 1903 Part II p 170 for the notification for the Assam Valley Sessions Court

Trial before Court or Session to be conducted by Public Prosecutor

270. In every trial before a Court of Session the prosecution shall be conducted by a Public Prosecutor

Notes—1 Public Prosecutor—For definition see s 4 (f). It is highly undesirable for the prosecution in Sessions Court to be conducted by officers of Police, 13 W, R 18 See Chap XXVIII for other provisions dealing with Public Prosecutors

2 Position of private pleader engaged by party—If any private person instructs a pleader to prosecute in any Court any person in a case of which the Public Prosecutor has charge the Public Prosecutor shall conduct the prosecution and the pleader so instructed shall act therein under his directions—Section 493 I P C The Public Prosecutor may avail himself of the services of the pleader engaged by the complainant, 11 B H C R 102 and the special authorization of the District Magistrate is not necessary 23 W R 16

3. Omission in the appointment of Public Prosecutor—This section can only be reasonably constructed as directory. The absence of a Public Prosecutor in a particular case before a Sessions Court whether by reason of omission on the part of the Government or of the district Magistrate is at most an irregularity which is capable of being cured by s. 537 35 P R 1887

4 Private Prosecutor cannot conduct Prosecution—In a criminal prosecution on indictment the prosecutor has no right to address the jury or to conduct the prosecution A v Brice 2 B and Ald 606, R v Gurney 11 Cox 414

B—Commencement of Proceedings

Commencement of trial—271. (1) When the Court is ready to commence the trial, the accused shall appear or be brought before it, and the charge shall be read out in Court and explained to him and he shall be asked whether he is guilty of the offence charged or, claims to be tried

Plea of guilty (1) If the accused pleads guilty, the plea shall be recorded, and he may be convicted thereon.

Notes—1 Court to be careful to see that the charge has been fully explained—See s 241 for procedure when accused does not understand proceedings. When arraigning an accused person and before receiving his plea the Court should be careful to insure the explanation of the charge in a manner sufficiently explicit to enable the accused to understand thoroughly the nature of the charge to which he is called upon to plead 5 C 828; Walt 11, 336 and 339; 3 Bom L R 439 Simply reading out the charge to the prisoner is not sufficient, but it must be explained to him Where the charge is not explained the conviction will be set aside especially in cases of trial for life 8 W 61 See also 18 A L J 442.

2. The record must show that charge has been read over and explained and plea taken.—The record must contain the usual entry as to the charge being read over to the accused and as to his plea, though the absence of same will not affect the validity of the trial if it is referred to in the judgment, M H C Ref trial 17 of 1906, 21 Cr. L. J. 410.

3. Effect of not recording plea.—If the accused pleads guilty, the plea should be recorded. Where no such plea appears on the record, the conviction is bad, and must be set aside and a new trial ordered on the charge 5 M. L. T. 75; 5 A. L. J. 157—1908 A. W. N 84

4. Accused's statement to be recorded in the language conveyed to the Court.—It is not necessary that the statement of the accused made in a foreign language should be taken down in the words of that language. The language in which it is conveyed to the Court by the interpreter is the language in which it should be recorded, 5 C. 828.

5. Accused must state his plea by his own mouth.—The accused should plead by his own mouth and not through his counsel or pleader, 15 W. R. 42. No pleader can be called upon to plead on behalf of his client 'guilty' or 'not guilty' and it is improper for a Magistrate to act on such plea, 6 Bom. L. R. 861. See Note 2 under s 255

6. Admissions by pleader appointed by Court not binding on accused.—Admissions made by a pleader appointed by Court to help the accused in his defence are not binding on him. The position of a pleader so appointed to defend a prisoner accused of murder is not the same as that of a pleader appointed by the accused, 2 Bom. L. R. 751.

7. A confessional statement at the close of a trial is not a plea of guilty.—After a prisoner has claimed to be tried, all the evidence, whether the statement of witnesses or admission of the prisoner, should be laid before the jury. Such an admission made at the end of a trial is not a plea of guilty upon which a Sessions Judge could record a finding without taking a verdict of the jury, Weir II, 336; 7 Bom. L. R. 731.

8. The accused should never be called upon to plead in the alternative but separately upon each head of charge.—The accused was charged with the offence of culpable homicide not amounting to murder or in the alternative with the offence of grievous hurt. On the charges being read over to the accused, he pleaded guilty to the second head of the charge only, viz, that of causing grievous hurt. The Sessions Judge accepting this plea sentenced him. Held, that the accused should never be called to plead in the alternative, but separately to each of the heads of charge, Ratanlal 327. See also 10 B. 126

9. Plea of guilty must be distinct admission of each and every fact necessary to constitute the offence charged.—Unless the accused distinctly admits each and every fact necessary to constitute the offence, and unless the Judge himself finds on the admissions made that the offence charged is legally established, he should take the evidence and come to a decision thereon. Where it appeared that the accused had admitted throughout that he beat deceased (his wife) and that she died but it appeared open to question whether he admitted the existence of any connection between the beating and the death, or of any intention to cause such bodily injury as was likely to cause death. Held, that the conviction on the plea of guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder could not be sustained, Weir II, 336. If an accused pleads guilty, the Court ought to satisfy itself that he confesses the full offence charged in the indictment, R v Golathan, C. C. A. 11 Cr. App R. 79.

A prisoner pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him in first count with stealing horses and in the second count with receiving the horses knowing them to have been stolen. On being asked whether he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed upon him he said that he was guilty of taking the horses not knowing that they were stolen. He was then sentenced.—Held, that the plea of 'guilty' was wrongly entered and all proceedings at the trial consequent on that plea were bad, that a plea of 'not guilty' must be entered and the case must go back for trial. Rex v Ingleson, (1915) 1 K. B. 512

10. Plea of guilty must be unequivocal and properly taken.—A prisoner charged under s. 211, 1 P. C., with having brought a false charge with intent to injure, by accusing A of having caused the death of a person under s. 304 A, 1 P. C., stated at the trial that the original complaint made by him was false, and that he made it unthinkingly. The Sessions Judge treated this statement as a plea of guilty, and convicted him. No record of the prisoner's plea appeared on the proceedings, nor did it appear that the charge had been explained as well as read to the prisoner, and the Judge considered that the original complaint did not amount to a false charge of an offence under s. 304-A. Held, that the conviction was bad, 7 C. 96—5 C. L. R. 471. In case where an accused person when called upon to plead to a charge before a Court of Session, instead of pleading guilty, makes a long rambling statement more or less admitting guilt, it would be much safer if the Judge recorded a formal plea of "not guilty" and proceeded to try the case in the ordinary way, recording the evidence, 1908 A. W. N. 54 = 5 A. L. J. 157 = 7 Cr. L. J. 235. See also Notes 11 and 12 below

11. Statement of accused must be taken as a whole.—It is not the duty of the Sessions Judge at the time of recording the plea to decide whether any statement which accompanies it, is true or false—any such statement must be regarded as explanatory of the plea, Ratanlal 532. In 11 C. 510, an accused person in answer to a charge of murder stated that he had killed his wife, but that he had done so in consequence of his having discovered her in an act of adultery on the previous day. Held, that such a statement did not amount to a plea of guilty on the charge, and that it was the duty of the Court to try whether the provocation, therein disclosed was sufficiently grave and sudden to reduce the offence. Also where the prisoner admitted that he had accompanied the dacoits for a short distance, but that he had turned back almost immediately and had had nothing to do with the dacoity that afterwards took place, and did not know that such an offence was in contemplation, held, that the statement does not amount to a plea of guilty, 7 W. R. 39. Where a person accused of murder acknowledged having struck his victim but repudiated the intention to murder, and the Sessions Judge accepted this acknowledgment as plea of guilty, and omitted to record any further evidence held that the Judge was bound to accept the statement of the accused as a whole if it was taken as a confession at all 25 W. R. 23, 14 B. 565. A prisoner stated before the committing Magistrate that he committed the homicide with which he was charged because of his body being then possessed by the goddess Warsubai. Before the Court of Session though he pleaded guilty, he informed the Judge in reply to the first question put to him that he committed the homicide because he was subject to epileptic fits. Held, on appeal that the prisoner could not be held to have pleaded guilty and could not therefore be convicted on that plea, Ratanlal 539. When a prisoner pleads guilty, but goes on to say that he did not commit the offence with which he is charged, the plea is really one of not guilty, 11 W. R. 53. See also Note 4 to s. 255

12. Code exhaustive as to 'pleading'—plea of 'not guilty' not recognized by the Code.—Ss. 271 and 272 contain all that is necessary as to pleading and there is no need to supplement their contents by a reference to any other system of jurisprudence. The accused can plead guilty under s. 271, he can claim to be tried or he can refuse to plead which is taken to be same as claiming to be tried. The plea of 'not guilty' is thus one not recognized by the Code. This is intentional and designed to get rid of a great mass of English law relating to criminal pleading. It is open to the accused to make any answer to an indictment except guilty or a claim to be tried 41 C. 1072.

13. Where a plea of guilty is upon a specific charge, conviction upon another charge is bad in law.—Where an accused person pleads guilty to the specific offence with which he is charged, he cannot, on such plea, be convicted of an offence other than that specifically charged, Wells II, 335 (1881). Thus where an accused person was charged with the offence of murder and the charge was not proved, but the Court convicted her of the offence of concealment of birth which it considered was admitted by her in her examination by the Court it was held, that such conviction was illegal. A charge of concealment of birth should have been framed and the accused tried thereon, Ratanlal 385. Again, where an accused person pleaded guilty to the charge of culpable homicide not amounting to murder, but the Sessions Judge, having regard to the evidence before the committing Magistrate, convicted him of grievous hurt instead of culpable homicide not amounting to murder on his own plea. It was held, that the Sessions Judge should have tried the case. It was illegal to convict the accused of an offence of which he did not plead guilty and for which he was not tried, Ratanlal 413.

14. Plea of guilty of the offence of murder is not sufficient to establish offence of culpable homicide not amounting to murder.—Where accused has pleaded guilty to a charge of murder, conviction of culpable homicide not amounting to murder is illegal, 35 A. L. R. 38 = 10 Cr. L. J. 5. Where there is clear prima facie case of murder, a Sessions Judge cannot legally, without trying the case, accept a statement made by the accused who is charged with the offence of murder, as sufficient to establish his plea of guilty of the offence of culpable homicide not amounting to murder on the ground of grave and sudden provocation, and convict and sentence him accordingly for such offence on his own plea, Ratanlal 410.

15. Trial does not end with the plea of guilty.—Discretionary with Court to continue trial or accept plea.—If the Judge does not think fit to convict the prisoner on the charge to which he has pleaded guilty, he should proceed to try him and thereupon he will have to take all the evidence in order to determine whether the prisoner has committed the offence to which he had pleaded guilty or any other offence with which he is charged,

4 B. L. R. Appx. C1. Thus there need not necessarily be a conviction on the plea. The Code draws a clear distinction between conviction and sentence, 8 B. 85; 7 A. 160. After a plea of guilty a trial may be continued to ascertain the actual part taken by the accused in order to assess the punishment, 23 A. 53. The trial of an accused person does not necessarily end if he pleads guilty, but evidence may be taken (especially in cases of murder), as if the plea had been one of not guilty and the case decided upon the whole of the evidence including the accused's plea. A trial does not strictly end until the accused has been either convicted or acquitted or discharged, 23 M. 131. See also 19 B. 195; and 13 C. W. N. 552 = 9 C. L. J. 291 = 10 Cr. L. J. 434; 37 A. 247.

16. In capital cases, desirable not to accept plea of guilty.—'It is not in accordance with the usual practice to accept a plea of guilty in a case where the natural sequence would be a sentence of death.' Where on a trial for murder the accused was put some questions in answer to which he said he hit the deceased and the Sessions Judge, treating the statement as a plea of guilty convicted the accused of murder, it was held (i) that it was not in accordance with the sequence would be a sentence of death without necessarily admitting that he had intention or a certain knowledge, 8 Bom. L. R. 247. In capital cases where there is any doubt as to whether an accused person fully understands the meaning and effect of a plea of guilty it is advisable for the Court to take evidence and not to convict solely on the plea of the accused, 19 A. 119. A plea of guilty should not be accepted in capital offences 54 P. R. 1905; 19 Bom. L. R. 356; 20 A. L. J. 320.

17. Trial to be full and complete, where accused not convicted on his plea.—In a trial by jury the plea of the accused was recorded by the Judge as follows — 'The accused makes a statement admitting the fact, but alleging provocation.' Jurors were selected and after some adjournment, one witness was examined for the defence and pleaders on both sides heard and the Judge in charging the jury observed 'the evidence for the accused was so overwhelmingly strong that I had no hesitation in accepting his full statement of the facts given by the accused in this Court.' The jury returned a verdict of guilty and the accused was convicted. Held, that there was no legal trial and that the conviction must be set aside. If the Judge was of opinion that the plea of the accused was one of guilty, he ought to follow the procedure laid down in this section, but if he decided that the plea did not amount to a plea of guilty, the trial ought to have proceeded in the usual way under s. 272 and the verdict of the jury ought to have been taken upon the evidence and not upon the Judge's view of the strength of the evidence, 6 Bom. L. R. 671. Where a prisoner had admitted before the Court of Session that he had killed his wife no assessors were empanelled. At the end, however, of his confession he stated that he was not in his right mind at the time. The Judge therefore proceeded to record medical and other evidence on the point, and having come to the conclusion that there was no reason to doubt from the prisoner's conduct either prior or subsequent to the murder, that in committing the murder, he knew that he was doing a wrong act convicted the prisoner. Held, that the plea, was, in effect one of not guilty and that the trial should not have proceeded without assessors and that it should be quashed, 5 N.W. P. H. C. R. 110. In another case the accused confessed having killed his wife and pleaded guilty at his trial for murder. The Sessions Judge recorded briefly the evidence of two prosecution witnesses to determine whether the offence committed was or was not culpable homicide amounting to murder. He found the offence was murder and sentenced the accused to transportation for life on the ground that the accused, 'without being actually insane so as not to be aware of what he was doing, appears to be decidedly a man of weak intellect.' On appeal it was urged that the accused was insane or at any rate incapable of understanding the charge against him and the Chief Court accordingly set aside the conviction and ordered a re-trial and an inquiry under s. 465 54 P. R. 1905 = 3 Cr. L. J. 82.

18. Practice if plea not accepted.—When a Judge decides to try a case in spite of the plea of guilty, it is directed to enter a plea of not guilty. The case is meaningless unless he accepts it. If on appeal the Crown and the prisoner, which he had to try, 9 C. L. J. 55 = 10 Cr. L. J. 329; Weir II, 335 (1856), 19 B. 195; 23 A. 53; 13 C. W. N. 552 = 9 C. L. J. 291 = 10 Cr. L. J. 434. The proper course to be adopted when an accused person who is tried with others pleads guilty is either to convict him on his plea and remove him from the dock, in which case his trial would manifestly be at an end so as to warrant his being called as a witness either for or against any person who has been accused along with him, or to allow the trial to go on as if the plea had been one of 'not guilty' in which case the trial does not end with the plea of guilty and therefore any confession made by the person so pleading could into consideration under s. 30 of the Indian Evidence Act against any other person who was being jointly tried with him for the same offence, 23 M. 151. But if the plea of guilty is accepted, the accused pleading guilty is not jointly tried along with others and this confession cannot be taken into consideration against the others, 15 P. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 605. See also 11 P. R. 1900; 37 A. 237.

19. It is unfair to postpone conviction on plea of guilty solely with the view of using the confession against a co-accused.—It is unfair to deter the conviction of the accused solely with the view of having his confession considered against his co-accused who have pleaded 'not guilty,' 23 A. 53. But it could not be properly held, that the accused who confessed before a Magistrate and had pleaded guilty before the Sessions Court was under trial with the others, so as to make his confession admissible under s. 30, Indian Evidence Act against them, 15 B. 66; 19 B. 195; 4 C. 483 (F.B.), 2 C. W. R. 749, 17 A. 524; 22 A. 445; 7 M. 102; 22 M. 491 and 11 P. R. 1800. It is against the spirit of law to postpone the conviction so that the person who has pleaded guilty may technically be said to be tried jointly for the same offence and thus create an opportunity for the purpose of allowing the statements he may have made to be considered against the co-accused 30 A. 440, 13 C. W. R. 522 = 9 C. L. J. 291 = 10 C. L. J. 484; 12 A. L. J. 1239 = 16 Cr. L. J. 103.

20. Test for finding whether plea accepted or not.—The question whether an accused who pleads guilty was being jointly tried with the other accused who did not plead guilty, so that his evidence could be taken into consideration against them under s. 30, Indian Evidence Act appears to depend upon whether the Judge accepted the plea of guilty or not. The test seems to be whether in fact, the trial proceeded as against the accused who had pleaded guilty as if he had not done so, ie., whether for instance he cross-examined or was given the opportunity of cross-examining the witness, whether he was examined himself (and in a case where there are assessors), whether their opinion was taken as to guilt, U. B. R. (1913) 2nd Qr., 170 = 14 Cr. L. J. 565. The test is whether the judgment discussed the guilt of the person pleading as an open question to be decided on the evidence on record 15 P. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 605.

21. Effect of partial plea of guilty.—When a person is charged with having made two contradictory statements, he may plead guilty of having falsely made one statement. Here both statements may be false so that because the prisoner pleaded guilty to one charge he should not of necessity be acquitted of the other. Looking at the special nature of such charges the prisoner ought not to be allowed to elect which statement he shall admit to be false. The fact should be tried as under s. 272 it is optional with the Court to do so 8 W. R. 6 (Cr. Let.).

22. Where plea, in effect, is one of not guilty, conviction upon a confession before the committing Magistrate is bad.—A Sessions Judge, after a prisoner upon his trial has pleaded what in effect amounts to a plea of not guilty is not justified in convicting the prisoner solely upon a confession made before the committing Magistrate, 2 N. W. P. H. C. R. 479. Some corroborative evidence is necessary to warrant the Court of Session in acting upon a confession made before the committing Magistrate but retracted at the trial 1888 A. W. N. 21, 23 B. 316.

23. Plea of guilty when no assessors.—Where the accused pleads guilty, his conviction is valid, although there are no assessors 10 W. R. 43 = 2 B. L. R. 23 (F.B.) 5 W. R. 31 (Cr. Let.), but the plea must be recorded, 5 M. L. T. 216.

24. Form of proceedings in trials before the Court of Session see B. H. C. Cr. Cir., p. 26, Holkins 220

272. If the accused refuses to, or does not, plead, or if he claims to be tried, the Court shall proceed to choose jurors or assessors as hereinafter directed and to try the case

Refusal to plead or claim to be tried.

Trial by same jury or assessors of several offenders in succession.

Provided that, subject to the right of objection hereinafter mentioned the same jury may try, or the same assessors may aid in the trial of, as many accused persons successively as the Court thinks fit.

Notes.—1 If the accused refuses to, or does not plead.—When the accused person makes no answer to the enquiry whether he is guilty or has any defence to make it should be ascertained whether he is obstinately mute or dumb ex testatione Dei. If he be found to be obstinately mute the plea of 'not guilty' should be recorded and the trial should proceed. If he be found to be dumb ex testatione Dei an enquiry should be made as to whether he is sane or insane or incapable of being tried. If found sane, a plea of 'not guilty' shall be recorded, and the trial should proceed, but if found to be insane, the procedure laid down in Chap. XXXIV should be followed, Ratanlal 19.

2. Commencement of trial—The actual trial does not begin until the charge has been read and the accused claims to be tried, 15 B 515; 25 B. 694 and see 32 M. 320 (see Note 5 to s. 251). If the accused refuses to plead or claims to be tried, the Court must proceed to try the case and where the trial is not by jury, it must be conducted with the aid of two or more assessors as members of the Court, 2 B. L. R. 23 (F.B.). The accused person shall not be examined by the Sessions Judge immediately after he has been called upon to plead, if his plea be 'not guilty,' 3 Agra H. C. R. 85

3. Where there is no evidence for prosecution Judge is bound to find not guilty.—In trials before a Sessions Judge with assessors, when the prisoner pleads not guilty and the Public Prosecutor does not offer evidence in support of the charge the Judge ought to instruct the assessors that they are bound to find the prisoner not guilty, 4 M. H. C. R. Appx. XXXIX, see also 16 W. R. 19.

4. Jury cannot try two cases simultaneously—'By the same jury may try as many cases, etc.' we understand that one trial is to follow the other, i.e., that on the conclusion of one trial the same jury may proceed to try the accused in the next case. The law does not contemplate that two trials shall be conducted piecemeal in such a manner that at their conclusion the jury shall be called upon to decide at one and the same time upon two distinct classes of evidence which, though they have points in common require careful discrimination as bearing upon the guilt or innocence of two sets of accused. Independently of the irregularity of the proceeding, no jury ought to be placed in such an embarrassing position. 'It is only fair to the prisoners that the sole issues on which they are to be tried and the evidence bearing upon those issues, should be laid before the jury, and that the minds of the jury should not be encumbered by the consideration of foreign and irrelevant matter'—Per PRINCEP, J., in 6 C. 96 p. 99 = 5 C. L. R. 521.

5. Plea of 'not guilty' not recognized by the Code.—See Note 12 to s. 271

273. (1) In trials before the High Court, when it appears to the High Court, at any time before the commencement of the trial of the person charged, that any charge or any portion thereof is clearly unsustainable, the Judge may make on the charge an entry to that effect

Entry on unsustainable charges

Effect of entry

(2) Such entry shall have the effect of staying proceedings upon the charge or portion of the charge, as the case may be

Note.—Effect of an entry under this section—An entry under this section has not the effect of an acquittal for the purpose of s. 403 but it cannot be revised by the High Court under ss. 435 and 439. Applications to the High Court under this section should be disposed of by it in the exercise of its ordinary original criminal jurisdiction, 9 C. 397, see 21 C. 97 for the exercise of the power under this section. Under s. 494, the Public Prosecutor may also with the permission of the Court withdraw from the prosecution of any person or the power of the Advocate-General to enter non prosequi vide s. 333 and the effect thereof

C—Choosing a Jury

274. (1) In trials before the High Court the jury shall consist of nine persons

Number of jury

(2) In trials by jury before the Court of Session the jury shall consist of such uneven number, not being less than five or more than nine, as the Local Government, by order applicable to any particular district or to any particular class of offences in that district, may direct

† Provided that, where any accused person is charged with an offence punishable with death, the jury shall consist of not less than seven persons and, if practicable, of nine persons

* The word "five" has been substituted for the word "three" by Act XII of 1923

† This proviso has been added by Act XII of 1923.

Notes.—1. The numbers fixed by Government Notification to be strictly adhered to.—Where the Local Government has, by notification, fixed the number of the jury at five, a trial had before a so-called jury composed of seven was held bad as it was before a tribunal not properly constituted 25 A. 211.

2 Number of jury.—In Bengal where the accused is not an European or American the jury should consist of five persons, in the United Provinces of Oudh and Agra of seven persons, in Madras of five in Punjab nine, in the Districts of Lahore Delhi, Rawalpindi and Peshawar five, in the Districts of Ambala, Multan and Sialkot and in the other districts three, in Bombay before the Poona Court of Session of offences under Chapters VIII, IX XII, XVII XVIII, I P C the jury must consist of five persons But in Bombay five has been fixed as the number for the jury in which an European (not being an European British subject) or an American is the accused person

 275. (1) In a trial by jury before the High Court or Court of Session of a person who has been found under the provisions of this Code to be an European or Indian British subject, a majority of the jury shall if such person before the first juror is called and accepted so requires, consist, in the case of an European British subject, of persons who are Europeans or Americans and, in the case of an Indian British subject, of Indians

(2) In any such trial by jury of a person who has been found under the provisions of this Code to be an European (other than European British subject) or an American, a majority of the jury shall, if practicable and if such European or American before the first juror is called and accepted so requires, consist of persons who are Europeans or Americans

Notes.—1. The most difficult question for the Committee to decide is that of trial by jury of European British subjects This is the point on which non-official European opinion is most emphatic namely, that it is essential that a mixed jury should be retained. We have decided accordingly that the mixed jury should remain both in the High Court and in the Sessions Court in all cases which are to be tried by jury under our proposals, subject however to certain provisions and safeguards, namely —the same law as to the composition of the jury shall apply to Indians as to Europeans, that is to say, the majority of the jury, if an Indian accused so desires shall consist of persons who are not Europeans or Americans This is already the law in Sessions Courts, and s. 275 should be so amended as to make it apply to the High Court also Report of the Racial Distinctions Committee, paragraph 25

A Judge is not bound to try a Native Christian with the aid of Christian jury, 1 W. R. 2

2. See for the meaning and scope of this section and ss 443 and 446 and for the meaning of the phrase 'Ordinary course' in the proviso to s. 446, 3 Lab 513.

276. The jurors shall be chosen by lot from the persons summoned to act as such, in such manner as the High Court may from time to time by rule direct

Provided that—

Existing practice maintained first pending the issue under this section of rules for any Court, the practice now prevailing in such Court in respect to the choosing of jurors shall be followed persons not summoned when eligible, secondly in case of a deficiency of persons summoned, the number of jurors required may, with the leave of the Court be chosen from such other persons as may be present, thirdly, in a trial before any High Court in the town[†] which is the usual place of sitting of such High Court, trials before special jurors. (a) if the accused person is charged with having committed an offence punishable with death, or

[†] H 279 has been substituted for the old s. 278 by Act XII of 1922

[†] Subst. substituted for the words in the Presidency-towns by Act XXIII of 1923.

(b) if in any other case a Judge of the High Court so directs, the jurors shall be chosen from the special jury list hereinafter prescribed, and fourthly, in any district for which the Local Government has declared that the trial of certain offences may be by special jury, the jurors shall, in any case in which the Judge so directs, be chosen from the special jury list prescribed in section 325

Notes.—1. Mode of choosing jury.—This section contemplates that the names of the jury to be "chosen by lot," shall be drawn out of one box containing the names of all persons summoned to act as jurors, 1 B. 462.

2. Conviction in a case tried by a jury not chosen by lot is illegal.—Effect of Judge selecting a jury instead of choosing by lots.—The object of this section coupled with ss. 279 and 326, is to secure an impartial trial by rendering impossible any intentional selection of jurors to try a particular case, and an accused person has a right to claim to be tried by a jury chosen with strict regard to all the safeguards provided by law to secure perfect impartiality. On the day fixed for trial, there was not a sufficient number of jurors in attendance and the Judge summoned from among the residents of the town contrary to s. 326, other men, held, that when a Judge fails to obtain a panel in the manner provided by ss. 277 and 326 (by lot) it is his duty to postpone the trial until the requisite number of jurors have been obtained in the manner provided by law. Where instead of choosing jurors by lot and then hearing and deciding objection as provided by ss. 276—279, the Judge proceeded at once to exempt some of the persons present, merely on their own representation and tried the accused with the rest, and where it further appeared that the persons summoned to serve as jurors had not been selected in the manner provided by s. 326, held, that such a grave irregularity in the selection of the jurors affects the proper constitution of the Court and is not rectified by s. 537, 7 C. W. N. 188; where 8 C. 739, is not followed. Where ten European jurors were summoned for the trial of a person who was entitled to a majority of three European jurors, but only three out of the ten were present and all were empanelled, held that the European jurors not having been chosen by lot, the trial was illegal. Jurors are Judges of facts and in the absence of a properly constituted jury the violation of the provisions of this section is of such a serious nature as cannot be cured by s. 537, 33 A. 385. See also 12 Cr. L. J. 537 (Oudh) and 26 A. 211; (1917) M. W. N. 1.

2-A. Selection of jurors from outsiders in a case of deficiency.—In a case of deficiency of persons summoned, the number of jurors required may be chosen from such other persons as may be present in Court. These may not be chosen by lot and may not be at all in the jury list. 29 C. W. N. 652.

3. Effect of empanelling a juror not summoned.—When in the course of a trial it was discovered that a person was on the jury who was not on the jury panel, and who had been by mistake summoned as a jurymen, the jury was discharged and a fresh jury constituted by taking another jurymen in the place of the one who had served by mistake, R v Phillips, 11 Cox 142. In Hill v Yates, 12 East 229, it was held that the grant of a new trial because a juror not summoned had served was discretionary and if no injustice had resulted, a new trial should be refused. Archbold, p. 237. See, however, Note 7 to s. 284.

4. Rules for selecting jury by lot.—

(a) Bengal Rules.

For Courts of Session—(i) In order to nominate jury for the trial of any prisoner or other person to be tried by jury, the Sessions Judge shall cause to be put together in one box cards or pieces of paper containing the names of all the persons summoned to attend, except such of the said persons as shall have been excused by the Sessions Judge from serving on that day in consequence of their having served as jurors on the previous day, or for any other cause. Such cards or pieces of paper shall be, as nearly as may be of equal size, and each shall bear the name, of one person summoned to attend. The Sessions Judge shall then, in open Court, draw, or cause to be drawn, out of the said box, one after another, as many of the said cards or pieces of paper as may represent the number of jurors required to try the case, and if any of the jurors whose names shall be so drawn shall not appear, or if any be objected to and the objection be allowed, then such further number shall be drawn as may be necessary to complete the number of jurors required for the case.

(ii) In cases in which not less than one-half of the jury must be Europeans (ss. 460 and 451 read with s. 7, Act III of 1884) or both Europeans and Americans (s. 451 read with s. 7, Act III of 1884) the jurors shall be chosen as follows—

First.—Not less than one-half of such jury shall be chosen by lot, in the manner prescribed by Rule I from a box containing the names of only Europeans or Americans, or Europeans and Americans, until the necessary majority is complete.

Second—To the names of jurors not so chosen shall then be added the names of all the other jurors summoned to attend and the number necessary to complete the jury shall then be chosen by lot in the manner prescribed by Rule 1

(117) In cases in which not less than one-half of the jury must be neither Europeans nor Americans (s. 27a) the jurors shall be chosen as follows—

First—Not less than one-half of such jury shall be chosen by lot in the manner prescribed by Rules from a box containing the names only of such persons as are neither Europeans nor Americans until the necessary majority is complete

Second—To the names of jurors not so chosen shall then be added the names of all the other jurors summoned to attend and the number necessary to complete the jury shall be chosen by lot in the manner prescribed by Rule 1

(118) (1) When the jurors have been finally selected their names shall be entered on the fileleaf prescribed for records of Sessions trials (p. 220 Cr R. and O.) the FOREMAN (s. 280 Cr P C.) being specially designated as such.

2. District Magistrate's Court—The above rules mutatis mutandis shall apply to the selection of jurors in cases before District Magistrates in which the accused is an European British subject and claims to be tried by a mixed jury [s. 451 (a) Cr P C.] Such jurors shall be selected from the persons summoned under the provisions of s. 462 of the Code to attend for the purposes of the trial—Rule No 4 of 25th June 1885 Withins Addenda p. 90.

(b) Madras Rules

1 As to Madras rules for selecting jury by lot see the High Court Proceedings No 1353 dated 11th April 1883

2 As to the applicability of jury rules to trials by jury of European British subjects before District Magistrates under Act III of 1884 embodied in the present Code see the High Court Proceedings No 2384 dated 4th September 1884

(c) Bombay Rules

1 The list of jurors shall be prepared published and revised in the manner laid down in ss. 321 322 323, 324 and 325 of the Code of Criminal Procedure in the month of January of each year or as soon thereafter as may be convenient.

2 No one shall be included in the jury list who does not possess a knowledge of the English language provided that if a sufficient number of persons acquainted with English cannot be obtained the jury list may be completed by the addition of the necessary number of persons not acquainted with English.

3 A week before the commencement of the Sessions folded papers bearing the names of the jurors in the list aforesaid shall be put into a ballot box and as many of them as the Sessions Judge may deem necessary shall be drawn by lot in open Court. The names of such persons as have served within six months of the date of the commencement of the Sessions are to be excluded from the ballot

4 When the number of jurors required to serve is found insufficient the names of the persons who have served within six months of the commencement of the Sessions shall be drawn as above directed so far as may be necessary to complete the required number

5 A precept shall then be addressed to the District Magistrate requiring him to summon the jurors so drawn to attend on the day the Sessions commence.

6 At the commencement of the Sessions the names of the jurors summoned to attend shall be put into the ballot box and as many of them as the Court may think necessary shall be drawn to sit as jurors for the trial of the case coming on first.

7 The rest of the jurors summoned shall be asked to attend at such time as the Court may specify and the requisite number shall be selected from amongst them at the beginning of each case or day in the manner above specified to serve as jurors in the case or cases standing for trial.

8 It shall be in the discretion of the Court to excuse the attendance of any person whose name has been drawn either before or after he is summoned and to direct another name to be drawn.

9 When the name of a Government servant who is absent on duty is drawn such servant shall ordinarily be deemed not available and it shall be within the discretion of the Court to direct that he shall not be summoned or if already summoned to excuse his attendance

10. The power of choosing jurors from amongst persons present in Court shall be exercised by the Judge or by such person as the Judge may appoint for that purpose under the superintendence of the Judge.

277. (1) As each juror is chosen, his name shall be called aloud and upon his appearance the accused shall be asked if he objects to be tried by such juror

Names of jurors to be called.

(2) Objection may then be taken to such juror by the accused or by the prosecutor and the grounds of objection shall be stated

Objection to jurors.

Provided that in the High Court objections without grounds stated shall be allowed to the number of eight on behalf of the Crown and eight on behalf of the person or all the persons charged

Objection without grounds stated.

Notes.—1. Procedure prescribed by this section to be strictly followed.—Where instead of at once proceeding to choose a jury by lot from among the jurors who were present subject to objections if any under this section and deciding and recording his decision as to each person objected to as provided by s. 279 the Judge exempted most of the jurors present merely on their own representations and no reasons were stated as against each of them nor any formal decision recorded held the proceedings were irregular 7 C. W. N 188

2. Effect of omission to give the accused opportunity to challenge the jurors.—Though the High Court failed to give him an opportunity to challenge set aside the proceedings might be quashed on writ of error and a venire de novo awarded. Gray v R 6 St. Tr (N.S.) 417, Archbold p. 207

3. Jurors when to be challenged.—According to English practice when a full jury has appeared and before any juror is sworn the proper time comes for the exercise of the right of challenge or exception to the juror's returned to pass upon the trial. Archbold p. 207 Under the N Y Cr Pro. Code s 371 a challenge must be taken when the juror appears and before he is sworn but the Court may in its discretion for good cause set aside a juror at any time before evidence is given in the action. The administering of the oath to each juror as he is found competent is a lawful mode of swearing and precludes a subsequent peremptory challenge to such juror.—People v Carpenter 4 N Y Cr Rep. 39, 38 Hun 491 A juror may be peremptorily challenged at any time before he is sworn whether he has taken his seat in the jury box or not (People v Carpenter 3 N Y Cr Rep. 923. In that case during the selection of the jury the trial Judge stated that all challenges must be exhausted before the jurors took their seat in the box. Defendant's counsel then said he accepted a certain juror After the jury had been completed and had taken their seat in the box but had not been sworn defendant's counsel peremptorily challenged the juror whom he had previously accepted. His number of peremptory challenges had not been exhausted. The Judge refused to allow the challenge and said it was too late held that the defendant had not waived his right to peremptory challenge and that the ruling was erroneous. See Note 1 to s. 231

4. Grounds for challenging under the New York Code.—Under the N Y Cr Pro C. s 374 challenges (i.e., objections) are (a) general or (b) particular Under the former (1) (s. 375) a conviction for felony and (2) want of any of the qualifications prescribed in the Code to render a person a competent juror The latter is again sub-divided into (1) implied and (2) actual. Under s. 377 a challenge for implied bias may be taken for all or any of the following causes and no others —

(1) consanguinity or affinity within the ninth degree to the person alleged to be injured by the crime charged or on whose complaint the prosecution was instituted or to the defendant,

(2) bearing to him the relation of guardian of ward attorney or client or client of the attorney or counsel for the people or defendant master or servant or landlord or tenant or being a member of the family of the defendant or of the person alleged to be injured by the offence charged or on whose complaint the prosecution was instituted or in his employment on wages

(3) being a party adverse to the defendant in a civil action or having complained against or being accused by him in a criminal prosecution

(4) having served on the grand jury which found the indictment or on a coroner's jury which inquired into the death of a person whose death is the subject of indictment

(5) having served on a trial jury which has tried another person for the crime charged in the indictment

(6) having been one of a jury formerly sworn to try the same indictment and whose verdict was set aside, or which was discharged without a verdict, after the cause was submitted to it

(7) having served as a juror in a civil action brought against the defendant for the act charged as a crime

(8) if the crime charged be punishable with death the entertaining of such conscientious opinions as would preclude his finding the defendant guilty, in which case he shall neither be permitted nor compelled to serve as a juror

A challenge for actual bias may be taken for the existence of a state of mind on the part of the juror, in reference to the case or to either party which satisfies the Court in the exercise of a sound discretion that such juror cannot try the issue impartially and without prejudice to the substantial right of the party challenging. But the previous expression or formation of an opinion or impression in reference to the guilt or innocence of the defendant or a present opinion or impression in reference thereto, is not a sufficient ground of challenge for actual bias to any person otherwise legally qualified if he declare on oath that he believes that such opinion or impression will not influence his verdict and that he can render an impartial verdict according to the evidence, and the Court is satisfied that he does not entertain such a present opinion or impression as would influence his verdict (s. 376).

Upon the trial of a challenge to an individual juror the juror challenged may be examined as a witness to prove or disprove the challenge and is bound to answer every question pertinent to every inquiry therein (s. 383).

276. Any objection taken to a juror on any of the following grounds if made out to the satisfaction of the Court shall be allowed —

Grounds of objection.

(a) some presumed or actual partiality in the juror,

(b) some personal ground, such as alienage deficiency in the qualification required by any law or rule having the force of law for the time being in force, or being under the age of twenty-one or above the age of sixty years,

(c) his having by habit or religious vows relinquished all care of worldly affairs,

(d) his holding any office in or under the Court,

(e) his executing any duties of Police or being entrusted with Police duties,

(f) his having been convicted of any offence which, in the opinion of the Court, renders him unfit to serve on the jury,

(g) his inability to understand the language in which the evidence is given or when such evidence is interpreted the language in which it is interpreted,

(h) any other circumstances which in the opinion of the Court renders him improper as a juror

Notes.—1 WHITLEY STOKES is of opinion that the objections for implied bias referred to in the Note to last section with some slight omissions and verbal changes illustrate the presumed partiality mentioned in the section.—Anglo-Indian Codes Vol II p 163.

2. Objection must be made out to the satisfaction of the Court.—The burden of proof of a challenge for cause is on the person who makes it and he is not entitled to question a juror before challenging him. When the challenge has been made, the trial proceeds by witnesses called to support or defeat the challenge, the juror objected to may also be examined on the voir dire as to his qualification or the leaning of his affection. But he cannot be interrogated as to matters which tend to his own discredit, nor as it seems whether he has expressed a hostile opinion as to the defendant. Archbold, p 215

3. Disqualification by reason of holding office in or under the Court.—The fact that a person is a clerk in the office of the Magistrate of the district is not sufficient to disqualify him from sitting on a jury, 7 C. 42

4. Duty of Court when juror obviously unfit.—The Court, even without challenge taken may and ought to excuse a juror on the panel when called if he is obviously unfit to perform his duty, from physical or mental infirmity or seemle, from expressed unindifferency Mansell v R 8 Bl Tr (NS) 831, Archbold p 217

Decision of objection.

279. (1) Every objection taken to a juror shall be decided by the Court, and such decision shall be recorded and be final ~

(2) If the objection is allowed the place of such juror shall be supplied by any other juror attending in obedience to a summons and chosen in manner provided by section 276, or if there is no such other juror present then by any other person present in the Court whose name is on the list of jurors or whom the Court considers a proper person to serve on the jury

Supply of place of juror against whom objection allowed.

Provided that no objection to such juror or other person is taken under section 278 and allowed

Foreman of jury

280. (1) When the jurors have been chosen, they shall appoint one of their number to be foreman

(2) The foreman shall preside in the debates of the jury, deliver the verdict of the jury, and ask any information from the Court that is required by the jury or any of the jurors

(3) If a majority of the jury do not, within such time as the Judge thinks reasonable agree in the appointment of a foreman, he shall be appointed by the Court

Swearing of jurors.

281. When the foreman has been appointed, the jurors shall be sworn under the Indian Oaths Act, 1873

Notes.—1. No Challenge after swearing in jurors—No cause of challenge to the jury can be taken either in arrest of judgment, or otherwise after the jury are sworn, R v Sheppard, 1 Leach 101; R v Sutton, 8 B and C. 417. See Note 3 to s. 277

2 Form of oath—The Madras High Court has prescribed the following forms of oath and affirmation — 'I shall well and truly try and true deliverance make between our Sovereign Lord the King Emperor of India and the prisoner at the bar and a true verdict give according to the evidence So help me God' or 'I solemnly affirm in the presence of Almighty God that I will judge truly between the King Emperor of India and the prisoner of the bar, and will give a true verdict according to the evidence.' The words in italics may be omitted if the juror objects to this form

282. (1) If, in the course of a trial by jury, at any time before the return of the verdict, any juror, from any sufficient cause, is prevented from attending throughout, the trial or if any juror absents himself, and it is not practicable to enforce his attendance, or if it appears that any juror is unable to understand the language in which the evidence is given, or, when such evidence is interpreted the language in which it is interpreted, a new juror shall be added, or the jury shall be discharged and a new jury chosen.

(2) bearing to him the relation of guardian of ward, attorney or client or client of the attorney, or counsel for the people or defendant, master or servant, or landlord or tenant or being a member of the family of the defendant or of the person alleged to be injured by the offence charged or on whose complaint the prosecution was instituted or in his employment on wages,

(3) being a party adverse to the defendant in a civil action or having complained against or being accused by him in a criminal prosecution,

(4) having served on the grand jury which found the indictment or on a coroner's jury which inquired into the death of a person whose death is the subject of indictment,

Upon the trial of a challenge to an individual juror, the juror challenged may be examined as a witness to prove or disprove the challenge and is bound to answer every question pertinent to every inquiry therein (s. 383).

278. Any objection taken to a juror on any of the following grounds

2 Form of oath.—The Madras High Court has prescribed the following forms of oath and affirmation—"I shall well and truly try and true deliverance make between our Sovereign Lord the King Emperor of India and the prisoner at the bar and a true verdict give according to the evidence So help me God or I solemnly affirm in the presence of Almighty God that I will judge truly between the King-Emperor of India and the prisoner of the bar and will give a true verdict according to the evidence. Procedure when juror ceases to attend etc.

(2) In each of such cases the trial shall commence anew

Notes.—1 Discharge of jury—If a juror is incapacitated the jury may be discharged and a fresh jury called who may be the remainder of the former jury with another added to their number but the defendant should be given his challenges afresh and all the jurors should be re-sworn the witnesses should be re-sworn and their oral evidence taken again Halsbury's Law of England IX p 370 Archbold p 238 According to English Law it is for the Judge alone to decide whether a necessity exists for discharging a jury and his decision is not subject to review or appeal

2 The trial shall commence anew—It is irregular for the Judge even with the consent of the defendant to read over from his notes the evidence given before the previous jury R v Bertrand (1867) L R 1 P C 520 One of the jurors was added after some of the prosecution witnesses were examined and in the place of another who was discharged The trial was not commenced afresh but the Judge called the witnesses who had been examined read out their statements to them which they admitted to be correct and the trial proceeded held there was no valid trial 36 A 481

3. Temporary illness of a juror during trial—After the retirement of the jury on a murder trial one of them was taken very ill he was put in bed in a communicating room per curiam 4 B 1 per curiam 4 B 1 See also L R 402 (4) Notes 7 and 19, pp 244 and 246 Upon a trial for murder one of the jurymen was taken ill He left the jury box and was taken out of Court accompanied by two medical men and a jury bailiff who however was not sworn for the purpose After the absence of three-quarters of an hour during which time no one but the doctors spoke to him the jurymen rejoined the rest of the jury and trial proceeded The prisoner was convicted held that as the evidence showed that there had been no opportunity of tampering with the jurymen the fact that he had left the Court in charge of an unsworn bailiff did not establish that there had been a mis-trial Rex v Crippen (1911) K B 149

4 Juror unable to understand the language, etc—This has been interpreted to include the case of a juror who was deaf and partly blind. When this became known to the Sessions Judge he stopped the trial and recommenced a fresh trial with another jury 19 M 378

5 Until the jury is discharged a new jury cannot try the case.—See 2 G. W. N 481, where the trial Judge having come to the conclusion in the midst of a trial that he was personally interested and could not go on with the case adjourned the trial without discharging the jury On another Judge being appointed to try the case objection was taken that the first Judge and the jury had still seized of the case. To get rid of the difficulty a nolle prosequi was entered

Discharge of jury in case of sickness or prisoner

283. The Judge may also discharge the jury whenever the prisoner becomes incapable of remaining at the bar

Notes.—1 No provisions for discharge of jury for misconduct.—This and the preceding are the only sections which provide for the discharge of the jury before a verdict is returned. They do not provide for a discharge of the jury for improper conduct during trial. In the trial of a case in the Calcutta High Court after the prosecution had closed and the counsel for the defence had declared his intention to call witnesses for the defence the jury wanted to give their verdict against the accused without hearing any defence evidence. The counsel for the defence requested for their discharge for misconduct citing R v Fowler 4 B and Ald. 273 and 10 B 370 at p 395 On objection by the prosecution to the adoption of this course a nolle prosequi was entered under instructions and on behalf of the Advocate-General under s. 333 7 G. W. N 31 See Archbold p 353 for English practice

2 Jury not to be discharged, if a witness is absent.—A trial may be adjourned if from the absence of a witness or any other reasonable cause the Sessions Judge considers it necessary or advisable to do so stating in an order in writing his reasons for doing so but the Sessions Judge cannot on account of the absence of a witness, discharge the jury and direct a fresh trial to be held. Such an order was set aside and the Sessions Judge was directed to proceed with the trial from the stage at which he had discharged the jury 4 Bom. L. R. 939 In England the jury has been discharged on account of the sudden illness of a witness or when in a trial witnesses have been kept away by collusion or even were absent by accident. See Archbold p. 237 and see also 283

D.—Choosing Assessors.

284. When the trial is to be held with the aid of assessors, "not less than three and, if practicable, four shall be chosen * from the person summoned to act as such Assessors how chosen.

Notes.—1. Assessors must be treated with consideration and respect.—It is very desirable to maintain the position of assessors in public estimation and to make their duties as little irksome as possible. No assessor should be summoned too frequently. When assessors are summoned the notice should be sent to them in a regular and formal manner, and they should be treated with consideration and respect. A proper place should be provided for them to wait in, when their presence in Court is not necessary.—Bom H C Cr Cir, p 25

2. Assessors not members of the Court.—A trial is proper, if commenced with two assessors. When the trial proceeds in the absence of one of the assessors, the absent assessor ceases to occupy the position of one aiding the trial and his opinion ought not to be taken, 6 G. W. N. 715. If he took such opinion into consideration, it is a mere irregularity curable by s 537. See Notes 2 and 4 to s 285

3. Real function of assessors.—The real object of appointing assessors is to assist the Court and the discussion and statement of points by a Judge sitting with assessors cannot be said to be otherwise than in furtherance of the subject of getting the best assistance for the proper adjudication of the case, 7 L. B. R. 63 at p. 65. Until the contrary is shown, it must be presumed that persons who under the law are called upon to act as assessors, will do their duty, 1887 A. W. N. 139.

4. Persons of experience most likely to give efficient assistance must be chosen.—It is desirable that it should be in the power of the Court to select from among the assessors who are in attendance those who may seem most likely to give efficient assistance in any particular case. Though the law provides for the choosing of "two or more," it is not desirable ordinarily that more than two should be chosen, because the larger the number of the assessors selected for each case, the greater the burden on the body of those registered as liable to serve. C. P. Cr Cir, Part II, No 33. The law does not as in the case of jurors provide for objections being made to an assessor. The choice of jurors is by lot, but the choice of assessors is entirely with the Sessions Judge who, in the exercise of this power, should pay every consideration to any reasonable objection raised. In selecting assessors, the Judge must have regard to the nature of the case to the person who is tried, to the nature of the evidence to be brought against him and to the public feeling. The assessors ought not to be pleaders, nor young men fresh from college and devoid of experience. They must be persons of independent condition in life, men of judgment and of experience. Per JACKSON, J, in 23 W. R. 35 at p. 39.

5. A trial which begins and ends with one assessor only illegal.—When a trial before the Court of Session begins and ends with one assessor only, it is no legal trial and the whole proceeding is vitiated by error 23 B. 694; 15 B. 514; 21 A. 106; 24 M. 523 or when nominally only there is a second assessor who, by reason or blindness deafness or other such cause, is unable to understand the proceedings, Weir II, 340; 19 M. 375. See Note 2 to s. 285 below

6. Trial with the aid of assessors begins only when proceedings are commenced at which assessors can give their aid.—A trial with the aid of assessors does not begin with the reading of the charge, but begins only when proceedings are commenced at which assessors can give their aid. Where, therefore, after an accused person had claimed to be tried, a Sessions Judge chose two assessors, but immediately dispensed with the attendance of one of them who was suffering from fever and proceeded with trial with the aid of the other only, held, that the action of the Sessions Judge was illegal. The attendance of the assessors having been dispensed with before such commencement, the trial could not legally be proceeded with unless another assessor were appointed, 15 B. 514 followed in 23 B. 694, where it was held that such a defect as commencing the trial with one assessor vitiates the whole proceedings and the defect could not be cured by s 537. See also 21 A. 106; 6 G. W. N. 715; 15 A. 136; 24 M. 523.

7. Assessors must be chosen "from the persons summoned to act as such."—See ss. 321—326 for list of assessors and summonses to them. When one of the assessors was not summoned for the Sessions and whose name was not in the list, held, that there was no lawful trial before a lawfully constituted tribunal, 35 A. 570; 3 Pat. L. J. 141. Out of six assessors summoned to appear at a Criminal Sessions three absented themselves.

* Substituted for the words "two or more shall be chosen as the Judge thinks fit" by Act XII of 1923

Of the remaining three, the Sessions Judge discarded two as not appearing sufficiently intelligent, and having appointed the third to act as assessor sent for two other persons to fill up the other two places. These two last mentioned persons had not been summoned to act as assessors, nor did it appear that they were competent to act as such, held, that under the above circumstances there having been only one properly appointed assessor, all the proceedings conducted with his aid must be set aside, 1894 A. W. N. 207. In the absence of assessors duly summoned the Nazir of the Court was directed by the Judge to act as an assessor and the Judge noted that no objection was taken to the course taken by him, and in the end the accused was convicted, the assessor duly summoned, being of opinion that the accused was not guilty and the Nazir being of opinion that he was guilty, held, that the circumstances, the Court was not properly constituted and the defect could not be cured by s. 537. The Nazir was not duly summoned and it was not even proved that his name was in the list of assessors and there was no provision corresponding to s. 276 (2) in respect of trials by jury. The Nazir as an official of the Judge trying the case was a most unsuitable person and the trial must be taken to have been held with one assessor only and therefore illegal. The fact that the accused did not object was immaterial, 130 C. 337 = 11 Cr. L. J. 724. Where however, an assessor who was summoned to appear on the 14th June fails to appear on that date, but appeared on the 17th June, when another trial had to commence and was selected to act held, that his selection was not improper and the trial was not invalid. The object of the rule is that there must be no reason for suspicion that any of the assessors sitting on a particular trial has been, if I may be allowed to use the expression, planted on the Court by any person interested in the success or in the failure of the prosecution 17 Cr. L. J. 17 (A.). The wording of ss. 326 and 327 lends no colour whatever to the suggestion that an assessor cannot be held to have been lawfully summoned to act as such on a particular day (in the course of a Sessions), unless the summons issued to him was for his attendance on that day and no other

- * 284-A. (1) In a trial with the aid of assessors of a person who has been found under the provisions of this Code to be an European or Indian British subject, if the European or Indian British subject accused, or, where there are several European British subjects accused or several Indian British subjects accused, all of them jointly before the first assessor is chosen so require, all the assessors shall, in the case of European British subjects, be persons who are Europeans or Americans or in the case of Indian British subjects, be Indians

Assessors for trial of European and Indian British subjects and others

(2) In a trial with the aid of assessors of a person who has been found under the provisions of this Code to be an European (other than an European British subject) or an American all the assessors shall, if practicable and if such European or American before the first assessor is chosen so requires, be persons who are Europeans or Americans

285. (1) If in the course of trial with the aid of assessors, at any time before the finding any assessor is, from any sufficient cause, prevented from attending through out the trial, or absents himself, and it is not practicable to enforce his attendance, the trial shall proceed with the aid of the other assessor or assessors

Procedure when assessor is unable to attend.

(2) If all the assessors are prevented from attending, or absent themselves, the proceedings shall be stayed, and a new trial shall be held with the aid of fresh assessors

Notes.—1. Liability of absenting assessor.—He may be fined Rs. 100 for non-attendance s. 332.

2 Trial must begin with at least two competent assessors.—See Note 5 to s. 284. This section contemplates the case of a trial which had commenced with the aid of two or more assessors, who, at the commencement of the trial were capable of acting as assessors. Therefore, in a case where three assessors were chosen to assist the Court at a trial one was found to be deaf before commencement of the trial, and his services were dispensed with. Of the remaining two one was discovered to be deaf after the Public Prosecutor had closed his case. Held that under these circumstances the trial was really being held with only one capable assessor, and therefore it must be set aside, 21 A. 106. Where at the close of a trial one of the assessors was discovered to be so deaf and blind as to be incapable of understanding the proceedings, the trial was held to be null and void, Weir II, 340; 19 M. 375. See 1894 A. W. N. 207.

3. At least one assessor must continue throughout the trial, otherwise trial illegal.—During the course of a trial before a Sessions Court with three assessors, one assessor died at an early stage of the proceedings. Later on, another assessor became too ill to take any further part in the trial, and the third assessor was obliged to retire at the beginning of the accused's pleader's address to the Court and did not return until it was finished, held, that the law contemplated the continuous attendance of at least one assessor throughout the trial. This condition not having been fulfilled the proceedings before the Sessions Court must be set aside as having (with regard to the provisions of s. 268) been held before a Court not having jurisdiction, 13 A. 837. A Sessions trial began with the aid of two assessors, K and A. On the third day K was absent for an hour but the trial went on with the aid of assessor A. On the fourth day A was absent for 20 minutes during which the trial continued with the aid of K alone. At the conclusion of the trial, the opinions of both the assessors were recorded, held, that the proceedings were void as the trial was not held by a properly constituted tribunal. The law requires that a Sessions trial should be held under exceptional circumstances by the Sessions Judge with the aid of at least one assessor sitting throughout the trial and hearing all the proceedings. When a trial is resumed by a Sessions Judge in the absence of one of the assessors, but still with the aid of the other assessor or assessors present, the absent assessor ceases to occupy the position of an assessor during the trial 6 C. W. N. 715

4. Absentee assessor must not be allowed to resume his functions, but the illegality may be cured.—A criminal trial before a Court of Session having commenced with the aid of two assessors one of them was, owing to unavoidable causes, absent during a part of the trial. He was allowed to read the evidence recorded in his absence and resumed his seat during the rest of the trial and gave his final opinion just like the other assessor who was present throughout the trial, held, per BENSON and BASHAM AYYANGAR, JJ (DAVIES, J, dissenting), that though the proper course for the Court was to proceed with the trial without the absentee assessor, the irregularity was one which might be cured under s. 537. Per BASHAM AYYANGAR, J. In criminal trials with assessors, though assessors merely assist the Court, but do not form part of the tribunal which finally decides the case, the Code prescribes as an essential condition precedent to the exercise of jurisdiction by the Court that the trial should commence with not less than two assessors and that one at least of them should be present throughout the trial and give his opinion. The assessors, unlike the jury give their opinion separately and not as members of a body, and the fact that one of them was wrongly allowed to take part in the trial and give his opinion, will not vitiate the opinion of another assessor which was validly given. Per DAVIES, J. When the absentee assessor was allowed to resume his seat as assessor the Court ceased to be a Court of competent jurisdiction and the irregularity was not one curable by s. 537, 24 M. 823. Where in a Sessions trial the Judge allowed one of the two assessors to absent himself for one of the days on which the trial proceeded and to return on the following day, held that the procedure adopted by the Sessions Judge was contrary to the intention of this section and of s. 295, and the Judge ought either not to have given leave of absence or should have adjourned till a day when both the assessors could attend, Ratanlal 695. An assessor who is allowed under the provisions of this section to absent himself during a portion of the trial cannot be allowed to resume his functions afterwards, the portion of the proceedings which had taken place during his absence being read over to him on his return. This procedure is not in accordance with law. Under the section, the trial should have proceeded with the aid of other assessors, 8 C. P. Cr. 9.

5. Procedure where it is discovered that assessor is an interested person.—Where it is discovered, after the trial has begun in a case tried with the aid of assessors that one of them is interested or otherwise unfit to sit as an assessor, there is no provision in the Code to meet such a contingency. In such a case it is proper to refer the case to the High Court to set aside the order appointing incompetent assessor and all the subsequent proceedings in the trial. Then the Sessions Judge ought to be asked to choose another assessor and proceed with trial de novo, (1912) M. W. N. 378 = 13 Cr. L. J. 473.

6. Taking evidence after discharging assessors' trial invalid.—If the portion of the trial which consists in the taking of additional evidence, takes place after the discharge of the assessors, the trial will be invalid, 13 A. 136

Of the remaining three the Sessions Judge discarded two as not appearing sufficiently intelligent and having appointed the third to act as assessor sent for two other persons to fill up the other two places. These two last mentioned persons had not been summoned to act as assessors nor did it appear that they were competent to act as such. held that under the above circumstances there having been only one properly appointed assessor all the proceedings conducted with his aid must be set aside, 1894 A. W. N. 207. In the absence of assessors duly summoned the Nazir of the Court was directed by the Judge to act as an assessor and the Judge noted that no objection was taken to the course taken by him and in the end the accused was convicted, the assessor duly summoned being of opinion that the accused was not guilty and the Nazir being of opinion that he was guilty, held, that the circumstances, the Court was not properly constituted and the defect could not be cured by s. 537. The Nazir was not duly summoned and it was not even proved that his name was in the list of assessors and there was no provision corresponding to s. 276 (2) in respect of trials by jury. The Nazir as an official of the Judge trying the case was a most unsuitable person and the trial must be taken to have been held with one assessor only and therefore illegal. The fact that the accused did not object was immaterial. 13 O. & C. 337 = 11 Cr. L. J. 734. Where however an assessor who was summoned to appear on the 14th June fails to appear on that date but appeared on the 17th June when another trial had to commence and was selected to act held that his selection was not improper and the trial was not invalid. The object of the rule is that there must be no reason for suspicion that any of the assessors sitting on a particular trial has been if I may be allowed to use the expression planted on the Court by any person interested in the success or in the failure of the prosecution 17 Cr. L. J. 17 (A). The wording of ss 326 and 327 lends no colour whatever to the suggestion that an assessor cannot be held to have been lawfully summoned to act as such on a particular day (in the course of a Sessions), unless the summons issued to him was for his attendance on that day and no other

- 284-A. (1) In a trial with the aid of assessors of a person who has been found under the provisions of this Code to be an European or Indian British subject if the European or Indian British subject accused, or, where there are several European British subjects accused or several Indian British subjects accused all of them jointly before the first assessor is chosen so require, all the assessors shall, in the case of European British subjects, be persons who are Europeans or Americans or in the case of Indian British subjects, be Indians

(2) In a trial with the aid of assessors of a person who has been found under the provisions of this Code to be an European (other than an European British subject) or an American all the assessors shall if practicable and if such European or American before the first assessor is chosen so requires be persons who are Europeans or Americans

- 285. (1) If in the course of trial with the aid of assessors at any time before the finding any assessor is, from any sufficient cause, prevented from attending throughout the trial or absents himself and it is not practicable to enforce his attendance, the trial shall proceed with the aid of the other assessor or assessors

Procedure when assessor is unable to attend.

(2) If all the assessors are prevented from attending, or absent themselves, the proceedings shall be stayed and a new trial shall be held with the aid of fresh assessors

Notes.—1. Liability of absenting assessor—He may be fined Rs. 100 for non-attendance s. 332

2 Trial must begin with at least two competent assessors.—See Note 5 to s. 234. This section contemplates the case of a trial which had commenced with the aid of two or more assessors, who, at the commencement of the trial were capable of acting as assessors. Therefore, in a case where three assessors were chosen to assist the Court at a trial one was found to be deaf before commencement of the trial and his services were dispensed with. Of the remaining two one was discovered to be deaf after the Public Prosecutor had closed his case held that under these circumstances the trial was really being held with only one capable assessor, and therefore it must be set aside, 21 A. 106. Where at the close of a trial one of the assessors was discovered to be so deaf and blind as to be incapable of understanding the proceedings, the trial was held to be null and void, Weir II, 340; 19 M. 375. See 1895 A. W. N. 207.

3. At least one assessor must continue throughout the trial, otherwise trial illegal.—During the course of a trial before a Sessions Court with three assessors, one assessor died at an early stage of the proceedings. Later on, another assessor became too ill to take any further part in the trial, and the third assessor was obliged to retire at the beginning of the accused's plea address to the Court and did not return until it was finished, held, that the law contemplated the continuous attendance of at least one assessor throughout the trial. This condition not having been fulfilled the proceedings before the Sessions Court must be set aside as having (with regard to the provisions of s. 268) been held before a Court not having jurisdiction, 13 A. 837. A Sessions trial began with the aid of two assessors, K and A. On the third day K was absent for an hour but the trial went on with the aid of assessor A. On the fourth day A was absent for 20 minutes during which the trial continued with the aid of K alone. At the conclusion of the trial, the opinions of both the assessors were recorded, held, that the proceedings were void as the trial was not held by a properly constituted tribunal. The law requires that a Sessions trial should be held under exceptional circumstances by the Sessions Judge with the aid of at least one assessor sitting throughout the trial and hearing all the proceedings. When a trial is resumed by a Sessions Judge in the absence of one of the assessors, but still with the aid of the other assessor or assessors present, the absent assessor ceases to occupy the position of an assessor during the trial, 6 G. W. N. 715.

4. Absentee assessor must not be allowed to resume his functions, but the illegality may be cured.—A criminal trial before a Court of Session having commenced with the aid of two assessors, one of them was, owing to unavoidable causes, absent during a part of the trial. He was allowed to read the evidence recorded in his absence and resumed his seat during the rest of the trial and gave his final opinion just like the other assessor who was present throughout the trial, held, per BENSON and BASHYAM AYYANGAR JJ (DAVIES, J., dissenting), that though the proper course for the Court was to proceed with the trial without the absentee assessor, the irregularity was one which might be cured under s. 537. Per BASHYAM AYYANGAR, J. In criminal trials with assessors though assessors merely assist the Court, but do not form part of the tribunal which finally decides the case the Code prescribes as an essential condition precedent to the exercise of jurisdiction by the Court that the trial should commence with not less than two assessors and that one at least of them should be present throughout the trial and give his opinion. The assessors unlike the jury give their opinion separately and not as members of a body, and the fact that one of them was wrongly allowed to take part in the trial and give his opinion, will not vitiate the opinion of another assessor which was validly given. Per DAVIES, J. When the absentee assessor was allowed to resume his seat as assessor, the Court ceased to be a Court of competent jurisdiction and the irregularity was not one curable by s. 537, 24 M. 823. Where in a Sessions trial the Judge allowed one of the two assessors to absent himself for one of the days on which the trial proceeded and to return on the following day, held that the procedure adopted by the Sessions Judge was contrary to the intention of this section and of s. 295, and the Judge ought either not to have given leave of absence or should have adjourned till a day when both the assessors could attend, Ratanlal 695. An assessor who is allowed under the provisions of this section to absent himself during a portion of the trial cannot be allowed to resume his functions afterwards, the portion of the proceedings which had taken place during his absence being read over to him on his return. This procedure is not in accordance with law. Under the section, the trial should have proceeded with the aid of other assessors, 8 C. P. Cr. 9.

5. Procedure where it is discovered that assessor is an interested person.—Where it is discovered, after the trial has begun in a case tried with the aid of assessors that one of them is interested or otherwise unfit to sit as an assessor, there is no provision in the Code to meet such a contingency. In such a case it is proper to refer the case to the High Court to set aside the order appointing incompetent assessor and all the subsequent proceedings in the trial. Then the Sessions Judge ought to be asked to choose another assessor and proceed with trial de novo, (1912) M. W. N. 378 = 13 Cr. L. J. 573.

6. Taking evidence after discharging assessors' trial invalid.—If the portion of the trial which consists in the taking of additional evidence, takes place after the discharge of the assessors, the trial will be, 15 A. 136.

Examination of witnesses.

(2) The prosecutor shall then examine his witnesses

Notes—As to the mode of recording evidence see Chapter XLV and for power to adjourn see s. 344

*Notes.—Scope of the section.—*Although under s. 342 of the Code the power given to the Court to examine an accused person is one which may be exercised at any stage of the trial in the discretion of the Court this provision must not be regarded as in any way superseding the clear directions contained in s. 286 as to the manner in which a trial at Sessions should be commenced. So when a plea of 'not guilty' is entered by an accused person (particularly in a capital case) after the said accused had admitted his guilt before the Magistrate it is the duty of the trial Court to proceed with the hearing of the evidence the Court cannot and ought not to examine and cross-examine the accused on his confession. The proper time for taking into consideration such confession comes after the entire prosecution evidence is recorded. See 20 A L J 669

1 When the jurors or assessors have been chosen the case must be proceeded with—After the jurors are sworn the trial cannot be postponed to enable the prosecution to examine a witness by commission 19 C. 113

2 It is not the duty of the counsel for the prosecution to get a conviction at any price—it is his duty to see that the case against the prisoner is brought out in all its strength but it is not his duty to conceal or in any way to diminish the importance of its weak points. His function is not to inquire into the truth but to put forward with all possible candour and temperance that the part of it which is unfavourable to the prisoner—Harris Principles of Criminal Law p. 416 6 C. 121. The duty of counsel for the Crown is not to secure a conviction but to assist the Court in arriving at the truth 16 Cr L J 876 (C.) See also 42 C. 422; 42 C. 937

3. Opening case for the prosecution—Counsel for the prosecution opens the case by giving the outline of the evidence and the leading features of the case. In doing so he ought to state all that it is proposed to prove, as well as declarations of the prisoners as facts so that the jury may see if there is any discrepancy between the opening statements of counsel and the evidence afterwards adduced in support of them unless such declarations amount to a confession when it would be improper for counsel to open them to the jury the reason being that circumstances under which the confession was made may render it inadmissible in evidence. The general effect only of the confession said to have been made ought to be given Archbold 1 p. 218 and 219

4 In opening case prosecutor should give names of witnesses not previously examined.—There is nothing in the Code which restricts the prosecutor at a Sessions trial to witnesses who have been examined in the Court of the committing Magistrate but in fairness to the accused, the prosecutor should state in his opening address the names of witnesses whom he proposes to call who have not already been examined under s. 209 or s. 219 and the purpose for which each is to be produced. The mere fact that a witness has not been examined before a committing Magistrate is no ground for refusing to take the evidence of a relevant witness tendered for the prosecution 1 P. R. 1839. But in 16 A. 212 it was held that the Public Prosecutor cannot demand as a right, such witnesses should be examined, but that the Court may call and examine such a witness if it considers it to be necessary in the ends of justice. According to English practice notice of intention to call such additional witnesses with a copy of the evidence which it is proposed they should give ought to be given to the prisoner and sent to the Court Archbold p 483. But failure to do so does not render the additional evidence inadmissible Hilsbury Vol IX p 365.

5 Every witness present at commission of crime should be called, even though he gives different account.—It is prima facie the duty of the prosecutor to call all the witnesses who prove their connection with the transaction connected with the crime and who also must be able to give important information. If such witnesses are not called without sufficient reason being shown the Court may properly draw an inference adverse to the prosecution. The only thing that can relieve the prosecutor from calling such witnesses is the reasonable belief that if called they would not speak the truth. If such witnesses are not called without sufficient reason being shown (and the mere fact of their being summoned for the defence seems by no means necessarily a sufficient reason) the Court may properly draw an inference adverse to the prosecution. The only legitimate object of a prosecution is not to secure a conviction but that justice be done. The prosecutor is not therefore free to choose how much evidence he will bring before the Court. 8 C. 121 at p. 124 = 10 C. L. R. 151, 16 A. 521, 16 A. 84; 8 P. W. R. 1909 = 10 Cr. L. J. 321. In a trial of the accused under s. 304 1 P. C., certain witnesses who deposed to seeing the homicide take place and who gave evidence before the Magistrate were not called and examined in the Sessions Court, held that every witness who was present at the commission of such offence ought to be called that even if they give different accounts it is fit that the jury should hear their evidence so as to enable them to draw their own conclusions as to the real truth of the matter Ratanlal 581. Similarly, the prosecution is bound to examine witnesses present at a search 9 C. W. N. 438. Where a Sessions Judge

Court, in conducting a case for the prosecution, all the persons who are alleged or known to have knowledge of the facts ought to be brought before the Court and examined, 10 C. 1070; 3 A. L. R. 209 = 11 Cr. L. J. 410. It is not within the province of a Judge to dispense with the evidence of any witness for the prosecution and if the Public Prosecutor dispenses with the evidence of witnesses who can speak to material facts he commits a serious error of judgment. The whole evidence should be put before the Court and the Public Prosecutor is bound at least to tender the witnesses bound over to appear at the Sessions for cross-examination Weir II, 379. All persons said to have witnessed the murder should have been produced before the Magistrate, though it is not necessary for a Public Prosecutor to tender in the Sessions Court any witness whom he may have reason to believe will give false evidence, 12 P. R. 1916 = 17 Cr. L. J. 267.

6 Public Prosecutor not bound to call witnesses who in his opinion will not speak the truth or support his case.—The Public Prosecutor is not bound to call any witnesses who will not in his opinion, speak the truth or support the points he desires to establish by their evidence but in such circumstances he should explain to the Court what is his reason for not calling these witnesses, and he should offer to put them in the box for cross-examination by the accused at their discretion, 7 A. 904. Even the Court is not competent to pick and choose among the witnesses sent up by the committing Magistrate. It is his duty to examine all the witnesses unless he has good and sufficient cause of the representation of the Public Prosecutor or other wise to believe that the witnesses came into Court-house with a pre-determined intention of giving false evidence 15 A. 6. It is open to the Public Prosecutor to decline to examine at the Sessions trial a witness whom he had examined before the committing Magistrate, but whose cross-examination by the defence was reserved. It is, however, his duty to tender the witness for cross-examination in the Court of Session, and if he declines the Court ought to call the witness for cross-examination 11 Bom. L. R. 1268 = 10 Cr. L. J. 836. In a case in which the prisoner is undefended the presiding Judge should look at the deposition of any witness appearing in the Calendar as a witness for the Crown and not called on behalf of the prosecution or tendered for cross-examination in order to ascertain whether he should not himself taken action under s. 840. All witnesses returned in the Calendar as witnesses for the Crown are whether they are called or not by the Crown bound to be in attendance until the conclusion of the trial unless they are released from attendance by order of the Court, and before releasing them from attendance the Court should satisfy itself that the evidence, will not be required either by the prosecution or by the defence, 16 A. 85 (F.B.). The prosecution is not bound as a matter of procedure to produce at the trial witnesses who have been examined before the committing Magistrate when there is reason to believe that the evidence of such witness is not true, Weir II, 378, it is a sufficient reason for not calling any particular witness on behalf of the prosecution that there is a reasonable belief that he will not if called speak the truth Weir II, 378. He is not bound to do more than have all the witnesses called before the Magistrate present in Court for the accused to call them or not as he thinks fit, 14 C. 245; 14 A. 521; 15 A. 6, 5 C. 614; 15 W. R. 34 and see Note 3 under s. 289. See Note 2 above 49 C. 277.

7. Duty of prosecutor to call his witnesses for cross-examination by accused.—Although in strictness, it is not necessary for the prosecutor to call every witness whose name is on the back of the indictment it has been usual to do so, that the defendant may cross-examine them. If the Counsel will not call the witness, the Judge in his discretion may. Where a witness called before the coroner was not called for the Crown at the trial, the Court has refused to require him to be called, R v Wiggins, 10 Cox. 562. However, the prosecutor is not bound to call them all, though he ought it has been said, to have them in Court that they might be called for the defence, if the prisoner chooses Archbold, p. 483. There is no provision in this Code analogous to English practice, entitling a prisoner to have a witness for prosecution who is not called, put into the witness-box for cross-examination. The accused might apply to have such a witness examined under s. 291, or might comment on the circumstance of his not being examined by the prosecution or tendered for cross-examination 5 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 85 at p. 96; see also 5 C. 614; 24 C. 298; 7 A. 306; 17 C. 939; 14 C. 245; 11 Bom. L. R. 1162.

8. The examination of witnesses should be oral.—The examination alluded to in the section means oral examination of the witnesses present (except in cases where evidence is taken by commission, or in any case where a witness is deaf or dumb). Such oral examination is, therefore, the general rule and it is of the utmost importance that the rule should be followed in all cases where the witness is present to be examined. If a witness before a Magistrate gave a true statement, he will probably, if intending to tell the truth, repeat the same statement without substantial difference at the trial. If, on the contrary, his statement, before the Magistrate was not true in important particulars, he may not be able to repeat the same statement, and may omit something important mentioned in his former evidence or may deny on oral examination that he did make a particular statement before the Magistrate. The demeanour of the witness may be important for the assessor or Judge towards forming an opinion of his truth. It is unnecessary to go into the many reasons why this rule should be followed. It is sufficient to say 'it is the rule, and is founded on reason and justice'—Per KERNAN, C.J., in 9 M. 83.

9. Cross-examination must follow examination and cannot be reserved.—The Judge's procedure at a Sessions trial in allowing all the witnesses for the prosecution to be all examined in one day, but permitting the cross-examination to be reserved to a subsequent date was held irregular, Weir II, 382. Where, however, an application is made on reasonable grounds for time to cross-examine the witnesses, the application should be granted especially in capital cases, 41 C. 299.

10. How to use at the trial evidence given before the committing Magistrate.—It is against the law to read the deposition of a witness previously recorded and then to ask him if it is true. It amounts to putting him a leading question and intimating to him impliedly that the story is expected from him, 5 C. P. Cr. 33; Oudh B. C. No. 86; Weir II, 380. It is no doubt the distinct duty of a Public Prosecutor to give opportunity to a witness for the Crown to explain discrepancies in his statements before the committing Magistrate and the Sessions Court, 1894 A. W. N. 57; but it is wrong and highly prejudicial to the accused to allow witnesses to be set straight in their examination-in-chief, and whenever a witness says something that does not exactly tally with what he said before the Magistrate, his memory should be jogged by a reference to his previous deposition, 13 W. R. 18. See Notes 9 to 14 to s. 288.

11. Ordering witnesses out of Court.—When the case is called on, or at any period during the trial the Court at the request of either party, will order such of the witnesses of the opposite party as have not yet been examined or are not under examination to leave the Court until they shall be called for in their order, so that each witness may be examined out of the hearing of the other witnesses on the same side who are to be examined after him. If after such an order a witness is present during the examination of the other witnesses, the practice is to allow him to be examined, subject to observation as to his conduct in disobeying the order Taylor (10th Ed.), s. 1401 Archbold pp. 482-483.

12. Trial ought not to be stopped before the close of the prosecution case.—Where after the examination of some of the witnesses, the Judge asked the jury whether they wished to hear any more evidence and they stated that they did not believe the evidence and wished to stop the case and the Judge recorded a verdict of acquittal, held, that the procedure was wrong and that no final opinion as to the falsehood or insufficiency of the prosecution evidence ought to have been arrived at until all the remaining witnesses had been examined, 20 M. 443

13. Admissibility of post-mortem report in evidence.—The post mortem report is not admissible as evidence except to contradict the officer who made it, but it may be used by that officer when under examination for the purpose of refreshing his memory. If it is intended to bring the report as evidence on the record, the officer who made it should be called as a witness, 27 C. 295.

14. Turning out of Court perjuring witness before conclusion of his cross-examination.—A Sessions Judge is not justified in stopping the cross-examination of and turning a witness out of Court because he is of opinion that the witness is not speaking the truth, and no reliance can be placed on the evidence of such a witness, 1900 A. W. N. 149

287. The examination of the accused duly recorded by or before the committing Magistrate shall be tendered by the prosecutor and read as evidence

Notes.—See ss. 209 and 342 for the power to examine the accused, s. 364 for the record of examination of the accused, s. 164 for the power and mode of recording statements and confessions investigation, s. 533 for the provision remedying irregularities in recording such statements and see 271 for recording of plea.

1. Object of examination.—Though it is not imperative on a Magistrate to examine the accused, yet this section and s. 342 contemplate such an examination for the purpose of enabling the accused to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him Ratanlal 100 and 710; 42 C. 957 and not for the purpose of filling up a gap in the prosecution, 4 L. B. R. 244 = 8 Cr. L. J. 62 and see Note 3 under s. 239 and Note 12, et seq to s. 342.

2. Procedure—Time for tendering certain examinations.—(a) The 'examination of the accused' should be put in before the accused is called upon to enter upon his defence, Weir II, 351 (5) so also should the deposition of a medical witness which, 'may be given in evidence' (s. 509) and the deposition of a witness in a case in which it may be given in evidence under s. 33, Evidence Act, (c) before examinations are received as evidence under any of these three sections care must be taken to see that they are in proper form and duly attested or otherwise strictly proved, (d) such examination when so received are to be detached from the proceedings in the preliminary inquiry and annexed to the record of the trial, Wilkins, 114. The Madras High Court has ruled that the examination of the accused persons which this section requires to be given in evidence should be read as part of the case for the prosecution before the defence is entered upon and marked as an exhibit. A note to the effect that this has been done should be entered on the record.—See Madras Criminal Rules of Practice, Rule 241

3. Examination not duly recorded ought not to be put in.—Where the committing Magistrate admitted a confession which was not admissible and examined the accused with respect to it, held, that the accused being examined about confession which was not admissible in evidence, the questions and answers to them could not be said to be duly recorded, as the questions were such as were not allowed by the law to be put and that the answers to those questions were not admissible in evidence against the accused, 4 L. B. R. 244 = 8 Cr. L. J. 62.

4. Tender of accused's examination before Magistrate is obligatory.—The examination of the accused before the Magistrate must be given in evidence at the Sessions trial, whether it tells for or against the prisoner, and it is not in the discretion of the prosecution to put in that examination or not, 83 W. R. 53. A Sessions Judge refusing to put on record confessional statement of the person whom he treated as accused commits great irregularity. It is not optional with the prosecution to put in such statements, 15 M. 312; the whole of the statement should be read out, 5 M. H. C. R. Appx. IV. If it is not tendered the Judge is bound to call for it, 15 M. 352

5. Statement made to a Jail Superintendent confirmed before the committing Magistrate.—When the statement and filed it in the case learning that the accused wished to file it, held, that the statement was admissible as evidence under this section, 32 M. 3 at p. 15.

6. Not necessary to read out confessional statements.—It is not necessary for a Sessions Judge to read out to prisoners confessions made by them before a magistrate, and ask them if they have any objections to the reception of these confessions. The examination of the prisoners before Magistrate is to be received in evidence and the attestation of the Magistrate is prima facie proof of the circumstances, 14 W. R. 9

7. A confession is evidence though retracted or not corroborated—A voluntary and genuine confession is a legal and sufficient proof of guilt, 7 W. R. 41; 6 W. R. 73 and 83. A confession before a Magistrate, though afterwards retracted before the Sessions Court, is evidence against the party making it, 8 W. R. 40, without any other corroboration if properly attested before a Magistrate, 12 W. R. 49; 6 W. R. 78; 21 M. 83 at p 89, 1890 A. W. N. 173. The Judge must be satisfied that it was made voluntarily, 19 B. 728; but not where the Police-officers were guilty of misconduct in having produced evidence with regard to the identification of the property which was false, there being no corroboration, 2 G. L. R. 132; 1885 A. W. N. 59. See also Note under Heading VIII—"Retracted confessions" to s 164, at p 373

8. Statement of the accused must be taken in its entirety—See Notes under s 342 and Note 5 to s 255. If the statement made by the accused is to be used against him, it must be taken in its entirety, 8 W. R. 38. Where the prisoner admitted that he had accompanied the dacoits for a short distance, but declared that he had turned back almost immediately, and had nothing to do with dacoity that afterwards took place, and did not know that such an offence was in contemplation, held, that this statement did not go the length of a confession, and the conviction was, therefore, quashed, 7 W. R. 39; also 7 W. R. 8. When an accused makes two distinct statements—the one amounting to a confession of guilt, and the other repudiating it—if the one statement is taken against the accused, the other also must be taken for what it is worth in his favour. The Court ought to weigh well the relative credibility of the two statements before it

... have therefore the accused admitted convicted of when thrown

... parts of the confession are found to be false, the entire confession should be rejected. After the entire statement of a prisoner has been given in evidence any part of it may be contradicted by the prosecution if they choose to do so and then the whole testimony is left for consideration precisely as in other cases where one part of the evidence contradicts the other. Even without such contradiction it is not supposed that all the parts of a confession are entitled to equal credit. If sufficient grounds exist the part that charges the prisoner may be believed while that which is in his favour may be rejected. See Rex v Higgins, (1829) 3 C. and P. 603; Rex v Sleptoe, (1830) 4 C. and P. 597; Rex v Clewes, (1830) 4 C. and P. 221; 40 C. 873. The former refer to these cases only where the conviction is based solely upon the statements of the accused and it is but fair that the statement should be taken in its entirety and do not apply to those cases where there is independent evidence corroborating some of the material parts of the confession.

9. Confession of co-accused.—A confession of a co-accused can only be taken into consideration against the other accused, s 30 of the Indian Evidence Act and is not evidence 15 B. 88. See also 4 C. 633 (F.B.) 2 C. W. N. 749; 7 M. 102; 23 M. 151; 1 A. 684; 10 B. 319. It must be made in the presence of the other accused, 10 C. 970, 7 C. 63; 6 B. 124. A retracted confession of a co-accused should carry practically no weight against any person other than the maker, 28 C. 689. See Note under s 367. See, however, 16 C. W. R. 689 = 13 Cr. L. J. 571.

10. Deposition of an approver when inadmissible—When the accused person to whom a conditional pardon had been tendered is examined as a witness, the deposition is inadmissible when the deponent, on for feiture of the pardon is tried jointly with the other accused, 11 C. 380; 21 W. R. 5; 7 C. L. R. 66. See Notes to s 336.

11. "Committing Magistrate."—When a Sub-Magistrate inquired into a case and discharged the accused and the District Magistrate acting under s 436 committed the accused for trial, held that the examination of the accused and statement of the witness before the Sub-Magistrate will be held to have been recorded by or before the committing Magistrate. The phrase "committing Magistrate" in ss 287 and 288 is merely a compendious way of referring to the Magistrate or Magistrates who held the preliminary inquiry on which the commitment was made. 31 M. 40; 7 Lah. 70.

12. Irregularities in mode of recording examination—their effect.—See s 342 and Notes thereto.

288. The evidence of a witness "duly recorded in the presence of the accused under Chapter XVIII" may in the discretion of the presiding Judge, if such witness is produced and examined be treated as evidence in the case "for all purposes subject to the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act 1872"

Note.—The words "under Chapter XVIII" have been used in the place of "the committing Magistrate" to cover the case of evidence recorded by a Magistrate other than the committing Magistrate under s. 219. See Corn. Report, 1916

Note.—1. See Chapter XVIII for inquiry preliminary to commitment and ss. 209, 212 and 213 for taking examination of witnesses and s. 240 for commitment on evidence recorded by two Magistrates and s. 33 of the Indian Evidence Act for filing depositions of absent witnesses.

2. Object of the section.—This section is intended to provide for the contingency that may arise when a witness, who is produced before the Court in Session holds back information and evidence and tells a different story from that which he gave in the preliminary inquiry before the Magistrate. It is only in extreme cases of delay or expense that the personal attendance of a witness before the Court of Session should be dispensed with and the evidence given by him before the committing Magistrate referred to s. 240. Ordinarily the previous deposition can be used only after the witness has been called and examined. 26 W. R. 11; 33 P. R. 1833.

APPLICATION OF SECTION.

The section does extend to Courts of Magistrates other than the committing Magistrate.—Under the old law this section did not extend to Courts of Magistrates other than the committing Magistrate. Under the newly amended section evidence duly recorded by anybody under Chapter XVIII in the presence of the accused may be treated as evidence by the Sessions Court in the case under the safeguards mentioned in section 288. But it must be borne in mind that the analogy of section 288 is not to be extended to other cases of evidence not duly recorded under Chap. XVIII and in a case not before the Court of Sessions. Where conviction of the accused was really based on the former statements of witnesses made before a Magistrate other than the committing Magistrate—

"Sub-divisional Magistrate who on the analogy of the conviction and sentence and directed the usual manner Ratana 723 The phrase 'committing Magistrate' is merely a comprehensive way of referring to the Magistrate or Magistrates who held the preliminary inquiry on which the commitment was made. Where a subordinate Magistrate recorded the evidence but the District Magistrate made the commitment, it was held that the latter need not have himself recorded any of the evidence or statement of the accused to make them admissible under this section, 31 M. 60 A statement made by a witness at a search though signed by him cannot be used under this section 36 M. 139

4. Criminal Law Amendment Act XIV of 1908—Section 13 of that Act lays down the procedure in respect of trials held under that Act. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Indian Evidence Act of 1872, the evidence of any witness taken by a Magistrate in proceedings to which this part applies shall be treated as evidence before the High Court if the witness is dead or cannot be produced and if the High Court has reason to believe that his death or absence has been caused in the interest of the accused.

5. Depositions not taken in presence of accused cannot be admitted under this section.—Statements made by a witness in the absence of the accused is not admissible under this section, 35 A. 250 Unless it be that the accused was absconding and the provisions of s. 512 applied to the circumstances of the case (6 C. L. R. 53) the evidence referred to in this section must have been recorded in the presence of the accused 7 A. 852; 21 A. 111, 22 A. 445, 3 P. R. 1904; 23 C. 361.

6. Section applies only when the witness is 'produced and examined'—To expedite the trial in a Sessions case the attorney for the prisoner suggested to the Court that certain depositions of witnesses for the prosecution taken before the Magistrate should be read out and that he should be allowed to cross-examine the witnesses thereupon to this course the Government Prosecutor and the Court consented held, that this procedure was illegal but that inasmuch as it had not occasioned a failure of justice a new trial should not be granted, 9 M. 89. This section is not an exception to the rule in s 286. It does not dispense with examination of the witness directed by s 286. The provision is not the evidence before the Magistrate may be put in as evidence of the witness if he is tendered for cross-examination but it is that such evidence before the Magistrate may be trusted as evidence in the case if the witness is examined i.e., examined as a witness, not if he is cross-examined or tendered for cross-examination. This section does not provide that the Judge may treat the evidence before the Magistrate of all the witnesses for the prosecution as evidence if all the witnesses are produced and examined. Per KERNAN, J., in 9 M. 83. The previous deposition cannot be filed if the witness is merely produced for cross-examination at the trial and not produced and examined. 1915 M. W. N. 544 = 16 Cr. L. J. 615. The section does not permit a Sessions Court to ground its judgment on the depositions taken by the Magistrate without examining the witnesses afresh. The section has no operation whatever unless the witnesses at the trial makes statement inconsistent with his deposition before the Magistrate, 24 W. R. 11. The former deposition ought not to be read until after his examination in Court, 1 W. R. 14; and evidence taken before the committing Magistrate but not used at the trial cannot be referred to an appeal, 8 B. L. R. Appx. LXIII.

* Substituted for the words "duly taken in the presence of accused before the committing Magistrate" by Act XVIII of 1923

7. Evidence of a witness not allowed to be cross-examined is not duly taken in the presence of the accused—If a committing Magistrate does not allow the accused to cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution, the evidence of such witnesses cannot be said to have been duly taken in the presence of the accused. To require the presence of the accused merely to hear the ex parte statements of a witness without allowing him to show by cross-examination that the statements are untrue or unreliable defeats the real object of the law, for it deprives the accused of any substantial benefit from being present, 21 C. 642 at p. 665. See also 3 M. 48.

8. Admissibility of approver's evidence given in preliminary inquiry.—A deposition made by an accomplice at the preliminary inquiry is capable of being treated as evidence under this section in the Sessions trial, because though an accomplice, he is nonetheless a witness for the matter of this section, 14 P. R. 1894; 15 M. 352; 8 B. L. R. 203 = 16 Cr. L. J. 233; 3 P. R. 1904. The admissibility of statements made by an accused person, under a conditional pardon was no doubt raised in 7 C. L. R. 66 and 13 C. L. R. 328, but not decided until the Allahabad High Court held that repudiation by approver of his statement before the committing Magistrate does not prevent the Sessions Court from considering his evidence under this section, 21 A. 475. But the use of such statement as substantive evidence of the facts alleged by him on the prior occasion is fraught with the gravest peril and could never have been the intention of the Legislature, 22 A. 445, 27 C. 295 and 4 C. W. N. 49; and see Notes to ss 339. But see contra 22 C. 50.

MODE OF USING EVIDENCE.

9. Mode of using in Sessions Court, evidence taken before committing Magistrate.—This section was never intended to be used so as to enable a Court trying a case to take a witness's deposition body from the committing Magistrate's record, and to treat it as evidence before the Court itself. A Judge is bound to put to the witnesses whom he proposes to contradict by their statements made before the committing Magistrate whole or such portions of their depositions as he intends to rely upon in his decision, so as to afford them an opportunity of explaining their meaning, or denying that they had made any such statements and so forth, 7 A. 382; 21 A. 111. At a trial before a Sessions Court, the attorney who appeared for the prisoner suggested to the Court that to expedite the trial, certain depositions of witnesses for the prosecution taken before the Magistrate should be read, and that he should be allowed to cross-examine the witnesses thereupon to this course the Government Prosecutor and the Court consented. held that this procedure was illegal, but that, inasmuch as it had not occasioned a failure of justice a new trial should not be granted, 9 M. 83. The Judge is bound to let his intention or the possibility that he may do so, be known to the accused and the prosecution in order to afford them an opportunity to test such statement by cross-examination otherwise, 1885 A. W. N. 256. So, too the counsel for the prisoner, if he desires to use previous statements to contradict the witnesses for the Crown must draw their attention to such contradiction. 31 C. 142 (F.B.) which overrules 8 C. L. R. 390 and refers to 11 B. H. C. R. 281. In the Ill Bench Case referred to above, after the case for the prosecution had closed, counsel for the prisoner claimed a right to read to the jury the depositions taken before the committing Magistrate for the purpose of showing that the evidence given at the trial differed from that given before the Magistrate and it was ruled that the counsel for defence had no such right without drawing the particular witness's attention to the alleged contradiction and affording him an opportunity to explain. Even the Judge would not have the right claimed by the prisoner in the Full Bench Case 5 W. R. 84, being opposed to the Full Bench Ruling. When a counsel or pleader cross-examines a witness with reference to a previous deposition, the parts thereof to which the cross-examination is directed should be set out in Judge's minute of the proceedings. The deposition itself need not, in such a case, be made a portion of the evidence in the Sessions Court, unless the Government Pleader desires that it should be so recorded or the Sessions Judge adopts it under this section. The pleader or counsel for the defence may introduce as part of his own evidence a previous deposition made by a witness and, in this case, the deposition must be numbered and translated in the minute of proceedings. The prosecuting counsel or pleader has a right in such a case to question the witness as to apparent contradictions and discrepancies between the two statements, Ratanlal 343. See also 4 C. W. R. 49; 13 W. 252; 23 A. 883. See Note 1013 & 284.

10. Omission to examine witness on certain facts cannot be made good by filing previous statement.—Where a witness when examined in Sessions Court had shown no disposition in any way to resile from any statement he had made before the committing Magistrate, there is no valid reason for the Sessions Judge to admit the previous statement in preference to the one made before him. Where a witness was not examined in the Sessions Court, with regard to the particular statements made by him before the committing Magistrate, and he did not repeat those statements before the Sessions Court, Acid, 4 C. W. R. 49. Similarly, the evidence of a medical witness before the committing Magistrate and not attested by him is not admissible before the Sessions Court under this section. A post mortem certificate would not be admissible as evidence except to contradict the officer who made it or when used by that officer for refreshing his memory, 27 C. 293.

11. Question of admissibility of evidence given before committing Magistrate should be determined immediately on its tender.—When the evidence of a witness taken before the committing Magistrate is tendered in evidence at the Sessions trial, the Sessions Judge should consider the question of its admissibility, and then and there determine the point and record his reasons if he decides to admit the same, 1 Bom. L. R. 156.

12. Admissibility of statement alleged to be made under ill-treatment by Police.—When a witness makes a statement before a Sessions Court different from that made before the committing Magistrate, and alleges that that previous statement was made under Police pressure, that Sessions Judge should make some inquiry by examining the Police-officer regarding the restraint and pressure which is said to have been exercised upon the witness before bringing his previous statement upon the record under this section, 4 C. W. R. 49; 7 C. W. R. 245; 32 A. 445; 27 C. 293. The retracted confessions of an accused standing by themselves uncorroborated, and the statement of witnesses brought in under this section, without independent corroborating testimony, should not both be joined together and held as mutually corroborating each other, so as to justify a conviction based thereon.

13. Practice.—Translation of deposition before a Magistrate in Sessions proceedings.—A Sessions Judge should, in his proceedings, distinctly note that he has admitted, under this section a deposition of a witness taken before the committing Magistrate as evidence in the trial before a Sessions Court, and given the deposition a number in his proceedings and translate it, or the material portions of it in his English minute of the proceedings, Ratanlal 343.

14. When deposition is denied prosecution must prove that conditions of this section have been satisfied.—The confession of a witness in the shape of a former deposition can be used as evidence against a prisoner only on the condition prescribed by this section, that is, it must have been duly taken by the committing Magistrate in the presence of the accused person, i.e., the person, against whom it is to be used. The certificate of the Magistrate appended to such confession, in order to afford prima facie evidence under s. 80 of the Evidence Act, of the circumstances mentioned in it relative to the taking of the statement ought to give the facts necessary to render the deposition admissible under this section. Where the deponent, when examined as a witness before the Sessions Court and asked about his alleged deposition, denies that it was the deposition made by him, the presumption allowed by s. 80 of the Evidence Act cannot be made, and it becomes necessary, in order to render the deposition admissible under this section to show by direct testimony that the conditions of that section have been satisfied, 21 W. R. 5.

VALUE OF PREVIOUS DEPOSITIONS.

15. Purposes for which previous deposition may be used—its value.—The provisions of this section enable the Judge to use the deposition or such part of it as is necessary for the purpose of corroborating a witness or, the proper formalities being observed, for the purpose of contradicting a witness, and to permit either the prosecutor or the accused to use it for either purpose. Further it enables the Judge to treat it as part of the material on which he sums up to the jury or assessors under s. 297 or s. 309 at the conclusion of the trial. But see the latest amendment by the introduction of the words for all purposes subject to the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act. See Note 18 below

But there is nothing in the section which prescribes the value or weight to be attached to the evidence thus admitted. Once admitted, the power given by this section in respect of the evidence is exhausted, the discretion of the Judge extending only to the question whether the former evidence is to be treated as evidence in the case. Once admitted it is on the same footing with all other evidence in the case, that is to say, it is to be considered by the jury, or by the assessors and the Judge, according to the nature of the trial, as part of the material upon which the verdict or the finding is to be given. The value of the previous evidence is a matter entirely beyond the scope of the section, as it is also of the Evidence Act. Its value is a question in the particular case for the jury or for the assessors, subject to the directions of the Judge in summing up, or for the Judge in cases where he is a Judge of the fact. Whether any portion or the whole of the evidence thus admitted is entitled to credit, and if so, to such a degree that a conviction may be based upon it wholly or in part are very important questions for the jury or assessors or for the Judge as the case may be but they are in no way affected by this section. PER FLOWDEN, J. 51 P. R. 1887. See also 37 P. R. 1917 (Cr.).

16. The discretion of a Judge is open to review by a Court of Appeal.—"The purpose of this section, as amended is to make deposition given before Magistrates in the preliminary inquiry, evidence for the purposes of the trial in the Court of Session, only when the Sessions Judge determines, in the exercise of his discretion, that they are to be used in this way. But we think the exercise of his discretion, considering it as a matter of fact or law, is open to review by this Court in appeal. When the case is under trial in a Court of Session the Sessions Judge has the depositions given in the Magistrate's Court before him. If he finds that the statements of the witnesses in his own Court differ materially from those previously made by the same witnesses it is his duty to examine them as to discrepancies and this is more especially his duty when the prisoners are undefended, and contradictory testimony is given for the prosecution. But if he thus examines the witnesses he ought (see Taylor on evidence, ss 1300 and 1301, and the Indian Evidence Act, s 155) in ordinary cases to make the depositions upon which he has examined, evidence in the case he is at liberty to do so, and the power should be exercised so as to bring all relevant matter so far as possible, under consideration in forming a judgment on the case. If the Sessions Judge has omitted to examine witnesses on obvious and important discrepancies in their statements, this Court will, in general direct that such an examination be made, and the Sessions Judge, having the witnesses before him for such purpose, will, in most cases, feel it his duty to make the former depositions evidence quantum valent for the purpose of the final adjudication in appeal. The alternative is for this Court in such cases to order a new trial on the ground that there has been a misuse of the Sessions Judge's discretion which may have caused a failure of justice, but a new trial will not be ordered except in special cases. — PER WISSE, J. 11 B. B. C. R. 281. Where a Sessions Judge used as evidence under this section the statement which a witness made before the committing Magistrate, but which he repudiated at the Sessions trial as having been made under improper influence, and the circumstances were such that the Sessions Judge could not properly rely on either of these statements held following 21 W. R. 49 = 12 B. L. R. Appx. XV that the Sessions Judge did not exercise a proper discretion in allowing the former statement to be treated as evidence 7 C. W. N. 345. But see now 53 C. 181 overruling 21 W. R. 49 and 37 C. 205 as a result of the latest amendments. See also Note 18 below

17. Statements let: certain witnesses who had deceased, withdrew their statement. The Sessions Judge considering the evidence given by these witnesses before him to be untrue, and acting under this section admitted in evidence the statements of these witnesses made before the committing Magistrate. held that such statements were rightly admitted and when admitted were on the same footing as the other evidence on record 23 A. 683, where 21 A. 111; 1899 A. W. N. 356; 22 A. 443 and 51 P. R. 1887 are referred to and 1 A. 882 overruled. The Calcutta High Court seems to have held that the evidence before the committing Magistrate which was afterwards wholly retracted and repudiated at the Sessions trial cannot be treated as substantive evidence. (See next Note). But in 24 M. 414, where a Sessions Judge being of opinion that certain prosecution witnesses had been gained over by the defence, allowed their depositions before the committing Magistrate (where cross-examination had been reserved) to be received in evidence under this section, it was held, that this section enabled the Court to treat such depositions as substantive evidence in the case at the trial where, for the purposes of justice the adoption of such a course is found necessary by the Judge. Such evidence may be used as much in favour of the defence as of the prosecution and that the Court is not restricted in permitting the production of the evidence before the committing Magistrate, to use it solely for the purpose of contradicting the witness at the Sessions trial. See also 14 P. R. 1694 and 8 P. R. 1904. See Note 18 below for the effect of the amendment of s. 288 by Act XVIII of 1923.

18. The effect of the amendment of s. 288 by the Act XVIII of 1923.—Now it is held that the words "For all purposes" were added to s. 288 to remove the limitation to the value of the evidence, admitted under this section, as laid down in 21 W. R. (Cr.) 43 and 37 C. 295. So evidence recorded by the committing Magistrate, if admitted under the amended s. 288 must be treated as evidence for all purposes, even as the basis of the finding or verdict. It stands on the same footing as any other evidence before a Court of Session and is to be considered as proposed material on which the verdict or finding may be given. 53 C. 181 (3 Pat. 781 not relied on); 5 Lah. 374; 27 Bom. L. R. 113; 47 A. 376; 47 N. 332; 2 Pat. 517; 45 M. L. J. 602; 6 Lah. 199.

19. In the absence of an independent inferential circumstance conviction upon a statement absolutely withdrawn is unsafe.—It would be most unsafe to found a conviction upon the statements made before the committing Magistrate when such statements are absolutely withdrawn before the Sessions Court, unless there be independent circumstances from which it may be inferred that the second statements were false and the original statements true. Weir II, 374; Ratanlal 966. But when the conviction is by a jury who believed the statement before the committing Magistrate (although it was absolutely withdrawn at the Sessions trial) it being corroborated to a certain extent by independent evidence before the Sessions Court, it was held that the conviction was not illegal. Weir II, 375. When evidence given before the committing Magistrate is retracted in the Sessions Court it would be very unsafe to act upon it unless it is clearly proved to be true by some independent evidence, Ratanlal 966. In 10 C. W. N. 213, the evidence given by a witness before the committing Magistrate and the Coroner as having actually seen the accused murdering the deceased who wholly retracted and repudiated before the Court of Session for the reason that it was given under threat and coercion of the police, held following 22 A. 445 that evidence before the Magistrate cannot be treated as substantive evidence under this section and that corroboration on all material particulars was necessary before the accused could be convicted.

20. Admissibility of previous statements of witness.—Previous statements of a witness used at the trial for contradicting his evidence, if not made in the presence of the accused, cannot be used against the accused as independent evidence of his innocence or guilt, 23 C. 361. Such statement can be used under s. 145 of the Evidence Act, solely for contradicting the witness. It cannot be used at all under this section, if the witness is absent, 21 W. R. 12; 35 A. 260. See 5 Bar. L. T. 33 = 18 Cr. L. J. 299 for using the statements of witnesses made to their counsel in giving their proof. Inconvenience to the witness is not one of the grounds allowed by s. 33 of the Evidence Act, 6 A. 228, 21 W. R. 36; 2 A. 646. An accused is entitled to have an opportunity to cross-examine a witness before his evidence can be used against him. Accused are entitled to cross-examine under s. 153 of the Indian Evidence Act the witnesses upon statements made by them in a departmental inquiry, 2 Bom. L. R. 329. Such statements are not privileged, 16 C. W. N. 431 = 13 Cr. L. J. 443.

21. When previous deposition of witness not present at trial may be used.—See s. 33 of the Indian Evidence Act. The application of s. 33, Evidence Act, in criminal cases ought to be confined within the narrowest limits. It can only be in very extreme cases that it is right to make adverse use of the evidence of a witness under s. 33 in a criminal trial when that evidence if true would be extremely material. 17 Bom. L. R. 590.

its evidentiary value was very small. 17 C. W. N. 230 = 14 Cr. L. J. 70. Now the practice in Sessions inquiries is unless, at the conclusion of the case when the charge is drawn himself in the first Court, and, under the new provisions of the Act, get the charge cancelled by cross-examining the witnesses and by entering into his defence. But if from the first he takes no such action, although it is clear he has the right witness or the proper formalities being observed for the purpose of contradicting a witness, and to permit either the prosecutor or the accused to use it for either purpose. Further it enables the Judge to treat it as part of the material on which he sums up to the jury or assessors under s 297 or s 309 at the conclusion of the trial. But see the latest amendment by the introduction of the words for all purposes subject to the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act. See Note 18 below.

But there is nothing in the section which prescribes the value or weight to be attached to the evidence thus admitted. Once admitted the power given by this section in respect of the evidence is exhausted: the discretion of the Judge extending only to the question whether the former evidence is to be treated as evidence in the case. Once admitted it is on the same footing with all other evidence in the case: that is to say, it is to be considered by the jury or by the assessors and the Judge according to the nature of the trial as part of the material upon which the verdict or the finding is to be given. The value of the previous evidence is a matter entirely beyond the scope of the section as it is also of the Evidence Act. Its value is a question in the particular case for the jury or for the assessors subject to the directions of the Judge in summing up or for the Judge in cases where he is a Judge of the fact. Whether any portion or the whole of the evidence thus admitted is entitled to credit and if so to such a degree that a conviction may be based upon it wholly or in part are very important questions for the jury or assessors or for the Judge as the case may be but they are in no way affected by this section. PER FLOWDEN J 51 P R 1837. See also 37 P R 1917 (Cr).

16 The discretion of a Judge is open to review by a Court of Appeal — The purpose of this section as amended is to make deposition given before Magistrates in the preliminary inquiry evidence for the purposes of the trial in the Court of Session only when the Sessions Judge determines in the exercise of his discretion that they are to be used in this way. But we think the exercise of his discretion considering it as a matter of fact or law, is open to review by this Court in appeal. When the case is under trial in a Court of Session the Sessions Judge has the depositions given in the Magistrate's Court before him. If he finds that the statements of the witnesses in his own Court differ materially from those previously made by the same witnesses it is his duty to examine them as to discrepancies and this is more especially his duty when the prisoners are undefended and contradictory testimony is given for the prosecution. But if he thus examines the witnesses he ought (see Taylor on Evidence ss 1300 and 1301 and the Indian Evidence Act s 155) in ordinary cases to make the depositions upon which he has examined evidence in the case. He is at liberty to do so and the power should be exercised so as to bring all relevant matter so far as possible under consideration in forming a judgment on the case. If the Sessions Judge has omitted to examine witnesses on obvious and important discrepancies in their statements this Court will in general direct that such an examination be made and the Sessions Judge, having the witnesses before him for such purpose will in most cases feel it his duty to make the former depositions evidence quantum valent for the purpose of the final adjudication in appeal. The alternative is for this Court in such cases to order a new trial on the ground that there has been a misuse of the Sessions Judge's discretion which may have caused a failure of justice but a new trial will not be ordered except in special cases. — PER WEST J 11 B H C R 281. Where a Sessions Judge used as evidence under this section the statement which a witness made before the committing Magistrate but which he repudiated at the Sessions trial as having been made under improper influence and the circumstances were such that the Sessions Judge could not properly rely on either of these statements held following 21 W R 49 = 12 B L R Appx XY that the Sessions Judge did not exercise a proper discretion in allowing the former statement to be treated as evidence 7 C W N 343. But see now 53 C 181 overruling 21 W R 49 and 37 C 205 as a result of the latest amendments. See also Note 18 below.

17 Statements let in under this section may be treated as substantive evidence — In a capital case certain witnesses who had stated before the committing Magistrate that they had seen the accused sinking the deceased, withdrew their statements before the Court of Session and gave evidence exculpating the accused. The Sessions Judge considering the evidence given by these witnesses before him to be untrue and acting under this section admitted in evidence the statements of these witnesses made before the committing Magistrate held that such statements were rightly admitted and when admitted were on the same footing as the other evidence on record 28 A. 683, where 21 A. 111; 1833 A W N 356; 22 A. 445 and 51 P R. 1837 are referred to and 7 A. 862 overruled. The Calcutta High Court seems to have held that the evidence before the committing Magistrate which was afterwards wholly retracted and repudiated at the Sessions trial cannot be treated as substantive evidence. (See next Note.) But in 26 M. 414, where a Sessions Judge being of opinion that certain prosecution witnesses had been gained over by the defence allowed their depositions before the

to do so it can hardly be said that he had the opportunity to cross-examine. We are borne out in this view by the fact that on the record it is stated that a lengthy examination in-chief of the approver was read over to him and admitted to be correct and it does not appear that the accused persons were asked then and there to cross-examine if they wished to. We think in the case of approvers having regard to the difficulty which has arisen in this case that it would be a sound principle for the committing Court to clearly bring to the notice of the defence that it is their duty to cross-examine the approver if they desire to do so directly his evidence is given. 17 C. W. N. 230 = 14 Cr. L. J. 70 Depositions of an absent witness are only admissible when the prisoner has had that right and opportunity to cross-examine, 21 W. R. 12 Inconvenience to witness is no ground 5 A. 224. The evidence must have been taken before a competent tribunal 3 M. 43.

(ii) The witness must be dead etc.—A mere statement of the Public Prosecutor that the presence of the witness cannot be obtained without an amount of delay or expense which he considers to be unreasonable is not enough. There must be independent evidence before the Judge can exercise the powers under s 33 of the Evidence Act 23 M. L. J. 329 = 17 M. L. T. 214 = 16 Cr. L. J. 294, where 2 A. 646, 3 M. 481, 41 C. 601 were referred to.

22 The mere fact witness tells a different story at trial will not make him a hostile witness.—The fact that a witness at the Sessions trial tells a story different from that told by him before the Magistrate does not render him a hostile witness so as to entitle the prosecutor to cross-examine him. The proper inference to be drawn from such contradiction is not that the witness is hostile to this side or to that, but that he ought not to be believed unless supported by some satisfactory evidence 13 C. 53. The mere fact that a witness who is examined before the committing Magistrate and who in the opinion of the Public Prosecutor, will not speak the truth in the Sessions Court does not entitle the Public Prosecutor at once to treat him as a hostile witness and begin to cross-examine him. In such cases the duty of the prosecution is to have such witnesses in attendance so that they could be examined by the defence if necessary though the prosecution is not bound to produce witnesses who are not likely to speak the truth 3 Lab. 144.

23 English practice—The depositions of witnesses taken before a coroner's jury may be used in the cross-examination of the witnesses who made them but cannot be used as direct evidence except to contradict evidence of such witnesses when such contradiction is permissible. Halsbury Vol. IX, p. 368 See Archbold pp 490—492 as to mode of cross-examining witnesses on their previous depositions.

289. (1) When the examination of the witnesses for the prosecution and the examination (if any) of the accused are concluded the accused shall be asked whether he means to adduce evidence.

(2) If he says that he does not the prosecutor may sum up his case, and if the Court considers that there is no evidence that the accused committed the offence it may then in a case tried with the aid of assessors record a finding or in a case tried by a jury direct the jury to return a verdict of not guilty.

(3) If the accused or anyone of several accused says that he means to adduce evidence, and the Court considers that there is no evidence that the accused committed the offence the Court may then in a case tried with the aid of assessors record a finding or, in a case tried by a jury, direct the jury, to return a verdict of not guilty.

(4) If the accused or anyone of several accused says that he means to adduce evidence, and the Court considers that there is evidence that he committed the offence or if on his saying that he does not mean to adduce evidence the prosecutor sums up his case and the Court considers that there is evidence that the accused committed the offence, the Court shall call on the accused to enter on his defence.

Notes.—1 Duty of prosecution to produce evidence.—See Notes 1 to 5 to s 291.

2 English practice—When prosecution counsel may sum up case.—According to English practice the right ought to be exercised in exceptional cases such as where erroneous statements have been made and ought to be corrected or when the evidence differs from the instructions. The counsel for the prosecution should state his case before he calls the witnesses, and after the evidence has been given either say simply 'I say nothing' or 'I have already told you what would be the substance of the evidence and you see the statement I made is correct' or, in exceptional cases to say "something is proved different to what I expected" and add any suitable explanation which is required. R v Holchester 10 Cox 225. It is not proper to comment on the absence of witnesses for the defence unless it might be fairly expected that witnesses would be called, Halbury, Vol. IX p 38. Archbold pp 219-220. If by returning his defence before the justices the prosecution have been prevented from investigating the case set up by the defendant at the trial comment may be made on that circumstance. See also Dennis Act 26 and 29 s 18. R v McNair, (1909) 23 T. L. R. 225.

3. Examination of the accused not imperative.—When the accused had admitted his guilt and had been examined by the committing Magistrate the omission of the Sessions Judge to examine the accused does not constitute an illegality. s 299 clearly indicates that such an examination is not necessary in all cases, 9 C. L. J. 33—10 Cr. L. J. 323. The omission to examine the accused would not constitute an illegality which would vitiate the trial, 27 M. 233.

4. Accused entitled to be acquitted in absence of prosecution evidence.—An accused in the absence of evidence on the prosecution side should be acquitted under sub-sec (3) and should not be convicted on the evidence given against him by the witnesses called by the co-accused in his defence, 8 M. L. T. 79—10 Cr. L. J. 68. A gap in the evidence cannot be supplied by examining the accused and so covering up the defect as e.g., in a defamation case, by questioning the accused as to whether he published the libel 27 M. 233. See also 28 C. 49. Similarly, where the prisoner was charged with having been previously convicted and there was no evidence of this it could not be supplied by his admission of the fact, 23 C. 689. Witnesses for the defence ought not to be examined until after the close of the prosecution evidence for it is only when sufficient evidence has been produced that he can be called on to enter upon his defence, 6 C. L. R. 338. It is incumbent on the prosecution to prove all the facts necessary to constitute the offence charged against the accused. When the case for the prosecution has been closed the Court should acquit the accused where no evidence of any of the links necessary to establish the offence has been adduced by the prosecution. Any gap in the evidence ought not to be supplied by any statement of the accused 36 M. 437. See also 29 M. 372; 27 M. 233 and Notes to s 342.

5. Section applies only when there is "no evidence" that the accused committed the offence.—These words cannot be extended to mean no satisfactory, trustworthy or conclusive evidence. Such a meaning would enable a Sessions Judge to exclude his assessors from their share of the trial whenever he thought the evidence unsatisfactory or inconclusive 10 A. 614; 9 C. 873; 16 W. R. 20. See however, the remarks of JENNINGS, C.J. in 19 C. W. N. 653, note 10 to s. 299 at p. 792. If there is any evidence relevant to the charge preferred, the accused must be called on for his defence and the trial must go on to its close, 16 B. 414; Weir II, 332. The section can only apply when there is no evidence, and will not cover a case when the Court considers that the charge is in itself improper 12 A. 651 at p. 652. The third paragraph of this section means that if at a certain stage of the Sessions trial the Court is satisfied that there is not on record any evidence which even if it were perfectly true would amount to perfectly legal proof of the offence charged, then the Court has power without consulting the assessors to record a finding of not guilty, 10 A. 614; Weir II, 332. If the trial was by jury, the Judge need not put the case at all to the jury 16 W. R. 19; 7 W. R. 39. It is not necessary to record the opinion of assessors, 7 Bom. E. C. Cr. Ca. 82, but see 1 A. 610.

6. Opinion of the jury not to be taken in the middle of the case.—After taking all the direct evidence in the case, the Sessions Judge is not competent to stop it by asking the jury if they wish to hear more evidence and by this means to obtain the opinion of the jury that they do not believe it. No final opinion as to the falsehood or sufficiency of the evidence for the prosecution ought to be arrived at by the Judge or jury until the whole of the evidence is before them and has been considered 20 M. 445.

7. "Not proven"—There is no legal warrant for a finding not proven. The proper course is to record a finding of not guilty, Weir II 331.

8. Accused himself must be asked if he means to adduce evidence.—The question whether the prisoner has any evidence to adduce is one which should be put to the accused himself and not to his pleader and the question and answer should be recorded as required by s 364—Madras Criminal Rules p 242. See also 9 M. 224. This is not a mere formality but is an essential part of a criminal trial. The High Court held that it would hesitate to apply s 537 although the accused had not cross-examined the Crown witnesses 23 C. 252. When a prisoner is not defended by counsel the Judge should inform him of his right to cross-examine witnesses, to address the jury and to make a statement, but omission to give this information does not invalidate the conviction, Archbold, p 220 Entering on the defence marks a special stage in a trial, omission to call upon the accused may occasion failure of justice and is not cured by s. 537 But see 15 A. L. J. 41

9. Accused not to be prejudiced, if he does not adduce evidence after saying he will.—Where on being asked under this section the accused had stated that he means to adduce evidence, but on further consideration does not do so, the Court is not at liberty to make a presumption adverse to the accused from the circumstance that he has not adduced evidence, and the accused does not lose his right to the last word, 10 C. 140 = 13 C. L. R. 358

10 Nature of defence set up must appear from record.—This section provides that the accused is to be called on to enter upon his defence and to produce his evidence If he makes any statement in defence, it ought to be recorded. If he does not voluntarily make any statement and declines to answer any question put by the Court, the fact should be noted and when there is nothing else to show the nature of the defence, a note of the address to the Court if any (under the following section), should be recorded. The record is not complete unless it shows the nature of the defence set up. 15 W. R. 16. There is nothing in the law which prohibits a written defence If presented it should be received 2 Agra H. C. R. 356.

11. Procedure where defence witnesses are not present.—If the accused has not his witnesses present, the Judge should, if he sees grounds for proceeding first call upon him for his defence and then postpone the case 23 W. R. 58; 6 B. L. R. Appx. LXXXVIII = 15 W. R. 34

12 Practice—Prosecution witness examined before Magistrate called by defence—his examination.—Where the prosecution declined to call in the Court of Session a witness for the Crown, who had been examined in the Magistrate's Court and such witness is afterwards called in by the defence, the counsel for the defence has no right to commence his examination by questioning him as to what he had deposed in the Magistrate's Court. Questions as to his previous deposition are only admissible by way of cross-examination, with the permission of the Court if the witness proved himself a hostile witness 20 A. 155

13. If prosecution witness is recalled, opportunity must be given to accused with reference to such evidence.—Where a witness for the prosecution was recalled after the accused had made his defence and he (the accused) had no opportunity of calling evidence with reference to the evidence of that witness the High Court quashed the conviction and ordered a new trial, 13 W. R. 15 But see contra 13 W. R. 36, where the accused had full notice of the nature of the evidence adduced.

14 Prosecutor's reply.—As to the prosecutor's right of reply on production of evidence for defence see notes to s. 292. The word prosecutor does not exclude the assistance of counsel 11 B. H. C. R. 102

290. The accused or his pleader may then open his case, stating the facts or law on which he intends to rely, and making such comments as he thinks necessary on the evidence for the prosecution He may then examine his witnesses (if any) and after their cross-examination and re-examination (if any) may sum up his case

Notes.—1 Duty of defendant's counsel.—See s. 340 as to the right of the accused to be defended by a pleader The counsel for the prisoner has before him as his subject, the acquittal of the prisoner His duty is to act as an advocate and not to any extent as a Judge He is to put himself in the place of the accused, and so is not under any obligations which the accused would not be under Thus he is not obliged to divulge facts with which he may be acquainted which are unfavourable to the prisoner—Harris, Prin. of Cr. La v. 419

2 In opening, counsel ought to state facts which he does not intend to prove.—In the opinion of the Judges it is contrary to the administration and practice of the criminal law as hitherto allowed that counsel for prisoners should state to the jury as alleged existing facts, matters which they have been told in their instructions on the authority of the prisoner but which they do not propose to give in evidence, R v. Shimin 15 Cox 122, Archbold p 222.

3. Criminal case ought not to be adjudged on mere probabilities.—The Court ought not to adjudge a criminal case on mere probabilities as if it were a civil action, or contravene the well-known principle of law that the burden of proof lies on the Crown, not at all on the accused; and, unless the evidence is such as to enable the Court to judge rather the conjecture, the accused should not be called upon to make his defence, Ratanlal 722 and 779; 4 C. L. R. 335.

6. Accused has no duty.—On the probabilities a Sessions Judge held that it was more likely that the prisoner rather than the other inmates of his house inflicted injuries which caused his daughter's death, but did not come to any conclusion that his guilt was established by evidence beyond reasonable doubt, Acid, reversing conviction and sentence, that the accused being merely on the defensive owed no duty to anyone but himself, therefore, he could not be convicted, because he had not tried to explain to the Court how the death of his daughter had occurred or by whose means Ratanlal 686. See also 41 C. 350.

5. Accused not bound to account for his movements.—An accused person is not bound to account for his movement at or about the time an offence was committed, unless there has been given legal evidence, sufficiently prima facie to convict him of the offence, 10 C. 970.

6. No adverse inference can be drawn on failure of accused to produce his witnesses.—If the accused fails to call witnesses on his behalf without sufficient reason being shown, the Court cannot draw an inference adverse to him. The accused is merely on the defensive and owes no duty to anyone but himself. He is at liberty, as to the whole or any part of the case against him to rely on the witnesses for prosecution, or to call witness, or to meet the charge in any other way he chooses, and no inference unfavourable to him can properly be drawn, because he takes one course rather than another, 8 C. 121 at p. 125 = 10 C. L. R. 151.

7. Trial before the day fixed is irregular.—The trial of the accused in the absence of witnesses for the defence, and before the day fixed in their summons, is a serious miscarriage of justice or, at all events, is an irregularity sufficient to prejudice the accused in his defence. In such a case conviction will be reversed and a new trial ordered.—M H C. Pro., 1882.

8. One accused may cross-examine the witnesses of co-accused—may give evidence.—One accused may cross-examine a witness called by another for his defence, when the case of the second accused is adverse to that of the first, 21 C. 401. Also, if the accused are being tried separately, each would be a competent witness at the trial of the other, 23 B. 213; 15 B. 681.

291. The accused shall be allowed to examine any witness not previously named by him, if such witness is in attendance, but he shall not, except as provided in sections 211 and 231, be entitled of right to have any witness summoned, other than the witnesses named in the list delivered to the Magistrate by whom he was committed for trial

Right of accused as to examination and summoning of witnesses

Notes.—See s. 211 for list of defence witnesses to be given to committing Magistrate or Clerk of the Crown, s. 216 for summons to defence witness by committing Magistrate or Clerk of the Crown; ss. 216 and 544 for expenses of witnesses and deposit and Chap. XL, for the commissions to examine witnesses, s. 231 for recalling witnesses when charge altered.

1. Magistrate bound to summon defence witnesses.—A committing Magistrate is bound to take steps to procure the attendance of all the witnesses mentioned by the accused in his list delivered to the Magistrate, 15 W. R. 34; 23 W. R. 86; 2 W. R. 6; 3 W. R. 33. There is no reason to refuse an application for summons simply because a large number of witnesses is mentioned therein, 11 C. 762. A conviction had, without summoning and examining the witnesses for the defence is liable to be set aside, 12 W. R. 22.

2. Adjournment to secure the attendance of defence witnesses.—If before conclusion of the trial the accused requests for adjournment to secure the attendance of his witnesses who had not properly been served, such application is not too late, Wahr II, 383. See 18 W. R. 20; 15 W. R. 34 = 5 B. L. R. Appx. LXXXVIII; 12 W. R. 44; 4 Bom. L. R. 939 and see Note 2 to s. 295 at p. 786. 47 C. 758.

3. Judge has power to summon witnesses other than those named by the accused if he applies.—The summoning of witnesses by an accused person through the medium of Sessions Judge is not a matter of "right," 3 W. R. 29. Yet the Judge has an inherent power, if he thinks proper to exercise it, to sanction the summoning of witnesses other than those named in the list given to the committing Magistrate, 8 A. 568.

4 Court not entitled to decide how much evidence the accused shall let in.—Though the Sessions Judge could first call upon the accused to state the grounds of his defence (23 W R 58) yet where he refused to summon defence witnesses on the ground that 'it is needless to prove the alleged enmity, there is ample evidence on record about this' held that it was manifestly for the accused person whose interest was concerned and not for the judge to say what amount of evidence it was proper to place before the jury in order to establish the case for the defence 7 C W N 188.

Prosecutor's right of reply

* 292. The prosecutor shall be entitled to reply—

(a) if the accused or any of the accused adduces any oral evidence, or

(b) with the permission of the Court on a point of law or

(c) with the permission of the Court when any document which does not need to be proved is produced by any accused person after he enters on his defence

Provided that in the case referred to in clause (c) reply shall unless the Court otherwise permits be restricted to comment on the document so produced

Notes—1 Scope of the amended section—This section is thoroughly re-drafted by Act XVIII of 1923. Under the old law there was a difference of opinion as to whether the prosecutor retained his right of reply when the accused produced certain documents without producing any oral evidence of witnesses. In 30 B 421, it was laid down and held that the section makes the right of reply dependent upon the fact of evidence being adduced. But this interpretation as is pointed out by BEAMAN, J., would include both documentary and oral evidence and the logical effect would be to exclude a large proportion of legitimate cross-examination under pain of forfeiture of right of reply 11 M 339; 15 A. 83 also held that the prosecutor had a right of reply if the accused produced documentary evidence alone. Whereas 14 C. 245 and 17 C. 939 and 16 B 436 held that the production of documentary evidence alone by the accused did not give the prosecutor a right of reply. The present section as amended has tried to do away with the difference of opinion in the High Courts as pointed above especially by the insertion of cl. (c) and the proviso.

2 Reason for the rule as to prosecutor's right of reply.—Where the Judge allowed the prosecutor to reply when no evidence for the defence was actually given held though the strict interpretation of s. 289 and of this section warrants this course it was never meant by the Legislature that the prosecutor should have a reply when no witnesses are called for the defence the object of law being evidently to let each side have an opportunity of commenting on the evidence of the other and not to give an additional advantage to the prosecutor 10 C 140 = 13 C. L. R. 338 approved in 30 B 421

3. Has the prosecution any right to reply where the defence puts in documentary evidence through prosecution witnesses?—

(a) Bombay—BEAMAN J. in 11 L. R. 177 = 9 Cr. L. J. 284, dissented from the judgment of BATTY, J. as laid down in 30 B 421, and held that the true principle to apply in deciding whether a reply ought to be allowed is that nothing which the accused can fairly get in to his own advantage by the legitimate employment of cross-examination while the case is in the hands of prosecution, deprives him of his right to the last word. The only practical difficulty which ever arises is this. Sometimes under the guise of cross-examining a prosecution witness counsel for the defence will try to get in a lot of matter, especially documentary matter, which ought to properly come in as evidence in rebuttal. Now although this may be in strictness relevant no Judge who knows his business ought to be in any uncertainty how to deal with it. The Court has only to say this evidence is all very well, but this is not the proper time or proper way to lay it before the Court. "If you really need it you must pay for it." He is of opinion that s. 292 ought to be read with s. 289 and not independently. He disapproves of the test laid down in 1 B. L. R. 91 = 8 Cr. L. J. 215, that when evidence is adduced by the defence through the mouths of the prosecution witnesses, it is for the Court to decide in the particular case whether such evidence is such as to take the prosecution by surprise and to assign the right of reply accordingly.

In 30 B 421 BATTY J. held, that the section as amended was intended to give a right of reply whenever 'at any stage' evidence is recorded for the defence which is not part of that adduced for the prosecution. The section makes the right of reply, dependent upon the fact of evidence having been adduced. But this interpretation as is pointed by BRAMAN, J., and by Mr JUSTICE in the 1 L. B. R. 91 case would include both documentary and oral evidence and the logical effect would be to exclude a large proportion of legitimate cross-examination under pain of forfeiture of right of reply.

(ii) Calcutta.—During the cross-examination of the witnesses for the prosecution various documents were tendered by the counsel for the defence and were admitted, but no witnesses were called for the defence. Held, following 10 C. 226 and distinguishing 31 C. 1050, that this did not entitle the prosecution to have the right of reply, as the documents tendered by the defence were such as did not take the prosecution by surprise and that this was the correct test for determining whether the prosecution should have the right of reply, 10 C. W. N. 267. For other Rulings, under the previous Code, see 2 C. W. N. 201; 6 C. W. N. 303, and 8 C. W. N. 309, and also 10 C. 1024; 14 C. 213; 17 C. 930. In 43 C. 126, it was held by SANDERSON, C.J., that s. 292 must be read with s. 289 and must be construed accordingly. Reading the two sections together the right to reply which is given by s. 292 arises only if the accused or any of the accused takes advantage of the right to adduce evidence at the time and in the manner specified by the Code, viz., after the case for the prosecution is concluded and the test was not whether the prosecution was taken by surprise.

(iii) Madras and Allahabad.—The Madras and Allahabad High Courts hold that when documentary evidence is put in by the accused during the case for the Crown and before examination of the accused the Crown has the right of reply, 11 M. 339; 16 A. 212; 16 A. 83. These cases were under the previous Code.

(iv) Allah.—“The correct test for deciding in these cases whether the prosecution should get the right of reply, is whether the evidence adduced by the defence was such as to take the prosecution by surprise. It is for the Court to decide in the particular case whether that evidence is such as to take the prosecution by surprise, and to assign the right of reply accordingly. The prosecution must be presumed to have had notice of all relevant facts within the knowledge of its witnesses. Such a presumption need not always arise but it is only in rare and exceptional cases as for example, when the Crown witnesses are openly and undisguisedly hostile to the prosecution and have withheld material facts from the knowledge of the prosecutor, that it would be rebutted,” 1 L. B. R. 91 = 6 Cr. L. J. 215.

(v) Burma.—[In 7 L. B. R. 86 = 15 Cr. L. J. 241, the decisions of the various High Courts were considered, and though HARTOLI, J., felt a doubt as to what meaning should be attached to this section, and was inclined to the view, that it may have been intended that if the accused produced documentary evidence at any stage of the trial the prosecutor would be entitled to reply, yet laid down that the benefit of doubt should be in favour of the accused and the prosecution was not entitled to a reply. The case in 4 L. B. R. 5 = 6 Cr. L. J. 215 was doubted.]

4. What would amount to adducing evidence.—In a Sessions trial before the High Court, the accused had put in during the cross-examination of a witness the statement made by him under s. 162 to a Police constable, and after the case for the prosecution had closed but before he was asked by the Court under s. 289 whether he meant to adduce any evidence, put in the depositions of certain prosecution witnesses taken by the committing Magistrate, all of whom had been examined at the Sessions trial held per GEOR, J., that the statement as well as the depositions formed part of the record sent up by the committing Magistrate and cannot be said to be evidence adduced by the accused after the case for the prosecution is closed, that the accused merely applied that the Sessions Judge should exercise the discretion vested in him by s. 288. Semble, tender of documents are for forming part of the record sent up by the committing Magistrate might constitute adducing of evidence by the accused, 31 C. 1050. But where in the course of the cross-examination of a prosecution witness in a Sessions re-trial, a newspaper report of the previous trial including the deposition of the witness in the same was put in by the defence and admitted as evidence and where the accused in answer to a question put to him under s. 289 at the conclusion of the prosecution case stated that he meant to adduce no evidence, held, dissenting from the above Calcutta Ruling, that the prosecutor had the right of reply by reason of the newspaper having been put in 4 L. B. R. 5 = 6 Cr. L. J. 215, where 11 M. 339; 14 A. 212 and 16 A. 83 are followed. See, however, Note 3 (v). In the course of the cross-examination, a prosecution witness was asked whether he was or was not indebted to the accused and upon his denying the fact a bond alleged to have been executed by the witness in favour of the accused was produced by the counsel for the defence. But the witness not admitting even the bond an expert was summoned at the instance of the defence to give his evidence as to the thumb-mark on the

4. Court not entitled to decide how much evidence the accused shall let in.—Though the Sessions Judge could first call upon the accused to state the grounds of his defence (23 W. R. 58) yet where he refused to summon defence witnesses on the ground that "it is needless to prove the alleged enmity, there is ample evidence on record about this," held, that it was manifestly for the accused person whose interest was concerned and not for the judge to say what amount of evidence it was proper to place before the jury in order to establish the case for the defence, 7 C. W. N. 188.

Prosecutor's right of reply

*292. The prosecutor shall be entitled to reply—

(a) If the accused or any of the accused adduces any oral evidence, or

(b) with the permission of the Court, on a point of law, or

(c) with the permission of the Court, when any document which does not need to be proved is produced by any accused person after he enters on his defence,

Provided that, in the case referred to in clause (c) reply shall, unless the Court otherwise permits, be restricted to comment on the document so produced

Notes.—1. Scope of the amended section.—This section is thoroughly re-drafted by Act XVIII of 1923. Under the old law there was a difference of opinion as to whether the prosecutor retained his right of reply when the accused produced certain documents without producing any oral evidence of witnesses. In 30 B. 421, evidence being documentary and oral, the accused was not entitled to reply. In 11 M. 339; 16 A. 88, also held that the prosecutor had a right of reply if the accused produced documentary evidence alone. Whereas 16 C. 245 and 17 C. 930 and 14 B. 436 held that the production of documentary evidence alone by the accused did not give the prosecutor a right of reply. The present section as amended has tried to do away with the difference of opinion in the High Courts as pointed above especially by the insertion of cl. (c) and the proviso.

2 Reason for the rule as to prosecutor's right of reply.—Where the Judge allowed the prosecutor to reply when no evidence for the defence was actually given held, though the strict interpretation of s. 289 and

10 C. 140 = 13 C. L. R. 338 approved in 30 B. 421.

3. Has the prosecution any right to reply where the defence puts in documentary evidence through prosecution witnesses?—

(i) Bombay.—BEAMAN, J., in 11 L. R. 177 = 9 Cr. L. J. 285, dissented from the judgment of BATTY, J., as laid down in 30 B. 421, and held that the true principle to apply in deciding whether a reply ought to be allowed is that nothing which the accused can fairly get in to his own advantage by the legitimate employment of cross-examination while the case is in the hands of prosecution, deprives him of his right to the last word. The only practical difficulty which ever arises is this. Sometimes under the guise of cross-this evidence is all very well, but this really need it you must pay for it.

He disapproves of the test laid down in 1 B. L. R. 91 = 8 Cr. L. J. 215, that when evidence is adduced by the defence through the mouths of the prosecution witnesses, it is for the Court to decide in the particular case whether such evidence is such as to take the prosecution by surprise and to assign the right of reply accordingly.

In 30 B. 421, BATTY, J., held, that the section as amended was intended to give a right of reply whenever at any stage, evidence is recorded for the defence which is not part of that adduced for the prosecution. The section makes the right of reply, dependent upon the fact of evidence having been adduced. But this interpretation as is pointed by BRAMAN, J., and by Mr KNIGHT in the 1 B. L. R. 91 case would include both documentary and oral evidence and the logical effect would be to exclude a large proportion of legitimate cross-examination under pain of forfeiture of right of reply.

* Section 292 has been substituted in the place of the old section by Act XVIII of 1923

(ii) Calcutta.—During the cross-examination of the witnesses for the prosecution various documents were tendered by the counsel for the defence and were admitted, but no witnesses were called for the defence. Held following 10 Cox 226 and distinguishing 31 C. 1030, that this did not entitle the prosecution to have the right of reply as the documents tendered by the defence were such as did not take the prosecution by surprise and that this was the correct test for determining whether the prosecution should have the right of reply, 10 C. W. N. 287. For other Rulings, under the previous Code, see 2 C. W. N. 201; 6 C. W. N. 303, and 8 C. W. N. 209, and also 10 C. 1024; 14 C. 243; 17 C. 930. In 43 C. 126, it was held by SANDERSON, C.J., that s. 292 must be read with s. 289 and must be construed accordingly. Reading the two sections together the right to reply which is given by s. 292 arises only if the accused or any of the accused takes advantage of the right to adduce evidence at the time and in the manner specified by the Code viz., after the case for the prosecution is concluded and the test was not whether the prosecution was taken by surprise.

(iii) Madras and Allahabad.—The Madras and Allahabad High Courts hold that when documentary evidence is put in by the accused during the case for the Crown and before examination of the accused the Crown has the right of reply. 11 M. 339; 14 A. 213; 16 A. 83. These cases were under the previous Code.

(i) Bhadr.—"The correct test for deciding in these cases whether the prosecution should get the right of reply, is whether the evidence adduced by the defence was such as to take the prosecution by surprise. It is for the Court to decide in the particular case whether that evidence is such as to take the prosecution by surprise, and to assign the right of reply accordingly. The prosecution must be presumed to have had notice of all relevant facts within the knowledge of its witnesses. Such a presumption need not always arise but it is only in rare and exceptional cases as for example, when the Crown witnesses are openly and undisguisedly hostile to the prosecution and have withheld material facts from the knowledge of the prosecutor, that it would be rebutted." 1 B. L. R. 91 = 8 Cr. L. J. 215.

(v) Burma.—In 7 L. B. R. 84 = 15 Cr. L. J. 241, the decisions of the various High Courts were considered and though HARTOLI, J., felt a doubt as to what meaning should be attached to this section, and was inclined to the view, that it may have been intended that if the accused produced documentary evidence at any stage of the trial the prosecutor would be entitled to reply yet laid down that the benefit of doubt should be in favour of the accused and the prosecution was not entitled to a reply. The case in 4 L. B. R. 5 = 6 Cr. L. J. 115 was doubted.

4. What would amount to adducing evidence.—In a Sessions trial before the High Court, the accused had put in during the cross-examination of a witness the statement made by him under s. 182 to a Police constable, and after the case for the prosecution had closed but before he was asked by the Court under s. 289 whether he meant to adduce any evidence, put in the depositions of certain prosecution witnesses taken by the committing Magistrate, all of whom had been examined at the Sessions trial. held per GEIDT, J., that the statement as well as the depositions formed part of the record sent up by the committing Magistrate and cannot be said to be evidence adduced by the accused after the case for the prosecution is closed, that the accused merely applied that the Sessions Judge should exercise the discretion vested in him by s. 238. Seemle tender of documents are for forming part of the record sent up by the committing Magistrate might constitute adducing of evidence by the accused, 31 C. 1030. But where in the course of the cross-examination of a prosecution witness in a Sessions re-trial a newspaper report of the previous trial including the deposition of the witness in the same was put in by the defence and admitted as evidence and where the accused in answer to a question put to him under s. 289 at the conclusion of the prosecution case stated that he meant to adduce no evidence, held dissenting from the above Calcutta Ruling, that the prosecutor had the right of reply by reason of the newspaper having been put in 4 L. B. R. 5 = 6 Cr. L. J. 115, where 11 M. 339, 14 A. 213 and 16 A. 83 are followed. See, however, Note 3 (v). In the course of the cross-examination, a prosecution witness was asked whether he was or was not indebted to the accused and upon his denying the fact a bond alleged to have been executed by the witness in favour of the accused was produced by the counsel for the defence. But the witness not admitting even the bond an expert was summoned at the instance of the defence to give his evidence as to the thumb-mark on the deed and to suit the convenience of the expert, he was examined as a prosecution witness, held on these facts that the defence had adduced evidence and the prosecution has the right of reply 83 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. S. J. 73. Filing the deposition of a prosecution witness recently given by the witness on behalf of the prosecution in another connected case is not adducing evidence within the meaning of s. 292 by proving it through the prosecution witnesses, 1 S. L. R. 91 = 8 Cr. L. J. 215.

5. If defence evidence is solely as to character, reply generally waived.—Even if evidence for the defence is only as to his character, it gives in strictness a right of reply, but the right is never even exercised. Archbold, p. 223. In Calcutta the practice is similar, Henderson's Cr. Pro., p. 616.

6. Right of reply where one of several accused calls witnesses.—The word reply in this section must mean "reply generally on the whole case." It cannot be that the prosecutor is to sum up as to such of the accused as do not call evidence, and reply only on the evidence that may have been adduced by the others. Where one of several accused persons tried jointly calls witnesses, at the trial, but the other accused call no witnesses they must all follow in their defence and the prosecution has the right of reply on the whole case, 18 B. 364. The English practice seems to be different. If there are several defendants and witnesses are called by only one or some of them there is no right of reply except against the defendants who call evidence. See Halbury's Laws of England, Vol. IX, p. 369 (footnote). If one of them calls evidence which is applicable to the cases of all the prosecution has a general right of reply although the other defendants call no witnesses. R v. Hayes 2 M. and Rob 155. R v. Davis 17 T. L. R. 184; but where such evidence is applicable only to the case of the prisoner calling it, and does not apply to the cases of the other defendants, the right of the prosecution to reply is confined to the case of the defendant calling evidence, R v. Travelli, 15 Cox 289. Archbold, pp. 223-224.

7. Right of reply depends on what is done, and not on what may be said.—See Ratanlal 938, Note 16 under s. 237, and see Note 2 above.

293. (1) Whenever the Court thinks that the jury or assessors should view the place in which the offence charged is alleged to have been committed, or any other place in which any other transaction material to the trial is alleged to have occurred, the Court shall make an order to that effect, and the jury or assessors shall be conducted in a body, under the care of an officer of the Court to such place, which shall be shown to them by a person appointed by the Court.

(2) Such officer shall not, except with the permission of the Court, suffer any other person to speak to, or hold any communication with, any of the jury or assessors, and unless the Court otherwise directs, they shall, when the view is finished, be immediately conducted back into Court.

Notes.—1. A Judge cannot delegate his function of examining witnesses on the spot to the assessors.—In cases of view by assessors of the scene of the alleged offence, it was held that the Judge cannot delegate his own function of examining the witnesses on the spot to the assessors, 5 W. R. 59.

2. View of locus in quo by the jury must be during the trial and not after close of case.—The Judge may permit the jury at any time during the trial, and even after summing up to view the locus in quo. Archbold p. 224. If in a Sessions trial the Judge should think it necessary or desirable to visit the place of the alleged occurrence, he should give due notice to the parties and should proceed thither with the assessors and the parties and not after the close of the case and after the opinion of the assessors have been recorded, 1 C. L. R. 143; 17 Cr. L. J. 500. It is illegal to take into account any observations of the locality made by a Judge without notice to the parties 9 L. B. 85.

3. The trial Judge to investigate if jury held improper communication.—Where it is alleged that the jury upon the view have received evidence in the absence of the Judge and of the prisoner, it is for the Court before which the trial takes place to investigate the facts and ascertain whether the alleged irregularity has occurred. R v. Martin L. R. 1 C. C. R. 378.

When Juror or assessor may be examined.

294. If a juror or assessor is personally acquainted with any relevant fact, it is his duty to inform the Judge that such is the case, whereupon he may be sworn, examined cross-examined and re-examined in the same manner as any other witness.

Notes.—1 Analogous Law—Compare s. 413 of the N. Y. Cr. Pro. Code. That section further provides that if during retirement of the jury a juror declare a fact which could be evidenced in the case as of his own knowledge the jury must return into Court and the juror making the statement must be sworn etc.

2. Trying Judge can be cited as a witness when the trial is by jury—In the case 13 W. R. 60 = 4 B. L. R. Ap. Cr. 15, it was held that a Judge is a competent witness and can give evidence in a case tried before himself. In the course of judgment NORMAN J. remarked as follows — No doubt it is extremely inconvenient that a Judge sitting without a jury should try a case in which he is himself the complainant and principal witness. I should have no doubt that if he has any personal or pecuniary interest in the subject of the charge he is disqualified from trying it. But if that is not the case if the Judge making the complaint has merely acted in the discharge of his duty as a public officer I think we must say that he is not incompetent to try the case.

I think it is pretty clear that a person has a right to ask to have the evidence of the Sessions Judge who is trying him taken on a point which he thinks makes in his favour.

Jury or assessors to attend at adjourned sitting.

295. If a trial is adjourned the jury or assessors shall attend at the adjourned sitting and at every subsequent sitting, until the conclusion of the trial.

Notes.—See ss. 318 and 332 for penalty for absence without leave s. 281 for effect of absence of juror and s. 283 for effect of absence of assessor.

1. Analogous Law—Under s. 415 N. Y. Cr. Pro. Code at each adjournment the jury is required to be admonished by the Court that it is their duty not to converse among themselves on any subject connected with the trial or form or express any opinion thereon, until the cause is finally submitted to them.

2. When trial should be adjourned.—See s. 344 for power to adjourn and Notes thereunder. A Judge is bound to adjourn a case in which a witness summoned for the defence is absent especially if he be a material witness and the case cannot be satisfactorily decided in his absence 15 W. R. 34 = 6 B. L. R. Appx. LXXXVIII, 18 W. R. 20; 23 W. R. 58. But under such circumstances the Judge is not authorized to discharge the jury together in the midst of the trial and then adjourn the case to the next Session, 4 Bom. L. R. 939. Where a prisoner has been put upon his trial given in charge to the jury, and after the case has been opened some of the witnesses are found not to be present owing to some unforeseen accident it may be proper to adjourn the trial generally but where the witnesses are absent owing to some mistake, for example as to the date or trial the proper practice is to adjourn the case for a reasonable time for the prisoner to be tried by the same jury and if that cannot be done a verdict should be taken on the evidence as it stands. The jury should not be discharged merely to enable the prosecution to establish a stronger case against the prisoner Rex v. Lewis 22 Cox C. C. 161 (1911). See also 41 C. 299 where it was held that time should have been given to the counsel for the accused to cross-examine prosecution witness.

3. Judge not authorized to continue trial commenced before his predecessor—The Code does not empower a Sessions Judge to try a case partly on evidence not recorded by himself but by his predecessor. S. 350 applies only to Magistrates. The prisoner's consent will not give jurisdiction, 23 B. 50; 35 A. 63, 8 C. L. J. 59 = 8 C. L. J. 121 and see Note 10 to s. 350.

4. Judge not competent to receive evidence after discharge of jury or assessors.—In a case tried by jury the Judge has no jurisdiction to examine witnesses after the jury has been discharged 7 Bom. L. R. 978. So also after discharge of assessors 15 A. 136.

296. The High Court may from time to time, make rules as to keeping the jury together during a trial before such Court lasting for more than one day, and subject to such rules the presiding Judge may order whether and in what manner the jurors shall be kept together under the charge of an officer of the Court or whether they shall be allowed to return to their respective home.

Locking up jury are concluded, that is after all the evidence has been taken on both sides and counsel on both sides have finished addressing the jury' After evidence for the prosecution was closed in a case of rioting where there were a large number of accused and a large number of witnesses, the Judge opining that the quickest way of getting through the case would be for the vakils and the Judge to sum up first on the case generally, and then on the case against each of the accused, one by one leaving it to the jury to say if they wished to hear the witnesses for the defence him and this proceeding were examined and held the trial was irregular, 36 M. 585.

2. Proper charge to the jury is indispensable.—Where the provisions of this section are neglected and the Judge does not sum up the evidence at all, a new trial will be ordered, 9 W. R. 51; on the ground of misdirection, 25 C. 561; 23 C. 252; 30 C. 222; 4 C. W. N. 193. The summing up contemplated by this section does not mean any statement of the evidence which a Judge may, in his caprice, think proper to make to the jury, but a "proper" summing up, by which is to be understood a full and distinct statement of the evidence on both sides, with such advice as to the legal bearing of that evidence and the weight which properly attaches to the several parts of it, as a sound judicial discretion would suggest. And in so far as the Judge has not summed up "properly" an error in matter of law has been committed, 5 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 85 at p. 93 followed in Ratanlal 720, 3 B. L. R. 102 = 11 Cr. L. J. 13. A summing up to the jury, in which the Judge gave no aid to the jury in the arrangement of the facts which were spoken to by witnesses, and himself found facts which he should have put to jury, was no summing up at all and a verdict founded thereon was set aside, 10 W. R. 7. In charging the jury, it is the duty of the Sessions Judge to call their attention to the facts and then to leave it to them to consider whether from the facts they conclude that a particular criminal act was done, and if they so conclude, then to direct them that the case comes within a particular section of the Code 4 C. W. N. 193. It is absolutely the duty of a Judge to give a narrative and history of the case and to place the facts and evidence in a clear manner before the jury so as to enable them to grasp the details, and come to a right decision, 6 Bom. L. R. 31. But it is not necessary for the Judge to go into the minutest details, 40 C. 367.

3 Judge cannot evade his duty of summing up because pleaders on both sides argued at length.—A Judge in summing up is entitled to have regard to the elaboration and skill with which the rival contentions have been placed before the jury by the advocates on both sides but he should not in doing so omit pointedly to call the attention of the jury to matters of prime importance especially if they favour the accused merely because they have been discussed by the advocate. Such an omission would amount to no direction of summing up by the Sessions Judge 27 B. 644 at p. 651. It is open to the Judge to refer the jury to the arguments of pleaders but he should not omit matters of prime importance and it is not necessary to go over all the evidence himself, 3 B. L. R. 102 = 11 Cr. L. J. 13, see remarks of JENKINS, C. J., in 19 C. W. N. 633 = 16 Cr. L. J. 561.

4. Judge must not read over the charge in a previous trial on the same facts.—Where a prisoner is tried for a crime for participation in which other prisoners were previously tried and punished before the same Sessions Judge ought to give a new charge to the jury and not read his former charge in the previous trial although the evidence in either case be the same 1864 W. R. 13

5. Language of the charge must be simple and direct.—A Judge in addressing a jury should endeavour to speak in a manner simple and direct. The charge must not be involved and the language should not be extravagant, 11 Cr. L. J. 538 (C). Intemperate language in a charge, as to the accused and witnesses deprecated, 53 C. 372.

6. Judge must not place before the jury a hypothetical defence.—It would be a most undesirable practice for Judges to put hypothetical defences not taken by the accused before the jury, and might cause serious prejudice to the accused (1 C. L. R. 62 and 1898 A. W. N. 209 referred to). Per HOLMWOOD, J. It would be a serious error on the part of a Judge to put a supposititious case before the jury; by which is meant a case founded on suppositions as to facts, and not on evidence STEPHENS J. 'I have never had any doubt that no error of law is committed by a Judge who refrains from directing the jury as to exceptions which have neither been raised nor relied upon by the accused and have no basis in evidence on the records.' Per HOLMWOOD, J., 19 C. W. N. 633 = 16 Cr. L. J. 561. Where in a trial for murder a verdict of culpable homicide not amounting to murder could not be properly come to under any respect of the case before the Court, the Judge is not called upon to explain to the jury the distinction between murder and culpable homicide not amounting to murder, 8 Bar. L. T. 220 (F.B.).

7 Judge must simplify the issues fairly and properly before the Court and direct the minds of the jurors to those issues and those issues alone.—Where a trial for culpable homicide is proceeding before a jury it is not an appropriate mode of laying down the law to discourse in all branches and departments of this complicated topic of crime. To do so is calculated to confuse the jury and possibly to direct their deliberations into channels that have nothing to do with the case. [The duty of the Judge is to lay down the law in reference to the case presented to the Court and the facts of the case are not to perplex the minds of the jury with considerations that are outside the legitimate scope of the inquiry. It is the duty of the Judge to keep the jury within proper limits, and for this purpose to simplify as far as he can the issues fairly and properly before the Court and direct the minds of the jurors to those issues and those issues alone. PER JENKINS C.J. The reasonable construction of s. 297 is that the Judge should lay down the law only in so far as it bears on the evidence adduced in the particular case as has been said in 8 W. R. 87, all unnecessary discussion and argument should be avoided by the Judge and the summing up should be strictly confined to the evidence adduced and the mode of application of the law to such evidence.” PER MOOKERJEE J. 19 C. W. N. 633 = 16 Cr. L. J. 561. See also 8 Bur. L. T. 220 (F.B.).

8 Judge is bound to put before the jury a case for the accused arising on the evidence whether such case is raised by or on behalf of the accused or not.—I am not prepared as a general proposition of universal applicability that a Court cannot and should not consider a case in favour of the accused which he has not raised. For such a case may properly arise on the prosecution evidence and if it did I myself should put it to the jury for their consideration whatever line might have been taken by the accused or his counsel. PER WOODROFFE J. I wish however to dissociate myself from the proposition that the mere fact that counsel attention of the jury to such possible view of the case on the evidence notwithstanding that it may have escaped the counsel of the accused. PER MOOKERJEE J., 19 C. W. N. 633 = 16 Cr. L. J. 561. It is the duty of the Judge to make a case for the accused on which he thinks that a verdict of not guilty may be properly returned though the case has not been suggested by or on behalf of the accused. PER STEPHEN ibid. Line of defence adopted by counsel does not relieve Judge of his duty. The conduct of case by counsel is not a negligible factor even in a Criminal Court though may not necessarily conclude the accused, and that it is not with its influence is really illustrated by the judgment of the Lord Chief Justice in R v. Bridgewater (1905) 1 K. B. 131 at p. 135. PER JENKINS C.J. in 19 C. W. N. 633 = 16 Cr. L. J. 561. The fact that the pleaders for the defence thought it unnecessary to place much reliance upon the defences of the accused did not absolve the Judge from his duty of placing before the jury the evidence adduced on behalf of the accused ss. 297–299 make it imperative on the Judge in his summing up to draw their attention to the important points arising in connection with the evidence of the accused no less than that of the prosecution. 17 Cr. L. J. 19 (M). Whatever may be the line of defence adopted by counsel for a prisoner at the trial the Judge is bound to put to the jury such questions as appear to him properly to arise upon the evidence even although counsel may not himself have raised some points. At the trial of the appellant for murder his counsel relied substantially on the defence that the killing was accidental but he indicated that in the event of the jury not accepting that view he would ask them to find that the crime was manslaughter and not murder. The Judge taking the view that there was no evidence of

he had omitted to do so the Court acting under s. 5 subsec. (2) of the Criminal Appeal Act 1907 would enter a verdict of manslaughter which the jury might have found if they had been directed upon that point. REX v. Hopper (1915) 2 K. B. 431.

9 Judge must not in his charge introduce a recommendation to mercy.—A Judge ought not to introduce into his direction to the jury any question as to recommending a prisoner to mercy but he should leave that entirely to the jury. 14 W. R. 46.

9A The Judge ought not to tell the jury that there was no evidence and that they should return a verdict of not guilty when the prosecution was willing to substantiate the case if further adjournment was allowed to it to bring the witnesses.—Where on a date fixed the prosecution applied for adjournment to bring their witnesses and the adjournment was refused, jury was empanelled, and the Judge directed the jury to return a verdict of not guilty as there was no evidence, held, that under the circumstances of the case it was a misdirection for the judge to tell the jury that there was no evidence. The Judge ought to have allowed the prosecution to produce its witnesses by the grant of an adjournment. The High Court set aside the orders of acquittal and directed a retrial. 30 C. W. N. 190.

II.—JUDGE'S DUTIES WHEN DEALING WITH EVIDENCE.

10. Duty of Judge when there is no evidence.—Where there is no evidence against the prisoner the Judge ought to charge the jury for an acquittal, and not leave the jury to say whether the prisoner is guilty or not, 7 W. R. 39. A jury may be satisfied with a minimum of proof, and it is beyond the powers of the High Court in such a case to interfere with its verdict, but when there is nothing which can be believed amount to proof, the case should not be put to the jury at all, as a verdict of guilty cannot, under such circumstances, be sustained, 16 W. R. 19. It is not enough to say that there was some evidence. A scintilla of evidence clearly would not justify the Judge in leaving the case to the jury. There must be evidence on which they might reasonably and properly conclude the fact to be established. Ryder v. Wombell, (1864) 4 Ex. 32 at p. 35. This case was quoted with approval in Metropolitan Railway Company v. Jackson, (1877) 3 A. C. 198, where Lord Blackburn said: "It is for the jury to say whether and how far the evidence is to be believed. And if the facts as to which evidence is given, are such that from them a further inference of fact may legitimately be drawn, it is for the jury to say whether that inference is to be drawn or not. But it is for the Judge to determine subject to review as a matter of law, whether, from those facts that further inference may legitimately be drawn." It is true that these remarks were made in a civil case, but they are of universal application, 19 C. W. N. 553 = 16 Cr. L. J. 561.

11. Judge should render the jury every assistance to come to a right conclusion.—The Code does not contemplate the reception of a verdict from the jury without their having the assistance of a summing up by the Sessions Judge, since a careful summing up may often change the hasty and superficial impressions of a jury, and the parties are entitled to this service. Ratanlal 285; 9 W. R. 51. It is the duty of the Judge to state to the jury, what are the principal points in the evidence, and how they bear for or against the prisoner, in short to render the jury every assistance in his power towards coming to a right conclusion, 6 W. R. 72. He should state the evidence pro and con, with a running commentary as to its agreement and disagreement with the other facts of the case. 1 W. R. 25. In charging a jury a Judge is not bound to more than lay carefully and plainly before them generally the way refer to discrepancy Police, 9 C. 453 = 11 C. L. R. 589

12. Summing up must not be misleading.—Where the summing up of the most important evidence is calculated to leave a misleading impression on the minds of the jury, e.g. where the accused is said to be identified by four persons whereas he was only identified by two and where stolen property is treated as property in possession of accused whereas it should have been left to the jury to find that it was in the accused's possession, the conviction will be set aside, 5 M. L. T. 134 = 11 Cr. L. J. 187; 14 M. L. T. 442 = 14 Cr. L. J. 422. If a Judge thinks it necessary to put prominently before the jury that no evidence was adduced for the defence, he is bound to qualify it by pointing it out to the jury that the defence was not bound to adduce any evidence, that they could rely on the prosecution evidence as far as it could help them and that they were entitled to the benefit of any doubt. 15 C. W. N. 199 = 11 Cr. L. J. 557. See also 16 Cr. L. J. 717 (M)

13. Judge ought to read over material portions of the evidence.—Where the trial has been a prolonged one, the Sessions Judge ought to read over to the jury the important testimonies in the trial, Ratanlal 250. A Judge ought to point out to the jury the legal effect and bearing of a document or a portion of it relied on by the prosecution or defence, 3 W. R. 89. An objection that in delivering his charge to the jury the Sessions Judge did not read material portions of the evidence is not in itself sufficient for the reversal of the verdict of the jury. In each case it must be shown that the evidence was such as to mislead the jury, judicially considered, 5 Bom. L. R. 307. 102 = 11 Cr. L. J. 13. But if a fair and proper statement of the evidence has not been placed before the jury, the High Court will set aside the conviction, 15 C. W. N. 754 = 11 Cr. L. J. 9. Where in a trial by jury before a Court of Session the Judge's summary of his charge to the jury consisted merely of these words: "It is for you to say from the evidence you have heard whether you consider the accused guilty or not" Held, that the charge was wholly insufficient and the conviction and sentence were therefore set aside and a fresh trial ordered 1902 A. W. N. 201.
